Historical Note

The School of Graduate and Continuing Education consisted of the Office of the Graduate Dean, the Office of Graduate Admissions, the Division of Continuing Education, the Graduate Career Programs, and the Summer and Intersession Programs. Until 1997, all of University of San Diego graduate programs, with the exception of the School of Law, were administered by a Graduate Dean's Office and the School of Graduate and Continuing Education. The Associate Dean assisted the Graduate Dean in overseeing all areas of the School. In addition, the Associate Dean monitored the progress of graduate students, and coordinated with other campus offices regarding student data and policy making. In 1997, the School was restructured which led to more autonomous graduate programs and the dissolving of the Graduate Dean's Office.

Scope and Content Note

The records of the School of Graduate and Continuing Education contain correspondence, meeting materials, reports, and survey materials related to the function of the School. A large portion of the correspondence deals with policy development and procedural information. Committees represented in meeting materials include the Graduate Council, the Graduate Task Force, and the Tuition Committee. While these are represented in this collection, the set of meeting materials does not represent all meetings for each committee. Meeting materials include agendas, minutes, and research for committee members to review. Also included is a Fact Book which provides enrollment trends, summaries, survey information and analysis of the graduate programs dated 1972 to 1990. These records are primarily those of Elizabeth O'Connell who served as Associate Dean between 1993 and 1997, and these comprise the first series. Series' two and three consist of Graduate Studies Committee files and few records from long-serving Dean Raymond Brandes. These records
