

University of San Diego

Digital USD

USD News Scrapbooks

USD News

3-31-1984

USD News Scrapbook 1982-1984

University of San Diego

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digital.sandiego.edu/newsscrapbooks>

Digital USD Citation

University of San Diego, "USD News Scrapbook 1982-1984" (1984). USD News Scrapbooks. 21.
<https://digital.sandiego.edu/newsscrapbooks/21>

This Scrapbooks is brought to you for free and open access by the USD News at Digital USD. It has been accepted for inclusion in USD News Scrapbooks by an authorized administrator of Digital USD. For more information, please contact digital@sandiego.edu.

11/82 - 2/84

NOV 1982 7-6-84

NO. D-91-B

Nov. 1982

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

NOV 10 1982

Ernesto Grihalva, a second-year student at the University of San Diego School of Law, took top honors recently in the three-day Jessop International Law Moot Court Competition at the law school.

Clouds Finally Lift Over USD Growth Plans

By PAULA PARKER,
Times Staff Writer

Even the heavens cooperated Tuesday morning at ground-breaking ceremonies for a $10-million construction project at the University of San Diego, a school that was in the red only six years ago.

Stormy skies gave way to sunshine on the campus of the Catholic university long enough for USD President Author Hughes and other dignitaries to thrust silver shovels into the moist earth where a $3.8-million expansion will more than double the size of the campus library.

The library expansion, a $2-million executive conference center and a new 45,000-square-foot building to house USD's School of Business Administration, estimated to cost about $5 million, were made possible by a $15-million fund-raising campaign begun three years ago.

USD officials say the construction program is vital in helping the campus handle a student enrollment

Please see LIBRARY, Page 4

4 Part II/Wednesday, November 10, 1982 LOS ANGELES TIMES

LIBRARY: Funding Skies Clear

Continued from First Page

that, at 5,003, has grown 72% since 1977. Original projections did not call for an enrollment of that size until 1985.

Classrooms and library facilities are now "badly cramped, badly overcrowded," said Sister Sally Furay, USD vice president. The university has an average classroom use rate of 87% — much higher than desirable.

Funding for the projects, to be built over the next two years, came from corporate donors, private benefactors and foundations. Nearly half of the $15 million amassed was generated directly by trustees, including a $1.5 million donation to the library expansion fund from the James S. Copley Foundation. The completed library will be called the Helen K. and James S. Copley library in honor of the donation, USD officials said.

But Tuesday's festivities marked more than just the expansion and addition of buildings at the 33-year-old USD. It is the largest building project for academic programs there since the $1.5-million School of Nursing was built in 1978, university spokeswoman Sara Finn said.

Result of Steady Efforts

The project also is probably the most tangible evidence of more than a decade of steady efforts by Hughes and USD's Board of Trustees to turn around the once financially troubled institution, capping years of internal budgeting improvements and aggressive fund-raising efforts.

"To have talked about a $15-million (capital improvements) program in 1971 was so far from anything that appeared to be remotely possible . . ." Hughes, president of USD for 11 years, observed during a break in the ceremonies.

"It's been a personal as well as professional goal, to see this (university) evolve, to succeed, to be a really important part of the higher education scene in San Diego," he said.

According to its 1981-1982 annual report, USD has erased the last of a $1.8-million deficit accumulated during the late 1960s and early 1970s before it merged the once-separate College for Women, College for Men and School of Law.

Last of Deficit Eliminated

The deficit accumulated after the Catholic Diocese of San Diego discontinued funding for the former men's college in 1968. Hughes has been credited with instituting tight budget controls and other measures, which moved USD into the black six years ago. USD now shows a surplus of $531,613 in its current annual operating budget of $26.7 million, according to its annual report.

Hughes said there are plans to raise funds for a fourth construction project, a $6-million student center which would house dining halls and other student services. The university has distributed proposals to private donors seeking about $8 million, but has not yet received responses, he added.

Architect's rendering shows plans for USD's new Helen K. and James S. Copley Library expansion.

Construction of the library addition, which will add 38,000 square feet to the present 24,000, will begin in January, with completion expected in about a year. The architect for the project is Mosher, Drew, Watson and Ferguson, a San Diego firm.

The new building for the business school, where enrollment has tripled in five years, will be built by Tucker, Sadler & Associates of San Diego, and will house classrooms, faculty offices and instructional facilities. Construction is set to begin in Spring.

The 15,000-square-foot conference center will house the university's continuing education programs and serve as a place where academic seminars, workshops and lectures can be held, USD officials said. It will be called the Manchester Executive Conference Center in recognition of a $500,000 gift from USD trustee Douglas Manchester.

San Diego Daily Transcript

Real Estate/Construction

O. 157

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1982

861 SIXTH AVENUE — (714-232-4381)

The Manchester Executive Conference Center will be under construction by early spring next year. Designed by Tucker Sadler & Associates, the facility will feature seminar and workshop rooms as well as classrooms.

The 38,000-square-foot addition to the USD library should be completed by September 1983.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

NOV 13 1982

Through Dec. 9

USD display — The University of San Diego will have a display of its sculptured works beginning Nov. 10 at the school's Founders Gallery. An opening reception will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 9. The gallery is open Wednesday from noon to 9 p.m. and other weekdays from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

EVENING TRIBUNE

NOV 30 1982

Ramirez named Outstanding Jurist

North County Municipal Court Judge Victor E. Ramirez has been named the Outstanding Jurist by the Law Alumni of the University of San Diego.

Judge Ramirez, who graduated from the USD's College of Law in 1973, was appointed to the bench in 1980 and has served in the Vista Municipal Court since January.

The USD School of Business Administration featuring classrooms, offices, seminar rooms and lounge space. Building will be a 45,000-square-foot building of lounge space.

Reaches $15 Million Construction Goal

USD Begins Construction On Three New Buildings

Having reached its fund raising goal of $15 million, the University of San Diego yesterday began a construction program that will add three new buildings to the campus by the fall of 1984.

Ground was broken yesterday for the expansion of the James S. Copley Library at USD.

The approximately $3 million addition will add 38,000 square feet to the library. The expanded facility will be designated the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library upon its projected completion in September 1983.

USD President Author E. Hughes said the university is also planning a new School of Business Administration, and the Manchester Executive Conference Center.

USD Discovery chairman Helen K. Copley said yesterday the $15 million goal was reached over a three-year period.

The major gift for the library construction came from the James S. Copley Foundation, which contributed $1.5 million.

Other major gifts were provided by: the W.M. Keck Foundation of Los Angeles, $500,000; the National Endowment for the Humanities, $400,000; the Edyth Bush Charitable Foundation of Winter Park, Fla., $150,000; the Dan Murphy Foundation, $100,000; Wells Fargo Bank, $75,000; and other contributions from the Ahmanson Foundation, Atlas Hotels, Robert Golden Foundation, and Home Federal Savings.

The expansion of the library will more than double what exists today.

Hughes described the plans as "our answer to a clear and pressing need."

He said USD has experienced a 72% increase in enrollment since 1977, a tripled enrollment in the School of Business, and an average classroom utilization of 87%.

The new School of Business will be a 45,000 square foot building housing classrooms, faculty offices, seminar and lounge space and centers for student accounting, word processing, and computer science instruction.

The building will be located at the west end of the campus, near the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing.

While the local firm of Mosher, Watson and Ferguson is the architect on the library expansion, San Diego-based Tucker Sadler & Associates has designed both the School of Business Administration and the Manchester Conference Center.

The two Tucker Sadler buildings are expected to be under construction by next spring, with completion slated for the fall of 1984.

USD trustee Douglas Manchester provided the school with a $500,000 gift last December, which prompted USD to move ahead with its plan for the conference center.

USD is an independent, Catholic institution with an enrollment of 5,003 undergraduate and graduate students.

Founded in 1949, it occupies a 180-acre area in historic Alcala Park overlooking Mission Bay.

USD Breaks Ground For A New Library Building

By MICHAEL SCOTT-BLAIR
Education Writer, The San Diego Union

A $15 million expansion program at the University of San Diego was kicked off yesterday with a groundbreaking for a new library building.

The expansion, which also will include a business school and conference center, is the result of the successful completion of a three-year, $15 million fund-raising campaign — the university's first major public fund drive — campaign chairwoman Helen K. Copley announced yesterday.

The three buildings represent a massive expansion of the campus, increasing its present floor space by more than 10 percent to over 1 million square feet and more than doubling the size of the campus library.

In the midst of yesterday's stormy weather, the sun made one brief appearance as more than 200 spectators watched Copley, publisher of The San Diego Union and The Tribune and vice chairwoman of the USD Board of Trustees, turn the first shovel of soil for the new library building.

She was aided by the Most Rev. Leo T. Maher, bishop of the San

(Continued on B-2, Col. 1)

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

NOV 18 1982

Real Estate Tax Seminar Set By USD Law School

The second annual Real Estate Tax Institute sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Law in cooperation with The State Bar of California, Taxation Section, will be held at the Hotel del Coronado on Nov. 18 and 19.

Registration for the 1982 Real Estate Tax Institute entitled, "State of the Art in Tax Planning for Real Estate," is $345.

The two-day graduate level institute, includes a panel of nationally recognized experts who will examine contemporary planning techniques and result-oriented solutions in four areas of real estate taxation.

Of special interest to tax attorneys, certified public accountants, trust officers, corporate real estate executives and investors, the Institute will explore the topics: "Planning the Real Estate Venture to Optimize Tax Benefits for the Service Partner;" "Tax Audit and Trial Techniques for Real Estate Ventures;" "Salvaging the Distressed Real Estate Venture;" and "Highlights of Major Recent Tax Cases Affecting Real Estate."

Moderators for the Institute are Peter G. Aylward, of Aylward, Kintz, Stiska, Wassenaar & Shannahan; James O. Hewitt, from the Law Offices of James O. Hewitt; Richard A. Shaw, of Shenass, Robbins, Shenass & Shaw; and Charles O. Thomas, Arthur Young & Company. Lecturers include participants from Chicago, San Francisco, Beverly Hills, Houston, and Phoenix.

Contact the University of San Diego for provisions for continuing legal education credit, California Department of Real Estate continuing education credit and California State Board of Accounting continuing education credit.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

NOV 18 1982

USD teachers, students in two one-act operas

More one-act operas by college musicians are on tap.

This time the University of San Diego Opera Workshop will offer Seymour Barab's "A Game of Chance" and Jacques Offenbach's "R.S.V.P." at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Camino Theater at USD, on Linda Vista Road.

Robert Austin is in charge of musical and stage direction, and the cast is made up of faculty and students. Tickets are $3.50 at the door, and $2.50 for students and senior citizens. □

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 18 1982

The San Diego Union/Roni Galgano

USD Fund-Raiser: University of San Diego students attend a swap meet on campus to raise money to relieve hunger in the world. The event was part of an international movement that originated with American students attending Oxford University. Checking out offerings at the meet were Bruce Pileggi and Martin Benitez, above, and JoAnn Thornton, right. Students participating in the anti-hunger program attended a Mass at noon yesterday and began a fast last night that will end at 11 p.m. today.

B-2 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

Wednesday, November 10, 1982

The San Diego Union/ Joe Flynn

The Most Rev. Leo T. Maher, bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of San Diego, left, Helen K. Copley, publisher of The San Diego Union, and Author E. Hughes, University of San Diego president, look at plans for a major expansion at the university.

Ground Is Broken For USD Library

New Building Will Be First Of Three In $15-Million Expansion Program

(Continued from B-1)

Diego Roman Catholic Diocese and board president, and Dr. Author E. Hughes, president of the university.

The new 38,000-square-foot library building will be immediately west of Camino Hall, which houses the present 24,000-square-foot James S. Copley Library.

When the new building is completed next fall, the entire library complex will be renamed the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library, Hughes said.

While library expansion has been given a low priority on other major campuses in the nation, Maher said, USD's move to more than double its library space is consistent with its commitment to a style of education that involves all aspects of student life.

Many young people are being put through universities today, but that does not necessarily mean they are being educated, especially with the increasing pressure for academic specialization early in their campus life, Maher said.

"We offer an education that develops the mind before it starts to specialize the training," and library books are essential to that effort, he said.

Hughes echoed Maher's thoughts, saying, "We believe that to hold a book is a far different thing from sitting at a computer terminal, and while the library offers and will continue to seek the most contemporary (computerized) equipment, the printed word will never be considered outmoded at this campus."

Later, Copley said it was this kind of philosophy that led her and the James S. Copley Foundation to contribute more than $1.5 million to the new library, in addition to spearheading the $15 million fund drive.

"I can't speak for other corporations, but the Copley Foundation will always give strong support to institutions which uphold the high personal values exemplified by this university," she said.

Other major benefactors of the library project include the W.M. Keck Foundation of Los Angeles, $500,000; the Edyth Bush Charitable Foundation of Florida, $150,000; the National Endowment for the Humanities, $400,000; the Dan Murphy Foundation, $100,000; and Wells Fargo Bank, $75,000.

Work on the new School of Business Administration will begin in the spring, followed by the Manchester Executive Conference Center.

He said that in 1976, the university estimated its enrollment would increase from slightly more than 3,000 students to approximately 5,000 by 1985, and these buildings were planned to meet that growth.

BLADE TRIBUNE

NOV 19 1982

Opera Group To Present Double Bill

SAN DIEGO — The University of San Diego Opera Workshop will present a double-bill production of two one-act operas, "A Game of Chance" by Seymour Barab and "R.S.V.P." by Jacques Offenbach on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 19 and 20, at 8 p.m. and on Sunday, Nov. 21 at 2:30 p.m. in Camino Theatre.

General admission tickets are $3.50; senior citizens and students, $2.50. Tickets may be purchased at the door, or call 291-6480, ext. 4427 for information.

The cast of USD faculty and students includes: Anne Swanke, Lourdes Babauta, Teresa Delano and David Wailing in "A Game of Chance," and Cathleen Hannasch, Dino Palazzi, Paul Horton, James Capers, Anita Kuykendall, David Jarboe, and Larry Williamson in "R.S.V.P."

EVENING TRIBUNE

NOV 20 1982

San Diego, Saturday

Civil rights talk Monday at USD

Clarence Pendleton Jr., chairman of the U.S. Commission of Civil Rights, will speak on civil rights at 12:30 p.m. Monday at the University of San Diego, School of Law.

The topic of the speech, to be given in the Joseph P. Grace Courtroom, is "Civil Rights Under Assault: Is There a Basis for Criticism?"

EVENING TRIBUNE

NOV 20 1982

Gene Klein tabbed for university board

Chargers President Gene Klein has been elected to the University of San Diego's board of trustees.

"We are most fortunate in having Gene Klein on the university's board," USD President Author Hughes said of the appointment.

"His business acumen, his insights and his interest in the development of young men and women will be of enormous value to the university."

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 21 1982

USD OPERAS — The University of San Diego Opera Workshop will present Seymour Barab's "A Game of Chance" and Jacques Offenbach's "R.S.V.P." at 2:30 p.m. today in the Camino Theater, USD. Robert Austin is music and stage director with choreography by Marilyn Green.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 21 1982

Founders Gallery: "A Passion for Detail: Sculpture From the Grand Tour," through Dec. 9, University of San Diego, Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Wednesday to 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 19 1982

Success Story

The $15 million expansion program getting under way at the University of San Diego caps an unusual success story in higher education.

Only six years ago, USD was operating at a deficit in a difficult transition to independent status after years of being subsidized by the Catholic Diocese of San Diego. Today, the university's budget is in the black and work is beginning on a new library, business school, and conference center.

Enrollment at USD this fall topped 5,000 — a figure not expected to be reached until 1985. There has been a parallel growth in the university's academic stature.

President Author Hughes, the Board of Trustees, and the USD faculty can take pride in their impressive achievements during a period when many institutions of higher learning, both public and private, were struggling to hold their own.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

NOV 19 1983

Animal art — "Beasts," an exhibit of animals in art form, will be on view from noon to 5 p.m. weekdays through Wednesday, Nov. 30, at the Founders Gallery, Founders Hall at the University of San Diego. Admission is free.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

California □ Tuesday, November 23, 1982

Pendleton says recession spawns a new underclass

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The nation's recessionary economy is thwarting minority groups in their pursuit of jobs and financial security, according to the chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

"We're in danger of creating a permanent underclass in this country if we don't turn the economy around," said Clarence Pendleton, chairman of commission.

Nevertheless, Pendleton, who made his remarks Monday night at a news conference following a speech to University of San Diego law students, said that the Reagan administration's economic policies are a step in the right direction.

"Reaganomics makes a lot of sense to me," said Pendleton, who was appointed to the post by President Reagan last spring. He said that Reagan's policies would "get the government out of people's lives and get the free enterprise system to flourish again."

Pendleton said that the nation's schools and colleges should emphasize training in high technology fields to prepare future generations for new jobs in computer-oriented fields.

In addition to the economy, Pendleton said the nation must deal with the "whole issue of hate."

"Orville is just about wrecked," Pendleton said, referring to the case in that Northern California city in which a neo-Nazi leader and two youths have been accused in connection with the killing of a young follower and police informant.

Civil rights appointee defends Reagan record

By Bob Corbett
Tribune Staff Writer

President Reagan's administration is trying to make a fundamental change in the nation's civil-rights program, says Clarence E. Pendleton Jr.

The administration is trying to substitute opportunity for preference, Pendleton, Reagan's appointee as chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, said yesterday in San Diego.

Pendleton, former president of the San Diego Urban League, defended the administration's record on civil rights in a lecture and press conference at the University of San Diego Law School.

He said "there is no basis for criticism" of the administration as being deaf to the civil-rights movement.

"This is the only time in history that an administration — a Republican administration — has placed the government leadership of the civil-rights mandate in the hands of blacks," he said, referring to himself and three other top civil-rights officials.

The administration is shifting the focus of the civil-rights effort back to its original meaning, opening of opportunities for blacks and other minorities, rather than assuring them of "preferential treatment," Pendleton said.

Civil rights, he said, had become "a zero sum game."

"All policy solutions about economic growth and productivity involve some degree of redistribution of income and wealth," he said, "to the ever increasing number of minorities who comprise the protected classes."

"We now have 15 protected classes of Americans. More than 75 percent of our population is eligible for preferential treatment."

"I believe that civil rights are at the crossroads again and we must boldly strike the path of racial neutrality toward achievement of a society free from discrimination."

"Increasing the number of protected classes supposedly increases the number of opportunities for minorities to enter the mainstream, but unless the economy is expanding proportionately to the number of protected classes there will just be more people fighting for less opportunity."

"For this reason, the focus of the civil-rights movement should be on expanding the economy, which is now stagnant, rather than attempting to increase the number of protected classes or boycotting industries that are hard hit by the current state of the economy or lobbying government for make-work jobs that provide no permanent solution."

Pendleton has been under attack by many black civil-rights groups since his appointment earlier this year. He dismissed their charges yesterday.

"I don't care if they like me or

Clarence Pendleton:
'This is the only time in history that an administration — a Republican administration — has placed the government leadership of the civil-rights mandate in the hands of blacks' not," he said. "I'm not chairman of the black commission on civil rights; I'm chairman of the Civil Rights Commission of the United States."

Under the Reagan administration, Pendleton said, civil-rights spending will increase from $511 million in 1980 to $531 million in fiscal 1983. Funds for civil-rights enforcement will double under current administration proposals, he said.

"What we have done as blacks," Pendleton said, "was to believe that government was our salvation."

Parents of black and white children should play a larger part in the education of their children, he said.

"Parents must tell their kids that discipline, preparation and competition are the true roads to freedom," he said.

The "administration has continued the effort to require school districts which classify and assign students or teachers on the basis of race to adopt effective desegregation plans," he said.

"To maximize effectiveness," he said, "the Department of Justice no longer seeks a mandatory busing plan to achieve racial balance but tries to emphasize quality educational opportunities through use of magnet schools and other techniques."

Pendleton said Americans should "insist on the kind of preparation and training that will allow our youngsters to take advantage of the new opportunities in the information-based society of tomorrow."

The San Diego Union/Peter Koelmann
Clarence Pendleton calls for end to criticism of President.

Recession Hurting Civil Rights, Pendleton Says

By ROBERT P. LAURENCE

Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Economic conditions are playing a major role in denying civil rights to minority groups, U.S. Civil Rights Commission Chairman Clarence M. Pendleton Jr. told a press conference yesterday.

"We're in danger of creating a permanent underclass in this country if we don't turn the economy around," he said to reporters following a speech to law students at the University of San Diego.

"Reaganomics makes a lot of sense to me," added the former chief of the San Diego Urban League, who last spring was appointed by President Reagan to his part-time, non-paying position.

He remarked that Mr. Reagan's economic policies would "get government out of people's lives and get the free enterprise system to flourish again, which is what made this country great in the first place. ... If you don't broaden the economy, what do you do?"

Saying that "the safety net is in place" for the poorest people, Pendleton questioned the need for programs aimed at the middle class.

"People think the more government there is, the more civil rights you have, and I don't believe that at all," Pendleton said.

Fresh focus should be placed, he said, on "linkage" between the schools and technological industries, making sure school administrators and students inquire "what does it take to go into hi-tech? ... Discipline and education are the two roads to freedom."

Besides the economy, the nation must also deal with "the whole issue of hate," Pendleton said in his press conference. "Orville is just about wrecked," he added, referring to the case in that Northern California city in which a neo-Nazi leader and two youths have been accused of killing a young follower and police informant.

Pendleton's speech defended the Reagan administration's record in defending civil rights for minorities and reiterated his stand in opposition to race quotas in education and hiring and to busing for school integration.

"We must stop criticizing President Reagan," he said. "It is not productive. Things were getting bad long before January 20, 1981 (when Mr. Reagan took office). 'Too much government: its spending and regulation excesses occurred before President Reagan took office.'"

Pendleton said he had told the President that he agreed with "a policy of color-blind racial neutrality. But that a firm administration civil rights policy (should) be established so that non-white Americans would not perish on the route from color consciousness to color blindness."

Busing has resulted in "the destruction of public education" in many cities, Pendleton declared, and affirmative action programs have "led to the creation of a kind of racial spoils system in America."

THE SAN DIEGO UNION
Tuesday, November 23, 1982

READER

NOV 2 5 1982

"A Comparison of U.S. and Japanese Corporate Performance Through Financial Statement Analysis" will be the subject of a lecture by Japanese professor Hiroyuki Itami, Monday, November 29, 7:30 p.m., Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing, USD, 291-6480 x4296.

READER

NOV 2 5 1982

Piano Recital by Nicolas Reveles, featuring works by Liszt, Beethoven, and Prokofiev, will be held Tuesday, November 30, 8 p.m., Camino Theatre, USD, 291-6480 x4296.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

NOV 2 5 1982

USD Founders Gallery — "A Passion for Detail," an exhibition featuring sculpture from the Grand Tour, will be displayed through Dec. 9. De Sales Hall, Alcalá Park, S.D. 291-6480.

READER

NOV 2 5 1982

"A Passion for Detail," an exhibition of sculpture from the University of San Diego collection, will be on view through December 9. Founders Gallery, USD, 291-6480.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

NOV 2 7 1982

Nicolas Reveles — The pianist will perform at 8 p.m. in the University of San Diego Camino Theatre. General admission is $3, students are $1. Tickets may be purchased at the door. Call 291-6480, Ext. 4296, for more information.

NOV 2 4 1982

HAZEL TOW

TRIBUNE SOCIETY EDITOR

YOUNG CONNOISSEURS OF THE SAN DIEGO Museum of Art have chosen a nostalgic look at Hollywood in the '50s as the theme for a New Year's Eve party at the museum. Planners have borrowed the title of "Some Like It Hot" from the Marilyn Monroe film for the party's name and promise a Hollywood extravaganza to match film premieres of the era.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Huff are the chairmen and Leslie Simon is supervising the decor. Dress suggestion is black-tie optional or prom fashion.

