High-tech phone system coming

The first phase of a new telephone system that boosts USD into the forefront of the high-tech revolution was publicly unveiled on campus in early September.

The new system eventually will allow students, faculty, staff and administrators on campus to communicate with one another through a computer with audio, video and digital capabilities.

"We're proud to be a leader in bringing high technology to a university campus," said Jack Boyce, vice president for financial affairs, at a press conference announcing the new system. "This demonstrates this university's commitment to excellence in our management and planning procedures, just as we seek excellence in the classroom."

USD is the first university west of the Mississippi River to install American Telephone and Telegraph's System 85. Eastern universities with the system include Cornell, Pittsburgh and Miami.

The University spent $1.3 million to install the first stages of System 85. Boyce said the system will be enhanced to its complete capabilities in several phases during the next seven to 10 years at an estimated cost of an additional $3.5 million.

As part of phase one, the University has received a new telephone system that will improve telephone service quality and provide additional capacity to meet University growth needs.

By December, 15 communications terminals resembling computerized telephones will be operational on campus. Each 34-button terminal can provide its user with single-button conference calling, electronic message retrieval and a digital screen that displays the name of a caller or a message. The terminal can also be hooked up to a personal computer to allow the user to obtain information from a central campus computer.

Among the phone system's other capabilities are cost tracking of phone calls, remote monitoring and maintenance of the system, campus-wide energy and security monitoring, computerized integration of all voice and data communications, office automation and electronic mail.

USD also will resell telephone services to students in dorm rooms as part of the new system, meaning that students actually will pay the University for their local and long-distance calls.

Boyce said he expects System 85 to save USD millions of dollars over a period of years because of productivity increases, improved services and new academic opportunities that would not otherwise be available.

Because of System 85's capabilities, the day will come in the not too distant future when any campus facility — including a student's dorm room — which has a computer terminal and television set, will be able to communicate with any other computer on campus and be able to receive video broadcasts from the media center or from another campus location.

New phone number

Due to the installation of a new phone system on campus, the University's principle telephone number has changed. The new principle number is 260-4600. Callers should dial that number, then ask for the extension number of the office they are calling.

Faculty receive promotions, tenure

Thirteen faculty members received promotions and seven others received tenure effective in September.

Promoted to professor

Newly-tenured faculty

Record enrollment this fall

Enrollment reached a record 5,264 students fall quarter.

USD opened the 1984-85 school year September 10 with another record-breaking enrollment and several construction projects completed around campus.

The enrollment count was 5,264 students, an increase of 135 students compared to fall, 1983. The total includes about 3,300 undergraduates and 2,000 law and graduate students.

Returning students were greeted by a host of changes around campus that were completed during the summer. Most noticeable among the changes — the opening of three new buildings — $4.5 million Olin Hall, new home for the School of Business Administration; $3.7 million Helen K. and James S. Copley Library; and the $2.4 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center.

Completion of Olin Hall allowed the School of Education to move from cramped quarters in DeSales Hall to Harmon Hall, the business school's former location.

Several other renovation projects totaling nearly $1 million were also completed during the summer, according to Jack Boyce, vice president for financial affairs. "These additional projects were primarily directed at upgrading some of the older academic and residence facilities. The work was necessary both because of the growing size of the student body and because of the age of the facilities," Boyce said.

Among the offices or buildings renovated were:

- The old wing of Copley Library.
- The Career Planning office.
- The dean's offices for the College of Arts and Sciences and Graduate and Continuing Education.
- Students' rooms in DeSales Hall.

In addition, a tiered classroom was built in More Hall for the School of Law, initial installation of a co-generation system designed to reduce the University's energy costs was completed, the tennis courts were resurfaced, and new lights were installed in the gymnasium.

Nursing doctoral program to be launched

An innovative new degree leading to a Doctor of Nursing Science was approved by the University's Board of Trustees in September.

The degree will help meet the nation's critical need for a cadre of exceptionally well-prepared nurses who will exert executive leadership in nursing practice, nursing education and the health care delivery system, according to Dr. Irene Palmer, dean of the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing.

"The dearth of doctorally prepared nurses for roles in practice settings, in teaching and in administration has created a critical issue in the health care industry," Dr. Palmer said. "Our program will provide the academic training needed for those employed in executive leadership positions in nursing as scholars, researchers and providers of nursing roles."

