The multi-faceted concept of a city in motion necessarily requires the many parts to be in harmony with the whole. The University of San Diego is a complex element of an immeasurably more intricate social framework that comprises the city itself.

The University serves as the hub of activity for its students, and yet, the aware participant does not limit himself to the confines of a few small buildings. He can be found working and playing in virtually every corner of the city, and his contributions, though often imperceptible, are seldom lacking. Future religious and secular leaders study side by side in preparation for their entrance into the community. The significance of their contribution lies not always in the effect it produces, but rather in their readiness to improve the society around them.

For us, the University and the city of San Diego are inseparable. Its momentous growth is our growth, just as the intellectual atmosphere generated on our campus can be felt throughout the city. San Diego is the living, breathing embodiment of a booming metropolitan center as well as the cultural and historical heritage of our ancestors. As members of the body, it is to the city that all the men dedicate their book.

The euphonious blend of old and new reflects the past, the present, and looks ahead to the future. The continuous path of progress leaves an indelible mark wherever it carves its way. The faces of the rocky hillsides and the valleys that were once fertile farmlands, have taken on exciting new shapes at the hands of skilled craftsmen. At the turn of the century, Mission Valley was a picture of rustic beauty bounded on the north and south by barren ridges.

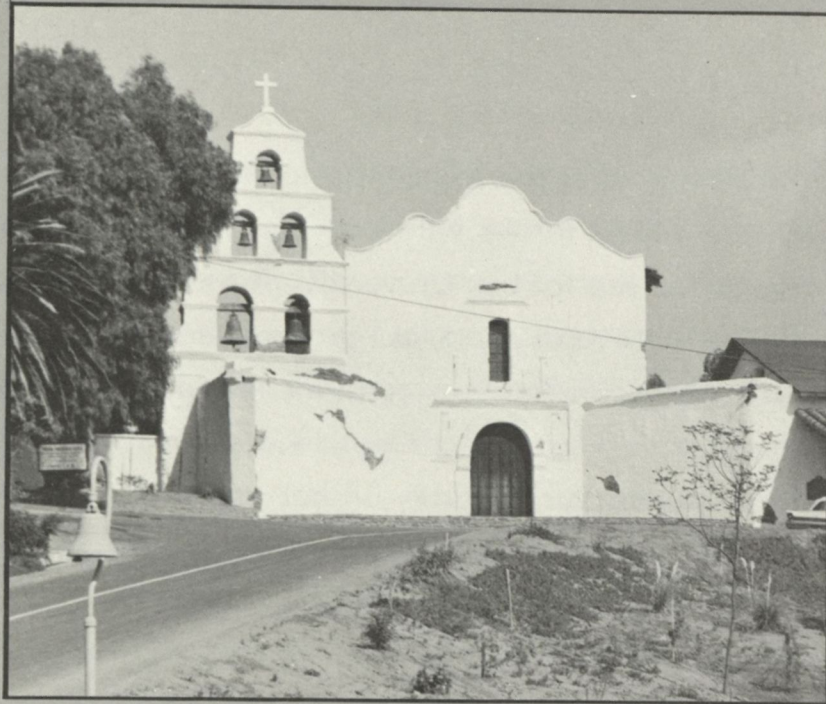

Courtesy of San Diego Historical Society

Half a century later the scene was not radically different; but today, the Valley throbs with activity, and one of those ridges affords the site for our University. The basic plant has been complete for several years, but progress is no stranger to Alcala Park. New construction, constant improvements and beautification have kept the campus in a pleasant state of flux, while remaining substantially unchanged.

The city of San Diego owes its very existence to the Spanish missionaries who established the first California mission here in 1769. The original building was located in the area now known as Presidio Park, but had to be moved to its present site to assure the safety of its inhabitants. The new mission of San Diego de Alcalá was built by Indian natives under the tutelage of Franciscans. It served as the place of worship for the sizable community that grew up around it.

The religious heritage of a Catholic University can be traced to its founders. Bishop Buddy directed the construction of the Immaculata less than one hundred years after the Mission was completed. The Immaculata is both a parish church and a chapel for the student-community. The blue-domed edifice is the most striking feature of the campus it dominates. The exquisite shrine and its awe-inspiring interior were fashioned by artisans who may be descended from those same men who erected the Mission.

There are many ways of gauging the greatness of a man. One of these is the test of time. The brass relief image of Father Junipero Serra may be tarnished, but not so the image of the man. He remains one of the outstanding founding fathers of our city, and his contributions and personal valor are unmatched.

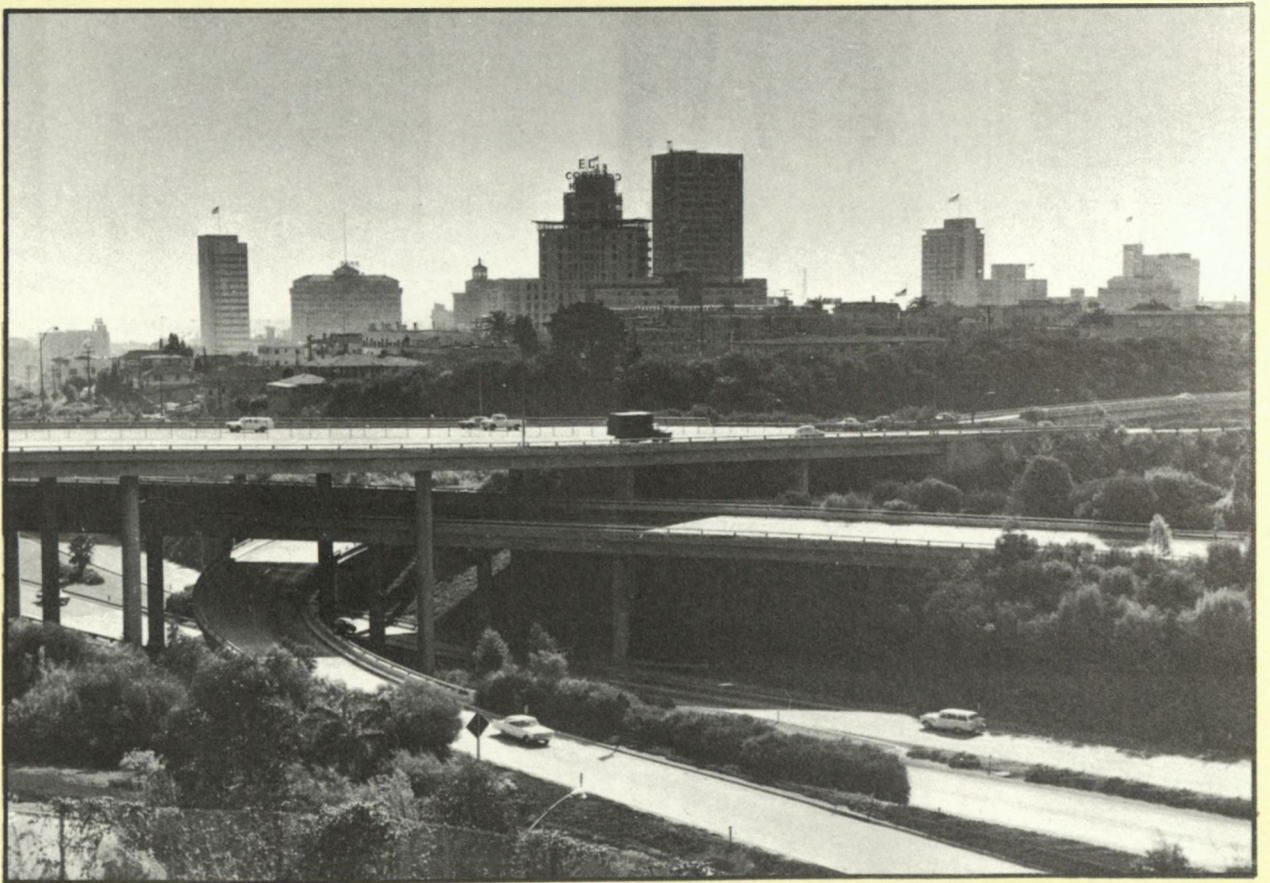

The cast-stone statue of the Blessed Virgin Mary rests atop the pinnacle of the Immaculata and from the highest vantage point on campus, looks upon the city below. It keeps a constant vigil over citizens and students alike.