Among those assisting with arrangements are Mr. and Mrs. John Adams, Dr. and Mr. John Williams, Janis Butcher, Bob Gallagher, Chris Hatch, Lucy Huddel, Michael McGreevy, Martha Moore and Chris Wallner.

Party information is available from the museum office.

Marion Ross, star of TV's "Happy Days," joined local planners of a Jan. 29 gala at a progress meeting Monday evening at the Mission Hills home of Dr. Noel Meadows. The gala, "Stairway to the Stars," will honor Miss Ross and inaugurate a Marion Ross Scholarship for the drama department at San Diego State University.

The scholarship program is an outgrowth of Miss Ross's work with the drama department in bringing professionals to the university to work with students. She is an alumna of SDSU and has been associated with the Old Globe Theatre here.

Her co-workers on "Happy Days," Henry Winkler and Tom Bosley, head the list of film and television personalities who will participate in the gala. Winkler is dinner chairman and Bosley will be the master of ceremonies.

They weren't able to attend Monday's session but members of the honorary committee who did were Rep. Clair Burgener, Mrs. Lynn G. Fayman, Deborah Szekely and Ed Self, as well as Miss Ross's business manager, Barbara Best.

Dr. Thomas Day, SDSU president, was there and so were Dean Jerry E. Mandel of the College of Professional Studies and Fine Arts and Merrill Lessley, chairman of the drama department.

Local members of the corporate committee reporting on sales of tables (at $1,000 each) were Everitt A. Carter and John McKenna Case. Los Angeles members of this committee are entertainment executives Gary Nardino and Anthony Thomopoulos.

Glenn and Jan Broadus donated the Christian Brothers wine for the party, and Julie Poole arranged the hors d'oeuvre table.

Tickets for the gala ($100 per person) at Town and Country Convention Center may be reserved through the drama department or Alumni and Associates at SDSU.

Comedian Lily Tomlin was a surprise guest at a party given Sunday evening at Fat City to honor volunteers in the COMBO campaigns to raise funds for the arts in San Diego County. Miss Tomlin, who is appearing at the Old Globe Theatre, was escorted by Jack O'Brien, artistic director of the theater which is one of the beneficiaries of the COMBO drive.

Sheila Guebert arranged the party attended by some 200 volunteers and members of the media. Many of the guests will be active in the Dec. 4 COMBO television auction of goods and services. Coordinator of this auction is Al Dillon.

Tom Fat provided hors d'oeuvres for the party and Simon Levi Co. of San Diego and Ferrara Winery of Escondido brought the wines.

Mrs. Thomas Carlson heads the committee putting final touches on preparations for the 53rd annual Candlelight Ball Dec. 4 at Vacation Village Convention Center. The black-tie dinner dance is sponsored by the Auxiliary to Scripps Memorial Hospital, La Jolla, and proceeds will be used to purchase equipment for the hospital.

The Greater San Diego Chapter of Children's Village, USA, will celebrate the holiday season with a Christmas luncheon and boutique Dec. 6 at the Sheraton Harbor Island Hotel. Mrs. Lionel P. Hernholm is chairman of the event which will include an auction of hand-crafted ornaments, plants and home-baked goods.

Mrs. Albert Jacobs is president of the chapter which supports Children's Village at Beaumont, Calif., a non-profit residence for the care and rehabilitation of abused children.

The University of San Diego Auxiliary will welcome 77 new members at a luncheon next Wednesday at Cafe del Rey Moro in Balboa Park. Following the luncheon, the group will tour the "Celebrate the Holidays" display at nearby Casa de Balboa presented by the San Diego Historical Society.

During the luncheon Mrs. William Edwards will present a check for $13,500 to USD for student financial aid. The money was raised by the auxiliary's recent fashion show which Mrs. Edwards chaired.

Mrs. Jonathan Tibbitts is taking luncheon reservations. Guests are asked to bring small gifts for senior citizens in convalescent homes.

Works of Mexican botanist Jose Mariano Mocino show painstaking devotion to detail.

Prized Mocino Paintings Studied

By MICHAEL SCOTT-BLAIR
Education Writer, The San Diego Union

In 1820, Mexican botanist José Mariano Mocino had been forgiven by the Spanish king for allegedly collaborating with the French, and was making his way slowly back from Geneva to Madrid.

But he never made it. Mocino — one of the greatest chroniclers of plants, bird and animal life in early Mexico and California — died in Barcelona and never reached Madrid.

And that would probably have been the end of that, except for a large box of over 2,000 paintings that Mocino had painstakingly collected, illustrating his studies of the wonders in the New World of the late 1700s, and the determination of a University of San Diego history professor that his efforts should not languish in obscurity.

Dr. Iris H.W. Engstrand of USD is one of the few historians in the world with a special interest in the extensive scientific expeditions sent out by Spain to the Americas in the late 1700s.

They were remarkable expeditions, ranging from Peru to Alaska, but much of the work was ignored as Spain of the 18th and 19th centuries erupted in political turmoil.

Mocino was a victim of that turmoil. After years of painstaking work in the emerging New World, he returned to Spain, not to acclaim, but to social upheaval which ultimately drove him from the country.

But he always kept his beloved pictures with him.

He had pushed his prized paintings halfway across Spain on a handcart, protected them from ungrateful Spanish rulers, and saved them from an angered Spanish people who sent him to work on a chain gang.

But when he died in Barcelona, the more than 2,000 meticulously drawn color art works dropped from sight.

More than 100 years later, two small boys came upon some old books in their grandfather's library and the first seed of rediscovery was sown.

But it was almost another 60 years before those two boys, now grandparents themselves, remembered those books of color pictures and realized they might be of value.

Mocino's old paintings had been rediscovered, and Engstrand calls it a "magnificent collection."

She first learned about the missing paintings during a year's research in Madrid and Geneva in 1960, but found the Spanish authorities to be "surprisingly uninterested in them."

They were ultimately acquired by the Hunt Institute of Botanical Documentation at Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh, Pa., where

(Continued on B-2, Col. 1)

BIRDS, PLANTS, ANIMAL LIFE

Prized Paintings Of Mexican Botanist Jose Mocino Studied

(Continued from B-1)
Engstrand is now studying them.
"We expect to find drawings of birds, animals, fish and flowers that may well now be extinct," said Engstrand.

Expert botanists and biologists say the drawings are detailed down to the last fish spine and bird feather, and are of almost photographic quality, she said.

Mocino was born in Temascaltepec, Mexico, and was in the class of '89 — that is 1789 — at the university in Mexico City, ultimately becoming a doctor and professor of theology.

It was a time when the nations of Europe were cooperating in scientific ventures while their armies fought wars and their politicians waged bitter conflicts between themselves.

Like a forerunner of today's joint scientific ventures in space, Britain's Captain Cook observed the 1769 transit of Venus from Tahiti, while the French and Spanish watched it from Baja California.

Scientists ranged from Peru to Alaska in one of the world's greatest studies of natural life, and Mocino was in the forefront.

But while he trekked the mountains and deserts, Europe was in turmoil. As the new century dawned, Napoleon Bonaparte invaded Spain and put his brother Joseph on the throne, and Joseph encouraged scientific discovery.

"Not unlike today, scientists often transcend politics, and work together, even with unfriendly governments, and so it was with Mocino who was appointed director of the Royal Museum of Natural History by Joseph," said Engstrand.

But when the Spanish people rose and threw the French out, Mocino's willingness to work under Joseph Bonaparte was seen as collaboration with the enemy, and he was put in chains with other scientists and led off to prison.

It was a French general that came upon the group and set them free. Mocino fled quickly to Madrid to collect a few treasured possessions, including his drawings and paintings, which he threw in a handcart and pushed it towards the French border.

But another French officer seized the cart, leaving Mocino clutching only the paintings, which he ultimately carried to Geneva.

It was 1817 before Mocino was invited back to Spain on the journey he never completed.

He died in Barcelona and was buried in the parish church cemetery of St. James. But what happened to his personal effects and paintings, nobody knew.

In the 1880s, an unrecognized collection of books, writings and paintings passed into the hands of the Torner family of Barcelona.

It passed to a brother, and ultimately to Jaime and Luis Torner Pannochia, the brothers who late in life, remembered the pretty pictures they had frequently leafed through in their grandfather's library, and the invaluable treasure came back to the light.

But the Spaniards of Barcelona and the Spaniards of Madrid have a long-standing feud, and the Barcelona family was not anxious to see the collection go to Madrid.

Thus, it found its way to Pittsburgh and the scrutiny of Engstrand.

The USD historian already has written seven books of the Spanish scientific explorations of the New World in addition to many popular and respected history books on San Diego and California.

Other historians have paid scant attention to what she calls the "truly remarkable scientific work of the Spaniards in the late 18th and early 19th centuries," this newly-found collection of paintings, "at tests to the brilliance of their work," she said.

Dr. Iris H. W. Engstrand examines photographic slides.

County Choral Concerts Herald the Holidays

By KENNETH HERMAN

From a massive Messiah singalong at the San Diego Civic Theatre to an evening of medieval carols and Renaissance motets, San Diegans have a surfeit of Christmas choral concerts from which to choose.

No season is more hospitable to the medium.

This year, San Diegans not only have the opportunity to hear fine performances, but two "Messiah" singalongs will let them drop in—score in hand—and participate in the music-making. For sheer size, nothing equals the San Diego Master Chorale's "Messiah" singalong next Sunday at the Civic Theatre. With orchestra and the Master Chorale, as well as the 3,000 voices assembled in the theater, conductor Charles Keitcham is bound to raise the roof with the mighty Handel choruses.

Solo arias will be sung by soprano Anna Djarson-Carson, alto Paula Chastain, tenor James Flynn and bass Cleve Genslinger. The program begins at 7 p.m. Doors will open an hour earlier since there is no reserved seating.

The following Saturday, Dec. 11, a more modest Messiah singalong will be held at St. James-by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in La Jolla, under the auspices of the La Jolla Civic University Symphony Orchestra. UC San Diego music professor Thomas Nee will conduct the orchestra, chorus and audience in this 3 p.m. performance.

Bach Cantatas

For a more traditional music program, the complete "Christmas Oratorio" by J.S. Bach will be presented as the final offering of the San Diego Bach Festival at the First United Methodist Church at 6 p.m. in Mission Valley next Sunday. Music Director Robert Cooper will conduct both the church's Chancel Choir and the Masterwork Chorale, about 120 voices, as well as orchestra and soloists in this performance.

The Christmas Oratorio is actually a composite of six individual cantatas Bach composed for all of the festivals from Christmas Day through New Year's Day and Epiphany.

Although less frequently performed than the "Messiah," the "Christmas Oratorio" is by far the most grandiose Baroque Christmas offering, not only in scope, but in its brilliant and colorful orchestration.

The Early Music Ensemble, San Diego's premiere performers of early music, will give its Christmas program twice, first at St. Brigid's Roman Catholic Church in Pacific Beach at 7:30 p.m. next Sunday and again at 8 p.m. Dec. 15 at the La Jolla Congregational Church. Medieval English carols, motets by Sweelinck and Dufay, as well as early Baroque works by Schein and Marenzio will be sung by this five-voice virtuoso ensemble.

College Programs

Although university campuses are the scenes of frantic end-of-semester activity, they still find time for musical celebration. San Diego State University Prof. Frank Almond will lead the Aztec Concert Choir and

MUSIC

Chamber Singers at 8 p.m. Dec. 10 in a program featuring Daniel Pinkham's contemporary Christmas Cantata for chorus and brass choirs. In addition to the Pinkham, traditional Spanish carols and American spirituals, Almond will conduct San Diego composer Keith Heidman's "Lo, the Newborn King of Glory" in a premiere performance.

This program, art of the university's Friday Night Concert Series, will be given in the Smith Recital Hall of the Music Building.

At the University of San Diego, the USD Choir under the direction of Father Nicolas Reveles will present its Christmas offering Dec. 10, 11 at 8 p.m. in the school's Camino Theatre. Michael Haydn's "Run Ye Shepherds" and Dietrich Buxtehude's "In Dulci Jubilo" will be among the anthems and carol settings on the program.

Another J. S. Bach work, the Advent cantata

"Wachet Auf," will be performed in German by the First Unitarian Chorus at 4:30 p.m. Dec. 12 in that church's auditorium. Soloists Ruth Dixon, Vicki Ratelle and John Stephen Hubbard, as well as a chamber orchestra, will be conducted by choral director Dan Ratelle.

Williams' Work

Ralph Vaughan Williams' Romantic tapestry "Hodie" will be presented at 7 p.m. Dec. 12 in the Sacred Music series of the La Jolla Presbyterian Church. Minister of Music L. Robert Slusser will direct his 90-voice Chancel Choir with orchestra and soloists in this traditional musical melange of carols and narration.

A program that is actually a service based on 19th-Century English cathedral tradition is "Christmas Lessons and Carols," to be sung at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in San Diego, at 5 p.m. Dec. 19. That unique English sound of men and boy's voices renders with ethereal serenity the medieval carols and Renaissance motets that intersperse the readings of the service. The St. Paul Choristers are directed by organist-choirmaster Edgar Billups.

For the musical purist, St. Paul's Parish Choir and Orchestra will give the complete Handel's "Messiah" with original instrumentation at 7 p.m. on Jan. 2. Director Billups chose not to present the favorite oratorio before Christmas, but during the traditional season from Christmas Day to Epiphany, those 12 days of Christmas celebrated in the work.

Original Score

Billups will use what musicians call the Urtext, or original score, including many of the variant versions of arias and choruses left out by 19-Century Handelian traditions of performance. In addition to the usual complement of soloists, Billups' Messiah will feature countertenor Tom Hodge in many of the arias sung by an alto in modern performance.

Vocalists joining Hodge in this performance will be soprano Marge Osgood, alto Katherine Bjornson, tenor John Peeling and bass Philipp Larson. Anthony Porto of the Grossmont College music faculty is Billups' concertmaster.

Spinoffs

University of San Diego Auxiliary will welcome 77 new members at a luncheon Wednesday at Cafe del Rey Moro, Balboa Park. The social hour will begin at 11 a.m. Patty Edwards will present a check for $13,500 — proceeds from the recent fashion show — for student financial aid at USD. Following lunch, they will go to the "Celebrate the Holidays" exhibit at Casa de Balboa.

SENTINEL

NOV 2 8 1982

+++

FR. NICOLAS Reveles will play in concert Tuesday, at 8 p.m. in the University of San Diego's Camino Theatre. Reveles, a USD fine arts department faculty member, will play "Partita No. 5 in G major," by J.S. Bach; "Sonata in B minor," by Liszt; "Sonata Opus 110 in A flat major," by Beethoven, and "Sonata No. 8 in B flat major," by Prokofiev.

Founders Gallery: "A Passion for Detail: Sculpture From the Grand Tour," through Dec. 9, University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

'Third Age' program scheduled Jan. 6-20

University of the Third Age, a special educational program designed for people older than 55, will be Jan. 6-20 at the University of San Diego.

The curriculum for the fourth annual event will cover a range of topics, said Mal Rafferty, director of continuing education at USD.

Subjects will include "Young and Old Together: A New Curriculum," discussed by Rita King of the San Diego County Schools; "What's in a Handwriting?" with graphologist Jean McGuinness; "Karl Marx and Leo XIII," with USD political science professor John Chambers; and "Television and Politics: Who Is Kidding Whom?" with James Hottel, USD associate professor of political science.

Among the religious topics to be discussed are "Women in the Pulpit: What's This World Coming To?" with Rabbi Lenore Bohm of Temple Beth Israel; "Preserving Religious Freedom," with Dr. Charles Ballinger of the Americans for Separation of Church and State; and "Religion: A Changing Face in San Diego," with the Rev. James Mishler of the San Diego Ecumenical Conference.

Classes will be Monday through Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Each day will begin with an hour of physical exercise at the USD Sports Center, Rafferty said. Tuition is $35.

Participants must be able to provide their own transportation to the campus daily, Rafferty said.

NOV 2 9 1982

A comparison of U.S. and Japanese corporate performance, through financial analysis, will be presented by Prof. Hiroyuki Itami, distinguished international visiting professor of the American Accounting Assn., at the University of San Diego, Nov. 29 at 7:30 p.m. at the Hahn School of Nursing at USD. The program is scheduled because of the high interest in Japanese management style, which supposedly is more effective than traditional American management technique. Itami compared three companies from each country to find out.

SD BUSINESS JOURNAL

NOV 2 9 1982

SEMINAR: Microcomputer Use in Library Applications
DATE: Dec. 4
TIME: 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.
LOCATION: USD
FEE: $50
SPONSOR: USD School of Continuing Education
CONTACT: 293-4585

NOV 2 9 1982

Vista Judge Ramirez honored by alumni

VISTA — Municipal Judge Victor Ramirez has been named "outstanding jurist" by the Law Alumni Association of the University of San Diego.

Ramirez was appointed to the bench in August, 1980 and was assigned to the North County Municipal Court in Vista. He will sit in the Escondido courthouse next year.

He graduated from the University of San Diego College of Law in 1973 and practiced law in Escondido.

Ramirez received his honor Nov. 19 at the 1982 distinguished alumni banquet in San Diego. Three outstanding alumni are honored each year in the fields of business/educator, practitioner and jurist.

Ramirez lives in Escondido with his wife, Linda, and children, Barbara and Christopher.

NOV 2 9 1982

Judge Victor E. Ramirez of North County Municipal Court was honored as "outstanding jurist" by the Law Alumni Assn. of the University of San Diego at its 1982 distinguished alumni banquet in the Kona Kai Club. Ramirez, a 1973 graduate of the USD College of Law, was appointed to the bench in 1980 and has been assigned to Division Two of the North County court in Vista since last January. He will be assigned to the court's Escondido facility from January through June next year. Also honored were Robert F. Adelizzi, who received the outstanding business/educator award and Thomas H. Ault, named outstanding practitioner of the year.

NOV 3 0 1982

BASIC LIB: Dr. Iris Engstrand is chairman of the University of San Diego history department; the seven other professors are male. She's been reappointed for each of the past five years, except for her sabbatical last year during which she wrote and published her history of San Diego. "I guess since I'm the only woman," she explains, "I'm the easiest to agree on."

Sports

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

NOV 4 1982

Brovelli Named To Hall of Fame

University of San Diego Head Basketball Coach Jim Brovelli will join such greats as Bill Russell and K.C. Jones with his induction to the University of San Francisco Hall of Fame.

Brovelli played guard for the Dons' from 1960-64 and was instrumental in leading USD to two West Coast Athletic Conference titles in 1963 and 1964.

He will be inducted into the Hall of Fame Friday at the Father Flynn Hall of Fame Banquet.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 5 1982

Toreros To Host Trojan Jayvee

The University of San Diego, which snapped a four-game losing streak last weekend, will be trying to seal the .500 mark when it entertains the USC junior varsity football team tonight in USD Stadium.

Kickoff is scheduled for 7:30. USD took full advantage of eight turnovers last Saturday and flattened Cal Poly-Pomona 24-7. The victory snapped a four-game losing streak and squared the Toreros' record at 4-4.

"I was really happy for our players and coaching staff," USD coach Bill Williams said. "Looking into their eyes after the game, I could see all of the disappointment from the past four weeks simply disappear."

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 6 1982

Jackson-Led USC JV Nips USD 20-17

Freshman tailback Andrew Jackson rushed 48 times for 219 yards and scored two touchdowns in USD Stadium last night as the USC Jayvees stopped the Toreros 20-17.

The 5-11, 185-pound Jackson, who has made cameo appearances for the Trojan varsity, escorted his side through a 16-play, 60-yard fourth-period drive to the winning points. On this assault, Jackson accumulated 52 yards on 12 thrusts and scored on a 2-yard run.

Quarterback Eric Sweet completed half of 30 passes for 158 yards and two touchdowns and Bob Luzzi kicked his 11th field goal for USD. But the Toreros rushed for just 6 yards. The USC team gained 277 yards rushing. Since games against junior varsities do not count, USD's record remains 4-4.

USD Jayvees 0 6 7 7 — 20
USD — FG Luzzi 16
SC — Robbins 10 pass from Halverson (kick failed)
SD — Hamilton 13 pass from Sweet (Luzzi kick)
SC — Jackson 2 run (Demirjian kick)
SD — Rish 16 pass from Sweet (Luzzi kick)
SC — Jackson 2 run (Demirjian kick)

EVENING TRIBUNE

NOV 6 1982

USD LOSES TO JAYVEES — Freshman tailback Andrew Jackson rushed 48 times for 219 yards and scored two touchdowns against USD last night at Alcala Park as the USC Trojan Jayvees defeated the Toreros 20-17.

SENTINEL

NOV 7 1982

UNIVERSITY OF San Diego basketball head coach Jim Brovelli joined such greats as Bill Russell and K.C. Jones when he was inducted recently into the University of San Francisco Hall of Fame. Brovelli played guard for the Dons from 1960-64 and was instrumental in leading USD to West Coast Athletic Conference titles in 1963 and 1964.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 1 3 1982

USD Winds Up '82 Slate Here Today

The University of San Diego closes out its football season today when the Toreros meet St. Mary's at 1 p.m. at USD.

The home team will be trying to avenge its only loss of the 1981 season, in the first round of the NCAA Division III playoffs. The visiting Gaels, 5-2-1, hold a 7-4 series advantage over USD but have never beaten the Toreros in San Diego.

USD, which dropped a 20-17 decision last week to the USC junior varsity squad, is 4-5 on the year including that game.

The Torero offense will go up against a rugged St. Mary's defense that has yielded just 91.4 yards per game on the ground. USD Quarterback Eric Sweet has passed for 1,657 yards and eight touchdowns this season, completing 122 of 224 attempts. His favorite receivers have been Mike Rish (36 for 573 yards and six TDs) and Jim Reilly (22 for 336).

On the ground, USD has counted on fullback Jimmy Smith (91-426) and halfback Jerome McAlpin (95-381). Running the ball has been the strength of the St. Mary's offense. Tailbacks Bryan White and Andre Hardy have totaled 796 and 601 yards, respectively, in eight games, with White averaging 6 yards a carry and Hardy 5.6.

Comets host Grossmont's

By George Cordry
The Times-Artist

Cross country will take over the spotlight this week at Palomar College as the Comets host the first Pacific Coast Conference championships.

The new conference's championship will be contested at Vista's Gualpome Park on Thursday. The men will open the action at 2 p.m., followed by the women at 2:45 and a special novice division at 3:30.

Don't look for the Comets to fare well in either the men's or women's team competition, but several individuals could place high.

Palomar's top three entries in the men's division will be Dan Stupar, Dan Escher and Chris Jones. Stupar was a prep star at Mission Bay, Escher ran at San Pasqual and Jones is a former Vista ace.

In the women's event, ex-Orange Glen runners Martha Baez and Sheila Green will carry the Palomar hopes along with Trudy Schmutzler, a former Kentucky prep distance star.

Grossmont, which dominated regular-season competition, will be heavily favored in both divisions. The Griffins were 6-0 in men's and women's conference action.

Palomar's South Central Conference wrestling match at Santa Ana on Wednesday night figures to be another laugher for Coach John Woods' gifted squad, which is unbeaten in three conference starts and six season outings.

Santa Ana already has lost to Golden West, 30-18, and Palomar destroyed the Rustlers by a 51-3 score last week.

The Comets will receive perhaps their toughest test of the season Saturday when they compete in the Cal Poly Tournament at San Luis Obispo. The tourney annually attracts the best JC teams in the state.

