

The California Regulatory Law Reporter Resumes Publication

The Center for Public Interest Law (CPIL) is proud to resume publication of its signature publication, the California Regulatory Law Reporter (CRLR), in an online format. CRLR is the centerpiece of CPIL's academic program and law student intern monitoring efforts. It was published in hard copy from 1980 to 2001, and historically covered the activities of over thirty California regulatory agencies. The only publication of its kind in the nation, the Reporter has been a valuable source of information to legislators, courts, law firms, journalists, public interest organizations, and consumers. Due to the increased demand on CPIL over the past 17 years, coupled with limited resources, publication has been on hiatus.

Our new online format features high-level summaries of the activities of 12 of California's major regulatory agencies, and provides hyperlinks to key sources. This issue covers activities from April 16–October 15, 2017. Moving forward we will publish twice annually.
