SPECIAL USD COURSE FOR SCIENCE AND MATH TEACHERS

SAN DIEGO, Calif. --A 32-week in-service and continuing education program for science and mathematics teachers is being offered at the University of San Diego.

Sister Agnes Schmidt, professor of chemistry at the University's College for Women, and director of the program, said yesterday it is designed principally for high school and junior college teachers.

The program is held in cooperation with the San Diego City and County School Districts.

Classes will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings.

The program includes Recent Advances in Molecular and Cellular Biology; Modern Principles of Chemistry; Basic Physical Chemistry for Life Science Teachers; Organic Chemistry of Biologically Important Compounds; Calculus for Science Teachers; and Electronics for Science Teachers.

Registration is now open for the first semester.