Although Palomar's water polo squad has been struggling in the Pacific Coast Conference, the Comets have two players among the top five scorers in the conference — Chet Johnson (18 goals and 12 assists for 28 points) and Scott John (9 goals and 14 assists for 22 points).

Saddleback's Nick Simovich already has clinched the individual scoring title, however.

The Comets also have had their problems in men's soccer, but boast three players — John Barbosa (10 points), Victor Tapia (9) and Roy Orftedal (8) among the conference's scoring leaders.

Palomar goalie Tim Rosia also rates among the top goalies, allowing just over two goals per contest.

With four games remaining on the schedule, the Comet women's volleyball team is still in the thick of the title picture.

Coach Duncan McFarland's Comets are 7-3 in the conference standings, trailing San Diego Mesa (9-1) by two games and Southwestern (8-2) by one.

Palomar will close out its home slate at 7:30 p.m. Friday against San Diego City at Dome Gym.

College Notes

The Palomar football team will celebrate its Homecoming on Saturday as the Comets bid for their first Mission Conference victory of the season. Palomar hopes to attain that victory at the expense of another winless club, San Diego City.

Kickoff is set for 1:30 p.m. at Vista High School. San Diego City dropped a 24-6 decision to Riverside last Saturday evening, tumbling to 0-4 in conference play and 2-6 overall. The Knights at least managed to score their second touchdown in four games.

Palomar, racked by injuries, benefitted from a bye last weekend. Coach Mario Mendez' Comets will take 0-3 and 2-5 marks into a game that undoubtedly will determine last place in the final conference order of finish.

Greg Lynds, the ex-Palomar running back, earned his first start of the year at Fresno State on Saturday against Fullerton State.

It was a memorable weekend for the hard-running junior. He fractured his left hand on the fourth series of the game and probably will be lost to the team for a couple of weeks.

Fresno won the contest, 31-14.

Two players from the 1981 Palomar baseball squad — right-hander Russ Applegate and left-hander Mike Cordry — have clinched spots on their respective pitching staffs at four-year colleges.

Applegate, a prep star at San Pasqual, ranks among the top pitchers on Coach John Cunningham's USD roster. He was an All-Mission Conference selection at Palomar last spring and was the Comets' most valuable player.

Cordry, who played his prep ball at Escondido, has made the University of Nevada (Reno) staff as a long reliever.

Applegate has two years of eligibility at USD and Cordry has three years left at Reno.

Another member of the '81 Palomar club, second baseman Tommy Davis, had earned a starting berth at Reno, but had to drop out of school during the weekend and returned home because of an illness in his family.

A fourth member of Coach Bob Vetter's '81 squad, outfielder Mike Snyder, was scheduled to play at Reno, but the ex-Comet captain opted for Nevada (Las Vegas) at the last minute. He's battling for a starting berth in the outfield, pending his release from the National Letter of Intent he signed at Reno.

At San Diego State, lack of depth finally caught up with

Russ Applegate
Making bid at USD

Mike Cordry
Reno long reliever

Jim Dietz
Will host tryouts

EVENING TRIBUNE

NOV 1 2 1982

USD VS. ST. MARY'S — University of San Diego closes out its football season tomorrow with a homecoming game against St. Mary's at 1 p.m. at USD. USD has won four and lost four in games this season.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 1 3 1982

COLLEGE FOOTBALL — The USD Toreros close out the season when they host St. Mary's College at USD Stadium, 1 p.m. In community college action, San Diego City battles Palomar at Vista High, 1:30 p.m.

Brovelli Finds Void At His Alma Mater

By PETER RICHMOND
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Jim Brovelli, basketball born and bred, went home to San Francisco last week to be inducted into the hall of fame of a university that has no basketball program.

The University of San Diego coach traveled to a campus that provides the setting for the happiest memories of his life, the stuff of his fondest dreams. There, Brovelli encountered a ghost, a shell of an idea, the chalk outline of a tradition.

Individual awards are not the only proper measure of the passage of a man's lifetime, but the honor USF bestowed on Brovelli is significant, the ties between the University of San Francisco and its basketball alumni are binding and permanent. Two national championships in 58 years, regular national rankings, an athletic alumni list that includes Bill Russell and K.C. Jones at a school with a student body of fewer than 7,000 — this is the stuff of tradition, a word too often misused, but entirely apt on the small campus near Golden Gate park.

So it was not without a touch of ambivalence and sadness that Brovelli was welcomed last Friday into a select group which celebrates the strength of an honored history now in limbo. A stunned sort of pall hangs over the campus these days. A sorry eight-year string of recruiting violations and booster-related scandals could not withstand the final blow of Quintin Dailey's guilty plea to charges of assault, and the subsequent revelation of a job for which he was paid to do no work.

A Jesuit institution with a name that is muttered in the dark shadows of sexual scandal cannot answer with simple lip service to the NCAA's ideals. In a move somewhat akin to the Department of the Interior dropping forests, the Rev. John Lo Schiavo decided to drop the basketball program July 29.

And when 300 past athletes and supporters of the university met last week for the annual Father Flynn Dinner, a fine but discernible mist wound its way through the proceedings.

(Continued on C-2, Col. 3)

The San Diego Union / James Skovmand

Jim Brovelli, who was named to the basketball hall of fame at USF, talks shop at practice yesterday at USD.

Hardy's TD Return Spurs St. Mary's Past USD

Hoover High product Andre Hardy ran a kickoff back 96 yards for a touchdown and Bryan White ran for two scores as St. Mary's College coasted to a 31-10 victory over the University of San Diego before 4,000 people at USD yesterday.

The Gaels capitalized on an early USD turnover to take a 7-0 lead halfway through the first quarter when Kent Jordan caught a 12-yard pass from Scott Ruiz. Later in the quarter, St. Mary's drove 79 yards and took a 14-0 lead after White ran for his first score, a 5-yard touchdown.

The Toreros cut the lead to 14-7 in the second quarter after St. Mary's punted on third down with 1:31 remaining in the half and USD returned the punt to the Gaels' 28. On the first play, quarterback Eric Sweet threw a 21-yard pass to Michael Rish. Then, with 43 showing, Sweet hit Mitch Greene for a 7-yard touchdown to put USD back in the game.

On the ensuing kickoff, however, Hardy returned 96 yards for a touchdown to make the score 21-7.

USD kicker Bob Lozzi kicked his 11th field goal of the season, a 39-yarder, to tie his own team record and make it 21-10 going into the fourth period.

The Gaels added to their lead after USD fumbled on its own 14. The short drive ended when White scored his second touchdown, a 2-yard plunge to give St. Mary's a 28-10 lead.

Hardy was the game's leading ball carrier, with 17 carries for 91 yards. His backfield partner Bryan White had 68 yards on 18 carries.

Scott Ruiz headed the Gaels' passing attack by throwing for 182 yards and one touchdown. Three of his completions were to Kent Jordan for 29 yards, including the 12-yard touchdown.

The Toreros were held to only 48 yards on the ground. Jerome McAltin gained 43 of those yards on nine carries.

Sweet completed 13 of 24 passes for 147 yards and one touchdown, but was intercepted four times. He completed four of those passes to Michael Rish for 64 yards.

The San Diego Union / Bob Ivins

St. Mary's, now 6-2-1 with one game remaining, scored its final points on a 28-yard field goal by Frank Goehring.

The Toreros finished their season 4-5.

The game marked the first time St. Mary's had beaten USD on the Toreros' home turf.

Craig Carlyle of USD recovers a St. Mary's fumble yesterday as teammate Greg Stein is upended by Gael John Doyle.

Thursday, November 11, 1982

USF Void Discovered By Brovelli

(Continued from C-1)

"It was a shock when it happened, but to go back that weekend, that affected me more," Brovelli said, sitting in a USD office piled deep in the paraphernalia of the season just ahead. "Now it's a reality. Basketball wasn't there. It was empty. Empty and quiet... When your memories are of standing room only... Those were great, great years. It was a great, great place to play. I'm telling you, you get attached to that city. It's always with you."

Brovelli's eyes had focused on the middle distance somewhere, on a maze of steep hills and Victorian homes that dot the ephemeral netherland of his memory. One of four inductees into the hall this year, Jim Brovelli, USF '64, played on two West Coast Athletic Conference champion teams. Two decades later, the school has extended its thanks. If the compliment was sincere, the timing was inopportune.

"It was a lovely banquet, but it was difficult for some people," Brovelli said. "You still have mixed feelings. Of course, your hard-line boosters are unhappy, but there are still some others with hard feelings. It was successful people — lawyers, doctors, professionals. It was all part of that. I just hope... well, there's nothing wrong with stepping back and taking a deep breath. If they can re-establish, set some guidelines...

The San Diego Union / James Skovmand

Jim Brovelli is at USD, not USF, but his works are appreciated at both schools.

"It was very, very hard decision for Father, believe me. He put in a lot of thought. There is no one more devoted to the university and its program than Father Lo Schiavo. It wasn't like some outside president who hates athletics coming in and abolishing the program. The last time they went on probation (1980), he just about promised the NCAA that nothing would go wrong. He gave his personal commitment. As an educator interested in teaching ethics and morals, he felt he had to stand up for the principle he teaches. The ongoing problems, he felt, had to end. He'd gone through changes in the staff in the prior probation. What was the next step?"

"It was an easy decision to make," said Lo Schiavo this week. "It was difficult because of our history and tradition, but it was the right and only decision, and in that sense, it was easy.

"I've gotten 1,000 letters in my office and all but a few support the decision. At the Father Flynn dinner, a lot of former athletes who are interested in athletics were coming up all night and telling me it was the right decision. ... I'm sure now that we will have it (basketball) back in some form or another. I can't tell you what form it will take, or what division, but I've appointed a task force to study it, and they'll report to me in the spring."

Unspoken, still between the lines, is the sentiment that Jim Brovelli is the man who can restore credibility to the Golden Gate campus. His name was mentioned in May of 1980, when athletic director and coach Don Bel-luomini was fired for "recruiting irregularities."

Brovelli is quick to point out that USF never goes outside its program for its coaches, always promoting from within. He will not address the possibility of his returning to USF.

Lo Schiavo will.

"Jim is the sort of guy who has everything going for him as a coach," Lo Schiavo said. "He's a gentleman. He has everything in the right direction, as far as having academics be the first priority. I know from personal experience he takes a personal interest in his athletes. He also knows his basketball. I think he's the kind of guy any school would be proud to have on its staff."

"I'm very happy here at USD," Brovelli said. "The program has come a long way, with a long way to go."

There's no questioning his sincerity. In San Diego, at least, Jim Brovelli has a program.

SENTINEL

NOV 1 7 1982

USD ends 'Year of Turnover'

Torero gridders drop finale to St. Mary's

By JIM EVANS

Sentinel Correspondent

Quite inadvertently, the USD football team has come up with its own personal addition to the Chinese calendar. Call it the Year of the Turnover.

Saturday afternoon, as they have done on numerous occasions during the 1982 campaign, the Toreros played fast and loose with the football. And, because of this frustrating tendency to beat themselves, USD suffered its fifth defeat in the past six outings.

This time the beneficiaries of the error-prone Toreros were the St. Mary's Gaels, who capitalized on many of the miscues en route to a 31-10 win over USD before a disappointed homecoming crowd of 4,000 at Alcalá Park.

The season-ending loss dropped coach Bill Williams' troops under the breakeven point at 4-5 and provided a bitter conclusion to a year that began so auspiciously when the Toreros jumped from the gate with three consecutive wins.

Early in the first quarter it became all too evident that the Toreros would be hampered by the giveaway. On the very first possession, USD quarterback Eric Sweet had his pass into coverage deflected by defensive back Ron Fadelli and subsequently intercepted by a diving Gardner Williams at the Gaels' 35-yard line.

Fortunately for the Toreros, senior cornerback Craig Carlyle, who was a solid performer on defense, got the pigskin right back for the home team when he picked off Scott Ruiz's first passing attempt of the contest.

But the offense continued to put USD into precarious positions. Two plays after the clutch Carlyle interception the usually reliable Sweet misfired badly when he overthrew his intended receiver and instead hit defensive back Dave Bortolin at the Torero 25.

After four successive runs by jitterbug back Bryan White advanced the ball down to the USD 12, the Gaels hit for paydirt when Ruiz rolled to his left and drilled mammoth tight end Kent Jordan on a nice crossing pattern. With 6:34 left in the first quarter, St. Mary's had broken on top at 7-0.

With their offense now on a roll, the Gaels wasted little time in adding to their margin. On their very next series, the visitors embarked on a 79-yard excursion for another score.

Half-back White, who was instrumental on the march with his rushing and receiving, capped the trek goalward with a nifty five-yard slant off right tackle. With 2:03 remaining in the first stanza, St. Mary's now led 14-0.

It was at this stage that both defenses really began to control the line of scrimmage and the likelihood of any additional scoring during the initial 30 minutes seemed rather remote.

However, late in the second quarter, Sweet and company finally began to generate some excitement. After taking over at midfield, the Toreros rapidly sped downfield on the strength on three successive Sweet passes, two of which were snared by Mike Rish.

Then, on a first and goal situation from the 7, Sweet sidestepped a heavy rush, sprinted to his left and hit tight end Mitch Greene near the center of the end zone. Greene's touchdown grab, which came with just 43 seconds showing on the scoreboard clock, had sliced the Torero deficit to 14-7.

Unfortunately for the Toreros, Gael Andre Hardy, a Hoover High graduate, returned the ensuing kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown. Hardy's jaunt gave St. Mary's a 21-7 lead at halftime.

While teams of lesser character might have been devastated by Hardy's run, the Toreros gamely tried to regain the momentum on their first possession of the third quarter. Following a 32-yard punt return by Phil Spencer that positioned them in Gael territory, the Toreros eventually moved to the St. Mary's 19 before stalling.

The locals then summoned the ever-dependable Bob Lozzi, who nailed a field goal from 29 yards out to narrow the Gael lead to 21-10. The kick was Lozzi's 11th successful three-pointer of the season and enabled him to tie the school record in that category for the second straight year.

EVENING TRIBUNE

NOV 2 2 1982

USD BASKETBALL SEASON OPENS — The USD Toreros open their basketball season tonight against University of Alberta at 7:30 at the USD Sports Center.

The Toreros will have three new starters in the lineup — forwards Mike Whitmarsh and Dave McIver and guard Bill Penfold. Returning starters are guard Rich Davis and center Robby Roberts.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 2 2 1982

Toreros Tune Up Against Alberta

The team in the white uniforms tonight will be the University of San Diego. It will be comforting for Torero basketball fans to know that, because they might otherwise fail to recognize the people representing USD.

The team's roster includes six newcomers, three of whom will be in the starting lineup when the San Diegos meet the University of Alberta in an exhibition at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center.

Tonight's game will be the Toreros' lone tuneup before opening the regular season Saturday night against Air Force.

USD fans will have no problem identifying guard Rich Davis and center Robby Roberts. Davis was a starter and Roberts a regular last year, when the Toreros finished 11-15. The rest of the starting lineup will be new.

The forwards will be Mike Whitmarsh, a 6-foot-6 transfer from Grossmont College, and Dave McIver, a 6-8 transfer from Cypress. Joining Davis at guard will be Bill Penfold, a 6-5 transfer from Glendale.

Coach Jim Brovelli, who must mold these newcomers into a smooth-running unit, is pleased to have an exhibition game on the schedule.

"We didn't have one last year, but with a veteran team we didn't really need one," Brovelli said. "This year, with a lot of new faces, we probably do. We gain one game of experience before we open the season, and we think that should help."

USD will not be a big team — Roberts, the center, is 6-foot-7 — but Brovelli suspects the Toreros will compensate for their relative lack of size.

"With no big center, you have to rely on each other for defense and rebounding, but we're used to that," he said. "We've been there before."

Alberta may be leg-weary tonight. The Golden Bears played games at Utah State Saturday night and Stanford last night. They will meet U.S. International University tomorrow night at Mira Mesa High.

— Bill Finley

USD

By Bill Weurding
Tribune Sports Writer

Three years ago, when USD's basketball program got its first taste of life in the West Coast Athletic Conference as a brand new member, the Toreros finished dead last ... as expected.

But two years ago they finished seventh, and last season they wound up sixth. Be it ever so humble, please note that trend. It's by design.

"At least we're moving in the right direction," noted Torero Coach Jim Brovelli yesterday. "I find it encouraging that each year we've improved. The first couple of years, all we could do was try and be competitive and gain some respect. Well, we've gained that respect. We've shown we can compete. Now, I'd like to see us get over the hump and win some of those close games we've been losing."

Although Brovelli graduated his top four scorers from last season, including all-league picks Rusty Whitmarsh and Jim Bateman, the outlook out at Alcalá Park these days is nothing but optimistic.

Part of the reason is that Brovelli, heading into his ninth season at the USD helm, had perhaps his most productive recruiting year since the Toreros joined the WCAC and jumped from Division II into Division I basketball status.

Along with two top freshman prizes — 6-8 Mario Coronado from Tucson's Salpointe High and 6-9 Mike Davis from Chico High — four junior-college transfers (6-5 Bill Penfold from Glendale, 6-8 Dave McIver from Cypress, 6-7 Brian Setencich from Fresno City and 6-5 Mike Whitmarsh from Grossmont) also have joined the Toreros.

When added to a group of returnees that includes guards Rich Davis, John Prunty, Randy Brickley and Jon Freeman, 6-7 center Robby Roberts, and forwards Anthony Reuss (6-7) and Don Capener (6-5), one begins to understand why Brovelli can't wait to get the season started.

"I think we're going to be a little quicker than last year," he judged, "and, overall, we'll have better perimeter shooting. We're never gonna be a run-and-gun type of program here — I don't believe in that — but we are gonna try and utilize our quickness this season and get more transition baskets. A lack of quickness and not getting enough easy baskets has hurt us in the past."

Judging by the Toreros' performance last night in an exhibition game against the University of Alberta, USD is ready to start picking up its pace. Sparked by 19 points from point guard Rich Davis, the Toreros rolled past the visiting Canadians with ease 86-43.

Mike Whitmarsh, Randy's younger brother, added 11 points while Roberts, Prunty and Reuss all chipped in 10 to the balanced Torero attack. Roberts, one of the WCAC's strongest rebounders last season, also pulled down 10 caroms to pace USD in that department.

"I'm pleased with the way things have been going," noted Brovelli prior to his team's impressive debut against Alberta. "The guys have really worked hard these past five weeks. The chemistry on the club appears to be good in terms of personalities, which is always important. We're ready to play. I just hope we can get some early wins. That would help boost their confidence."

Confidence will be a necessity this season for the new-look Toreros, who will open perhaps the most demanding schedule in their history here Saturday night against Air Force, starting at 7:30. Other nonleague tests are scheduled against the likes of U.C. Irvine, San Diego State, Long Beach State, San Jose State and University of Nevada at Reno, all on the road.

"Our pre-conference schedule is extremely difficult," said Brovelli. "We are hoping to improve with each game. Every one of those games should prepare us well for WCAC play."

As far as league play goes, the USD coach foresees defending champion Pepperdine as the team to beat again, followed by Santa Clara. Pepperdine, which went 14-0 in league play last year and 22-7 overall, has four starters and 10 lettermen returning.

"It's gonna be a real dogfight," summed up Brovelli of the season ahead. "I'd say Pepperdine and Santa Clara are the top two clubs, and then the rest of us are all pretty close. Everybody we play is tough."

Keeping the trend going will take some doing.

College Basketball Schedules, C-6

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 27 1982

USD in Basketball Opener Tonight

From a Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — The University of San Diego opens its basketball season by playing host to the Air Force Academy at 7:30 tonight at the USD Sports Center. USD finished 11-15 last season while starting three seniors. The only returning starters are center Robby Roberts and guard Rich Davis.

JIM BROVELLI

USD OPENS TOMORROW NIGHT VS. AIR FORCE

Grown-Up Whitmarsh Counted On To Carry Toreros

By BILL FINLEY

Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

It would be stretching a point to suggest anyone ever kicked sand in the face of Mike Whitmarsh.

He seldom missed a meal.

Still, the "before" and "after" from the Whitmarsh scrapbook would make an interesting portfolio.

As a junior at Monte Vista High, Whitmarsh stood 5-foot-11 and weighed 150 pounds. Again a junior, this time at USD, he now goes 6-6 and 200, and upon his newly grown shoulders the Torero basketball team will be placing a sizable burden this winter.

The starting center and both starting forwards from last year's club were seniors. USD will be relying heavily upon newcomers to replace them, and Coach Jim Brovelli will be relying on no one more heavily than Whitmarsh when the 1982-83 season opens tomorrow night against Air Force.

A transfer from Grossmont College, he is the brother of Rusty Whitmarsh, a three-year regular who graduated from USD last spring. Rusty was a star. Brovelli hopes it runs in the family.

"Mike's not the kind of guy who's going to come in and score 30 points a game for us, but he'll be in the teens and he'll do all the things we ask our guys to do here," Brovelli li said. "He shoots well, rebounds well, gets up and down the floor well. He's a heckuva player; we feel fortunate to have him."

Basketball coach Jim Brovelli is counting on Mike Whitmarsh to lead the young Toreros.

The Toreros might not have had Whitmarsh if he had developed in the normal fashion. As a 5-11, 150-pound guard at Monte Vista, Whitmarsh spent most of his time on the Monarch bench.

"I sometimes got in at the end of lopsided games, but really, I hardly got to play at all," he recalled yesterday. "It was kinda embarrassing, because Rusty had been such a big star there."

So skeptical was Whitmarsh about his career in basketball he turned out for the tennis team at the end of his junior season. He had some success, too. He reached the semifinals of the Grossmont League championships before losing to Jim Turner of Helix.

In tennis, Whitmarsh was big enough to rush the net. Soon, he was big enough to rush the net on a basketball court as well.

Between March and November of his 17th year, Whitmarsh grew six inches. As a 6-5 forward instead of a 5-11 guard, his game came together.

"I kept most of my quickness," he explained, "and the other skills I'd developed as a guard really helped me when I got bigger. Once I grew a little, things fell into place pretty quick."

Whitmarsh averaged 15 points and eight rebounds a game and led Monte Vista to the semifinals of the CIF playoffs. He was named the Grossmont League's player of the year. Still, he was not recruited.

"Mike's the classic late-bloomer," Brovelli said. "If you're not on a recruiting list before the start of your senior year, you're not going to get much attention. He wasn't and I guess he didn't, but you could see he was going to be a player."

Last year at Grossmont College, Whitmarsh averaged 18.5 points and 7.7 rebounds a game. He shot 62 percent from the field. He finished second in the balloting for South Coast Conference player of the year behind Chris Beasley of Orange Coast. Beasley, who averaged 24 points a game, is now at Arizona State.

Whitmarsh, to no one's surprise, chose USD over California and UC-Santa Barbara.

"Deep down I've always wanted to come here," he said. "I didn't want to leave San Diego. I knew Rusty had enjoyed his four years here, and Coach Brovelli's about as classy as they come. It was an easy choice, really. It was no choice at all."

Whitmarsh admits the comparisons between him and Rusty are inevitable — "There's a certain amount of pressure being his little brother," Mike said, "and even at USD, people probably expect me to be good because of my name" — but he will not be party to it.

"We're different kinds of players," Whitmarsh said. "He's a 6-3 guard who may be the best defensive player I've ever seen. I'm a 6-6 forward who likes mixing it up inside. He's a good player; he's proven it. I haven't proven much of anything yet."

Three of USD's starters will be making their first appearance in Torero uniforms here Saturday night. Dave McIver, a 6-8 transfer from Cypress College, will join Whitmarsh at forward. Glendale College transfer Bill Penfold (6-4) will be a starter at guard.

McIver averaged 15.5 points and 7.5 rebounds a game last season. Penfold averaged 12.2 and 7.2, respectively, at Glendale.

