The University

History

The University of San Diego traces its beginnings to the dedication of the late San Diego Bishop Charles F. Buddy and Reverend Mother Rosalie Hill, RSCJ. Due largely to their efforts USD's predecessor institutions were established at the university's present Alcalá Park location—the College for Women in 1952, and the College for Men and the School of Law in 1954.

In 1971, Dr. Author E. Hughes was appointed president of the two colleges. Under his guidance, the College for Women and the College for Men merged in 1972 to become USD.

Today the university enrolls more than 5,200 students from across the nation and around the world in undergraduate and graduate courses. The 180-acre campus includes 60 buildings designed in 16th century Spanish-style architecture. Three of those buildings were completed in the past two years—$4.5 million Olin Hall, new home for the School of Business Administration; the $3.7 million Helen K. and James S. Copley Library; and the $2.4 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center. Another building, a $9 million University Center, is due for completion in 1986.