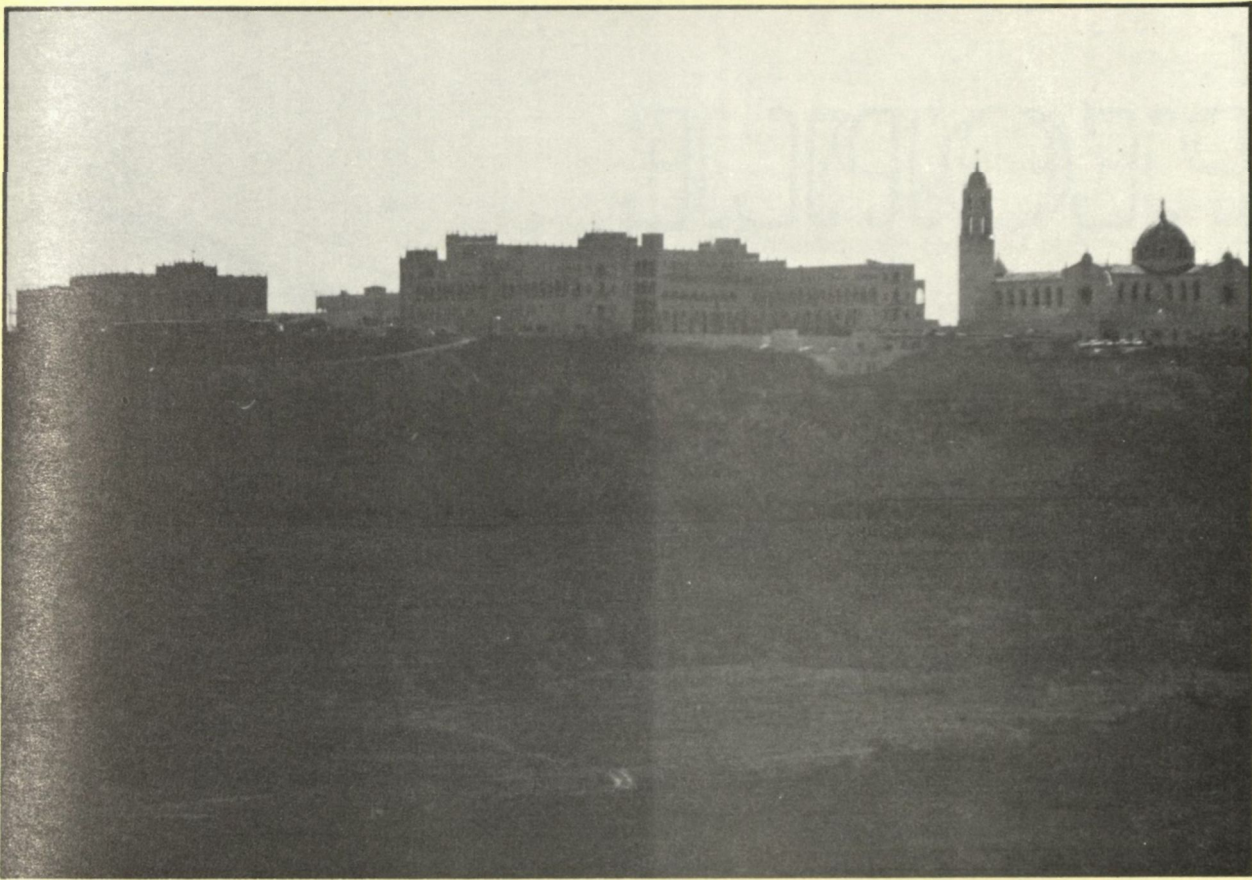

The city in panorama reveals a variegated combination of sizes and shapes. The silvan beauty of the mountains and parks is thrown into vivid contrast with the geometrical silhouette of the skyline.