Three freshmen could also figure in USD's upcoming season. Mario Coronado (6-8) comes to Alcalá Park from Salpointe Catholic High in Tucson, Ariz., where he shot 68 percent from the field and averaged 21.2 points a game. Mike Davis (6-9) averaged 23 points and 14.5 rebounds a game last winter at Chico High. Joe Fish (6-9) is a graduate of Serra High.

Brovelli has decided to redshirt 6-7 forward Brian Setencich, a transfer from Fresno City College.

In another development, former Bonita Vista High star Jon Freeman has left USD and enrolled at Southwestern College.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 23 1982

Seniors Spark USD Rout Of Alberta

The University of San Diego basketball team stormed past a weary Alberta University squad, 86-43, last night in a pre-season exhibition game which attracted 600 fans to the USD Sports Center.

"We got a chance to see everyone," said Coach Jim Brovelli, whose squad includes only two returning starters. "My general impression is that we are quicker and we shoot better from the perimeter than in the (recent) past."

Alberta, playing its fourth road game in as many days, made only 7 of 19 shots in the first half and the Canadian team's 6-6 center, Leon Bynoe, wasn't able to match strengths with 6-7 Rich Davis under the backboards.

Davis and Robbie Roberts, both seniors, provided the leadership Brovelli was seeking from them, especially during the opening minutes of the only practice game the Toreros will have before hosting Air Force in the regular season opener Saturday.

Roberts dominated the defensive boards as USD ran to an 8-0 lead on a Bill Penfold layup. Davis' 20-foot jumper, a Roberts rebound and baseline 15 footer by Mike Whitmarsh.

Roberts finished with 10 points and 10 rebounds, eight of them before halftime. Davis, the point guard, led all scorers with 19 points and dished off five assists.

USD shot 52 percent while taking a 40-22 halftime lead, then improved on that performance by making 21 of 35 field goal attempts in the second half.

EVENING TRIBUNE

NOV 26 1982

Air Force at USD

The University of San Diego Toreros open their season at 7:30 tomorrow night at the USD Sports Center against the Air Force Academy.

The Toreros, 11-15 overall and 4-10 in the West Coast Athletic Conference in 1981-82, eased past the University of Alberta, 86-43, in an exhibition game at USD Monday night, and 6-0 guard Rich Davis and 6-7 forward Robby Roberts showed why Coach Jim Brovelli is counting on them for big years.

They're the only two starters back from last year's team. Brovelli's eighth at USD, and Davis was only a part-time starter. In the Alberta game, the other guard was 6-4 Bill Penfold, 6-6 Mike Whitmarsh played forward and 6-8 Dave McIver was the center.

The Falcons, 8-19 overall and 3-13 in the WAC last year, lost three starters but have second-team all-WAC selection Rick Simmons returning. Simmons, a 6-4 forward, averaged 14.3 points per game.

This game figures to be one matching teams of similar styles. USD is counting on added quickness to help pick up its tempo this year, but both teams will wait for the right shot.

The Toreros' next game is at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Sports Center against Northern Arizona University.

Like Its Shots, USD Comes Up Short

By BILL FINLEY

Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

The rings that are attached to the backboards at the USD Sports Center appear to be the usual size, they look legit, but the University of San Diego made them seem more like Dixie Cups last night.

The Toreros could net only 19 of their 51 shots from the field. This computes to 37 percent, a figure that is particularly dismal for a team playing at home, and largely as a result the San Diegans were beaten by Air Force 49-47 in a basketball game played before 500 fans.

"If we can't shoot the ball, we're in big trouble," USD coach Jim Brovelli admitted, and this became obvious last night.

The Toreros are not big enough or quick enough to overcome poor shooting from the floor and one cold stretch proved particularly damaging against Air Force. In the first 5½ minutes of the second half, USD went 0 for 6. Its first second-half points came when freshman center Mike Davis got credit for a hoop on a goal-tending call at 14:23. By this juncture, Air Force had stretched a one-point lead to eight, and the Toreros were forced to play catchup the rest of the way.

They got close in the concluding moments. A driving layup by guard Rich Davis trimmed the Air Force lead to 49-47 with 18 seconds to go, and Falcon guard Irwin Washington missed the first free throw in a one-and-one situation at :10. This gave USD one last chance to send the game into overtime, but Rich Davis missed a 23-footer at the horn.

"I don't know if it was first-game jitters or what, but we played very tentative most of the game," Brovelli said. "When you're tentative, it hurts you in all areas. It hurts your shooting, your rebounding, your defense. In any case, we couldn't get anything going at either end of the floor tonight. We kept running guys out there, hoping somebody would catch fire, and nobody ever did."

Air Force, 2-0 after beating United States International University and USD the last two days, was led by forward Rick Simmons. Simmons, who was named to the all-Western Athletic Conference second team last season, scored 22 points and collected nine rebounds.

Rich Davis led the Toreros with 10 points. Mike Whitmarsh contributed nine. Mike Davis and forward Anthony Reuss, a sophomore from Christian High, had seven apiece.

H-2 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

①

Sunday, November 28, 1982

Falcon Pete McCaffrey tries to grab ball and avoid stepping on teammate Tim Lewis.

USD wide receiver Jim Reilly strains for a pass against St. Mary's.

Photo by Bobbie Leonard

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

NOV 23 1982

USD notches easy victory

The University of San Diego basketball team warmed up for the start of the 1982-83 basketball season against a cold-shooting team from Canada Monday night. The Toreros raced to leads of 8-0 and 40-22 before burying the University of Alberta 86-43.

Former Monte Vista High and Grossmont College standout Mike Whitmarsh scored 11 points for USD. Sophomore Anthony Reuss, a product of Christian High, popped in 10 points.

USD hosts Air Force in its season opener Saturday.

NOV 2 7 1982

USD Five To Meet Falcons

There is, at the University of San Diego, a desk that belongs to basketball coach Jim Brovelli.

In it, there is an envelope, and in it is a sheet of paper that must surely intrigue those who follow the Toreros. Each year at this time, Brovelli commits to writing the record he feels his team will have at season's end. And seldom, he admits, has that task been more difficult than it was this week.

USD, which will open the 1982-83 season tonight by meeting Air Force at 7:30 in the Sports Center, is a hard team to figure.

On one hand, the Toreros have lost four starters from the club that last season finished 11-15.

On the other, USD had perhaps its best recruiting year ever.

Brovelli isn't saying where he believes the Toreros will finish — contents of his envelope are top secret, he says — but he is obviously optimistic.

"With six new players, three in the starting lineup we've got to learn how to play together," he said. "But when we do, we think we should have a pretty good team. Our goal is to improve the record we had last year, and we think we can."

NOV 2 9 1982

Northern Arizona Visits USD Tonight

The University of San Diego lost its opening basketball game of the season Saturday night, it bowed to Air Force 49-47, but Torero coach Jim Brovelli still is hoping that tonight his team can pick up where it left off.

In the last minute Saturday, USD outscored the Falcons 8-2. It almost sent the game into overtime. This last-second flurry fell short, but Brovelli hopes the experience will benefit a Torero club that tonight plays host to Northern Arizona in a 7:30 game at the Sports Center on campus.

"At the end, we were on our toes instead of our heels," Brovelli said of the Air Force game, "and we almost got 'em. If we'd gotten aggressive sooner, we would have won the game. Until the last minute, we were sitting back and waiting for things to happen. We've got to start making things happen out there."

A player to watch tonight will be USD's freshman center, Mike Davis. The 6-foot-10 newcomer came from the bench Saturday night to score seven points and grab five rebounds.

Sophomore Anthony Reuss from Christian High also played well, scoring seven points and collecting six rebounds.

USD, 0-1, will continue its season Wednesday night at UC-Irvine.

NOV 2 8 1982

USD Is Beaten by Air Force

By STEVE DOLAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—What looked for certain to be a lost cause nearly turned into a miraculous comeback for the University of San Diego basketball team Saturday night.

Down by eight points with 42 seconds remaining, the Toreros put on a fast finish before losing to the Air Force Academy, 49-47, in their season opener. Air Force had won its opener in overtime against U.S. International University Friday night.

The game came down to a final shot by USD's Rich Davis with one second remaining. From 25 feet out, Davis fell short of sending the game into overtime.

By finishing in a flurry, the Toreros were able to at least take some consolation in the loss. Before the final minute of play, they had been through more than their share of lulls.

"At the end, we were more on our toes than our heels," Coach Jim Brovelli said. "If we learned anything, it was that you can't sit back. We try to get something positive out of every game. That was our lesson tonight."

Until the final minute, the game had gone along at a snail's pace. It figured to be that way, however, since both teams have deliberate styles.

The problem with USD was that it played perhaps too deliberately. The Toreros were held scoreless the first 5:37 of the second half and later went through another spell of not scoring for 5:14.

"We have six new people and are not coordinated right now as a team," Brovelli said. "We played real tentative for most of the game. We learned that you can't wait for things to happen. If you wait for things to happen, the only things that happen will be bad. We just stood around too much."

Rick Simmons of Air Force seemed to be one of few men in motion on the floor, scoring a game-high 22 points. He scored 15 the first half while leading the Falcons to a 24-23 advantage.

Air Force had taken a 17-10 lead 11½ minutes into the game as Simmons scored eight quick points. USD scored the next six points but was never again to take the lead.

At the outset of the second half, the Falcons scored seven points before USD responded. Freshman center Mike Davis finally scored on a goallending play for the Toreros with 14:23 remaining.

USD eventually cut its deficit to 36-33 on a Brian Setencich basket with 9:30 to play. The Toreros did not score again until a field goal by Rich Davis made the score 41-35 with 4:16 remaining.

Air Force eventually took what appeared to be a comfortable 49-41 lead with 42 seconds left. John Prunty scored on USD's next possession, then Mike Whitmarsh intercepted the inbound pass and connected with 25 seconds to play, cutting the score to 49-45.

Mike Edwards of Air Force missed a one-and-one free throw one second later and Mike Davis rebounded. Rich Davis (no relation to Mike) tallied a lay-up with 18 seconds unplayed. Erwin Washington of Air Force missed a one-and-one free shot eight seconds later, enabling USD to have one last gasp.

NOV 2 9 1982

Griffins and USD defeated

Basketball teams of Grossmont College and the University of San Diego will attempt to rebound from weekend losses this week. The Griffins, who dropped a non-conference decision to Arizona Western 80-71 Saturday in Yuma, travel to Palm Desert to meet College of the Desert Wednesday night.

USD, fresh off a 49-47 loss to Air Force, hosts Northern Arizona tonight at 7:30. Mike Whitmarsh had nine points and Anthony Reuss contributed seven points and six rebounds coming off the bench for USD Saturday.

Tom Ruettgen led the Griffins (1-2) with 18 points and 10 rebounds Saturday. Larry White chipped in 15 points, eight rebounds and five assists. Todd Iseminger had 12 points and Xavier Graves netted 10 in reserve roles.

Grossmont shot 55 percent from the floor and claimed a 33-24 advantage on the boards. But the Griffins were whistled for 24 fouls to Arizona Western's 12. Western held a 16-9 scoring edge from the free-throw line.

NOV 2 9 1982

USD AT HOME — University of San Diego, a loser 49-47 to Air Force in its season debut Saturday night, takes on Northern Arizona at 7:30 tonight in the USD gym. In other basketball games over the weekend, the University of Kansas whipped U.S. International University 91-74 in Lawrence, Kan., and Point Loma College lost to Bethany Nazarene 82-71 at Bethany, Okla.

On the home front, community college action saw Mesa whip Orange Coast 72-59 and Camp Pendleton win the San Diego City College Holiday Classic with a 109-105 conquest of Los Angeles Southwest. The host Knights lost the third-place game to L.A. Trade Tech 84-76.

NOV 2 9 1982

Toreros Play Northern Arizona

From a Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego, coming off a season-opening basketball loss, will attempt to rebound against Northern Arizona at 7:30 tonight at the USD Sports Center.

The Toreros fell short of the Air Force Academy Saturday night, 49-47, despite scoring 6 unanswered points the final 42 seconds. One of the bright spots for USD was freshman center Mike Davis, who may soon become a starter.

NOV 3 0 1982

USD gains double OT win over Lumberjacks

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Center Robby Roberts scored on a layin with four seconds left in the second overtime Monday night to give the University of San Diego a 76-74 non-conference college basketball victory over Northern Arizona.

The Toreros had tied the contest at 74 with 1:09 left in the second extra period on John Prunty's 10-footer. Northern Arizona then turned the ball over, giving San Diego time to work the ball into Roberts for the winning basket.

San Diego got a late basket from Don Capener to end regulation play knotted at 61. Capener sank a 15-footer with 15 seconds left to pull the Toreros even.

Roberts, who had 21 rebounds, and Prunty scored 16 points each for San Diego (1-1). Former Monte Vista athlete Mike Whitmarsh scored 11 points for the Toreros.

NOV 3 0 1982

The San Diego Union / Tony Doubek

Brian Setencich of USD takes a rebound from David Johnson of Northern Arizona here last night.

Toreros Fell Lumberjacks In Two Overtimes 76-74

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Robbie Roberts scored a rebound basket with four seconds to play last night to give the University of San Diego a 76-74, double-overtime victory over Northern Arizona University at the USD Sports Center.

The Toreros had rallied from a 13-point deficit to tie at 61-61 at the end of regulation play on Don Capener's 17-foot line-drive jumper.

Then, after jumping out to a five-point lead with only 33 seconds left to play in the first overtime, the hosts saw the Lumberjacks first get a three-point play then push the contest into a second overtime on Jeff Altman's basket with four seconds to play.

In the second overtime, USD quickly fell four points behind before pulling even on single free throws by Capener and Roberts and tying the game at 74-74 on John Prunty's 20-foot, baseline jumper with 70 seconds to play.

Northern Arizona was playing for the final shot when reserve forward Andy Hurd stepped on an out-of-bounds line to give USD the ball back with 30 seconds to play.

USD was working for the final shot and Prunty fired another baseline jumper with eight seconds to play. The shot was long, but Roberts, a 6-7 forward, policed the carom and took it back up for the winning basket.

"Amazing," USD Coach Jim Brovelli said after the Toreros evened their season record at 1-1.

"I said before the game that I wasn't sure how this was going to go. We're a young team. I think the new guys are waiting for something to happen, for someone to take charge."

"Prunty brought us back. Prunty took charge and started hitting the long shots."

USD was suffering through its second poor shooting night of the young season and playing tentative basketball at best when Prunty and Rich Davis ignited the game-saving rally.

The Toreros were down 52-39 with only 4:44 to play in regulation time. For them to get back into the game, they had to do a complete turnaround. At one point, early in the second half, they made seven straight trips down court without scoring, went spans of 3½ minutes and five minutes between baskets and had only eight points to show for 11¼ minutes of play.

Then they caught fire. The same team that wasn't shooting at all was suddenly tossing in 20-foot bombs behind the perimeter shooting of Prunty, Davis and Capener.

(Continued on C-2, Col. 5)

Roberts Leads USD To First Victory

(Continued from C-1)

Still down 59-53 with 58 seconds to play in regulation time, the Toreros pulled close on an 18-foot drive by Capener with 51 seconds to play, a 20-foot shot by Prunty with 41 seconds to go, a second 20-footer by Prunty with 23 seconds left and finally Capener's tying bomb.

Prunty scored 14 of his 16 points (sharing the team high with Roberts) in the second half and overtime, all but two of those 14 after the nine-minute mark.

Roberts also had 21 rebounds, coming within three of the USD single-game record.

Both teams lost key players to fouls.

Northern Arizona's Eric Wade, the game's leading scorer with 27 points, fouled out early in the first overtime and was followed by three other Lumberjack regulars. Altman backed Wade with 20 points.

USD lost Davis before the end of regulation time, plus Penfold and Brian Setencich in overtime. Backing Roberts and Prunty in scoring were forward Mike Whitmarsh with 11 and Davis and Capener with eight.

"We're still trying to coordinate as a team," said Brovelli. "We've got the parts, but we've got a long ways to go."

"I don't know what was happening early," said Prunty. "It seemed like we weren't tuned in. Later, I thought we were playing very well."

"It was really a crazy game. Right when it looked like either team might be out of it, they were stronger than ever."

Northern Arizona even had a last play, a desperation lob pass at the basket as the second overtime ran out. It was batted away by USD's 6-10 freshman center Michael Davis.

TRAFFIC LIGHT — Rich Davis of USD pulls up in the free-throw lane as Northern Arizona's Eric Bradley, left, applies defense pressure in last night's basketball game in Torero gym. NA's Terrence Sims comes on, background, to lend support. — Photo by Tony Doubek

★USD

Continued From Page C-1

Take nine more shots at the foul line, 42 to NAU's 33, and make two more of them, 24 to 22. That way, even though you shoot 43 percent from the floor, you pull it out.

"I think we did learn some things," said Brovelli after his team evened its record at 1-1. "Maybe, most importantly, they learned that when they went after it tough, they were good. When you stand around and wait for something to happen to you only bad things are going to happen."

The rumor is that Brovelli is standing around waiting for the coaching job of the allegedly soon-to-be resurrected University of San Francisco basketball program. He has coached USD to a 131-107 record in his now eight-plus years here, he is an alumnus of USF, and he was recently inducted into its Hall of Fame.

"Well," he said with an almost embarrassed chuckle, "it's nice to be mentioned as a candidate, but first, there's no job there and second, I'm happy here. We're in a building process, we've got good kids and good support from the school, and it's going well."

Last year USD lost seven games by a total of 28 points. It lost its opener last week to Air Force by two. It won last night by two in its first double-overtime game since it lost at USF by six last February.

"Until we started going for it tonight it looked like the same old thing," said Brovelli. "Maybe a win like this can help us over the hump. I told them at the end of regulation we'd come too far to lose it. We were up five in the first overtime and couldn't make the front ends of one-and-ones or we'd have iced it. Then again, we were down four in the second OT and didn't die. Maybe it's a good sign."

The best sign of the night was the referee's signal that NAU guard Eric Wade had fouled out with 1:13 left in the first overtime. He had a game-high 27 points and five steals, but he was the first of four Lumberjacks to foul out, all in the overtimes.

From the 4:45 mark, when NAU had its 52-39 lead, until the end of regulation, USD's full-court pressure and trapping half-court zone was effective enough to allow the Lumberjacks just nine points, all free throws. And what helped start the Toreros' streak was Roberts, who shot 43 percent from the line last year, making four straight free throws.

In the end, foul shooting-Prunty-Roberts was the right chemistry for last night, anyway.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

6 Part III/Tuesday, November 30, 1982/J ★

Toreros Score 76-74 Victory in 2 Overtimes

By STEVE DOLAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—There was so much suspense Monday night at the University of San Diego that a Hollywood writer couldn't have come up with a better script.

In the end, USD prevailed over Northern Arizona in double overtime, 76-74, on a rebound shot by Robby Roberts with four seconds to play.

But the real story of the game was a comeback by the Toreros, who raised their record to 1-1.

With 4:44 remaining in regulation, USD trailed, 52-39. The Toreros were even behind by eight with 1:47 to play, but the word quit was not in their game plan. They finally tied the game at 61-61 on Don Capener's 18-foot shot with 15 seconds to play.

They've Gotta Believe

"Sometimes, guys start waiting for things to happen when you have a lot of new players," Coach Jim Brovelli said. "They have to start believing in themselves. In overtime, our players started believing they could do it."

If not for John Prunty, the Toreros never would have made it to overtime. Prunty scored six points the final 1:45 of regulation as USD made its surprising comeback.

Until that time, it looked like a carbon copy of USD's season-opening loss to the Air Force Academy. The Toreros had trailed that game by eight points with 42 seconds remaining, then ultimately fell two points short.

Prunty and Roberts were to be the difference against Northern Arizona, tying for the team-lead with 16 points. Prunty scored 10 of his points in the final 11:45.

"Prunty brought us back," Brovelli said. "He was great off the bench. He started to take charge."

In the first overtime, USD took charge by building a five-point lead with 38 seconds remaining. However, the Lumberjacks were to tie the game, 68-68, on a Jeff Auman basket with three seconds remaining.

Problems From the Line

The Toreros hurt themselves in the first overtime by missing the front end of five one-and-one free-throw situations. They were just 2 of 6 from the line in the second overtime.

Northern Arizona had built a 73-70 lead with 2:44 to play in the second overtime. Roberts scored a field goal and one of two free throws the next 32 seconds, pulling the Toreros within two points.

After the teams exchanged free throws, Prunty tied the score at 74 with a field goal 1:09 before the final buzzer. On Northern Arizona's next possession, it turned the ball over with 50 seconds left when Andy Hurd inadvertently stepped out-of-bounds.

USD then set up a 15-foot baseline shot by Prunty, which hit the rim and missed. Roberts rebounded, then followed through with the game-winning basket.

The Toreros hit 43% from the floor, Northern Arizona 53%. USD led in rebounds, 38-27, as Roberts had 21. Seven players fouled out—four from Northern Arizona and three from USD.

EVENING TRIBUNE
NOV 30 1982

Toreros find a win, answers

By T.R. Reinman

Tribune Sportswriter

As the Toreros bounced balls off the rim in the pre-game warmups last night, Jim Brovelli squinted and stared out at them, as if he were trying to will an answer to his quandary. It didn't look like that approach was working in pre-game, or even through the first 35:15 of what turned out to be a 50-minute, double-overtime 76-74 University of San Diego win over Northern Arizona University.

"We've got six new faces out there," explained the head coach, "and we're still looking for the right chemistry. It's still early in the season, and we haven't worked under pressure situations, but we've got to find it."

He found pressure situations, anyway, and he might have found some chemistry, too. Take some Prunty, some Roberts and some foul shooting (if it's shaky, just add some more) and you've got yourself some chemistry. At least all you need for NAU.

T.R. Reinman's College Notepad examines why some bowls wound up with turkeys, C-4

Take one John Prunty off the bench and let him wing a few up there, for one thing. Once he and Dan Capener starting flinging 'em, the Toreros came back from a 52-39 shortfall with 4:45 left in the game, and tied it at 61 with 14 seconds left in regulation.

"I didn't think we were going to lose with five minutes to go," said Prunty circumspectively, "but I wasn't 100 percent sure we could win, like at the start of a game. I just figured if somebody didn't do something we'd lose. I figured I might as well try to start the something."

Take one Robby Roberts, on whom the rap was bad hands, no foul shot and questionable endurance, and have him rip rebounds and play tough for the second shots.

The Lumberjacks started a front line that went 6-foot-6, 6-7, 6-11, and Roberts outplayed all three of them before being rested less than 10 minutes into the game. At that point he had seven rebounds and he ended up with 22. And the smaller USDs outrebounded NAU 49-31. With three seconds left in the second OT, Prunty heaved one up from the corner, and it was Roberts' rebound and strong followup in traffic that won the game.

Please see USD, C-4

Tribune photo by Tony Doubek

USD'S ROBBY ROBERTS BATTLES DAN BUSH
Roberts had 22 rebounds

DEC 1982

Mini-university sessions will take place in January

The University of San Diego's "mini-university" for persons over the age of 55—the University of the Third Age—will be in session from January 6 through January 20 in the abbreviated version of the program which is offered each winter during USD's intersession period.

Enrollment is open to anyone 55 years or older, and the tuition remains at $35. Participants must be able to provide their own transportation to and from the Linda Vista Road campus.

Classes will be conducted Monday through Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to approximately 11:30 a.m., according to a spokesman for the School of Graduate and Continuing Education.

The curriculum offers the wide range of topics which is the USA trademark, subjects such as "Young and Old Together: A New Curriculum," discussed by Rita King of the San Diego County Schools; "What's in Handwriting?" by Jean McGuinness, graphologist; "Karl Marx and Leo XIII," by USD political science professor John Chambers; "Television and Politics: Who Is Kidding Whom?" with James Hottis, USD associate professor of political science.

