Dobson named top '87 employee

Communications supervisor Gary Dobson — described by his supervisor as "always willing to go the extra step" — was named winner of the 1987 Staff Employee of the Year Award at the third annual Staff Appreciation Picnic July 29.

Named runners-up for the top award were Yvette Fontaine, staff assistant for the Master of Comparative Law program; Ruben Valdez, a custodian for the School of Business Administration; and Nancy Weber, a clerical assistant with Safety and Security.

Before announcing Dobson's name and the names of the runners-up, President Author E. Hughes pointed out to picnickers the importance of the Employee of the Year Award.

"The award recognizes that this person is truly an outstanding employee and an extraordinary person who voluntarily goes far beyond his or her normal duties," said Dr. Hughes. "This holds true for all who were nominated."

Dr. Hughes presented Dobson with a gift and a personal plaque. Dobson's name also will be inscribed on a permanent plaque located in DeSales Hall next to the Human Resources Office, DS 127.

The runners-up and Dobson will be invited to a luncheon with Dr. Hughes later in the year.

Other employees nominated for the award but not among the finalists were Peg Conrad, senior secretary, College of Arts and Sci-

Crews scurry to finish projects

Alcalá Park was alive with the sound of banging hammers and buzzing saws this summer as construction crews raced to complete more than 20 building and renovation projects before the fall semester began.

"Actually, since the University Center was completed (in January), we've undertaken 46 projects across campus," according to Roger Manion, director of physical plant. "Finishing the center is what got the snowball rolling."

Here's a quick rundown on the major projects and a report on who's moved where:

The honorees were selected by a screening committee which based its decisions on job competence, initiative, relations with others and exemplification of the University’s values.

Dr. Hughes also thanked all employees at the picnic for their on-the-job contributions to the University.

“As I look around the patio,” he said, “I see a lot of dedicated, hard-working people who — as I do — really care about this institution and what it stands for . . . I’m proud to be associated with you, and look forward to our continued association.”

After Dr. Hughes handed out 5-, 10- and 15-year service awards to employees, he singled out USD’s first ever 30-year employee for special recognition — assistant cook Willamina Vallejo, better known as Willie. The president presented her with a clock to honor her anniversary.

Also honored at the picnic was Mal Rafferty, director of continuing education, who was named Administrator of the Year by the Staff Employees Association.

Top employee Dobson was described on the nomination form by his supervisor, the late John Zeterberg, as a person possessing “those special personal qualities that are always actively sought after and highly valued in an employee: initiative, dependability, trustworthiness and geniality.”

Dobson was hired in July, 1984. He supervises and coordinates activities of workers in the voice, data and video fields in maintaining and repairing systems and equipment on campus.

Fontaine’s boss, professor Ralph Folsom, director of the Master of Comparative Law program, described his assistant on the nomination form as “the person who assures the success of the MCL program.” He added: “Yvette’s job requires skill, diplomacy and professionalism. She excels in every respect.”

Fontaine has worked at USD since 1983.

Valdez, who has been at the University since 1976, was nominated by Carmen Barcena, assistant dean of the School of Business Administration. Wrote Barcena: “His dedication and willingness to help the School of Business in any manner that he can, with-
New salary schedule in issue

The 1987-88 Staff Salary Schedule and Staff Employee Classification Plan is included in this issue of Alcalá View. The pay schedule reflects an increase at the maximum of each grade. The increase allows staff employees who are currently at the maximum of their grade to be eligible for a merit increase.

Beginning with the 1987-88 fiscal year September 1, there is a merit pool of six percent available for staff salary increases. Employees are eligible on their merit review date for pay increases based on performance.

Results of the Alcalá View readership poll will be published in the next newsletter.

Flex benefits: find out pros and cons at meetings

Yearly the University spends well over $1 million on employee medical, dental, life and other benefits insurance coverage. Is the money spent in the most effective way to meet employee needs? Maybe, maybe not.

Currently, USD offers a "one size fits all" type of benefits plan. There are some choices among medical and dental plans, but, for example, if an employee has medical coverage through a spouse and would prefer to waive medical insurance and use those dollars for another benefit, it can't be done.