Doctoral courses will offer learning opportunities that emphasize scholarship, skill in investigative techniques and tools, the application of research finding to the practice of nursing and leadership ability to respond to social, political and ethical issues in health care. The program builds on the specialized knowledge and expertise acquired at the master's level in nursing.

The first courses leading to the doctorate degree will be offered in summer of 1985 and will enroll 35-40 students. The degree will require completion of 54 semester post-master's units and a dissertation. To accommodate the needs of nurses employed full-time, as well as nurse faculty throughout the nation who teach during the school year, the program will allow students the option of completing degree requirements on either a full-time or part-time basis through summer session study only, and/or during the academic year.

USD is the first independent university in the West and one of the less than 30 universities in the United States to offer the doctorate in nursing. The only other such program in the state is at UC San Francisco. Others who offer the degree include the University of Arizona, the University of Texas at Austin, the University of Washington and the University of Colorado.

Faculty to teach in the doctoral program are already employed at the School of Nursing, which enjoys the distinction of ranking first nationally among independent universities in the number of nurses holding doctoral degrees (70 percent of USD's nursing faculty are so qualified).

Because of the outstanding faculty and the richness and diversity of their clinical, teaching and research experiences, Dr. Palmer anticipates hiring no additional faculty members to teach the new program. "All of our outstanding faculty members are already prepared to teach in the program," she said.

A national survey of the need for nurses with doctoral degrees was undertaken by the USD nursing faculty as part of the feasibility study completed for the new program. Among the survey's findings:

- Of the 1.67 million RN's in the United States, only 0.15 percent have the doctoral degree. Seventy-one percent of those work in colleges and universities.

- Only 12.5 percent (1553) of the 12,245 nursing faculty teaching in the 511 senior college nursing programs in the U.S. have the doctoral degree. 10,692 lack the doctoral credential.

- Approximately 3,489 nursing doctorates will be needed for college faculties across the nation by 1988.

- A sampling of 169 health service agencies (medical centers, teaching hospitals and public health agencies) across the country indicated a need for 600 nursing doctorates by 1989, primarily in the areas of administration and clinical practice.

The Hahn School of Nursing currently offers a bachelor of science in nursing degree designed for the registered nurse, and a master of science in nursing specializing in administration, family health nursing, family health nurse clinical specialist and school health nurse specialist.

Orientation '84

Students get helping hand

Hundreds of new USD students were introduced to the University and to each other during a week of orientation activities that preceded the opening of school. The activities included a Mexican Fiesta (shown above), a night at Sea World, a sandcastle building contest and sessions to introduce students to various facets of USD.

Employment center seeks part-time jobs for students

The Student Employment Center is asking for the help of alumni, parents of students and friends of the University in locating part-time jobs in the San Diego area for current USD students.

The center attempts to provide opportunities for all students to find employment during the school year, according to Mary Ann Klancer, student employment coordinator.

Klancer points out that students gain much more than wages from utilizing the employment center. "They make contacts in the community, carry their work experiences back to the classroom, and acquire good habits for future employment," she said. "Through involvement with the Career Experience Program, a student can obtain a paid job related to his or her major that potentially could lead to a fulltime position after graduation."

The employment center also gathers job information from local employers through person-to-person contacts, direct mailings and phone solicitation. If you have a business, professional or personal contact in the San Diego area who is looking for student help, contact the center at 260-4801. The office is located in Serra Hall, room 317.

Deepening faith goal of Fr. Michael McKay, new Campus Ministry head

This fall was homecoming for Fr. Michael McKay, the new director of the Campus Ministry office.

That's because Fr. McKay, who came here from Washington, D.C., is a former parish priest in the San Diego diocese. He served three and a half years at Our Mother of Confidence Church in University City and another year and a half at St. James Church in Solana Beach from 1976-81. He is also a former student at St. Francis Seminary near the USD campus.

"I'm delighted at the opportunity to offer my talents in what is a university-wide project of deepening our faith," Fr. McKay said about his new duties. "I think many Catholics are asking themselves 'What does it mean to be a Catholic, Christian today?' I think we have something very special, and I'm excited to share my discoveries with others."

Fr. McKay was in Washington, D.C. the past three years studying for his doctorate in theology at Catholic University. He completed preparation for the priesthood at Gregorian University in Rome, and was ordained there in 1976, along with four of his classmates, by San Diego Bishop Leo Maher. Fr. McKay completed his high school and college coursework at the Josephinum in Columbus, Ohio after growing up near Chicago as the third eldest child in a family of five girls and three boys.