Dec. 1982

SAN DIEGO

MAGAZINE

DEC 1982

A Passion for Detail—Fifty pieces of animal and figurative sculpture in bronze, marble and ivory from the USD Grand Tour collection are on display thru Dec. 9 at Founders Gallery, University of San Diego. Weekdays noon-5, Wed. til 9. 291-6480.

SAN DIEGO

MAGAZINE

DEC 1982

USD Orchestra Concert—Dr. Henry Kolar conducts the University of San Diego Orchestra in a performance of Ma Vlast by Smetana Dec. 5 at 4 at Camino Theatre. Info: 291-6480.

USD Choir and Vocal Ensemble—Father Nicolas Reveles directs "A Festival of Lessons and Carols" featuring cantatas by Buxtehude and Haydn, Dec. 10 & 11 at 8 at Founders Chapel, University of San Diego. Info: 291-6480.

RANCH COAST

DEC 1982

University of San Diego's December events: Art: "A Passion for Detail," through Dec. 9; Music: Dr. Henry Kolar, conducting "Ma Vlast," Dec. 5; USD Choir and Vocal Ensemble present "A Festival of Lessons and Carols," Dec. 10 & 11; Special Event: Craft Fair, Dec. 9 & 10; "Feminization of Values: Children of the Future" Dec. 2.

Sentinel Wednesday, December 1, 1982 A7

Orchestra to play

"Ma Vlast" will be presented in its entirety by the University of San Diego Symphony Orchestra Sunday at 8 p.m. in Camino Theater.

The six symphonies of tone poems that comprise "Ma Vlast" (My Homeland) by composer Bedrich Smetana extol the history and beauty of Czechoslovakia.

"The colorful and richly orchestrated cycles of 'Ma Vlast,'" according to USD Orchestra conductor Dr. Henry Kolar, "are usually performed individually, with 'Moldau' being the cycle most familiar to audiences. To the best of my knowledge, this is the first San Diego performance of 'Ma Vlast' in its entirety."

LA JOLLA LIGHT

DEC 2 1982

USD Founders Gallery—"A Passion for Detail," an exhibition featuring sculpture from the Grand Tour, will be displayed through Dec. 9, De Sales Hall, Alcala Park, S.D. 291-6480.

READER

DEC 2 1982

Classical Concert, the six symphonies of tone poems that comprise Ma Vlast by Bedrich Smetana, extolling the history and beauty of Czechoslovakia, will be performed by the University of San Diego Symphony Orchestra, Sunday, December 5, 8 p.m., Camino Theatre, USD. 291-6480.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

DEC 2 1982

Class Will Begin Saturday

A workshop on "Microcomputer Use in Library Applications" will be held at the University of San Diego on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The seminar, part of USD's series "Computer Resources for Educators," is designed to train educators and administrators in using microcomputers in academia. Registration is $50. Information is available at USD's School of Education and Continuing Education. The course may be taken for professional credit.

BLADE TRIBUNE

DEC 2 1982

Craft Fair To Be Held At USD

SAN DIEGO—The second annual holiday craft fair will be held on the campus of the University of San Diego Wednesday, Dec. 8, and Thursday, Dec. 9, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

More than 40 local artisans, some of whom are USD faculty and staff members, will display their work in front of Founders Hall. The public is invited to the craft fair which will feature a variety of items including silk-screened apparel and linens, jewelry, floral arrangements, ceramics, wooden calligraphy, weavings, and sculpture.

Holiday refreshments will be available. There is no admission charge. Proceeds from the craft fair will benefit USD student organizations.

ENTERPRISE

DEC 2 1982

Judge Ramirez honored

Hon. Victor E. Ramirez, Judge of the North County Municipal Court in Vista, was named Outstanding Jurist by the Law Alumni Association of the University of San Diego.

The 1982 Distinguished Alumni Banquet was held last Friday night, Nov. 19, at the Kona Kai Club on Shelter Island in San Diego.

Each year the Law Alumni Association honors three outstanding alumni in the fields of business/educator, practitioner and jurist. Past recipients have included Senator Robert Wilson, Hon. Judith N. Keep and Lynn Schenk.

In attendance at this year's banquet were members of the North County Municipal Court Bench, Hon. Raymond G. Hall, Presiding Judge for 1983 at the Vista Court, Hon. Luther Leeger and Hon. Tony Maino.

Judge Ramirez, who was appointed to the bench in August of 1980, has been assigned to Division Two at the North County Municipal Court since January 1982 and will sit at the Escondido facility from January to June of 1983.

He graduated from the University of San Diego College of Law in 1973 and practiced law in Escondido, prior to taking the bench. He is a resident of Escondido, with his wife and two children.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

DEC 3 1982

"A PASSION FOR DETAIL" (University of San Diego, Founders Gallery, Founders Hall). Fifty pieces of animal and figurative sculpture in bronze, marble and ivory. Gallery is open from noon to

LOS ANGELES TIMES

DEC 3 1982

MA VLAST (University of San Diego Symphony Orchestra, Camino Theatre at USD). The six symphonies or tone poems by composer Bedrich Smetana extol the history and beauty of Czechoslovakia. Performance at 8 p.m. Sunday.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 5 1982

USD SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA—The University of San Diego Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Henry Kolar, will perform Bedrich Smetana's "Ma Vlast" ("My Homeland") at 8 p.m. today in the Camino Theater, USD.

SENTINEL

DEC 8 1982

Music

THE UNIVERSITY of San Diego will present its annual Christmas Choral Festival Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in Founders Chapel. The concert, "A Festival of Lessons and Carols," is free.

"A Festival of Lessons and Carols," features Christmas choral music by David Willcocks, Ross Hastings and William Walton. The cantatas "Come Ye Shepherds to the Light" by Michael Haydn and "In Dulci Jubilo" by Dietrich Buxtehude will be sung by the USD Vocal Ensemble. The USD Choir and Vocal Ensemble are directed by organist and fine arts department faculty member Father Nicolas Reveles.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 8 1982

Judge Ramirez, 2 Lawyers Honored

North County Municipal Court Judge Victor Ramirez and two San Diego lawyers have been honored by the Law Alumni Association of the University of San Diego.

Ramirez, a judge for two years, was named Outstanding Jurist. He graduated from the University of San Diego College of Law in 1973 and practiced law in Escondido before becoming a judge.

Attorney Thomas Ault, immediate past president of the San Diego County Bar Association, was named outstanding practitioner. Ault is a 1972 graduate of the law school.

Robert F. Adelizzi, president of Home Federal Savings & Loan, received the Outstanding Business/Educator award. Adelizzi is a 1964 graduate of the law school.

SENTINEL

DEC 8 1982

USD will sponsor a craft fair

The second annual holiday craft fair will be at the University of San Diego on Wednesday, Dec. 8, and Thursday, Dec. 9 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

There is no charge for admission. The works will be on display in front of Founders Hall.

STAR NEWS

DEC 5 1982

Bonita man in 'Who's Who'

Bruce Nelson of Bonita is one of 24 students at the University of San Diego School of Law named to the 1983 "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

Selection is based on academic achievement, community service, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential.

Nelson, as part of this group from more than 1,300 institutions of higher learning throughout the United States and several foreign countries, is recognized as being among the nation's outstanding campus leaders.

SENTINEL

DEC 8 1982

USD women like their dates

By BILL LAWSON
Sentinel Correspondent

San Diego State University has done it, USC has done it, Chipendale's nightclub in Los Angeles has done it, and now the University of San Diego has done it. What have they done?

Five enterprising students from Dr. Johanna Hunsaker's Management 101 class have put together a calendar of USD men.

The class assignment was to market a product of consumer interest, so the five came up with "The 1983 Men of USD Calendar."

According to Jerry Ralph, one of the calendar's producers, "it is selling like crazy on campus."

Each month has a different picture of a USD man. There is also a front and back cover, plus an additional month, for a grand total of 15 guys.

Two of the models are on the Catholic college's football team and a third is on the baseball team. The rest of the men are "Gentleman's Quarterly," intercollegiate type of guys," Ralph said.

So far, the producers have printed 1,000 calendars and have sold about half.

"We're at the break even point right now and we plan on showing a profit soon," Ralph said.

But these future businessmen and women aren't satisfied with simply selling the calendar at the USD bookstore. They want to branch out. They have contacted Seaport Village and Fashion Valley with hopes of marketing their calendar at those locations.

The group members who produced the calendar are Frank Buggelli, Trish Dougherty, Bradley Beavers and Christi Olsen, along with Ralph.

SENTINEL

DEC 8 1982

Information and enrollment forms for the University of San Diego's "mini university" are available by calling the USD Continuing Education office at 293-4585 or by writing to the office at USD, Alcala Park, San Diego, 92110.

This mini university is for persons over 55. University of the Third Age will be in session from Jan. 6 to Jan. 20 in the abbreviated version of the program which is offered each winter during USD's intersession period.

Tuition remains at $35. Participants must be able to provide their own transportation to and from the Linda Vista Road campus.

Classes will be held Monday through Thursday from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Each day will begin with an hour of physical exercise at the USD Sports Center followed by sessions in the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing.

The curriculum offers the wide range of topics which is the USA trademark, subjects such as "Young and Old Together: A New Curriculum," discussed by Rita King of the San Diego County Schools; "What's in a Handwriting?" by Jean McGuinness, graphologist; "Karl Marx and Leo XIII," by USD political science professor John Chambers; "Television and Politics: Who is Kidding Whom?" with James Hottis, USD associate professor of political science; a concert by Dick Braun and his jazz band.

Nineteen topics and the concert will be offered during the programming.

DEC 9 1982

USD Christmas Choral Festival Schedule Told

SAN DIEGO — The University of San Diego will present its annual Christmas Choral Festival on Dec. 10 and 11 at 8 p.m. in Founders Chapel, Founders Hall.

The concert, "A Festival of Lessons and Carols," is presented to the public free of charge. For information call 291-6480.

"A Festival of Lessons and Carols" features Christmas choral music by David Wilcocks, Ross Hastings and William Walton. The cantatas "Come Ye Shepherds to the Light" by Michael Haydn and "In Dulci Jubilo" by Dietrich Buxtehude will be sung by the USD Vocal Ensemble.

The groups are directed by USD faculty member Father Nicolas Reveles.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 9 1982

Victor E. Ramirez, Judge of the North County Municipal Court in Vista, was named Outstanding Jurist by the Law Alumni Association of the University of San Diego. Each year the Law Alumni Association honors three outstanding alumni in the fields of business/education, practitioner and jurist. Judge Ramirez was appointed to the bench in August 1980 and has been assigned to Division Two at the North County Municipal Court since January 1982 and will sit at the Escondido facility from January to June of 1983. He is a resident of Escondido and lives with his wife, Linda, and two children.

READER
DEC 9 1982

Kings Proceed

The Endless Christmas, 16mm, sound, technicolor: Once there were these two guys, actually there were three, and they were kings, so these three kings saw a star in the sky, and they set out on a quest to find the perfect Christmas concert.

They decided to start on Friday, December 10, at 8:00 p.m., with "A Festival of Lessons and Carols" at the University of San Diego's Founders Chapel (in Founders Hall). The excellent USD Choir and Vocal Ensemble, under the direction of Father Nicolas Reveles, would be performing choral music by David Wilcocks, Ross Hastings, William Walton, Michael Haydn (the cantata "Come Ye Shepherds to the Light"), and Dietrich Buxtehude ("In Dulci Jubilo"). They phoned 291-6480 for further information, and learned that the concert was free of charge and that it would be repeated in the same place on Saturday, December 11, at 8:00 p.m. — which was lucky, because the Friday night concert conflicted with another one.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

DEC 10 1982

Student banks on USD calendar men

By Stephanie Sansom
of The Daily Californian

Bradley, Byron and Anthony may replace the Tanyas, Candies and Michelles as the most drooled over pin-ups of 1983.

That, at least, is the hope of Fletcher Hills resident Jerry Ralph and his classmates at the University of San Diego.

Ralph and company are taking advantage of women's sudden interest in having exceptionally good-looking men like the three aforementioned USD students gazing from the leaves of a calendar.

Ralph predicts sales for the "1983 Men of USD Calendar," produced for a class assignment, will put Tom Selleck posters to shame.

Russ Caine, nattily dressed and leaning urbanely against a sports car, graces the cover of the calendar. He is followed by 14 (one on the back cover and one for January 1984) eye-catching collegiates ranging from August's scantily clad Dean Markus to January's dressed-for-the-slopes Bradley Beavers.

In their quest for a saleable item and a good grade in Business 101, Ralph and his team surveyed the 5,000-student campus and decided men's photos would sell more calendars than women's.

Ralph thinks that is partly because women, being modest, enjoy the waist-up shots featured in the calendar. Men's tastes in pin-ups demand a more daring display than the students thought they could safely get away with at the Catholic campus.

Hundreds of women submitted their choices for the best of the campus brawn.

"We contacted 26 men, hired a professional photographer and took pictures of all of them," said Ralph.

Of the 26 men contacted only three turned the business students down cold, and that was because they didn't want to risk embarrassment should the calendar turn out poorly. The other chosen students were surprised and flattered. Female classmates, however, worried about their men's heads getting swelled. "We do have a pretty small campus," said Ralph.

His production team shied away from the touchy job of choosing the finalists.

"We have our own personal biases," acknowledged Ralph, "so we had outside people like secretaries, women who work at Burger King and nurses give us their input."

The models turned out to be somewhat more self-conscious than their men-about-campus demeanor would lead buyers to

Gail Woyner/The Californian

Jerry Ralph of El Cajon and his classmates in a business course at University of San Diego have produced an all-male calendar they hope will earn them money and a good grade. The calendars feature male students at the Catholic university.

spect.

He and his classmates are negotiating to sell the calendars at Robinson's and The Broadway in Fashion Valley, and at Fascination in Seaport Village. There the USD models may be in competition with the likes of "Men of UCSD" and "Men of SDSU."

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

DEC 11 1982

Today

USD — The University of San Diego Orchestra conducted by Henry Kolar will perform "Ma Vlast" by Smetana at 8 p.m. in the Camino theater. For more information, call 291-6480.

San Diego, Monday, December 13, 1982 (2) THE TRIBUNE B-3

USD's male-pinup calendar bags Santa sales for class

By Joseph Thesken
Tribune Education Writer

One of the hottest sellers on the University of San Diego campus this Christmas season is a 1983 calendar displaying some of USD's most handsome male students.

It is the brainchild of a group of business students who created it as a project for their "Management and Organization" class.

"We printed up 1,000 of them, at $6.50 each, and sold them all," said Kristi Olsen, who, along with four other students, formed a corporation called Progressive Productions to market the calendar.

"Right now, we're into our second printing, and we're still getting orders."

Dr. Johanna Hunsaker, who gave her students the project to provide them with practical marketing experience to go with their classwork, said Olsen and her colleagues were successful because "everything was first-rate."

"They came up with a good idea, first of all," she said. "Then they conducted a survey through the school newspaper, asking the students to name the best looking men on campus."

"To be really sure of their choices, they asked other students around the campus, and even went off campus, to restaurants and shopping centers, to get the impartial views of outsiders."

They decided to make it a 13-month calendar, and use pictures on the front and back pages, as well as for each month. A commercial photographer was hired to take the pictures.

"We had no trouble getting the guys to pose," Olsen added. "I think they liked the idea."

"And the calendars have been selling like hot cakes."

Other projects by Hunsaker's students also showed imagination and a flair for business.

Gary Cunningham and his group sold painter hats because they were cheap to produce — about 44 cents a piece — and had a ready market among the students. They are white with the USD Toreros emblem on the visor.

"We ordered 1,000 and sold over 600 so far," Cunningham said. "We'll continue to sell them in the spring semester."

Bumper stickers with the motto, "Bankers Do It With Interest," was the creation of Rolf Kragerud's team.

"We had an international sales campaign," he said. "One of our group, Teresa Megnoia, is from Guam and her mother is a bank executive there. We sent her 400 of the stickers and she sold them all."

"We also sold them through contacts we have in San Francisco and New York. Here locally we had an outlet at Wells Fargo because Melissa Hayden, also in our group, works there."

Beer mugs, which have a special place among many university students, were marketed by Steve Calloway and his colleagues.

"Last year, they sold 10-ounce mugs, but we made them 12 ounces because that's the size of beer cans," he said. On the mugs is the inscription "Property of USD Beer Drinkers."

"We made up 400 of them, and so far have sold 180. At $4 a piece, we're almost breaking even. But we plan to keep on selling them until they're gone."

As in the business world, not all of the projects had happy endings.

Pauline Yuson and her team thought they had a good idea when they hit upon sports visors — the kind tennis players wear.

"They're made of Styrofoam, and we felt we'd make a profit by selling them at $1.50 each," she said. "But they're not selling. We don't know why. We're dropping them to $1 in the hope we at least break even."

Hunsaker said making a profit isn't the only criteria for a successful business venture by her students.

"If Pauline and her friends learned something from the experience, it was worth it," she said.

Hunsaker said she was pleased with the enthusiasm her students showed in developing their projects.

"It made everything I taught them in class practical, because they experienced it for themselves," she added.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 19 1982

— An enrichment-type mini-university called the University of the Third Age, is sponsored by the University of San Diego and will be in session from Jan. 6 to 20. Classes will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Mondays through Thursdays. Subjects include graphology, Karl Marx, television and politics, and 16 others. There is a fee of $35. Call the director of continuing education at 293-4585 for information and enrollment forms.

Page 18

SAN DIEGO BUSINESS JOURNAL

December 20, 1982

ENTERPRISE

Class project wears well for these students

By Bill Ritter

If college students learn more about life outside rather than inside the classroom — as is often suggested — then Charles Abdi and Mike McGuire are getting a grand education.

The two University of San Diego (USD) seniors have a captive audience for their Alcala Country Club line of men's and women's apparel, and they have managed to parlay a $300 investment last spring into a $14,000-per-semester business.

"We have no overhead — it's just our time," judged McGuire, a 22-year-old political science major who plans a stint at USD's law school next fall.

He and Abdi, a 22-year-old business administration major, formed their venture as part of an upper-division USD business management course designed to encourage entrepreneurially inclined students to apply their textbook lessons to real-world situations.

The enterprising twosome — after a "much-heated debate" about the type of business to enter — commenced their product line of polo shirts, hooded sweatshirts, visors, tote bags and long-sleeved T-shirts — all adorned with the USD coat-of-arms. Prices range from $10 to $20 per item. Short-sleeved T-shirts are verboten, said Abdi, because "that's not the country-club look."

With $300, the upstarts "mobilized the student body into believing that a demand for our product existed, therefore creating one, and so creating large profits, which were completely legitimated through the use of our (course) project, and our abundant donations to OxFam (a non-profit food relief fund)."

Abdi (l) and McGuire: Time well spent according to a report prepared by the students for their class. Indeed, a donation is made to OxFam for each item they sell on USD's Alcala Park campus.

The duo sets up shop on USD's Serra

Hall plaza three days per week, one to two hours per day. They also contract with a growing number of outside groups to market the logoed apparel off-campus.

This semester, on-campus sales have reached more than $6,200, while off-campus revenues total about $7,500. Profit margin is about 40 percent.

Revenues received a boost early in the semester after USD president Author Hughes posed for an advertisement touting the country club line. The ad, featuring Hughes attired in a polo shirt and armed with a golf club, appeared in the campus newspaper.

The Alcala Country Club is the most successful of a handful of small enterprises which have sprung from USD's Business 101 management class. Other ventures include bumper stickers, hats, and a "Men of USD Calendar," mimicking a fad on many college campuses.

"It's a good opportunity to learn about business," surmised Frank Bugelli, a 20-year-old junior who has sold half of his 1,000 calendar inventory. Each calendar sells for $6.50.

Despite an admittedly profitable return, Bugelli said that it is "hard being a student" in business. "You have to decide if meeting a representative from the Broadway is more important than studying."

But he is learning the ropes. Three weeks before Bugelli's calendar was due to hit the streets, a competitor arose. Bugelli decided to let USD students know that "another calendar was coming out" by holding a "pre-sale."

The university's fledgling capitalists also are learning the other side of profiteering.

"It's hard to legitimize profits on such a small campus," reflected McGuire. "People know we're the entrepreneurs on campus, but some people think we're ripping (them) off."

SENTINEL

DEC 22 1982

USD school of nursing is accredited

The Phillip Y. Hahn School of Nursing at the University of San Diego was awarded full accreditation for both its graduate and baccalaureate programs at a meeting of the board of review of the Department of Baccalaureate and Higher Degree Programs and National League for Nursing, held in mid-December.

USD was the first in the San Diego area to offer the master of science in nursing degree and is the only one in the community accredited by the National League of Nursing.

Accreditation is granted on the basis of more than 100 criteria which must be met in the areas of faculty, administration, curriculum, students and resources and facilities.

Registered Nurses may request information about the USD programs from Kathy Estey, director of admissions, University of San Diego, Alcala Park, San Diego, 92110.

USD athletics no moneymaker — and plans to stay that way

No national championship banners hang from the rafters, nor are supporters ardently pushing for the day it will happen.

Sports at the University of San Diego (USD) have grown in number — and especially in budget — over the past four years, but have remained firmly settled in what athletic director Father Patrick Cahill calls "the legitimate role of intercollegiate athletics." Even though that means that bragging rights are few and far between, no efforts are afoot to change the course at USD.

The role Cahill described is that of athletics as a component of the university's overall program, much like the history or accounting departments. As such, funding for athletics is handled through the school's main financial office, and not through a separate entity, as is often the case with the major colleges' athletics programs.

"The philosophy is that athletics are a vital part of the educational process," Cahill said. "This determines that we will fund it just like any other part of the school."

Also like the academic departments, sports at USD raise enough money to offset only a small fraction of their total costs; the difference is made up with money derived from tuition, fees and fundraising.

During this academic year, the athletic department will spend $1.3 million, nearly 70 percent of it going to the 15 intercollegiate sports fielded. This will be offset only by approximately $40,000 in fundraising activities and $70,000 in direct revenues, primarily sales and concessions. According to a recent study published by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), this places USD near the top of the expense list for schools with similar programs, but its income is much closer to the national average.

As is the case with many smaller schools, men's basketball is the leading light of the entire athletics program. It is the one team that has shown the ability to compete with high-caliber teams in a prominent sport, the one that could win a major national title.

Schools such as USD often concentrate on basketball because a team can be developed quickly, with only one or two top quality players spelling the difference between mediocrity and success, at a fraction of the cost of a full-fledged football effort.

USD has budgeted $235,000 for the team in this, its fourth year as a member of the West Coast Athletic Conference. Much of it goes to providing the 15 full scholarships allowed by the NCAA, although the travel budget for conference games as far away as eastern Washington has become a major line item.

continued on page 9

USD SPORTS

continued from page 1

Basketball is the one area, however, where potential financial rewards exist. Winning the conference championship would gain USD one of the 48 berths in the NCAA post-season tournament, earning the school $160,000. More money would flow with victories in successive rounds.

Though the rewards are not nearly as great, USD has boosted women's basketball to the second spot in the overall program, providing 12 full scholarships. Cahill noted that the next step would be to bring it to par with the men's team by carrying 15 scholarships, but that has not yet been set as a policy.

The lifeblood of most college athletics, football, holds a decidedly second status to basketball at USD, starting with its $62,000 budget.

Moreover, the school offers no scholarships, so those students who don the shoulder pads do so only for a love of the sport. "The team is made up of kids," Cahill said, "who played high school ball and who realize that they won't play big-time. Still, they want to play while they are in school."