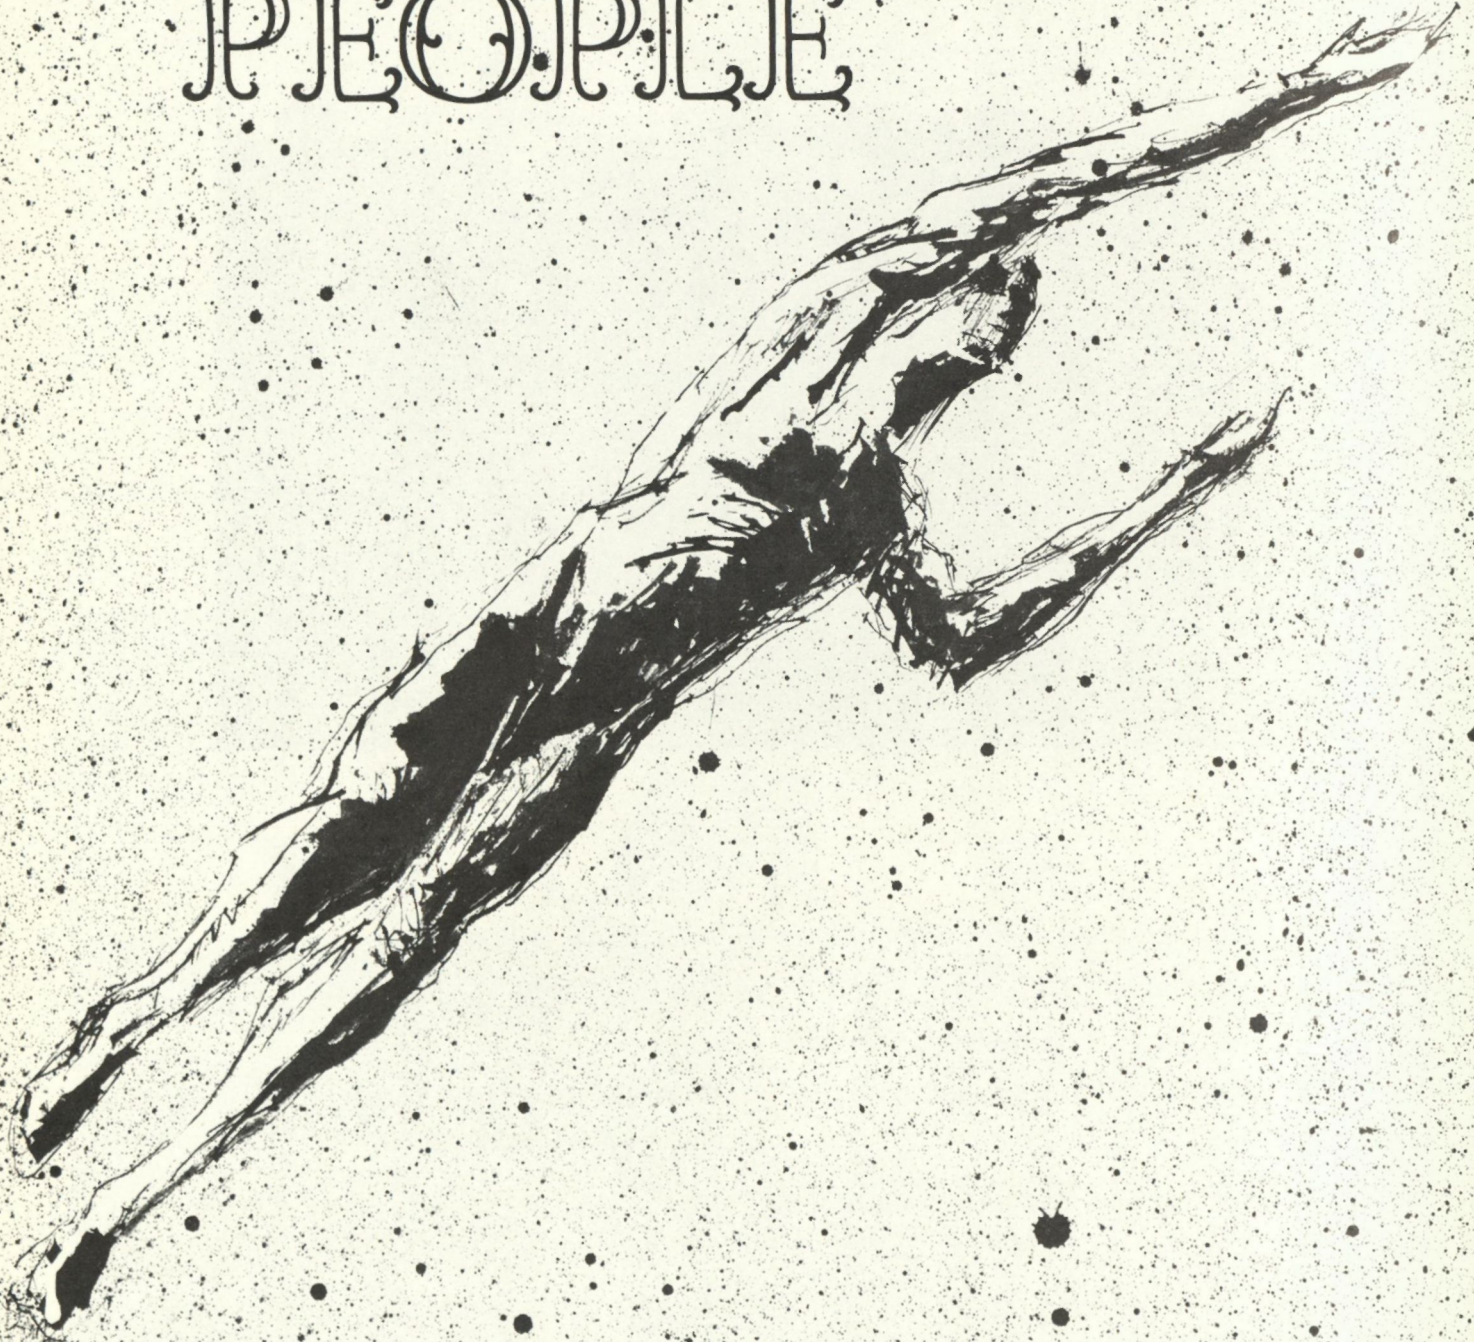

It is the Spanish Renaissance architecture employed in the master design of the campus that binds the University, at least superficially, into an artistic whole. The inherent unity of all the men, however, transcends the exterior of the buildings and is made manifest in the spirit and devotion of the individual who prospers with the growth he effects.

PEOPLE

People are the life-blood of any city, and similarly, the constituent element of a university. Citizenry within the University of San Diego includes a diverse group of undergraduate students, a select number of graduates, seminarians seeking to take a step closer toward their ordination in the priesthood, and an unquestionably dedicated faculty and staff. Together, they constitute the members of our small city within a city. For in fact, our University is virtually self-sufficient and able to cater to the basic needs of its most demanding resident.

A senior takes a nostalgic look at his college years and recalls many fond memories, and some that are not so fond; but the total picture is one of achievement. He has attained an enviable position in the world around him, and is necessarily proud and thankful for it. The graduating class of 1966 should be proud of the legacy it will leave behind, just as we, the student body, are thankful for their many accomplishments and successful endeavors.

JUNIORS

The Junior Class of 1965-66 concentrated its efforts in one main direction. The Juniors attempted to bridge the gap between the College for Women and the College for Men. The unification process will never be achieved in its entirety, but definite progress was made. Jointly sponsored activities and mutual assistance between the two Colleges resulted in a greater degree of communication and understanding that is meritorious of itself.

SOPHOMORES

The college sophomore is traditionally an enigma. He has taken the first giant step in his college career, but still remains on the fringes of higher education. The Sophomore Class of 1965-66 attempted to resolve the problem by building a strong foundation for their ultimate goal. As a result, the spirited Sophomores sponsored dances, ran the concession stand at basketball games, and were generally among the most active students on campus.

FRESHMEN

The Freshman Class has been acknowledged superior both in quantity and quality to many of its predecessors. Introduction and initiation into college life is truly an immersion into waters of a mysterious nature. The class of 1969 apparently made the transition with little difficulty. They were able to coordinate the efforts of a variegated group of individuals into a highly productive year.

THE MEN

... ARE COMMITTED

1965-1966 was an active year on college campuses throughout the nation. Many of the activities were somewhat less than exemplary and aroused the sympathies of conscientious students. One such group decided to take a positive stand on United States policy in Viet Nam. Spearheaded by Paul Cave, the students and faculty of the University of San Diego made such a commitment in no uncertain terms. The petition circulated in the Fall of 1965 left little doubt as to the willingness of the U.S.D. man to concern himself with the problems of the world around him while maintaining a balanced existence within collegiate circles.

ORGANIC

IZATION S

The social, political, and administrative organs of the University are not unlike those in the city at large. Students can find readily available outlets for virtually all types of activity in any number of campus organizations and clubs. The organizations are not only necessary to facilitate the operation of the University, they also offer an effective means of student expression and commitment. In this way, the campus activist contributes both to his fellow student, and to himself in an attempt to further develop the whole man.

Ernest Borunda

President

ASSOCIATE STUDENT BODY OFFICERS

The City Council chambers offer a fitting background for Associated Student Body officers Tom Ward, Treasurer; Robert Shapiro, Vice President; James Shultz, Secretary; and Richard Donoghue, Social Chairman. The man hours spent in the past year working with Ernie Borunda, A.S.B. President, have resulted in one of the most productive years in U.S.D. history. The good omen cast by the highly successful summer dances was carried through a year marked by financial stability and an unusually well-balanced activities program. The quick pace seldom lagged under the supervision of these five men and they must be credited with establishing U.S.D. as a University in Motion.

STUDENT COURT

A judiciary body performs the same basic functions on a university campus as it would within a larger social structure. The job of Student Court justice is often a thankless task, but nevertheless, a necessary one. Certain rules and regulations are essential if any vestige of order is to be maintained, and it is up to the justices to enforce these rules.

From its inception, the Society for the Preservation of Every Energetic Demonstration has performed a significant function on campus. SPEED has been largely responsible for generating an organized sense of school spirit and their posters and slogans are familiar to anyone who frequents the halls of the Arts and Sciences Building.

Alpha Delta Gamma Fraternity was founded in 1924 at Loyola University of Chicago. It is a National Christian Social Fraternity established on various Catholic colleges throughout the nation. The Omicron chapter has been an active campus organization at U.S.D. for five years.