He said he feels comfortable working with college age students because of his parish experiences, during which he worked closely with young people. "It's so gratifying," he said, "to see young people awaken to the richness of their relationship to the Lord, to see them grow in faith."

But young people will not be the only community Fr. McKay serves. He plans to broaden the Campus Ministry program on campus to more effectively relate it to the entire University community. "I hope this office can help USD further its goals as a Catholic university," he explained. "We can help foster the spiritual growth and religious sensitivity that should be part of a university with Catholic values."

To work toward that end, Fr. McKay will call upon a core team of Fr. Owen Mullen, graduate students minister; Sr. Helen Lorch, RSCJ, assistant professor of history and resident director; John Trifiletti, resident director; and Skip Walsh, director of residence life; plus many student and faculty volunteers. Among the many activities and programs sponsored by the office are liturgies, retreats, sacramental study, discussion of social justice issues such as hunger and peace, and participation in volunteer service programs designed to aid the poor of San Diego.

The Campus Ministry office is located in Founders Hall. Its phone number is 260-4600, ext. 4485.

Fr. Michael McKay

Khoury gift honors mother

Law school receives $400,000+ in grants

The School of Law recently received five grants totaling more than $400,000 — the largest amount of grant money ever received at one time by the school, according to Sheldon Krantz, dean of the Law School.

"These funds are a signal from the granting organizations that USD's Law School is providing valuable and badly-needed public services through our various programs. We're very pleased to be able to serve our local communities in a variety of ways."

The five grants include:

- An award from the Weingart Foundation of $189,500 to USD's Center for Public Interest Law for continuation of the center's work of monitoring California state regulatory agencies.

- A $170,000 grant from the San Diego City Council to support neighborhood mediation centers in Golden Hill and Mira Mesa, part of the Law Center's programming.

- A $54,000 grant from the Legal Services Corporation to establish a new law clinic in the South Bay region of San Diego County.

- A $10,000 grant from Signal Companies to continue development and support of the Law School's Mexico-U.S. Law Institute.

- An $8,500 grant from the Parker Foundation for continued support of the Law School's Linda Vista Legal Clinic.

More details on each of the grants follows:

Weingart $189,000 grant to USD's Center for Public Interest Law

The Weingart grant will enable the Center for Public Interest Law to continue its advocacy projects, which include review of regulations changes proposed by state agencies in response to Governor Deukmejian's Regulatory Reform Task Force, monitoring of state agencies' compliance with "sunshine" statutes, work on reform of the California state constitution, and promotion of deregulation efforts in the state.

The Center for Public Interest Law includes a staff of three in San Diego and one person in Sacramento. It supervises the work of 50 students, provides academic instruction, clinic experience and transportation to more than 500 meetings throughout the state each year, and produces a quarterly journal, the California Regulatory Law. Professor Robert C. Fellmeth is director of the center.

San Diego City Council $170,000 grant to the San Diego Law Center for neighborhood mediation centers in Golden Hill and Mira Mesa

The grant will allow USD's Law Center to continue its community mediation efforts through the Golden Hill Mediation Center and the Mira Mesa/Scripps Ranch Mediation Center. At the centers, trained volunteers offer their neighborhoods a free, informal and accessible forum to resolve a wide variety of minor conflicts through voluntary agreements reached in confidential mediation sessions. Problems referred to the mediation centers include disputes involving money, harassment, landlords and tenants, family members and property damage.

The grant enables the Law Center to continue to provide technical assistance to the mediation centers as well as to develop recommendations for expansion of mediation services in the city. Attorney Carol Hallstrom is the coordinator of the Law Center's neighborhood mediation program.

$54,000 Legal Services Corporation grant to establish a law clinic in the South Bay region

The Legal Services grant will allow USD's Legal Clinic, in cooperation with the Legal Aid Society of San Diego and the MAAC Project, to establish a new law clinic in the South Bay region of San Diego County. The clinic will provide free legal services to indigent clients in a geographical area currently unserved by existing legal services programs. Services will be concentrated in housing, domestic and immigration matters.

The clinic will have two major goals: to instruct clinical students in proper lawyering skills through the representation of actual clients under the close supervision of clinical professors; and to provide necessary services to chronically under-represented groups in the San Diego area.