The football team generated some excitement last year with a near-perfect record, but not enough to make a sizeable difference to the balance sheet. "We draw 3,000, maybe 4,000 max, to a game," Cahill said, "and of the 4,000, about 3,500 get in free. We don't charge the students, faculty and their families for tickets, so we don't expect to pay for any of the programs in (gate) revenues."

Nor is there any expectation of pushing football beyond its current low-key position. Not only could the operation of a major football program begin to crowd out the other sports, but also facilities would have to be significantly improved. University officials recently unveiled a major construction program that will include several buildings for academic purposes, but nothing for athletics.

Some even doubt the value of continuing football at its present level. "Football is just too expensive for our

December 20, 1982

SAN DIEGO BUSINESS JOURNAL

Page 9

USD's Cahill: 'We fund athletics like any part of the school'

Photograph by Joe Klein

small school," said Michael Eyer, an alumnus actively supporting athletics, who helped organize club football in the early 1970s. "We should probably have a lot more money to carry on a full-scale program."

Just as the money will not come from the ticket sales other schools rely on, neither is it likely that alumni contributions will become a major factor. This year, for instance, USD brought in $37,000 at its annual athletic fundraising dinner and several hundreds of dollars more from the baseball and basketball booster clubs, but very little else.

USD officials raise no great concerns about this level of giving, tiny in comparison with that of major schools. "We could probably use more money," said Jackson Muecke, the alumni director hired as an athletic fundraiser in 1978, "but we seem to be getting along with the money provided by the banquet."

Perhaps at the price of greater contributions, university officials seem intent on retaining control of what money that does come in. "We're not looking for the big boosters because we are really nervous about what happened at USF."

The University of San Francisco, like USD, a member of the West Coast Athletic Conference, completely dropped its basketball program last summer, despite a 60-year tradition that boasted numerous All-American players, play-off appearances, and two national championships. The university took the action following rule violations committed by USF boosters, including paying one player $1,000 per month for a job he never worked, and the tuition at an exclusive prep school for a high school star who promised to attend USF.

USD, on the other hand, insists that all contributions go through the main alumni office, and then officials try to persuade contributors to make the gifts general rather than aimed at a specific sport.

"I got the impression," said Cahill, "that USF became quite dependent on boosters and their income to run the program (which operated at a deficit). So, it became very important to win, however possible, in order to finance the program. They never really took firm control over the booster club situation."

Though run on a much tighter shoestring, Cahill called USD's situation "ideal, because we don't depend on anyone but the university. No one outside the university will have any influence over the hiring or firing of coaches. I can't remember the last time an alumnus has come in here to say what we should or shouldn't do in terms of the program or coaches."

Despite the relatively small scale of USD athletics, it represents a major expansion over the past decade.

When Author Hughes first became president of USD in 1971, he appointed a committee to study how to enhance athletics as a way of enhancing the prestige of a then-somnolent Catholic university. "Things never got too far," remembered one official, as concerns over academic stature and sagging general finances took precedence.

Athletics continued on a relatively low-priority course, despite a burgeoning basketball program, until the late 1970s, which saw the hiring of Muecke in 1978 and Cahill in 1979. At this point, the thrust changed to establishing USD as a Division I school, requiring at least six sports that compete against other schools at that level.

Concurrently, the money requirements began to grow. A department budget of $744,000 in 1979 has expanded to $1.26 million this year. Revenues multiplied at an even greater rate, from $20,000 in 1979 to $60,000 last year. The university accepted the bigger deficits as the price for the Division I status.

In addition, the legislation mandating equal support for women's sports, of which there are now four with scholarships, added a considerable load to the budget.

Division I status could become even more expensive should the NCAA require that its members field eight instead of just six sports at that level. USD likely would upgrade a crew team already in existence, plus start a rifle team from scratch.

But USD is reaching the stage where the major growth will halt, at least temporarily. Cahill explained, "I think now, at this point, we have increased the number of sports and increased the level of competition over the past five years. We are now at the point of trying to stabilize and improve the quality of what we have within the framework we have established."

But that framework could prove a major stumbling block. USD has held firmly to its academic standards when recruiting athletes, making it difficult to attract some top-quality athletes. "Someone could be a blue-chip athlete of the decade, but he would not be admitted if he did not meet the school's entrance standards. It makes it hard to compete, but I like the idea, although there is some frustration on the part of some of the coaches from time-to-time because of the difficulty of recruiting."

On the other hand, he noted, the coaches have much greater job security than at a school where the pressure to land top athletes, and win, is much greater.

B-2 THE TRIBUNE (2) San Diego, Monday, December 27, 1982

Candidacies open for model Senior Living

Candidate petitions are available for the California Senior Legislature, a model legislature that meets in Sacramento each year and works with the California Legislature to promote the passage of bills of interest to seniors. The deadline for petitions, which require 50 signatures, is Jan. 15. Candidates must be registered California voters, age 60 or older. Elected will be two senior senators, one from Supervisorial Districts 1, 4, and that portion of District 2 south of Interstate 8, and one from county supervisorial Districts 3, 5, and the portion of District 2 north of Interstate 8. One senior assemblyperson will be elected from each supervisorial district. Call 560-2500 for information. Registered voters older than 60 can vote in the election by mailing a signed post card or letter to the California Senior Legislature Election, P.O. Box 23555-2, San Diego, CA 92123. Include printed name, address, supervisorial district (if known), whether the residence is north or south of I-8 and the voter's signature. All voting will be by mail. The deadline for voting is March 16.

The winter session of the University of San Diego's University of the Third Age, a variety of exercise classes and lectures for those 55 and older, will meet at 10 a.m. Jan. 5 and 8:30 to noon Thursday through Monday, Jan. 6 through 10. Topics will include utility rate hikes; national, political and religious issues, tourism, science and finance. The fee is $35. Parking permits will be issued. Call 293-4585 for enrollment information.

EVENING TRIBUNE

DEC 1 1982

TOREROS PLAY TONIGHT — The University of San Diego Toreros, 1-1 on the basketball season, tackle UC-Irvine tonight in Irvine at 7:30.

DEC 1 1982

Los Angeles Times

Aztecs and USD on Road

From a Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Both San Diego State and the University of San Diego will be on the road for non-conference basketball games tonight.

San Diego State will shoot for its second straight win as it plays Cal State Long Beach, while USD tests UC-Irvine. Both games start at 7:30.

The Aztecs won their opener last Friday against San Francisco State, 75-58. Forward Michael Cage had a career-high 29 points and 18 rebounds.

USD raised its record to 1-1 Monday night by outlasting Northern Arizona in double overtime, 76-74. Robby Roberts had 16 points, 21 rebounds and made the game-winning bucket with four seconds remaining.

C-4 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

①

Wednesday, December 1, 1982

Toreros Tackle UC-Irvine In First Road Game

IRVINE — Like Willie Nelson, Jim Brovelli is on the road again, but the head basketball coach at the University of San Diego is not likely to break into song here tonight.

USD, 1-1 after dividing two-point decisions at home, must visit UC-Irvine at 7:30 and Brovelli is concerned as his team braces for its first road game of the season.

"We're not playing very well," the coach said. "With six new players, we knew we'd need awhile to come together, but we should be farther along than we are. We're not coordinated well as a unit at all, and because of that we're having problems at both ends of the floor."

The Toreros lost their opener to Air Force 49-47. Monday night they subdued Northern Arizona 76-74 in double overtime. Both times they staged last-minute rallies, but they would be well-advised to go full-speed from the opening tip tonight.

Irvine, which eliminated San Diego State from the National Invitation Tournament last season, is rebuilding. Only one starter returns from a club that finished 23-7. But the Anteaters had the West's best recruiting year, and they opened the current season with a 46-44 victory over Oregon Monday night in Anaheim.

Tonight's game will be played in cozy Crawford Hall on the UCI campus. It has 1,500 seats. A crowd of around 1,700 is expected. The Anteaters have lost only one game on campus since Bill Mulligan became their coach two years ago.

"It's going to be tough," Brovelli said. "They're in the same position we are, in the sense they're trying to break in a lot of new players. But they have some awfully good talent. They had one of the best recruiting years in the country, and when they get it going they're going to be something."

USD Comes Up Short

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

IRVINE — The University of San Diego came up a bit short last night — about two inches per man and 16 points.

The Toreros dropped a 79-63 decision to UC-Irvine. But the score was not a true indication of their game — by far USD's best of the three to date.

The only thing wrong was the Toreros' timing and physical stature.

UC-Irvine has become one of the premier basketball programs on the West Coast. Last year, it went 23-7 and eliminated San Diego State in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament.

With 12 minutes to play last night, USD was within five points of the Anteaters at 50-45. But, after point guard George Turner hit a three-point play, the hosts started taking full advantage of their 2½-inch-per-man height advantage. As quickly as the Toreros had climbed back into the contest, they were out of it.

"Tonight's the closest we've come to putting an entire game together," said USD coach Jim Brovelli after his club slipped to 1-2.

"We have a lot of new faces and they're not reading each other that well yet ... even with six weeks of practice melding into a unit takes time. But we didn't play a bad game tonight."

The No. 1 flaw in the Toreros' game remains shooting. USD shot just 34 percent from the floor and suffered through a 10-for-30 first half. Meanwhile, UCI was downing just over half their opportunities, including a sparkling 58.8 percent in the second half as the Anteaters went hard to their inside game and fast break.

Turner, who started at Texas as a freshman before transferring west, paced UCI with 18 points and eight assists. Forward Ben McDonald, the lone returning starter from last year's team and a force inside at 6-foot-9, scored 22 points and had seven rebounds while center Bob Thornton (another 6-9) had eight points and 10 rebounds.

Although decidedly shorter, USD came out of the game with a 43-42 edge in rebounds. Rebounding was one of many things USD did well. The Toreros also forced the hosts into 21 turnovers. Twelve times they intercepted passes. Forward Brian Setencich scored 12 points, had four rebounds, a blocked shot and three steals. As a unit, the Toreros played a solid floor game. But if you can't shoot the ball ...

TIMES-ADVOCATE
DEC 6 1982

Basketball: USD routs St. Thomas

• Forward Robby Roberts scored 20 points and had 12 rebounds Sunday night to pace the University of San Diego to a 79-54 nonconference basketball victory over St. Thomas (Minn.). The Toreros, who had trailed 27-30 at halftime, rallied in the second half to pull away. Rick Davis added 18 points for San Diego, which is now 2-2.

• The Golden State Warriors signed Larry Kenon, a veteran NBA player, as a free agent Sunday and waived second-year forward Hank McDowell. Kenon, a 6-foot-9 forward with nine seasons of pro basketball behind him, was released by the Chicago Bulls recently.

LOS ANGELES TIMES
DEC 6 1982

Toreros Victors, 79-54

From a Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Robby Roberts' 20 points and 12 rebounds and Rick Davis' 18 points led the University of San Diego to a 79-54 victory over St. Thomas College Sunday night at USD. The game was tied, 42-42, midway through the second half when USD scored seven consecutive points to break it open.

St. Thomas forward Jay Johnson scored 16 first-half points to give the Toms a 30-27 lead at the half. Johnson finished with 22 to pace St. Thomas. Forward Anthony Reuss poured in 11 points and John Prunty chipped in 10 for USD.

USD (2-2), returns to action tonight against Doane College of Nebraska. Tipoff is at 7:30 p.m. at USD.

EVENING TRIBUNE
DEC 2 1982

Toreros' cold hand leads to 79-63 defeat

IRVINE — The University of San Diego basketball team did almost everything right last night ... except put the ball through the basket. Result: A 79-63 loss to tough UC-Irvine.

The Toreros shot only 34 percent from the field (25 of 73) to tarnish a performance that included a 43-42 rebounding edge, 21 forced turnovers and 12 intercepted passes.

"Tonight's the closest we've come to putting an entire game together," said Coach Jim Brovelli of the 1-2 Toreros. "We have a lot of new faces, and they're not reading each other that well yet."

The visitors, despite making only 10 of 30 field-goal attempts, kept it close in the first half, trailing only 28-25 with 3½ minutes to go, when the Anteaters launched an 8-2 scoring spurt to take a 36-27 lead at the intermission.

USD never drew closer than five points in the second half. It was 50-45 with 12 minutes to play, at which point the taller Anteaters (an average height advantage of 2½ inches) started pulling away.

Ben McDonald led the balanced Irvine attack with 22 points as the Anteaters extended their record to 2-0. George Turner, Ted Beardsley and Ted Murphy also were in double figures, with 18, 15 and 10, respectively.

Brian Setencich was high man for USD with 12 points and John Prunty had 10.

UC-Irvine defeats USD

Compiled by The Daily Californian

IRVINE — The University of San Diego had a tall order here Wednesday. Too tall where the Toreros were concerned. They simply were outmanned while dropping a 79-63 decision to UC-Irvine.

The Anteaters, who were 23-7 last season and defeated San Diego State in the National Invitation Tournament, sported a 2½-inch per man height advantage against the Toreros.

Forward Ben McDonald, Irvine's lone returning starter, led all scorers with 22 points. Center Bob Thornton added eight points and 10 rebounds.

Ben Setencich led USD with 12 points. Former East County athletes Mike Whitmarsh of Monte Vista and Anthony Reuss of El Cajon Christian scored six points each for the Toreros, who fell to 1-2.

The Toreros were only outrebounded 43-42, but hit on just 34 percent of their shots from the field. USD trailed by only five (50-45) with 12 minutes remaining in the game before the Anteaters went on a tear and pulled away.

EVENING TRIBUNE

DEC 6 1982

USD, DOANE TANGLE — Coming off a decisive victory last night, the University of San Diego basketball team will try to make it two in a row at 7:30 tonight when they play host to the Doane College Tigers.

The Toreros defeated St. Thomas College of Minnesota 79-54 to even its record at 2-2. Robby Roberts paced the Toreros with 20 points, 14 in the second half, 12 boards and four assists. Senior guard Rich Davis canned 15 points for USD.

San Diego State University teams broke even over the weekend, the men whipping Prairie View A&M 105-83 in the Sports Arena and the women bowing to University of Utah 87-77 in Salt Lake City.

C-4 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

②

Monday, December 6, 1982

Toreros Rebound After Sluggish First Half, Roll 79-54

By HANK WESCH
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

The San Diego Union / Jim Skovmand

John Prunty of USD has nowhere to go against Jon Valsvik of St. Thomas last night.

The University of San Diego basketball team exhibited a kind of split personality in the two halves of its contest with St. Thomas College last night at the Toreros' gym.

In the first half USD was outshot, outrebounded and outthrust by the scrappy Toms from St. Paul, Minn., and consequently outscored 30-27. In the second half, however, the Toreros made a transformation from aggressed to aggressors and pulled away in the final 10 minutes for a 79-54 victory that leveled USD's record at 2-2.

Afterward, there was no confusion in USD coach Jim Brovelli's mind over whether he'd prefer the company of the first-half Dr. Jekylls or second-half Mr. Hydes for the rest of the season.

"In the first half we played the way we have for the last three games," said Brovelli. "We were very tentative, passive, like we were thinking about what has been happening to us lately."

"In the second half we started playing better defense and that loosened us up to play better at the other end. The second half was the best we've played since we started."

There were various opinions of who was the catalyst for the USD transformation. Senior guard Rich Davis, who scored 14 of his 18 points in the second half, thought it was Brovelli's halftime message.

"He told us we were dogging it and we had better get it together," said Davis. "We were kind of playing tentative. If we had the open shot we wouldn't take it looking for something better. When you're open, you've got to shoot."

Davis did, hitting a pair of 20-foot jumpers in an eight-point USD burst that brought the Toreros from 36-30 in arrears two minutes into the second half to a 38-36 lead with 15 minutes remaining.

St. Thomas, led by sharp-shooting 6-4 forward Jay Johnson, didn't crumble easily and stayed with the larger Toreros in the next five minutes to lead 44-43 with 10 minutes to play.

But USD guard John Prunty knocked in a 14-foot jumper from the right side with 9:30 to play and 6-7 forward Robby Roberts took charge from there. Roberts scored 14 of his USD-leading 20 points after the Toreros went in front as USD dominated the final minutes both offensively and defensively.

Roberts, who also led USD in rebounds (12), assists (4) and blocked shots (2) said the second half motivation was basic.

"We were losing," the senior from Los Angeles said. "We had been a click behind ourselves in the first half and we knew it was time to wake up and play ball. With all the new guys we have this year we haven't had our timing down and we need games like this to do it."

"Maybe with the way we played in the second half, we've finally come together."

Sophomore forward Anthony Reuss (11) and Prunty (10) also hit double figures in scoring for USD. St. Thomas' Johnson was the top scorer for the game with 22 points, all but two of them on 10 for 20 shooting mostly on medium-range jumpers.

USD shot 44 per cent (12 of 27) in the first half, but even that figure wasn't encouraging considering almost all the attempts were from close range as the Toreros were able to work the ball inside well.

"We got the shots we wanted, we just didn't do anything constructive with them," said Brovelli.

In the second half the Toreros hit 18 of 28 (64 percent) as their aggressive man-to-man defense helped produce 11 St. Thomas turnovers. "Right now, our man-to-man is better than our zone, and we'll probably stay with it," said Brovelli.

The Toreros jump into action tonight against what Brovelli figures will be a tougher test, Doane College of Crete, Neb. "They're one of the better NAIA schools and they've got a 6-9 center (Steve Bartek) who's a very strong player," said Brovelli.

The Mr. Hyde team may be called for.

C-4 THE TRIBUNE

San Diego, Tuesday, December 7, 1982

Toreros find visitors nice diet, add Doane as victim

By Rick Davis
Tribune Sportswriter

It happens every year about this time, as much a signal of the rainy season as the nip in the evening air and the falling leaves. Once again, a couple of friendly adversaries from the Midwest have come to town to sample the sunshine and test the basketball competition.

Sunday night, St. Thomas (Minn.) made its University of San Diego stop on a West Coast basketball junket. Last night, Doane College (Neb.) called on the same Toreros as part of a three-week sojourn that doesn't conclude until the Tigers play three games against teams in Hawaii next week.

Fortunately for the Toreros, both nights have turned out just spiffy. First, they handled St. Thomas 79-54, then, with a bit more huffing and puffing, managed to turn away Doane 75-71 before a modest gathering of about 300 in the USD Sports Center.

"That's a pretty good NAIA team. Boy, they could really shoot," said a relieved USD Coach Jim Brovelli after his team had parlayed its own 59 percent field-goal shooting into a third victory in five starts this season.

"Our first half was not a bad effort at all. The second half was pretty much an exchange of baskets until the end when we hurt ourselves with turnovers as much as anything. This team may have jelled a little tonight, but I still don't know where it's going."

Those measured remarks make sense when one considers that the Midwestern visitors, after trailing by at least 10 points most of the second half, woke up to trim the deficit to 72-69 with 2:02 left in the game. Their failure to score in three subsequent possessions then ruined the comeback.

"Besides putting ourselves in a hole in the first half that we had to crawl out of, that was the other key to the game. We played well, applying pressure and cashing in turnovers, to narrow the gap but, then when we got within three, we couldn't score. I felt we could have won the game in the last two minutes until that happened," noted Doane Coach Bob Erickson.

The loss to USD, which is an NCAA Division I school in basketball, dropped his club's record to 6-3, a statistic it won't be favored to improve on tonight at 7:30 against host San Diego State (3-0). There's also the matter of a third game in three nights, that one tomorrow night at UC-Santa Barbara.

Doane plays Aztecs

"We're out of the frying pan and now we get the fire," judged Erickson. "I saw San Diego State play Prairie View Saturday night. There's an awful lot of talent there and it's playing well as a team, too. What concerns me the most about them? Everything."

One should understand that many NAIA teams such as Doane (which has a student enrollment of 700) take a realistic tact when scheduling intersectional games against Division I opponents.

"We have to schedule some Division I schools to get the bigger financial guarantees that pay for the trip," he explained. "And if our kids do a decent job and come away having learned something from playing these kinds of teams, it's a good experience. It helps us when we go back and play our own league schedule."

On this occasion, his Tigers actually made more field goals (33-32) than the Toreros, but were doomed in the final minutes by their own missed shots and intentional fouls which sent the winners to the free-throw line.

Presented with such charity, the Toreros didn't exactly go for the jugular. Mike Whitmarsh made 1 of 3, Bill Penfold 1 of 2 and John Prunty 1 of 2 in the final 1:23.

"I didn't realize we missed that many of those last free throws," admitted Brovelli. "You don't win with a first-half lead. It's a 40-minute game and you've got to sustain the effort."

Individually, USD's best efforts came from two seniors, guard Rich Davis, who made 9 of 10 field goal attempts and finished with 19 points, and center Robby Roberts, who was 8 of 9 from the field and had 17 points. Game honors went to Doane's Russ Hansen. He hit 13 of 26 field goal tries and finished with 29 points.

"Russ is a three-year starter and he had 33 points last season against Boise State," remembered Erickson. "But he doesn't usually hit as well from outside as he did tonight. You know, none of these kids will end up in the NBA, but a few off the team will end up as doctors and lawyers. And that's all right, too."

Doane right it is, coach.

THE TURNOVER FILE — Brovelli has dropped 6-foot-9 prize freshman Mike Davis from the squad for disciplinary reasons ... despite starting Hansen and Roger Sunderman, both 6-3, at forwards, the Tigers had a 37-26 rebound advantage ... Rich Davis suffered a sprained ankle when he was fouled driving for the basket with 1:36 left ... USD shot better on field goals (59 percent) than free throws (52 percent).

DEC 3 1982

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

USD BASKETBALL/ The University of San Diego will host St. Thomas College of St. Paul, Minn. (3-2) in a non-conference basketball game Sunday at 7:30 p.m. The Toreros are 1-2, coming off Wednesday's 79-63 loss at UC Irvine. Two East County athletes are expected for the Toreros. Six-foot-6 junior Mike Whitmarsh, a product of Monte Vista and Grossmont College, averages 8.7 points and four rebounds per game. Whitmarsh injured a hip in a first-half fall at Irvine, but managed to play again in the second half. USD officials say Whitmarsh is still sore and his status is questionable for Sunday. El Cajon Christian graduate Anthony Reuss, a 6-7 sophomore, will start at the other forward. Reuss is averaging 4.3 points and 3.7 rebounds through three games. USD hosts 6-1 Doane College of Crete, Neb. Monday night at 7:30.

SAN DIEGO UNION
DEC 5 1982

USD AT HOME

The University of San Diego will be looking for a shooting touch that has been largely absent thus far when the Toreros take on St. Thomas College of St. Paul Minnesota tonight at 7:30 at the USD gym.

Coach Jim Brovelli's USD team has experienced shooting difficulty in a 1-2 season to date and connected on just 34 per cent from the floor in a loss to UC Irvine 79-63 in its last outing.

Tonight's game is the first of three in five days for USD. The Toreros take on Doane College tomorrow night, and then meet cross-town rival San Diego State on Thursday.

SURROUNDED — Doane College players Jim Hubner, Don Stefensmeier and Alan Slodek, from left, apply defensive pressure on USD's Rich Davis during last night's basketball game in USD gym. Toreros held on for a 75-71 victory. — Photo by Bob Ivins

DEC 7 1982

Toreros Survive Fade, Win 75-71

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Typically, by this stage of the basketball season, University of San Diego coach Jim Brovelli has developed a feel for his Torero club. He knows its strengths and weaknesses, can plot victories and losses.

That's typically. This, however, is not a typical season. "I've got no feel for this club yet," Brovelli said last night after the Toreros survived a late fade to score a second straight victory over a NCAA Division II university, beating Doane College of Nebraska 75-71 at USD Sports Center.

"I know we have to work more... play more defense," Brovelli said. "We still haven't sustained an effort for 40 minutes... played a total game. But we're progressing. That's important."