ADG is based on fraternalism, the true union of men in a common bond dedicated to high ideals and pledged to the success of its brothers and the realization of their goals. The purpose of Alpha Delta Gamma is "to unite congenial minded men." Emphasis is on the well rounded individual—the athlete as well as the scholar.

This academic year 1965-1966 has been marked by a number of outstanding accomplishments. ADG was rated number one among ninety other fraternities by the College Survey Bureau; Omicron won the A. J. Kelly Award for the best scholastic chapter in the organization, and the Travelling Award for representation at the annual fraternity convention; finally, the year saw the activation of a record number of pledges. ADG also contributed to the overall spirit of competition and service exhibited by the fraternity system on campus with the Kickoff Dance, Greek Week victory, Snow Trip, "Mission to Mexico," clothes raffle, Hole-in-One contest, and an annual shamrock sale for St. Patrick's Day.

The year of 1965-1966 has been one of plentiful deeds and not a few rewards. The Brothers of Alpha Delta Gamma at U.S.D. realized the challenge of showing continued competence and continued to strive for their goal of being only the best.

In the Fall of 1961, a year which had already witnessed the establishment of a fraternity chapter at U.S.D., three young men conceived the idea of a new and unique fraternal organization on our campus. Their months of discussion, effort, and planning were culminated on December 1, 1961 with the founding of Pi Kappa Epsilon. The new brotherhood maintained as its primary goal "the formation of the complete man". In pursuance of that objective, this fraternity has always been a highly selective group, recognizing that the individual, in his potential and development, is far more important than the organization. Such an orientation has invariably borne its fruit in the high calibre of the brotherhood.

After two years' study, the brothers deemed it appropriate to affiliate with a national fraternity. The same study proved that the ideals of Tau Kappa Epsilon coincided with the ideals of Pi Kappa Epsilon. Therefore, on May 24, 1965, Pi Kappa Epsilon affiliated with Tau Kappa Epsilon, which, above all else, stands for men. The continuing story of TKE is one of achievement, both locally and nationally. Besides being the largest fraternal organization in the world, TKE is ranked second in national strength. TKE has also repeatedly boasted the highest scholarship of all national fraternities.

While aiming for their goals, the brothers enjoyed a very enterprising and gratifying year on campus. Always willing to lend a hand, the brothers have consistently offered their services to the Linda Vista Boy's Club. To further the pursuit of intellectual creative endeavors, TKE sponsored a creative writing contest. From the numerous entries, professional judges will choose the best poem and best short story for monetary awards. However intellectual the brothers may be, they also have an unquenchable trait of gregariousness which they display in a unique manner. The following are typical: the annual "Mickey Finn's Party", the "Prohibition Party", "PiKE Pipers" party, "The Fighting 69th", "Rosarita Royale", and many more parties and gatherings. And when we really decide to go "off-the-walls", we invite over 1000 screaming teenagers to ... "SPRING FEVER".

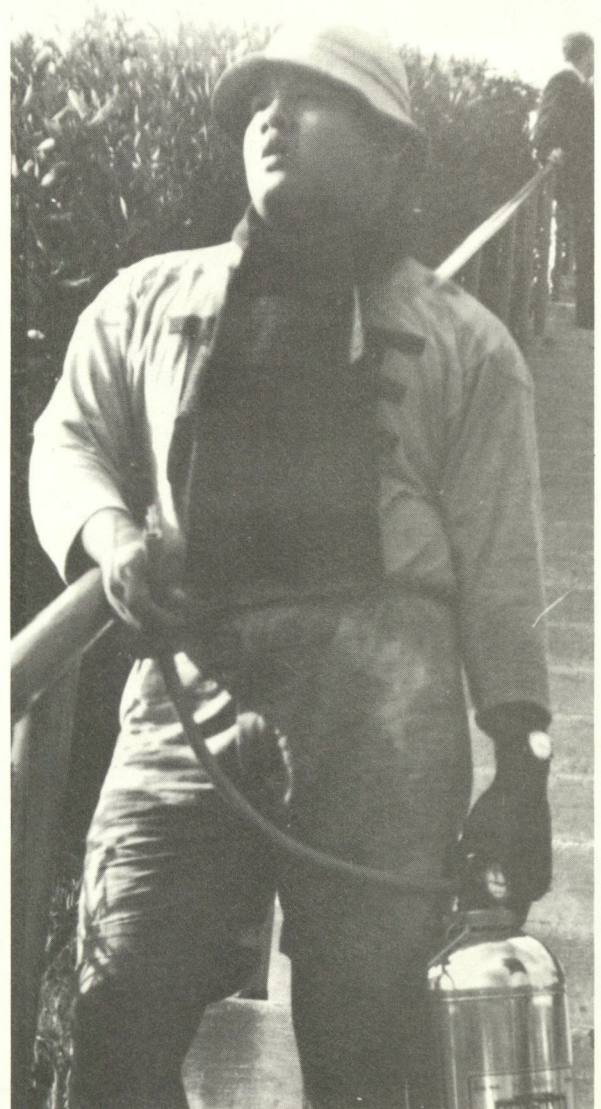

PiKE/TKE adjusts to the fast moving life of a college student with stress on academic endeavors, social life, and inquisitiveness. The aforementioned activities are a proud record of a proud fraternity, TKE/PiKE.

- The Phi Kappa Theta man is more than just a man . . . more than just a student . . . more than just an athlete. A major difference in a Phi Kap is the type of fraternity life he leads. Phi Kaps work together in an atmosphere of brotherhood to mutually experience their development.

The Phi Kap today is the whole man tomorrow who will be the best father he can be . . . the best husband he can be . . . the best example he can be . . . the best Christian he can be . . . he strives to be the best at whatever goal he is pursuing. This striving for perfection is sometimes assumed to be unattainable, but as members of a national fraternity founded on Catholic principles, the Brothers of Phi Kappa Theta have not withdrawn in the face of challenge. Their development is not always external, but it is an ever-present, undeniable fact that affects everyone around them.

In accordance with these principles, the Phi Kaps act as "fathers" to the Nazareth House orphans each semester; they show themselves as Christians by regular attendance at Communion breakfasts; and they show themselves as good examples at all times. The Phi Kap of Phi Delta chapter is an active member of the University of San Diego campus. During the past year, The Brothers have promoted spirit with posters, spirit buttons, and faithful attendance at all ASB functions. Phi Kappa Theta is also involved in virtually every campus organization including the newspaper, annual, SAM, the glee club, and student government. All this added to an eventful social calendar within the Fraternity makes the Phi Kap a truly Busy Man On Campus.

Phi Kaps are an active part of the life at U.S.D. A great university deserves to have a great fraternity . . . Phi Kappa Theta.

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL

The Interfraternity Council at U.S.D. has an unenviable task. This organization is responsible for maintaining a loyal opposition among the three active social fraternities on campus. The IFC functions as an impartial regulatory board and the rapid establishment of a fraternity system on campus is due largely to the efforts of this group.

The strong fraternity system on the U.S.D. campus is assured of at least one test of its solidarity each academic year. Preparations are often elaborate, and not a few participants are reminiscent of their ancient Greek predecessors.

GO-GO!

For that one memorable week, "victory" is the watchword, and though one fraternity must emerge triumphant, even the losers come away with a feeling of self-pride and a sense of accomplishment that is not entirely unfounded.

The events of the fraternal decathalon reach their inevitable climax with the totaling of points and announcement of the victor; only the herald of trumpets and bestowal of the laurel wreath remain to complete the picture of ancient brotherly competition.