Professor Theresa Player is director of the Legal Clinic program.

Signal Companies $10,000 grant to the Law School's Mexico-U.S. Law Institute

The Signal Companies' grant will support USD's Mexico-U.S. Law Institute, which was established in 1983. The institute was founded to expand knowledge of the legal systems of both countries, to undertake research and development projects with emphasis on reducing unnecessary legal barriers to cooperation and joint development; to stimulate exchanges of faculty and students; to increase the number of Mexican-American law students attending the USD law school; and to focus national attention on important legal issues affecting the two countries. Dr. Jorge Vargas, Law School faculty member, is director of the institute.

Parker Foundation $8,500 grant to Linda Vista Legal Clinic

The Parker Foundation grant will provide continuing support for USD Law Clinic activities at the Linda Vista Legal Clinic. The clinic provides practical training for law students and needed legal services to indigent clients in the Linda Vista area. Professor Player is director of the Legal Clinic programs.

USD's Law School is American Bar Association-accredited and is a member of the Association of American Law Schools. The school provides legal education to both graduate level and Juris Doctor students.

Lopez wins

David J. Lopez, 30, a second year law student, recently was selected as recipient of the 10th annual USD Jack-in-the-Box Mexican American scholarship.

The $7,300 full tuition Jack-in-the-Box scholarship is awarded to deserving law students who have exhibited a strong commitment to community issues, maintain high academic standards and who possess leadership and professional potential.

Olin Hall dedication Oct. 14

Dr. James Burns

Fortune magazine publisher Edward P. Lenahan will be the keynote speaker when USD formally dedicates Olin Hall, new home for the School of Business Administration, at 2 p.m. on October 19 in Camino Theatre.

The 46,000-square foot building is located at the west end of campus, south of Marian Way and adjacent to the Douglas Manchester Executive Conference Center. Designed by architects Sadler and Associates, it houses instructional facilities, seminar rooms, faculty offices, lounges, and centers for student accounting, word processing and computer science instruction. M.H. Golden Company was the general contractor. Construction of the building began in August, 1983.

The Olin Foundation of New York awarded USD $4.5 million in February, 1983 to construct the three-story structure. The foundation makes grants to independent colleges and universities for the construction of academic buildings. USD is only the second institution of higher learning in California — the other is USC — to receive an Olin grant.

Enrollment in the School of Business has tripled during the past five years to approximately 1,200 undergraduates and 300 graduate students, creating an urgent demand for the new facility, according to Dr. James Burns, dean of the school.

"The grant from the Olin Foundation is an outstanding example of the success of the partnership of the free enterprise system and independent higher education. We intend to return this vote of confidence in the University and its School of Business Administration by preparing business leaders who will lead the development of this country's economic system in the years ahead," Dr. Burns said.

Religion in politics forum Oct. 24

The Religion in Politics panel will include moderator Robert Blair Kaiser, staff writer for The Tribune; and Joseph Colombo, Fr. Norbert Rigali, Gary Macy and Fr. Ron Pachence of USD's department of religious studies.

"Religion in Politics/Election '84" will kick-off a series of educational forums on emerging social issues to be presented by the Office of Public Relations during the 1984-85 academic year.

The first forum, set for 7:30 p.m. October 24 at All Hallows Catholic Parish Center in La Jolla, will consist of a panel of three USD religious studies professors that will discuss various aspects of the dominant issue in this year's presidential campaign.

Participating in the forum will be: • Joseph Colombo, assistant professor of religious studies, who will address "Bourgeois and Messianic Christianity: A Theological Reflection." Colombo earned a master's degree from Catholic University and is a doctoral candidate at the School of Divinity at the University of Chicago.

• Dr. Gary Macy, associate professor of religious studies, who will discuss "What Separation of Church and State Isn't!" Dr. Macy completed his doctoral studies in religion at Cambridge University in England.

• Fr. Norbert Rigali, S.J., professor of religious studies, who will address "The Christian in a Pluralistic Society." Fr. Rigali, a Jesuit, studied under Hugo Rahner at the University of Innsbruck and holds a doctorate from the University of Munich.

Fr. Ron Pachence, chairman of the department of religious studies, will introduce the panel and chair the forum.

Robert Blair Kaiser, staff writer for The Tribune in San Diego, will moderate the general discussion to follow the presentations.