Sparked by the play of point guard Rich Davis, who scored 19 points and had six assists before leaving late in the second half with a sprained ankle, and forwards Robbie Roberts and Brian Setencich, the Toreros led all the way and improved to 3-2 by stopping a club blessed by some fine perimeter shooters and tenacious offensive rebounders.

Yet after trailing by 10 points as early as 3½ minutes into the game, there were the 6-3 Tigers, running off eight straight points in a 48-second span to pull to three behind at 72-69 with 2:02 to play.

Although the Toreros scored just three of eight possible points from the foul line in the final minute, USD turned on enough defense to stem the tide.

Now the Toreros take a giant step in competition. After Doane plays San Diego State tonight, the Toreros take on the Aztecs Thursday in the Sports Arena in the annual match of crosstown rivals.

"San Diego State is going to be the best team we've played so far by far," Brovelli said. "If we don't at least contain them somewhat on the boards, we're in trouble... it will be over early."

Setencich played his best game of the year last night and scored 12 points. Forward Mike Whitmarsh had a strong first half. Davis hit nine of 10 shots and showed signs of hitting the 15-footer with regularity. Roberts powered his way to 8-of-9 shooting and pulled in eight rebounds to go with his 17 points.

"We're getting there," Brovelli said. "It takes time. We have flaws. We have not done a good job rebounding

The San Diego Union / Bob Ivins

Robby Roberts of USD brings down a rebound last night against Doane College.

(Doane out-rebounded 37-26 last night). We could have done a better job defensively. But Doane is good."

The Tigers had three fine shooters in 6-3 forward Russ Hansen (29 points, 13 of 26 from the floor), 6-8 center Steve Bartek (all 16 points and nine rebounds in the second half against a season average of 21 points a game) and 6-3 forward Roger Sunderman (14 points). "They can shoot," Brovelli said.

Meanwhile, the Toreros have lost one of the brightest recruits of recent years. Six-foot-nine freshman center Mike Davis from Chico has left the squad for disciplinary reasons. He will not return.

DEC 7 1982

Los Angeles Times

Toreros Struggle Past Doane

By STEVE DOLAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The basketball season is five games old now. For University of San Diego Coach Jim Brovelli, his team is still as much a mystery as before the season.

The Toreros won their game Monday night by outlasting Doane College, 75-71, in a game that didn't figure to be so close. But the visiting Tigers, a Division II team, almost made desire win out over talent.

After just three minutes and 37 seconds, USD had a 10-point lead. Instead of a blowout, it nearly turned into a blown game for the somewhat stunned Toreros.

So just how good is USD at this point?

"I don't have any idea," Brovelli said. "We have to work harder and play better defense. We do well in spurts, not for 40 minutes."

Following the quick start, USD had its lead cut to one point midway through the half. By halftime, the Toreros had built a 41-23 cushion.

In retrospect, Brovelli praised his team's first half and admitted disappointment in the second half. He also conceded that the early 10-point lead was a bit misleading.

"You never win a game that early," Brovelli said. "You have to sustain an effort for 40 minutes. We still haven't done that."

Through most of the second half, the Toreros had a comfortable lead. But Doane scored eight straight points late in the game, cutting the margin to 72-69 with two minutes to play.

Down the stretch, USD had plenty of chances to put the game away. However, the Toreros kept it close by making just three of their final eight free throws.

After missing the front end of a one-and-one, Mike Whitmarsh hit one of two free throws with 53 seconds left. Bill Penfold made the score 74-69 by making one of two free shots with 13 seconds remaining.

Doane scored with five seconds remaining, cutting the lead to three points. John Prunty then was successful on one of two free throws.

The Toreros were unable to make it a rout partly because of hot outside shooting by Doane. Russ Hansen of Doane, who led all scorers with 29 points, hit four straight shots from 20-foot range midway through the second half.

"We were a little flat the second half," Brovelli said. "Don't take anything away from Doane. They had great offensive punch."

Guard Rich Davis paced USD with 19 points, 13 coming the first half. He had to leave the game because of a sprained ankle with 1:36 to play.

Forward Robby Roberts also played a dominating first half, scoring 13 points. He finished with 17 points and a team-leading eight rebounds. Brian Setencich added 12 points.

The Toreros shot 59 percent from the floor, Doane 46 percent. However, the Tigers controlled the boards, 37-26.

"We have to do a better job of screening people out," Brovelli said. "Still, we have outrebounded almost everyone so far. We have to do a better job Thursday night or the game will be over quick."

USD will play crosstown rival San Diego State Thursday night at the Sports Arena. Doane plays the Aztecs tonight at Peterson Gym.

DEC 9 1982

D-6 THE TRIBUNE (2) San Diego, Thursday, Dec

SMOKEY GAINES
'Goliath's' coach?

JIM BROVELLI
'David's' coach?

*Poliquin

Continued From Page D-1

They will give away, for instance, an average of two inches and 12 pounds per man underneath and a few miles per hour to the State guards out front. And as far as depth goes, well, Brovelli waved good-bye to four starters and seven seniors at graduation last spring while the Aztecs' Smokey Gaines was recruiting his way into some Top 20 polls.

But these people at USD simply don't seem to care. They don't recognize that thing hanging off the end of the rope in front of them as a noose. Rather, the Toreros are looking upon it as a swing and are eager to take a ride just as they did last year when they dragged the University of San Francisco, with Wallace Bryant and Quintin Dailey, into overtime before losing up in the Bay Area.

"I don't have a magic wand," Brovelli said. "I tell the guys not to look in the paper. I tell them to look at themselves. I expect them to be competitive. I tell them to respect our opponents, but not to fear them. We teach them to execute. Do that, I tell them, and you can win."

Despite such advice, they couldn't defeat Air Force at home, they lost to UC-Irvine up north and they trailed St. Thomas College

"Of course, I expect to win the game. I think when we're playing our game, we are a very impressive team"

— USD's Robby Roberts

of Minnesota at the half. Indeed, the Toreros will stroll into the Sports Arena tonight at a shaky 3-2 to State's overpowering 4-0. But their concern, even in the face of the fact that the USD starting five will walk onto the floor with a composite rebounding average that is only 2.3 boards greater than Cage's 17.0 individual norm, is conspicuous by its absence.

"I saw Cage on the highlights on TV," Prunty said, "and he looked good. But even I look good on the highlights."

"Of course, I expect to win the game," Roberts said. "I think when we're playing our game, we are a very impressive team."

These Toreros, simply, are funny. Maybe they are like McGovern's camp, or the citizenry of Johnstown, or Randall Cobb. Maybe so. But they seem to think that their clinical zeal makes them something else again. They seem to think they are an iceberg. And that San Diego State is this town's basketball Titanic.

— Compiled by Tim Hubbard

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 9 1982

Aztec Cagers Meet USD In Annual Clash

COLLEGE BASKETBALL: USD Toreros at San Diego State Aztecs, Sports Arena, 7:30 p.m.

It may be David vs. Goliath, but don't tell USD

Maybe McGovern and his people were saying the same kinds of things on the eve of the '72 election. Or perhaps the good folks of Johnstown likewise shrugged when they felt the water rushing into their cuffs. Maybe, as he ambled down the Astrodome runway last month, Randall Cobb really did come to believe.

The odds. So who cares about the odds? Or about being an underdog? When you're down, baby, you learn to laugh at the Chicken Littles. Ya simply gotta believe. Because if you don't, nobody else will.

"If we do what we're supposed to do," Jim Brovelli said yesterday, "if we execute, hold our own on the boards and hit our shots, we can win. Definitely. If we do all of that, yes, we can win the game."

It's time for David and Goliath II. For Custer to saddle up and mosey on down to the Little Big Horn one more time. For some dumb pilgrim to challenge the Duke.

It's time for the itty, bitty university of san diego toreros to challenge THE BIG, BAD SAN DIEGO STATE UNIVERSITY AZTECS in the 18th renewal of the annual intricacy college basketball clambake. But, despite the numbers, despite the records and despite the measurements — all of which suggest that this is Liston-Patterson all over again — the people at USD have no intention of climbing aboard the spit inside the Sports Arena tonight beginning at 7:30.

They have looked at State and admired, sure. They have, certainly, reflected upon their 4-13 lifetime record against the Aztecs. But then, to a certain degree, they have scoffed. Crazy, huh?

"Appearance wise, they certainly are impressive," admitted Torero center Robby Roberts of the Aztecs. "If you took a team picture of the two teams, we'd be in the front row and they'd be lined up in the back, towering over us. They've got Leonard Allen at 6-foot-11, Michael Cage at 6-9, and the rest of them, I'm 6-7, and our tallest guy is... is... Let me see... You know something? I think it's me.

"But basketball is a game of structure and rules, and if you use the structure and the rules right, you can win. I don't think they're any better than us. Better PR, maybe. But not in the other way. We played them tough last year. Real tough. We had them beat, but we beat ourselves."

Indeed, a season ago, State managed to crawl away with a 41-36 victory, but only after enduring a night of carefully controlled t-e-d-i-u-m by USD, which slowed the Aztecs from their usual 78 rpm game to 33 rpm.

"We had the ball and were three down with less than a minute to play," remembered Brovelli, the Toreros' fundamentalist coach and chief technician. "We were taking the ball out at midcourt, and if we make the basket, who knows? You're down only one with 30 or 40 seconds to play and anything can happen."

But the regimented Toreros, who play the game by precisely and methodically connecting the dots from buzzer to buzzer, who approach their game as Bobby Fischer does his, threw the ball away, and thus the game, on the in-bounds pass — an act they usually commit only in alternating semesters. And, in such a way, by the margin of a breakdown here and there, did the mouse fail to roar.

A point was made, however. USD, which will be the shorter, slower, smaller team within the Sports Arena walls tonight ("You can't slip the Sunday newspaper under my jump shot," said guard John Prunty), has the capacity to nip at the corners just enough to get ahead on the count. The Toreros, as the Aztecs will come to discover this evening, are like the girl who is a bit shy on looks, but long on personality.

Please see POLIQUIN, D-6

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 9 1982

Aztecs, USD Set For Tipoff

By HANK WESCH
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Standing at the luncheon lectern, David "Smokey" Gaines looked to his left where Jim Brovelli was seated.

The subject was tonight's renewal — 7:30 at the Sports Arena — of the basketball rivalry between San Diego State University and the University of San Diego.

The glint in Gaines' eye and his unrestrained smile clued assembled sports media types that the SDSU coach was about to unleash some outrageous rhetoric on his USD counterpart.

"Jim's been quoted as saying he has the best team since he has been there and the games we've played before have all been very close," said Gaines, readying the needle.

A short jab. "It's always good to play a crosstown rival — as long as you win."

And eventually the needle flashed. "I think Jim will come out and play basketball this time, he won't hold the ball this year."

When his turn arrived, Brovelli parried the thrust: "We've never stalled — call it all control, patience, controlling the tempo whatever you like — we were always looking to score."

But there was no riposte.

"We're struggling right now," said Brovelli. "We've played well in parts of games, but not for a full 40 minutes, and San Diego State will be the best team we've played so far..."

"I know Smokey was concerned about Michael Cage not making all-league last year. After seeing Michael play this year I don't think Smokey has to worry about all-league. He's going to be All-America..."

"We can't match up with Cage. We can't match up with Leonard Allen. We've got to do a job of screening those two away from the boards or they'll be playing volleyball up at the basket. If we rebound like we did (Monday) against Doane (College), the game will be over in the first five minutes."

The good-natured verbal jousting over, the coaches will repair to the benches tonight and leave matters largely to the athletes. David to his Goliaths, the 4-0 Aztecs. Gentleman Jim to his unheralded 3-2 Toreros.

But one more word from Gaines: "We think we should get more fans than we have. We'd like to see 7,000 to 8,000 turn out."

The Aztecs lead the overall series between the schools 11-5. USD's last victory came in 1976-77 when the Toreros were still NCAA Division II affiliates. Since 1979 — when USD stepped up to Division I, Gaines took over at SDSU and the rivalry was resumed after a two-year break — the Aztecs are 3-0.

Neither the victory margins nor the attendance has been expansive. The results were 78-67 (overtime) in 1979 before 4,617; 60-52 in front of 3,092 in '80 and 41-36 before 3,612 last year.

The Aztecs will have a physical advantage in the frontcourt with the 6-9, 225-pound Cage; 6-6, 210-pound Eddy Gordon and 6-10, 215-pound Allen opposite USD's 6-6, 200-pound Mike Whitmarsh, 6-6, 215-pound Brian Setencich and 6-7, 200-pound Robbie Roberts.

Cage carries a 23-point scoring average and 17-rebound average, and Allen's 16.3-point average has been built with back-to-back 22-point efforts against Prairie View and Doane. Gordon's average is eight points per game.

Roberts leads the USD frontliners with an 11.8-point average and leads the team in rebounding with 9.4 per contest.

LEMON GROVE
REVIEW
DEC 9 1982

Aztecs, USD in Hoop Game at Sports Arena

The Aztecs cagers, unbeaten in 4 games, meets the University of S.D. in cross-town rivalry tonight at the Sports Arena.

The game starts at 7:35. Saturday, the Aztecs will be in Eugene for a game at the U. of Oregon.

SDSU leads the all-time series with USD 11-5. The last USD victory was in 1976, 67-63. Last year the Aztecs won in a slow, defensive game 41-36.

Last week the Aztecs stayed unbeaten by defeating Cal State-Long Beach on the road 93-80 and Prairie View A&M in San Diego 105-83.

The Oregon game will be shown live on KUSI-TV ch 51 in San Diego. All Aztec games are broadcast live on KSDO (1130). Ron Reina does the play-by-play.

USD Tough, But Aztecs Prevail 47-45

By HANK WESCH
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Everybody knew the University of San Diego basketball team had no chance against San Diego State in the annual meeting of the cross-town rivals last night.

But entering the final 10 seconds of play before 4,058 Sports Arena witnesses the Toreros were only one point behind, had the ball, and seemingly an excellent chance of handing the Aztecs their first loss of the season.

It didn't happen, but oh what a lovely finish there was to San Diego State's 47-45 victory, its fifth straight of the year.

The Aztecs fought an uphill battle in a contest in which USD dictated the tempo and strategy and led by as many as nine points five minutes into the second half. Not until 2:38 remained, when Eddy Gordon scored after rebounding a missed shot by teammate Anthony Watson, did San Diego State move in front for the first time in the contest, 46-45.

And at that point SDSU coach Smokey Gaines took his team out of its man-to-man defense into a zone and was content to let USD run down the clock for an anticipated final shot.

"Once you've got the lead, they've got to come to you. Why should you go to them?" asked Gaines.

After working the ball well away from the basket until the 10-second mark approached, the Toreros, specifically 6-0 guard Rich Davis, came to the Aztecs on a drive.

There was body contact between Davis and Aztec guard Keith Smith, with the USD player ending up on the seat of his pants. Official Craig Peterson charged Davis with traveling, the wisdom of the call subject to location of one's loyalties.

"He tried to drive by me, his foot hit mine and he went down," was the Aztec version presented by Smith. "It was a good call."

"I was definitely tripped," contended Davis, "I was already around him and he stuck his knee in and knocked my leg out from under me. It's just one of those bad breaks."

Fouled after receiving the inbound pass, Smith made the first of two free throws in a bonus situation to give the Aztecs their 47-45 advantage with seven seconds left, but USD still had one last shot at tying.

After USD forward Mike Whitmarsh rebounded Smith's missed free throw and Davis brought the ball upcourt, Don Capener was open on the left side for an 18-foot jumper at the buzzer. The shot was long, bouncing off the back of the rim, and USD took its third loss in six games.

Fanciers of slam-dunk, 100-point, in-your-face basketball may have come away from the contest disappointed, but it certainly didn't lack for emotion or drama.

(Continued on C-6, Col. 1)

C-6 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

①

Friday, December 10, 1982

Aztecs Overcome Deliberate Toreros For Fifth Straight

(Continued from C-1)

USD went in front at the outset via some timely outside shooting by Capener and unexpectedly strong inside play by frontliners Whitmarsh, Brian Setencich and Robby Roberts against SDSU's towering twosome of 6-9 Michael Cage and 6-10 Leonard Allen.

USD played with reckless abandon on defense and commendable poise on offense to come away with a 30-25 lead at halftime.

The Toreros scored the first four points of the game on a layup by Whitmarsh and an 18-foot jump shot by Capener and while the Aztecs trimmed the lead to a single point on three occasions, they could never get ahead.

The San Diego Union/Peter Koelmann

USD's Tony Reuss goes up for two despite the odds as the Aztecs converge on him.

San Diego State could hit on only three of its first 12 shots, and USD did surprisingly well with Whitmarsh, Setencich and Roberts challenging Cage and Allen near the basket.

The Torero front line showed no timidity about going up against the Aztecs inside, and when not taking the direct shot, worked several nice passes to teammates for lay-ins.

A pair of layups by Setencich sandwiched around one by Whitmarsh gave the Toreros six straight points and a 14-7 lead with 12:39 remaining, and USD increased the margin another two points at 23-19 with 4:15 left.

SDSU applied full-court pressure in the final five minutes to trim the margin back to the halftime one. "They got 16 points in the first half in the lane, they were working their back-door plays well and we weren't getting enough weakside help," said Gaines. "But we made some adjustments at halftime, and they didn't do that in the second half."

The Toreros enjoyed their biggest advantage of the second half at 38-29 when Davis hit a 15-foot jumper with 15:30 to play. The Aztecs started to whack away at the lead at that point as Cage made a pair of free throws, Smith a jumper and freshman guard Anthony Watson a short jumper before USD scored again.

The San Diego Union/Peter Koelmann

USD's Robby Roberts finds himself in a duel for the ball with Aztecs Eddy Gordon (left) and Bobby Owens.

The Daily Californian

Sports

Gordon proves a point as Aztecs get lucky

Ron Dipping/for The Californian

Aztecs' Eddy Gordon (left) and Bobbie Owens put the squeeze on USD's Robbie Roberts.

By Dennis Wynne
of The Daily Californian

Eddy Gordon doesn't usually score a lot of points for the San Diego State basketball team. His high game at SDSU is 24. Only in his freshman season, when he averaged 13.1 points per game, has he averaged in double figures.

When Gordon scores, it's usually a memorable occasion. A little nod of the head, a quick point toward the basket, and Gordon gets airborne for a slam-dunk off an alley-oop pass. It just wouldn't be an Aztec game without at least one Gordon stuff.

Thursday's contest against the University of San Diego definitely wasn't an Aztec game. At least not until the final few minutes. SDSU, which trailed for more than 37 minutes, rallied in the waning moments to defeat the Toreros 47-45 at the Sports Arena in front of a crowd of 4,058.

Gordon netted just four points in the contest, but they were important points. His basket with 7:49 unplayed, a three-foot bank shot off a rebound, knotted the contest at 44-44. Five minutes later, after USD's Don

2B The Daily Californian □ East San Diego County, California

□ Friday, December 10, 1982

B

Capener had hit one of two free throws to give the Toreros a 45-44 advantage, Gordon tipped in a rebound to give the Aztecs their first lead of the night.

"I wasn't hitting a lot, but I kept shooting," said Gordon, who made just two of eight field goals. "I knew I was cold so I tried to do other things, to get rebounds and play the good defense. I got beat a couple of times on defense on back-door plays, but I was happy with the way I rebounded."

Gordon hauled down seven rebounds. Considering his two baskets came off caroms, he did indeed get to the boards at key times.

"A lot of people think scoring is everything, but I know it isn't," added Gordon.

Scoring was few and far between at times Thursday. USD, with its deliberate offense, frustrated the run-and-gun Aztecs. Sometimes the Toreros would hold the ball for 30 to 40 seconds before taking a shot. At other times they would come down court, catch SDSU sleeping on defense, and convert a back-door pass.

The Aztecs, who raised their record to 5-0, came into the game with all five starters averaging in double figures. Only guard Keith Smith netted double figures against the Toreros. He had 12 points, Michael Cage, who had been averaging 23 points a game, was held to eight. Guards Eddie Morris and Anthony Watson also netted eight apiece.

Former Monte Vista High and Grossmont College standout Mike Whitmarsh led USD with a season-high 14. Whitmarsh played all 40 minutes for the Toreros.

The Toreros, who fell to 3-3 on the year, came out hot. They built an early 14-7 lead and nursed it through most of the contest. Defensively they sat back in a zone, content to sag in on center Leonard Allen and forwards Cage and Gordon. Not until Morris, Smith and Watson started hitting from the perimeter did USD have to play the outside game honestly.

"I thought they played well, real well," said SDSU coach David "Smokey" Gaines of the Toreros. "But we didn't choke. We came into the game tonight averaging 93 points a game. We didn't score a lot of points, but sometimes that happens. Sometimes its better to be lucky than good."

□ Aztecs 4B

AZTECS From 1B

SDSU got into the game by forcing a series of turnovers in the final few minutes. The most telling came with nine seconds unplayed. At the time SDSU held a 46-45 lead. The Toreros had run the clock down from 2:31 and were looking for the last shot. USD guard Rich Davis was tripped, it appeared, by Smith. However, the officials instead cited Davis for traveling. Smith converted one of two free throws with seven seconds remaining to create the final margin of victory.

"No question it was a foul," said USD coach Jim Brovelli. "But that's part of the game. You've got to accept it. Officiating is part of any loss."

Brovelli said he was pleased with the way his team played in spite of the loss.

"We knew we had to one, compete with them on the boards, play good defense and stop their transition game," he said. "We did all three. We outrebounded them (26-23), and I think they only had a basket or two on the fast break. We did what we wanted to do, but we just came up a bit short."

SAN DIEGO STATE-MENTS - The Aztecs will be on the road Saturday, facing the University of Oregon in Eugene. Saturday's game will be televised live beginning at 7:30 by KUSI-Channel 51. . . . SDSU leads the lifetime series against USD 12-5. The Aztecs have won the last four. Gaines has never lost to Brovelli.

VISTA PRESS

DEC 10 1982

Gordon lifts Aztecs to victory over USD

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Eddy Gordon tapped in an offensive rebound with 2:36 remaining Thursday night as San Diego State scored a 47-45 come-from-behind victory over the University of San Diego in a non-conference basketball game.

Gordon's field goal gave San Diego State their first lead in the contest at 46-45, and Guard Keith Smith added a free throw with seven seconds left to ensure the victory as the Aztecs stayed undefeated at 5-0.

The Toreros, who took only 16 shots in the second half, had the ball with 2:31 left to play, and had ran down the clock to 10 seconds when guard Rich Davis was called for a double dribble, giving the Aztecs possession.

The Aztecs, who made only 43 percent of their shots, trailed 30-25 at halftime.

Whitmarsh's cage around Michael almost springs an upset for Toreros

By Dennis Wynne
of The Daily Californian

It wasn't the most enviable of assignments.

When the University of San Diego took to the floor Thursday night at the Sports Arena, the Toreros' Mike Whitmarsh was charged with guarding San Diego State's Michael Cage. Cage was leading the Aztecs in scoring and rebounding. In order to challenge SDSU the Toreros would have to keep Cage under control.

It wasn't the first challenge Whitmarsh has faced in a basketball career spanning Monte Vista High and Grossmont College, and it doesn't figure to be the last the junior will face at USD. But when he looks back on Thursday's game, Whitmarsh will only be disappointed by the final score.

The 6-foot-6 Whitmarsh led all scorers with 14 points, and with a little help from his friends held Cage to eight points — 15 below what had been his average. However, SDSU rallied late in the game to prevail 47-45.

"I haven't been happy with the way I've been playing this year," said Whitmarsh. "Tonight I felt better. I really wanted this one. The team really wanted win and played well as a whole."