The Society for the Advancement of Management is dedicated to the promotion of high management standards among future businessmen. It is the only national non-fraternal organization on campus, and its attraction is evidenced by its large membership. Organizational activities are on both a practical and social level concentrating on the betterment of the members with respect to their chosen vocational field.

GLEE CLUB

The University of San Diego Glee Club, under the direction of Father Sullivan, has won deserved recognition both on and off campus. Not only has the Club entertained the student bodies of both Colleges, but on numerous occasions they have given concerts throughout the city. Perhaps more than any other campus organization, the Glee Club has demonstrated that the U.S.D. student transcends the boundaries of Alcala Park to communicate, in one form or another, with the people around him.

THE VISTA

A community of any proportion requires an effective network of communications media. A newspaper lays the foundation for such a network, and for the first time in several years, U.S.D. saw the publication of something more than a newsletter. The Vista presented pertinent information concerning student activities on a variety of levels, while opening new frontiers for freedom of expression.

THE CANON

The experience of a university is something personal, and perhaps these experiences are felt more deeply by the artist. A literary magazine is traditional on most college campuses, and in that respect the Canon is not unique. It is, however, an outstanding example of individual ingenuity and talent that might otherwise remain hidden from recognition were it not for such a publication.

NIGHTMARE

The vibrant college campus in our contemporary society is, like everything around it, a product of its environment. As a natural consequence, social activities at the University of San Diego are reflective of the city at night. Lectures, concerts, traditional dances, and almost all the events that crowd the social calendar are fashioned around the "after six" atmosphere that has magnetized the mid-twentieth century personality.

The glitter and glamour that characterizes a college Homecoming Week is marked by dances, bonfires, rallies, and the nomination and election of a queen. The excitement reaches a feverish pitch once the final candidates have been selected, and the only unhappy note struck is the fact that someone must lose. This year the Freshman Class candidate, Miss Mary Lou Buenzli, was selected to reign over the activities. Blond, blue-eyed Mary Lou was truly a regal claimant to the mythical throne during that brief span of glory.

It was a hard act to follow, but for the second consecutive year the University of San Diego cagers established a new season winning record. It almost seemed anticlimactic, but the selection of the Toreros as the at-large representative to the NCAA Western Regionals topped off the most exciting and successful season in U.S.D. basketball annals. After a start that was little short of spectacular, the Toreros leveled off and played a consistently strong brand of basketball. All-City forward Cliff Ashford was headed toward the overall career scoring title when his ineligibility was announced, but "Woolpert's Wonders" barely winced as they continued on their winning ways.

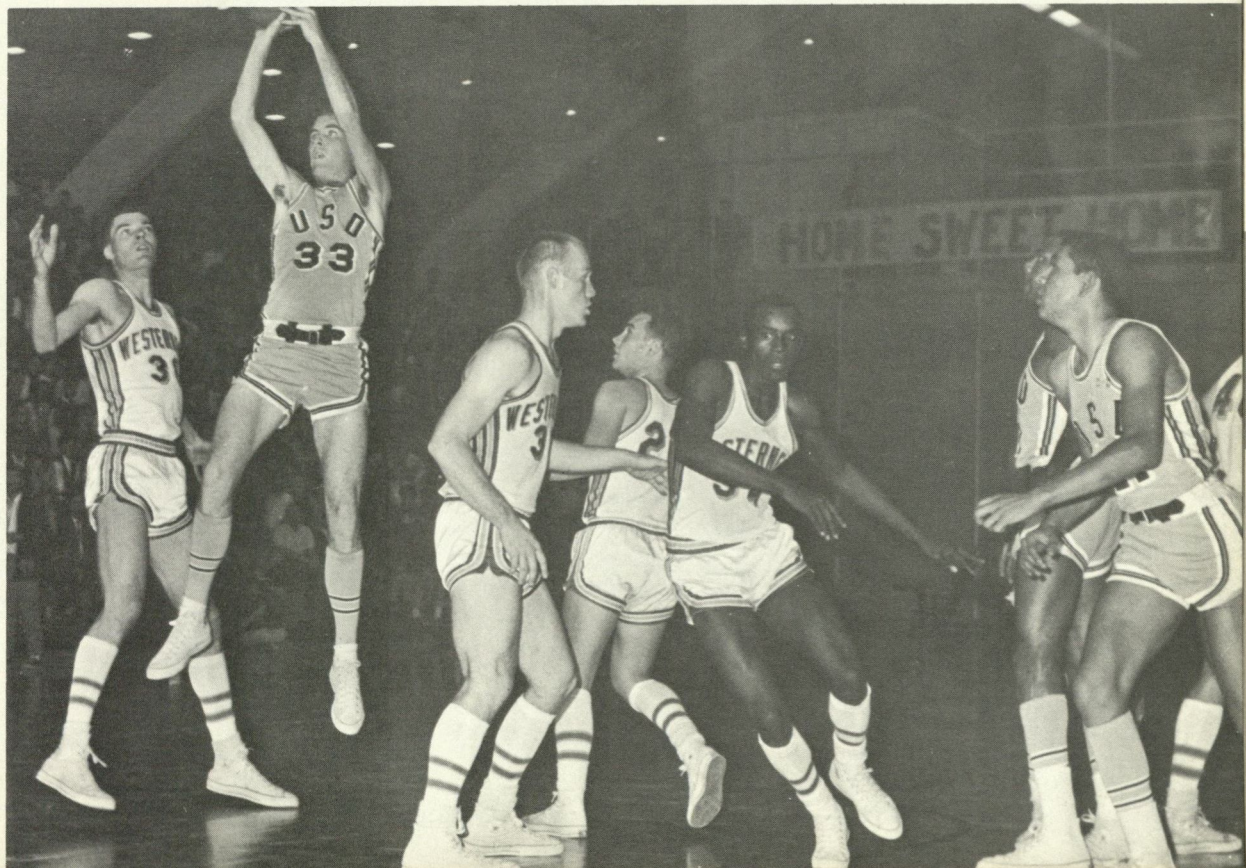

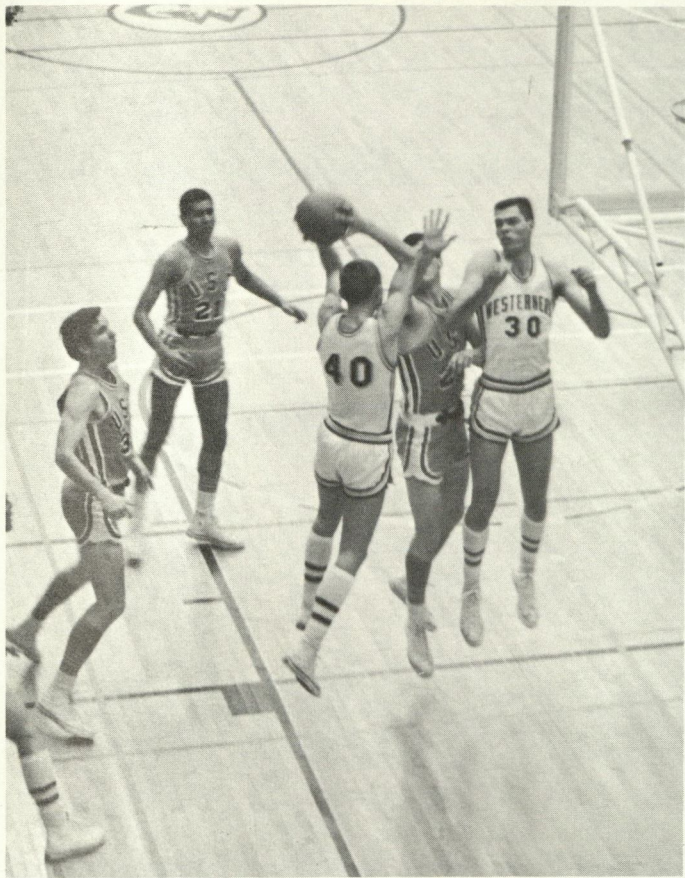

Rick Cabrera was but one of many pleasant surprises this year. Sophomore Cabrera was outstanding at Ashford's vacated position, and in just eleven games as a starter, he claimed the scoring title with 305 points. Bill Sheridan, Ted Fields, and Dan Wightman are three more Sophomores who, with Cabrera, will form the nucleus of next year's team. The four appeared in every game of the 1965-66 season and usually managed to maintain the poise of well-seasoned veterans. Coach Woolpert is truly to be commended on the development of such fine talent in such a brief span of time.