Kaiser covered the Second Vatican Council for Time magazine and is a former reporter for The New York Times.

"In striving to fulfill the University's mission of education and service to the community, we believe that this series of forums will provide additional insights into some of the issues so critical to our society today," said Sara Finn, director of public relations. "It is through these types of educational forums that all of us can achieve new, deeper understandings of these complex issues, helping us to make more informed decisions in the future."

"Religion in Politics/Election '84" is co-sponsored by the All Hallows RENEW group. The parish center is located at 6602 La Jolla Scenic Dr. S. The forum is free and open to the public.

HILLTOPICS

• Dr. John Valois, psychology, spent part of his summer as a book reviewer for Allyn and Bacon, Inc., Publishing Co.

O'Keefe new NROTC chief

Capt. Cornelius O'Keefe

Capt. Cornelius O'Keefe, USN, professor of naval science, has been named commanding officer of the joint Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps Program (NROTC) at USD and San Diego State University.

Capt. O'Keefe's most recent duty assignment was at the Naval Amphibious School in Coronado, Calif. as director of the Human Resource Management Training department and instructor for prospective commanding officers and executive officers in leadership and management. He holds a master of science degree in management and a bachelor's degree in mathematics.

The NROTC program at USD educates men and women to serve as commissioned officers in the Navy and the Marine Corps. Students enrolled in the program pursue bachelor's degree requirements at USD as well as meet their NROTC requirements.

Auxiliary fashion show coming up October 24

Alison Tibbitts, president of the USD Auxiliary and Carol Alessio, chairperson, have a few tickets left for the Auxiliary's 28th annual fashion show, "Yankee Doodle," on October 24 in the Mission Ballroom at Town and Country Hotel in San Diego. ## Homecoming plans set for Nov. 2-4

One of the biggest alumni Homecoming gatherings in USD history — featuring 10 class reunions — is set for November 2-4 on campus, according to Tom Martz, director of alumni relations.

The classes of 1959, 1960, 1964, 1965, 1969, 1970, 1974, 1975, 1979 and 1980 are invited back to USD that weekend for a full slate of activities to be capped off with the Homecoming football game matching the Toreros against Azusa Pacific University. "We've had an enthusiastic response to our plans so far; I think this will be a Homecoming to remember," Martz said.

The schedule of activities includes:

Friday, November 2
4 to 7:30 p.m.
7:30 to 9 p.m.

Alumni Fund drive underway for 1984-85

The 1984-85 Alumni Fund campaign is underway, and this marks the third and final year that alumni will be able to take advantage of the Irvine Challenge to increase the value of their gifts.

Using the same guidelines as the past two years, the Irvine Foundation will match the net increase in total alumni contributions from last year at a dollar for dollar rate. Additionally, the foundation will give a bonus of $25 per person to USD if the total number of alumni who give is 10 percent higher than the number who gave last year.

The Irvine Foundation set-up the challenge program for 22 independent colleges in California as a means to encourage alumni to increase their annual giving to their alma maters. The program is working at USD — in the last two years more than 2,000 alumni have met the challenge, raising more than a quarter million dollars for the university, according to Kate Walden, assistant director of development.

Contributions to the Alumni Fund help support in a variety of ways the high quality education USD offers its students.

Fogarty shifts recruiting emphasis

The University of San Diego football program is under the direction of second-year coach Brian Fogarty. Last season Fogarty coached the Toreros to a 5-5 record. Against Division III competition, USD compiled an impressive 5-1 mark. Before coming to USD, Fogarty coached at St. Francis High School in La Canada, Calif. where he was head coach for four years and an assistant coach for nine years.

The following is a short interview with Fogarty on his jump from the high school football ranks to the college level.

What is the major difference between coaching at the high school level as compared to the college level?

Coaching college football as opposed to high school ball is far more enjoyable because you are working with adults. It is easier to work on a one-to-one basis with a college athlete because of the maturity factor. The student-athletes at the college level are far better athletes and are capable of learning and doing more things.

What are some of the changes that you have made since taking over the head coaching position in 1983?

The coaching staff and I have changed the recruiting philosophy. We have shifted from recruiting a large number of junior college transfers and are now aiming more towards the high school athlete and legitimate JC student-athlete. Our goal is to get student-athletes in here who want to graduate rather than just play football. Fifty of the 63 players on this year's squad have come here in the last two years and 22 of them are from San Diego.