However, a flex benefit plan, or what the IRS calls a qualified cafeteria plan, could allow for more choices as well as some tax advantages. For example, currently employees pay taxes on the money they spend for dependent medical insurance. With a flex plan that money would not be taxed. That would mean that an employee in a 20 percent tax bracket who spent $1,500 on dependent medical insurance could save $300 in taxes.

All of the above sounds great. But putting in a flex benefit plan can have its downside. The plan is complex to administer and it can be difficult for employees to understand. Also, it would require some hard decisions on how to allocate benefit dollars to employees.

So before the University decides to change its benefit structure, it wants your opinion. Dr. Judith Muñoz, director of human resources, will hold meetings in September to explain the proposal and to gather employee responses through a questionnaire. Employees are invited to attend one of the meetings listed below to learn about flex benefits.

Renovation projects nearing completion

East campus housing project

Except for the landscaping — which should be completed by the end of September — this new 156-unit apartment complex located next to the Sports Center is ready for occupancy by returning USD students.

The 157,000-square-foot complex, dubbed the Alcalá Vista apartments, contains 135 two-bedroom and 21 one-bedroom units capable of housing about 450 undergraduate and 35-70 graduate students.

The six buildings were named after the three mountain ranges east of San Diego — Cuyamaca North and South, Laguna North and South, and Palomar North and South.

The $10.6 million project was planned to meet the growing demand from students for on campus housing. In past years, students have been housed in the off-campus Oakwood Apartments because the University was unable to find available on campus housing.

Construction was funded through the issuance of California Educational Facilities Authority (CEFA) tax exempt bonds. Authorized by the state legislature, CEFA bonds are available to California private universities to fund new facilities construction, renovation and the purchase of capital equipment.

Each of the apartment units contains a kitchen, dining area, living room with a balcony, and, in the two-bedroom units, two bedrooms and two bathrooms.

More than 450 parking spaces were created around the new apartments, so the additional residents should not have a negative impact on the overall campus parking situation, according to Manion. He points out Alcalá Vista residents will be limited to parking their cars in their own apartment complex lot only.

Lower level of Serra Hall

The former student union area located in the basement of Serra has been remodeled into expanded laboratory space for biology and physics, a new electronics lab for electrical engineering, a computer lab and classroom, and offices for math, computer, electrical engineering and other science faculty.

Camino Hall

The former Camino Hall dining hall, recently renamed Sacred Heart Hall, has been remodeled into space for fine arts and the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps (NROTC) program.

The fine arts department has gained a performing arts center, a photography lab, a dance and theatrical rehearsal room, and a student art center for exhibiting art in a gallery-type setting. The performing arts center will give the department added rehearsal space as well as a more intimate setting than Camino Theater for productions.

The NROTC program has gained several new offices that were built in the space formerly occupied by the Camino kitchen. Food Service offices and along the back of Camino Hall.

Other projects

All of the philosophy department faculty offices are now located on the second floor of Serra Hall. That move occurred after math and engineering faculty formerly located in the space moved to the Serra base ment. Some offices were remodeled and enlarged to accommodate philosophy faculty.

The English department gained three new offices in Camino Hall with completion of some minor remodeling work.

Four offices and a reception area were constructed on the first floor of Guadalupe Hall for the anthropology/sociology department.

The Admissions Office was remodeled to create a more attractive atmosphere in which to welcome potential students and their parents to campus.

The former Camino Hall Lounge was converted into three offices and a reception area for fine arts department faculty and staff. That move allowed expansion of the Student Health Center, also located in Camino Hall, to about twice its former size.

The accounting department gained space in DeSales Hall. First, the Cashier's Office was remodeled to create additional customer service space.

Then, when remodeling now in progress is complete, the Controller's Office will move from DeSales 126 to DeSales 120, offices formerly occupied by the anthropology/sociology department and academic computing. University Services staff then will move from DeSales 124 to 126.

A classroom in Olin Hall was remodeled into four faculty offices.

Eight apartments in the Mission housing complex, Mission Housing 1611, were renovated from top to bottom. Included in the work: new doors and windows, stoves, plumbing, lighting and bathroom fixtures.