Alan Fay had a great all-around year at the other forward position. He placed second in scoring honors this year and his experience will prove invaluable next winter.

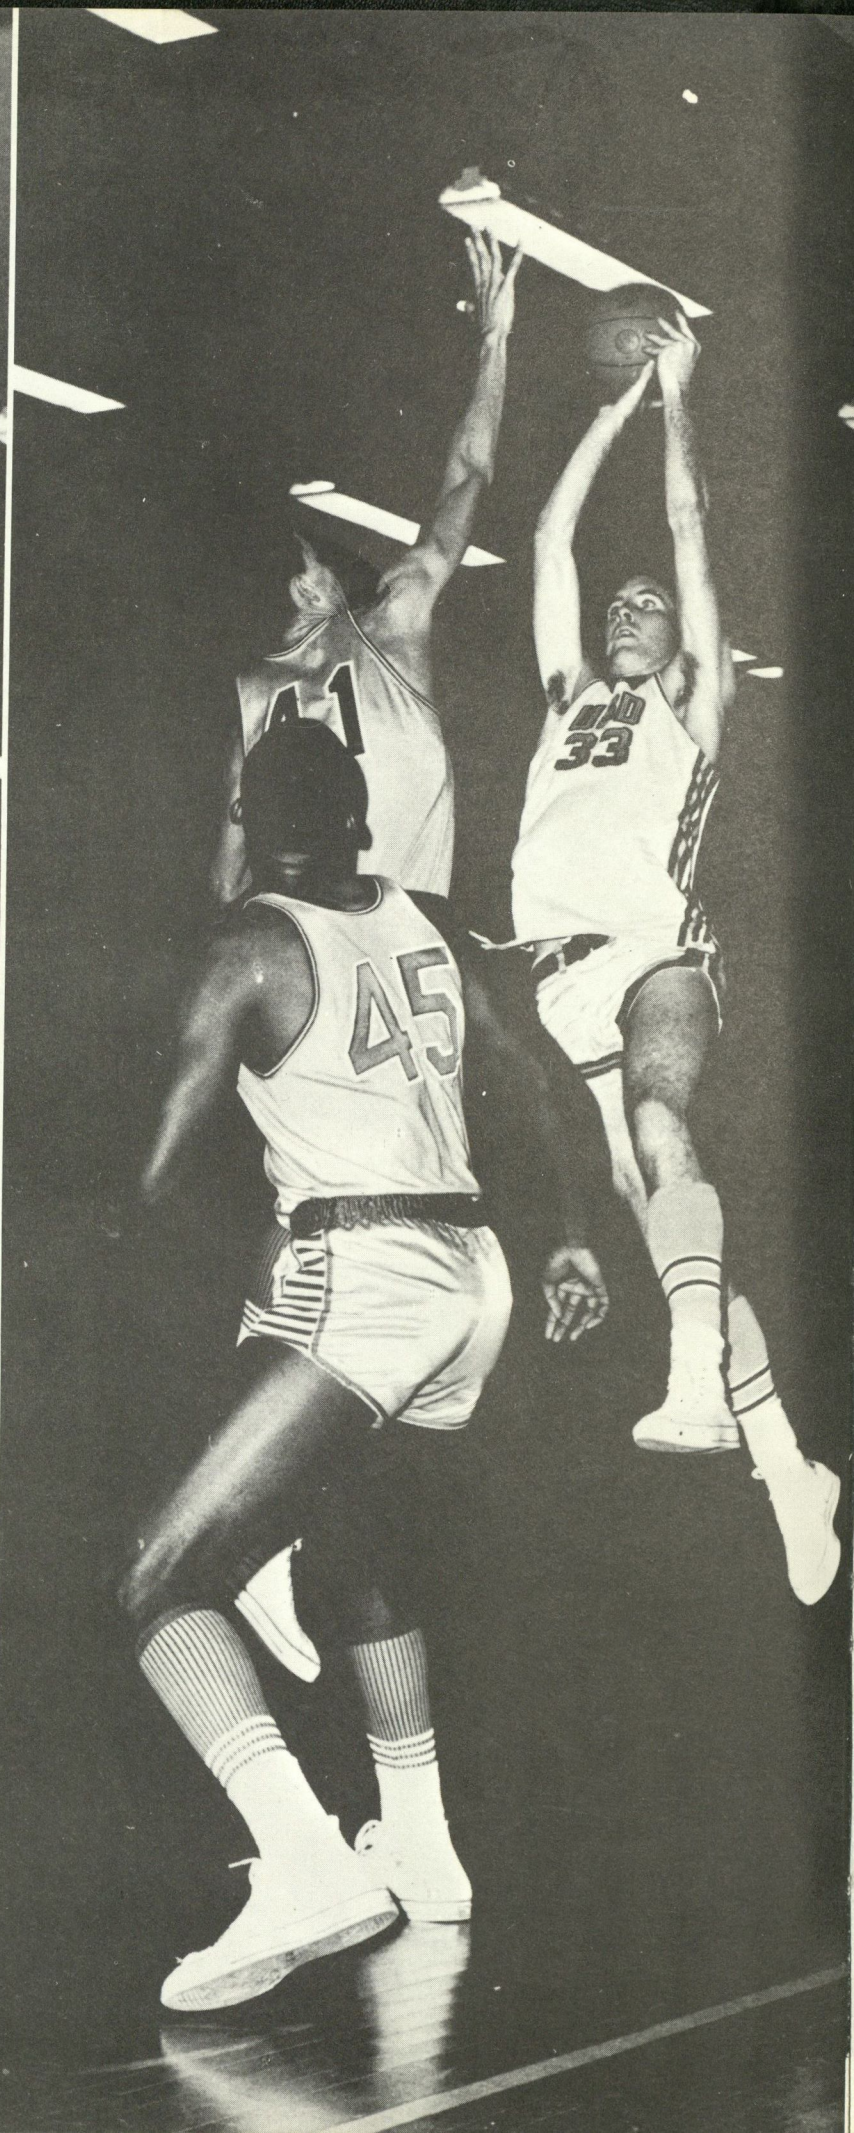

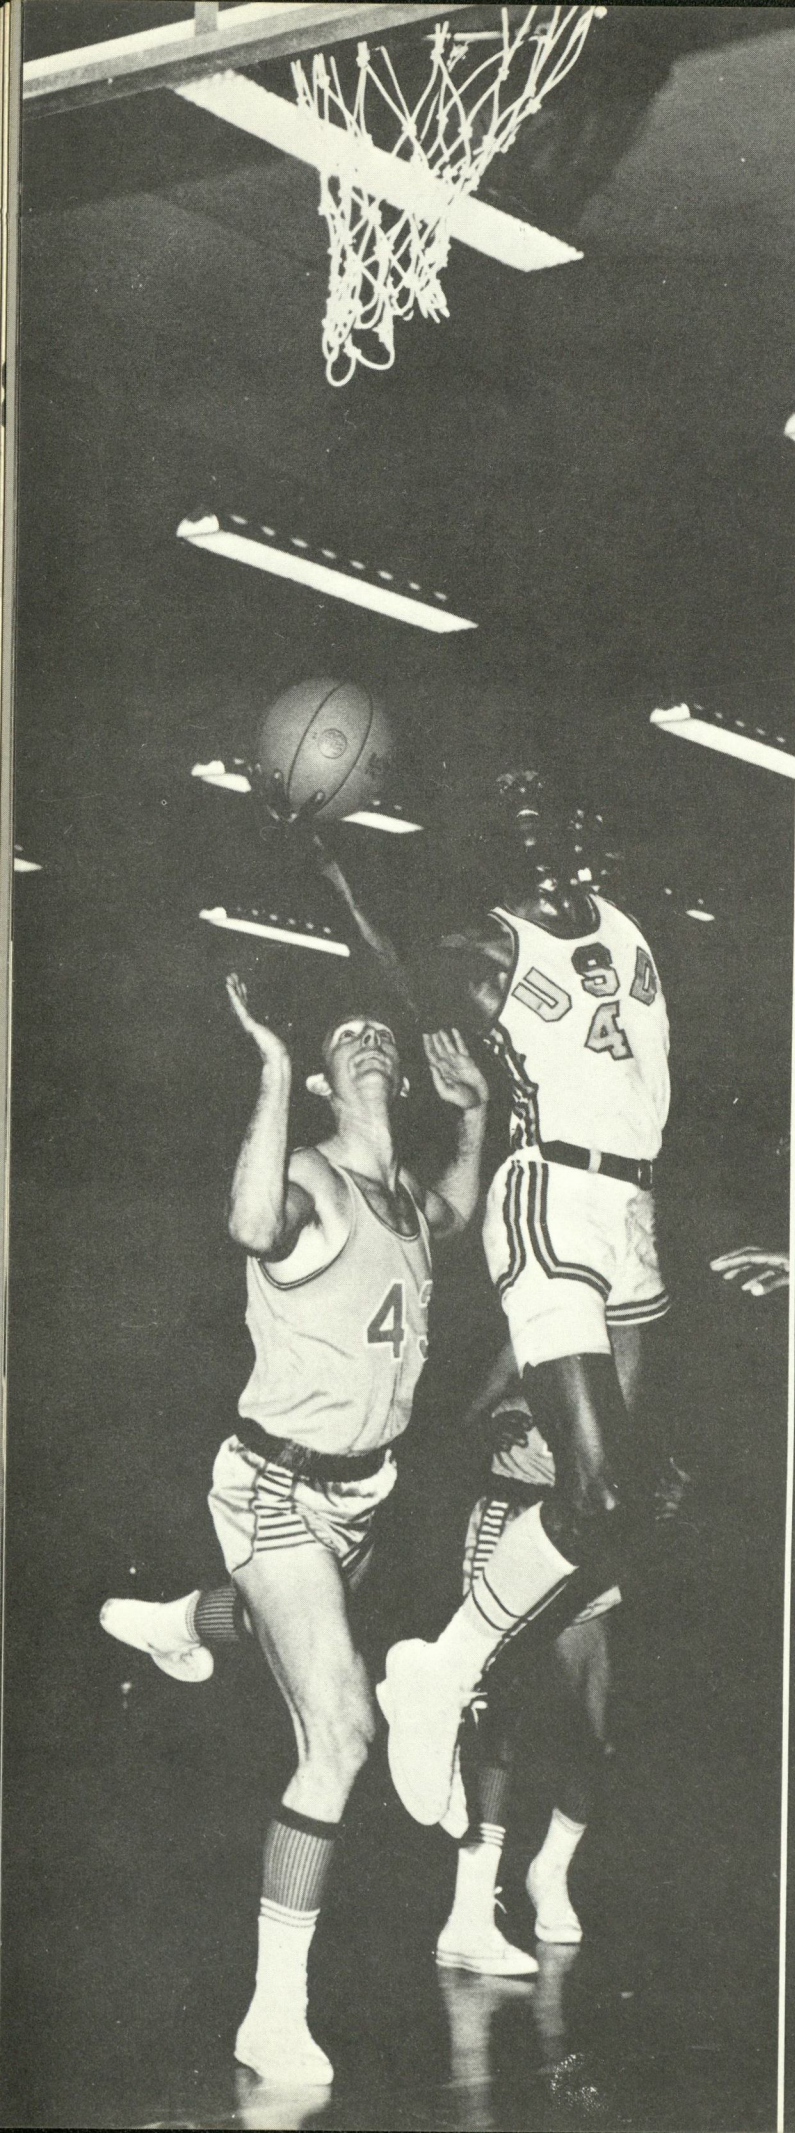

The end of each basketball season inevitably sounds the final buzzer on some collegiate careers. Among the most notable faces missing from the court next year will be that of Bernie Bickerstaff. Bernie was the captain of the team, the playmaker, and one of the most exciting talents in San Diego history. Big Phil Price will also be leaving as will spirited Dick Verlasky, and Mark Yavorsky with his seldom-miss outside shots. Needless to say, their absence will be felt, but they can be proud of the part they played in establishing U.S.D. as a small college basketball power. Mike Ferrua can be proud, and so can Dave Zupan, Bill Ferree, Steve Wojdowski, Larry Gaddy, Jim Allen, Willie Moore, Jim McGreevy, Lymond Williams, John Cunningham, and of course, Coach Phil Woolpert. This was their year, but just wait until next season.

EDITOR'S NOTE

If it is true that a picture is worth a thousand words, then the 1966 edition of All The Men is indeed a verbose volume. Though this most recent issue of the yearbook has occasionally broken away from old traditions and hopefully established a few new ones, I could not properly offer the the book as a finished product without acknowledgement to the many people who have transferred the ideas onto paper.