Something else we've done is expand the alumni support. We now have an alumni board. Members who have been working hard at making this a success include Tim Groff, Jackson Muecke, John Dudek, John Manson, Tim Berenda, Dan Herbert, Jan Chapman, Roger Leonard and many others. The major goal of the alumni board is to develop membership and to support football. Our first major function was a barbeque and post-game party after the Redland's game; we had close to 100 people there. The alumni club is in conjunction with the Grid Iron Club, which also is a support group for the football program.

What are your immediate goals?

Our immediate goal is to become a consistent winner at the Division III level. This is a tough task. Because of a lack of Division III and club teams in California we've been forced to play in-state Division II schools. For example, St. Mary's College has 20 scholarship athletes and Cal Lutheran has now gone to a scholarship program.

What has been your biggest challenge?

In Division III football there is no signing date, so recruiting is a year round job. Because of USD's academic standards and the cost of an education, it takes a certain type of individual to come to USD. The biggest challenge has been finding that type of student-athlete.

What about this year's squad?

We have a chance to be a good team this year. We are really young with only one starting senior on offense and three seniors on defense. The key to our success will be if the young players are ready to perform at the college level.

What to expect from USD's fall sports squads

Football

After posting a 5-5 record in his rookie season, head coach Brian Fogarty and his coaching staff must replace USD's three most productive offensive players from a year ago and 11 starters all together.

Gone from the Toreros' '83 offensive unit are QB Phil Spencer (895 yards passing), leading rusher Jerome McAlpin (1,018 yards rushing) and top receiver Mike Rish (23 catches for 417 yards and 5 TD's).

The Toreros schedule will be demanding with games against three Division II schools (Chico State, Cal Lutheran and St. Mary's) and a home-and-home series with Azusa Pacific University (NAIA Division II).

"It should be an interesting year because of our youth. We'll definitely need a few key people to come through for us. This year's schedule will allow us to get a little breather in between our Division II opponents whereas last year's schedule ended with four straight Division II opponents. If we play well we should go at least 5-5. I wouldn't say that is our goal because I shoot for higher goals than that. I will say that I'll be disappointed if we go anything less," Fogarty said.

Men's soccer

This season marks the fifth year of NCAA Division I soccer at the University of San Diego, and coach Seamus McFadden is hoping that a successful recruiting campaign will lead to the finest season yet for the Toreros.

The 18-game regular-season schedule is dotted with familiar opponents from the Southern California Intercollegiate Soccer Association, such as Cal State Fullerton, San Diego State, Loyola Marymount and U.S. International. But with the breakup of that conference, the Toreros will be shooting for a berth in the West Coast Athletic Conference championships, to be held the first week in November. USD will take on some of the state's top powers, including Bay Area standouts Santa Clara, Stanford and California. The Toreros will play 12 of the 18 games on the schedule at home.

Six starters return, including forwards Bo Kaemerle (junior, 5-8, 150) and Dave Nichols (sophomore, 5-10, 170), who combined for most of the Torero points last season. With six freshmen and eight sophomores on the 21-play roster, USD should continue to develop in the next few years.

Women's volleyball

With seven returning players from the 1983 team and four promising newcomers, the Toreras hope to improve on last season's 9-14 mark. USD again will face a challenging schedule, but coach John Martin hopes that his senior-laden line-up will fare well with the experience gained over the past few campaigns.

Five of the team's returnees started regularly last year and another often started, so Martin expects his team to be solid throughout, with good leadership from the six seniors on the 11-player roster.

"We should also improve as far as consistency is concerned," Martin says. "Last year there would be major differences in our play from one match to the next. Player-wise, our real strength this year is our four strong, quick outside hitters."

Men's cross-country

The University of San Diego men's cross-country team for 1984 will be a veteran squad, with eight runners back from last year's fall campaign.

Seniors Shawn Delaney and Bob Winters should lead the way for the Toreros, though Winters will have to shake some nagging injuries to reach his potential. Rich Strobel, another senior, will be near the front among the USD runners, as will Francis Bennet, a sophomore. Senior Rex Ellis, sophomore Jack Tade, sophomore Peter Wood and junior Tom Mortensen round out the returnees.

Women's cross-country

Senior Ellen Hughes and sophomore Denise Andrews, the top two performers on last season's USD women's cross country team, will anchor a young 1984 squad.