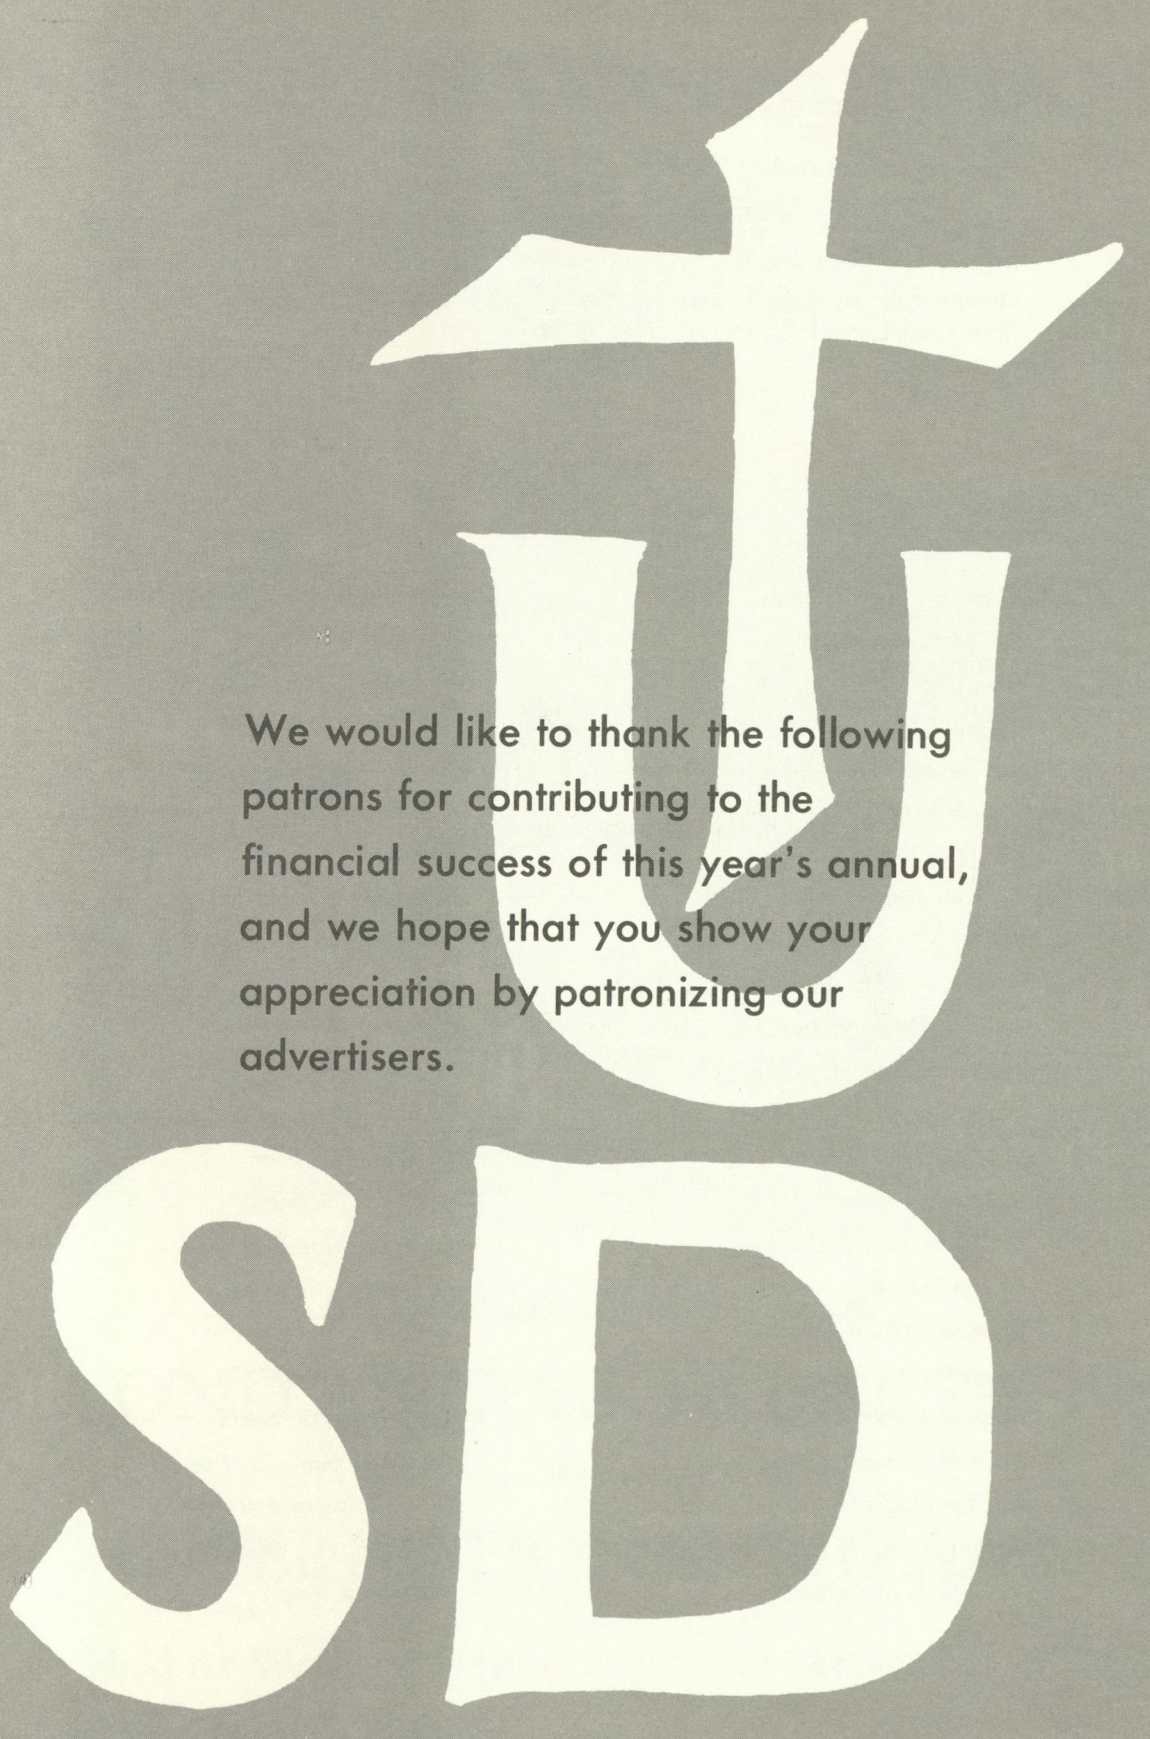

Perhaps this year more than any other, it is difficult to categorically list the members of the staff and their individual accomplishments. The book is a synthesis of concepts and techniques drawn from a variety of sources and talented people. Mike Simpson was autonomous in creating the unusual division pages that introduce each of the four major sections of the book. The remainder, however, must be viewed as a combined effort. Dale Davidson and John Rotsart were involved in technical and research problems. The fruits of their labor can be found scattered throughout the pages of the volume. Rick Wagener helped coordinate the fraternity section, but members of all three fraternities assisted in its completion. During the planning stages of the book, Diane Schemeits, Jane Wydra, and Sonia Olguin offered valuable assistance from a female point of view, something always worthy of consideration in any project of such magnitude. The pictorial content of the book was provided by veteran Bob Connell and newcomer Niel Lynch. Their work speaks for itself. Joe Farias is almost exclusively responsible for the sports section. Joe was perhaps the most enthusiastic member of the staff, and that energy is reflected in the quality of his pages. The advertising campaign was directed by Ed Ostermeyer and Bob Brunner, under the auspices of Mr. Fargo. In an almost unbelievably short time, they made the book a financial success. Dr. Lee Gerlach served as faculty moderator and offered pertinent suggestions and recommendations on an artistic level. Mr. Charles Binkowski, of the American Yearbook Company, was a model of patience and understanding in the face of numerous problems.

If one person were to be singled out as the man most responsible for the production of this yearbook, it would unquestionably be Dennis Vice. The combination of past experience and an ever-creative mind, made his services essential from start to finish.

To all these people I extend a word of sincere appreciation, but gratitude is also due each member of the Associated Student Body, for without your cooperation, your participation, and indeed, your very existence, I would never have had the opportunity of depicting "all the men."

The image features a dark, textured background. Overlaid on this background are two large, white, stylized letters. The letter 'U' is positioned in the upper right quadrant, and the letters 'SD' are positioned in the lower left quadrant. The 'U' has a unique design with a vertical stem and two horizontal bars that have pointed, arrow-like ends. The 'SD' is a bold, sans-serif font. Centered between these two large letters is a block of text.

We would like to thank the following patrons for contributing to the financial success of this year's annual,

In Memoriam

For more than a quarter of a century, Bishop Buddy was, like most of us, a man of many dreams. The University of San Diego is but one of those dreams he lived to see materialize. Its excellence reflects that of its founder, and Alcala Park remains as a fitting monument to the man who made it possible. Yet, it is more than a static symbol of the greatness of his achievement. The University will grow in proportion to its surroundings, and the name of Charles Francis Buddy, first bishop of San Diego, will similarly increase in stature; for those who know his work will know him.