Joellen Bechina, a sophomore, is the only other returnee on coach Jim O'Brien's roster, but newcomers such as Lori Morgan, a transfer from the University of Portland, and twin sisters Darcy and Tracy Danner of Anchorage, Alaska, are expected to add depth to what O'Brien expects will be a representative team.

Author Hughes and USD: Success story begins 14th year

The "Author E. Hughes Story" is the longest running hit ever to play Alcala Park. It's the story of a small town midwesterner who moves west to the University of San Diego to find his fame and fortune; the story of a man who not only defies the odds and successfully leads the merger of two small Catholic institutions, but who leads his school to fiscal stability, record enrollment levels and a campus expansion program that most college presidents can only dream about.

What motivates this thoughtful, articulate man to reach for new heights of success at the University of San Diego? How did he become a college president?

Ask him these questions and you'll hear the story of a man who graduated from high school planning to be a math teacher. He says he discovered his decision-making abilities through involvement in his college fraternity, and after embarking on a career as a college business professor, moved swiftly through the academic ranks to department chairman to dean to academic vice president, and then finally, president in 1971 of USD.

Shortly after the opening of the current school year, the beginning of his 14th year as president of the University, this remarkable man who has become one of the most respected and admired community leaders in San Diego shared some thoughts about his USD years and provided a glimpse of the challenges ahead for the University.

Q: You're beginning your 14th year as president of USD. You must enjoy what you're doing. What has sustained you during the past 13 years?

Dr. Hughes: Without any question, the immediate response is I like what I do. I love the University, and I feel very much a part of it. My family has been happy here, the work has been fulfilling. I think I am making a contribution to higher education, to this institution and to our community; and I think that as long as we are fulfilled in what we do, we generally stay with that in one form or another.

The people here are a big factor in making my job enjoyable. I have total trust and confidence in the people with whom I work. I don't ever feel that I am being deceived, nor that anyone is playing games. My, that makes life, and the job, much easier. And I think that feeling of trust is mutual. I am not playing games with the people with whom I work, they know where I am coming from, and how I think about things. If they don't, they ask. That's been very, very important.

Q: To what do you attribute the University's amazing success story in the last decade?

Dr. Hughes: It's a combination of the right place — San Diego, in a very lovely part of the country — with the migration pattern. We're located in an area that has grown in population from four to six percent a year for the last 14 years, with a three percent growth rate forecast for the next 10 to 15 years. So there has been abundant additional population to channel through our institution.

Secondly, I believe the community of people at USD plays a large role in the institution's success. The people at USD feel good about the institution. They are fulfilled by being a part of this place. It matches their career goals, and I think in a way, their personal goals. That kind of feeling is important to the health of any school.

Q: With all the tremendous growth that has occurred here during your term as president, is there one single accomplishment that you point to with more pride than others?

Dr. Hughes: No, I really can't. There are benchmarks that signal certain things as we have progressed, but it would be awfully hard for me to single out any one of those as being of greater importance to me or to the institution. Each is important within a different aspect of the institution. I can give you a couple of examples.

The hallmark in the financial stability of the institution was an agreement between the University and Bank of America that we no longer needed the Diocese's signature on University business transactions. That decision told the rest of the community that we had the confidence of the Bank of America, which is knowledgeable about finances. That's a benchmark.

We get very engrossed in fundraising, as you might guess. A benchmark in that area was when one of our benefactors stepped forward during our campaign and said, 'I believe very strongly in you and what you're doing, and I will commit a significant amount of money to help you.' Gaining that person's personal confidence was a benchmark. It was one of the first major gifts that we received. And it meant a great deal to me, personally and professionally, to have that expression of confidence. Those are a couple of examples that stand out in my mind.

Q: What do you see as the biggest challenge facing the University in the next two or three years... and on a long-term basis?

Dr. Hughes: There are two. The first is to move the institution up to the level of the community's expectations of excellence. We have to move the level of programming and the level of our student body up to the expectations of our academic community.

The second major challenge is to live up to the Catholic nature of the institution. In my opinion, it is important that this community come to grips with the importance of being a Catholic university as a community, not just each of us separately. I think we're aware of the areas that have been a part of the Catholic tradition in higher education, and we're moving in that direction; we just need to keep moving in that way.

If we want to do what I have just described, we have to attract additional capital for our endowment. Endowment is the capital that's used to create quality within an institution.