"I may be starting to get on the right track. I hurt my tailbone against (UC) Irvine a week ago, but that's fine now. I think I've been thinking too much instead of just playing."

Whitmarsh hit five of 10 field goals and four of five free throws. He also chipped in four rebounds and a steal. Defensively he was one slice of bread in the sandwich the Toreros made of Cage. With Whitmarsh, former Christian High standout Anthony Reuss, and Robby Roberts combining to harass Cage, SDSU was not able to get the ball into the middle.

"This was his best effort so far," said USD coach Jim Brovelli of Whitmarsh. "He's growing more confident with each game we play. I think he had a problem with the transition (from Grossmont to USD). It's not unusual for a new player to have trouble adjusting. But after the way he played tonight I'd say he's well on his way."

Whitmarsh came to USD this year after a superb sophomore season at Grossmont College. Whitmarsh was an All-South Coast Conference selection last year. He was a triple-threat for the Griffins, leading them in scoring (18.4 per game), rebounding (7.4) and assists (11.0 for the year).

Whitmarsh had his sights set on attending USD from his high school days. While Whitmarsh was making All-San Diego Section CIF as a senior at Monte Vista, his brother Rusty was starting at guard for the Toreros. Rusty graduated last spring, but Mike came along to continue the Whitmarsh tradition at USD.

"I'm a little disappointed I didn't get to play on the same team as my brother," said Whitmarsh. "I was thinking about coming here after my freshman year at Grossmont, but I didn't have enough transferable units to get in. I think I needed another year of junior college basketball. That extra year made me a better player."

USD's style seems perfect for Whitmarsh. He was weaned on Pete Colonelli's deliberate offense at Monte Vista. At times Rick Wilkerson played a controlled-tempo game at Grossmont with Whitmarsh on the court.

"I like both styles," said Whitmarsh. "I like a controlled game, but we have some pretty good speed on this team so we can run at times."

Whitmarsh's forte, however, is defense. At 6-6 he often gives up a few inches to opposing forwards. Usually he has held his own.

"Cage is a great player," said Whitmarsh. "We knew San Diego State had a great team, but the press made them sound unbeatable. But we didn't let what the press said bother us. This was one of the most important games of the year for us and we wanted to do well."

"I'm proud of the way we played. If we would have gotten blown out by 20 I would have been upset. But we only lost by two. That shows we can play with them."

USD's Mike Whitmarsh looks for an open man as San Diego State's Eddie Morris defends him.

Top of the TA
Friday

A classic

Trailing USD the entire game, Aztecs come back to win /C1

Tax tips

Sylvia Porter tells how to get big breaks /C11

Express

TIMES-ADVOCATE

25¢

Friday, December 10, 1982

Escondido, California

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 10 1982

Gritty USD drops a decision to Aztecs due in part to

By Larry Weinbaum
Special to the Times-Advocate

SAN DIEGO — Thursday night's intra-city college basketball game at the Sports Arena was a classic slugger-versus-boxer matchup.

Heavily favored and undefeated, talented San Diego State was the slugger.

The Aztecs are known as a free-wheeling, fast-breaking, big-attacking knock-out-punch team. They seek to bomb opponents in lightning fashion and score points like an M-16 fires bullets. They prefer to run and gun — bounce the ball high and let it fly. Three passes and 10 seconds to get a shot off is a stall for the Aztec offense.

The boxer was the University of San Diego's Toreros, who prefer to play fundamentally sound basketball.

Operating with only modest talent, the Toreros are disciplined, well-coached, pass the ball crisply and are always looking for the layup. Hard-working and confident in their ball-control system — if it takes 30 or more seconds to run the USD offense, so be it. Patience, thy name is Torero basketball.

On Thursday, the peek-a-boo style of USD almost produced an upset. A crowd of 4,058 saw the welterweight Catholic school keep the heavyweight contender off balance, off the backboards and most importantly — off the scoreboard.

But in the end, USD's patient jabs turned into timedness. The Toreros scored just one point in the final 5:10 and the Aztecs escaped with a 47-45 decision.

It was the fifth consecutive win for the Aztecs — a talented, but by no means Top 20 team. USD dropped to 3-3.

Although the talent discrepancy in favor of the Aztecs was obvious, San Diego State trailed the entire game. The first Aztec lead, 46-45, came on an Eddy Gordon tip-in with just 2:40 remaining in the game. Until the score was tied at 42-41, the boxer was ahead on points.

"There are different styles for different coaches," said Aztec Coach Smoke Gaines, who was badly outcoached by his counterpart, USD's Jim Brovelli.

The first half was a clinic of layups by USD. The Toreros converted 9-of-11 layups as Brovelli's high-post offense lured the taller Aztecs away from the basket. USD then converted swift passes into simple backdoor layups.

USD's advantage grew to nine — at 38-29 — four minutes into the second half before fatigue, San Diego State's depth and some sharp one-on-one play by Aztec guards Keith Smith and Anthony Watson inched the winners back into the game.

Keith Smith (10) of the Aztecs drives to the basket against USD's Rich Davis.

"Jim's style is deliberate," said Gaines. "He likes his team to take its time. USD played well. But we'll take the 'W.'"

Down by a point, 46-45, with 2:40 left in the game, Brovelli elected to play for one shot, going into his offense with about 25 seconds remaining to be played.

USD guard Rich Davis drove the lane with just nine seconds left and, although it was rush-hour traffic in the key, Davis was obviously tripped by an Aztec. Incredibly, one of the two WAC officials whistled the Torero for travelling.

Instead of USD proceeding to the free-throw stripe to shoot a one-and-one, the Aztecs owned the ball and the 46-45 lead.

Smith, San Diego State's top scorer with 12 points, then converted a free throw with seven ticks left on the clock, upping the lead to 47-45.

A 20-foot jumper by Torero Don Capener missed at the buzzer.

"There was no question Davis was tripped," said Brovelli, shaking his head just thinking about how close his questionable call team came to the upset. "And it should have been a foul. I'm not blaming the officials. That's part of the game, and you've got to accept it. But Davis was obviously fouled."

After shooting 65 percent in the opening 20 minutes (13-for-20), USD could manage just 5-of-16 shooting from the floor in the second half. Couple just five field goals with missing two one-and-one opportunities down the stretch and it's easy to see why USD was outscored 22-15 in the second half.

While the Toreros compiled 50 percent shooting on the night (18-for-36), San Diego State shot just 43.8 (21-for-48). The Aztecs could manage just a 12-for-28 first half and went 9-for-20 after intermission.

USD, with three 6-foot-7 guys in the starting lineup, also outrebounded the Aztecs, 26-23, despite the presence of 6-10 Aztec center Leonard Allen and 6-9 Aztec forward Michael Cage.

Cage, averaging 23 points and 17 boards entering the game, scored just eight points and managed a game-high 11 rebounds. Allen had six points and two rebounds.

USD forward Mike Whitmarsh led all scorers with 14 points and was an iron man, playing 40 minutes.

The Aztecs' Smith also played the entire game, dishing off six assists to go with 12 points.

Watson, one of three Aztecs with eight points, scored three big field goals in a 3½-minute span down the stretch. It was Watson's layup off a pretty Smith assist at the 9:12 mark that tied the score at 42-42.

"We adjusted to their backdoor stuff in the second half," said Gaines. "We got some weakside help and closed the door."

"We'll probably see some more of this slow-down stuff Saturday night against Oregon. Other teams in the WAC — Air Force, Wyoming and UTEP — slow it down. We came in averaging 93 points per game, but a win is a win."

Brovelli complimented Cage, calling him an All-America, and said his team had accomplished what it set out to do against the Aztecs.

"We wanted to contain them on the boards, play great defense and stop their transition game," said the USD coach, now in his 10th year on the Alcalá Park campus. "We spread the floor to draw their big people away from under the basket and we got lots of layups."

Friday, December 10, 1982

SPORTS

Aztecs Need Help to Beat USD, 47-45

By DAVE DISTEL,
Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—It came down to one play. Call it a trip or call it a travel. Take your pick.

Referee Larry Stubing called it a travel, USD's Rich Davis sprawling awkwardly over the foot of San Diego State's Keith Smith.

On that play, Thursday night's game between the two crosstown rivals turned.

What was incredible was that The Play happened with nine seconds to play. USD was supposed to be nowhere in the neighborhood by then, but The Play was pivotal as San Diego State escaped with a 47-45 victory.

"We needed this type of game," said Aztec Coach Smokey Gaines. "It was good for us."

On the other hand... "It's frustrating," said USD Coach Jim Brovelli. "We play a lot of people tough. Our turn is going to come, and we're going to win the close ones."

Aztec Coach Smokey Gaines had muttered a few weeks ago about the game that came to pass last night, about how his was a team with nothing to gain and a lot to lose.

The Aztecs were 4-0 going in,

San Diego State's Eddy Gordon and USD's John Prunty (20) pursue free ball in Thursday night's game.

unbeaten and basically untested. USD was 3-2 against roughly the same caliber competition, and fretting that it should have been 4-1.

"We should have beaten the Air Force," said Torero Coach Jim Brovelli. "We let it get away."

Brovelli was afraid this one might get away quite quickly.

"If we don't rebound," Brovelli said, "It will be over very quickly."

San Diego State was heavily favored, of course, but USD always seems to make a game of it against its crosstown rival. Last year, for example, when the Aztecs would average 73 points a game, they escaped with a 41-36 win over USD. San Diego State has won each of the last three years, but never by more than nine points. Once again, it seemed, the Toreros were to impose their game on the race-horse Aztecs. USD had a 26-23 rebounding edge, and was not out of it early at all.

Please see AZTECS, Page 12

AZTECS: Beat USD

Continued from First Page

At halftime, in fact, USD had a 30-25 lead and did not trail until Eddy Gordon scored on an offensive rebound to send the Aztecs ahead 46-45 with 2:30 to play.

In spite of San Diego State's size, USD got the inside shots as it took that half-time lead. It tackled the Aztec man-to-man with the highest of high posts, positioning Robby Roberts out near the top of the key. It spread the Aztec defense, and USD was to make nine of its 13 first half field goals on layups.

But for Eddy Morris, the Toreros might have had a bigger lead at the half. USD's zone defense effectively crippled the Aztecs' inside offense, and Morris scored on four outside jumpers in the last 7:45 of the half.

In the second half, the Aztecs adjusted to the backdoor plays that led to so many of the USD layups. USD got only three second half layups, and only five field goals in all.

However, the Aztecs were not getting a whole lot either. Their trademarks are fast breaks and slam dunks, and they had four of the former and none of the latter Thursday night.

"You've got to give tribute to USD," said the Aztecs' Smith. "They slowed it down and made us play their kind of game."

Michael Cage, the Aztecs' stalwart at forward, had only eight points and 11 rebounds.

"They took so much away from my game," Cage said. "There was nothing I could do. They had us all jammed up."

The Aztecs struggled slowly from a deficit of as many as 9 points in the second half. The score seemed tied, 44-44, forever, Davis missing a layup for USD and Gordon promptly missed two free throws for the Aztecs.

Don Capener finally broke that deadlock—after 2½ minutes—with a USD free throw. It was almost three minutes after Capener's free throw that Gordon sent the Aztecs ahead for the first time, 46-45, with 2:30 to play.

And USD stalled from there looking for the last shot.

"We wanted the last shot to win the game," Brovelli said. "You bet."

The clock seemed to be ticking away too quickly, however, as Davis turned and tried to drive past Smith with nine seconds to play. He tripped, and Stubing called traveling.

"It's a trip," Brovelli said. "It's a foul." As might be expected, Smith did not agree.

"He tried to drive," Smith said, "and he happened to hit my foot."

The Toreros quickly fouled, and Smith made a free throw for the Aztecs—but missed the second. USD had one more shot at a tie, but Capener missed at the buzzer.

"It seems everyone thinks we are an underdog," said USD's Roberts, "but we are a great team."

Probably not, but San Diego State has been described by some as a Top 20 team. If it is, USD is only a step behind. On Thursday night, it was literally only a step behind.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 10 1982

It Was A Frustrating Way To End A Class Performance

Jim Brovelli, the University of San Diego basketball coach, leaned against a drab wall in the dingy visitors' locker room at the Sports Arena last night—his disappointment acute, his frustration evident, but his class intact.

His persistent, deliberate, disciplined Toreros had just come agonizingly close to upsetting their rich cousins from across town, the Aztecs of San Diego State, only to lose 47-45 in a manner that could easily have induced stomach cramps.

Trailing by one point and playing for the last shot of the game, USD had killed 2½ minutes off the clock against an ill-advised Aztec zone. With 10 seconds left, guard Rich Davis started a move toward the hoop and was apparently tripped by SDSU point guard Keith Smith. Legs tangled and Davis fell to the floor.

From the sidelines, the foul looked obvious, almost flagrant. But umpire Craig Peterson called traveling on Davis.

Nine ticks remained on the clock, and SDSU had the ball.

Brovelli was furious. You could almost see a few more hairs turn gray as he leapt in the air and thrashed his right arm in protest. He knew that the game's outcome likely hinged on that call.

Later he spoke his mind honestly, as he always does. "My interpretation of the rule is 'It's a trip, it's a foul,'" he said. But he also declined to dwell on the matter, no matter how much the mind's instant replay made his innards churn.

"I never blame officials for a loss or a win. I thought that last call was a definite foul, a trip, but there is no way that I am going to stand here and blame an official for a loss," Brovelli said for the first of many times. "The kids win or lose the game as far as I'm concerned. I always teach that to the kids, and they expect the same from me."

Brovelli is an educator, a man of discipline and dignity, who teaches his players well and teaches them good.

You have to love his team, which last night played the part of the industrious tortoise to SDSU's gifted but impatient hares, and nearly won a fable. USD grabbed an early lead that grew to nine points in both halves, held it doggedly, and didn't trail for the first time until just 2:39 remained in the game. The Toreros gave their more gifted foes a scare and very nearly sent them to their first defeat.

(Continued on C-6, Col. 3)

USD: Class Act, Even In Defeat

(Continued from C-1)

The Aztecs should be in a different league, really. They are taller, more muscular, accustomed to more rugged opponents. They probably have a few more basketball majors than the Toreros, who probably have a few more scholars.

But self-belief is a powerful elixir. Determination can help a 6-foot fellow reach a 7-foot goal. A man with a plan can be a dangerous man indeed. Against all odds, the Toreros parlayed their assets—scrappiness and ball control and the willingness to scrape knees and elbows diving for every loose ball—into an effort that had to be admired.

Screening out diligently, they outrebounded the Aztecs 26-23. Patiently working the ball around against the sometimes frenzied man-to-man defense the Aztecs played most of the night, the Toreros set up baskets with some pretty passes and chose their shots intelligently.

The enduring images are of John Prunty, a feisty guard, hurtling horizontally through the air to pounce on a loose ball, then instinctively dribbling to safety and shouting, "Set up! Of 'Silk' Davis bringing the ball through SDSU's aggressive press. Of the Toreros working the ball around and hitting the open man to neutralize the Aztecs' physical superiority underneath.

"I thought that overall, this is how we wanted our kids to play tonight," Brovelli said. "We wanted them to play good defense, which they did. We wanted them to contain State on the boards, which they did. We had to do those two things, and we did."

"Offensively, we had to take good percentage shots. We did that, too. So I'm pleased with our performance, except the final outcome. I thought the kids did play well enough to win."

The one real breakdown came with just under 12 minutes left, when a 40-35 USD lead dwindled to 40-38. Prunty stole the ball, drove, but failed to pass to a teammate open in front of him. He was fouled, but missed two free throws. Then 6-7 Robby Roberts, who had made few mistakes and had battled the Aztecs splendidly under the boards, threw away an inbound pass.

That was the sort of error the Toreros could not afford.

Still, it came down to this: with 2:39 left, the Aztecs led for the first time, and went into a zone defense for the first time. That was fine with Brovelli, who was content to play for the last shot. To him, this was like letting Br'er Rabbit choose to do battle in the briar patch.

The Toreros played catch around the perimeter until the clock was down to 10 seconds. Then came the fateful trip that was called a travel.

USD had one last chance to send the game into overtime. Keith Smith missed the second of a one-and-one free throw situation with seven seconds left, and the Toreros got the ball down court to a play they had called before Smith went to the line.

They wanted Don Capener, their best outside shooter, to take the last shot. They got him the ball. He launched a 15-footer from the left side as time expired, but it caromed off the far side of the rim.

"I was hoping," Brovelli said 15 minutes later. "Don had a hot hand. He's a great shooter. It looked good when it left his hand. It was just a little bit long. It happens. Heck, you can't blame that kid. He played a great game for us. He made more than he missed. It's just unfortunate that the last one missed."

The coach took a deep breath. He was emotionally spent, but composed. He was exasperated, but rightly proud.

"It's frustrating. We have been in this position before. This is just our third year on this level, and we've played a lot of people tough," he said. "Our turn—and I've said this before, but I mean it—our turn is going to come. We've got this program now to the level where we're competitive and respectable, and our turn's going to come and we're going to win these close ones."

If class means anything, they will, too.

SENTINEL

DEC 9 1982

Toreros at home

USD plays its last home game of 1982 Tuesday night when Texas Tech pays a visit to Alcala Park.

The Toreros host the Red Raiders at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center.

Texas Tech has struggled at times this season, but it has faced a schedule dotted with impressive foes like Arkansas, Alabama and Louisiana Tech.

USD, meanwhile, has looked strong at times, especially in its narrow 47-45 loss to San Diego State on Dec. 9.

San Diego, Saturday, December 18, 1982

San Diego Notepad

Torero five seeks to rebound against 49ers

The University of San Diego, still smarting from a 47-45 basketball defeat at the hands of the San Diego State Aztecs last week, tangles with Long Beach State tonight in Long Beach at 7:35.

The Toreros with three wins and three losses so far this season, face the 49ers, who are fresh from a runner-up finish in the Cougar Classic at Brigham Young University. Long Beach State lost to San Diego State earlier this season 93-80.

The Toreros will be led by Rich Davis, who is averaging 11.2 points a game, and Robby Roberts, who is averaging 10.8 points and 8.8 rebounds a game.

DON CAPENER

Cager learns lessons during Tokyo mission

By JEFF SMITH

A sense of Oriental tranquility has flavored Don Capener's life these days.

Now a junior starting guard on the University of San Diego's basketball team and a former Torrey Pines High star, Capener was influenced by the ways of the East while on a two-year Mormon mission in Japan. He gained maturity on that sojourn (which came after his freshman year in college), he says, and developed a different attitude towards the things that are important to him.

"I put basketball more into perspective," said Capener Friday. "I had a lot of time to think about things. I practiced with a team at a Japanese University and saw something different in them. They enjoy playing, but they don't view it like they do over here. Now, I can see it's not everything."

"I feel fortunate that I have a chance to play basketball on this level, and to have a scholarship to go to school, but it put me in a different frame of mind."

Thursday night, USD played one of its most important games of the year, the annual contest with crosstown rival San Diego State University. Capener played well in that game, hitting three of five shots and maintaining his position on defense. He had a chance, however, to send the game into overtime with a last second, 18-foot jumper. His hurried shot bounced off the far end of the rim, and USD did not achieve the upset win.

In the past, he candidly admits, that missed opportunity would have haunted him for weeks. But now, he is able to analyze what happened, and to keep in mind that the loss does not ride on his shoulders.

"If that had happened in my freshman year, I would be pretty crushed," said Capener. "Getting the last shot, and barely missing it... It was a half inch from hitting the back rim and going in. It hurts when it's that close.

"But there are so many things that we could say: 'If we did this, if we didn't do that.'"

Instead of chastizing himself, Capener looks at the game as the catalyst, the unifying factor, for the team.

"I thought from the start that we would be able to play with them," said the 6-5, 185-pound Capener. "I knew we would be there in the end. I felt that, although we physically didn't match up, we executed better than they did."

"I think we're just coming together as a team. In the two

Please turn to page 12

— Staff photo: Jeff Smith

Former Falcon Don Capener

Don Capener . . .

Continued from page 11
wins before — although we won — we didn't really come together. Last night (Thursday) did it. We'll beat a lot of teams this season."

In many ways, Capener feels fortunate to be where he is. He was recruited by many big schools out of high school, such as Arizona State, the University of Utah and Brigham Young University, where his brother is a guard on the Cougars' basketball team.

But the mission to Japan took the edge off his game. At an age when other young players are making the transition from high school ball to the college level, Capener was traveling around a foreign land. At best, he says, he was able to play basketball once a week. He did stay in shape, however, by running religiously.

Capener feels he was in better shape emotionally to play the game upon his return than when he left. And, once back in the states, he was able to return to his full ability through year-around practice. "Down here at USD, I played a lot during the summer," said Capener. "A lot of good people play here. Some of the Clippers come here. Joel Kramer of the Suns plays here, and Paul Westphal."

"I was able to play against some really good players. When you can go out there and do well, it really helps your confidence."

Many coaches who were around the USD campus gave Capener pointers on his game, as did some players. The one perhaps helped him the most was Westphal.

"Westphal talked to me mainly about working on my footwork, my first step," Capener said. "I was having problems getting open on my jump shot. He told me how to get a quick first step and get my shot off. He told me to jump rope and do footwork drills."

Apparently, the advice worked. Capener has a picture perfect jump shot, and is comfortable shooting in the 18-20 foot range. Capener says that his confidence has increased now, and he should be shooting more as the season progresses.

With a business major and an understanding of the Japanese language, Capener wants to pursue a career in international business, hopefully with regular stints in Japan.

It appears that, while Capener brought back a touch of Japan with him, he also left something behind in that country. And it wasn't his jump shot.

— Staff photo: Jeff Smith

Don Capener holds off Aztec defender

COAST DISPATCH

DEC 11 1982

DON CAPENER

Cager learns lessons during Tokyo mission

By JEFF SMITH

A sense of Oriental tranquility has flavored Don Capener's life these days.

Now a junior starting guard on the University of San Diego's basketball team and a former Torrey Pines High star, Capener was influenced by the ways of the East while on a two-year Mormon mission in Japan. He gained maturity on that sojourn (which came after his freshman year in college), he says, and developed a different attitude towards the things that are important to him.

"I put basketball more into perspective," said Capener Friday. "I had a lot of time to think about things. I practiced with a team at a Japanese University and saw something different in them. They enjoy playing, but they don't view it like they do over here. Now, I can see it's not everything."

"I feel fortunate that I have a chance to play basketball on this level, and to have a scholarship to go to school, but it put me in a different frame of mind."

Thursday night, USD played one of its most important games of the year, the annual contest with crosstown rival San Diego State University. Capener played well in that game, hitting three of five shots and maintaining his position on defense. He had a chance, however, to send the game into overtime with a last second, 18-foot jumper. His hurried shot bounced off the far end of the rim, and USD did not achieve the upset win.

In the past, he candidly admits, that missed opportunity would have haunted him for weeks. But now, he is able to analyze what happened, and to keep in mind that the loss does not ride on his shoulders.

"If that had happened in my freshman year, I would be pretty crushed," said Capener. "Getting the last shot, and barely missing it... It was a half inch from hitting the back rim and going in. It hurts when it's that close.

"But there are so many things that we could say: 'If we did this, if we didn't do that.'"

Instead of chastizing himself, Capener looks at the game as the catalyst, the unifying factor, for the team.

"I thought from the start that we would be able to play with them," said the 6-5, 185-pound Capener. "I knew we would be there in the end. I felt that, although we physically didn't match up, we executed better than they did."

"I think we're just coming together as a team. In the two

Please turn to page 12

— Staff photo: Jeff Smith

Former Falcon Don Capener

12 — Saturday, December 11, 1982 CD.DM.RSF

Don Capener . . .

Continued from page 11
wins before — although we won — we didn't really come together. Last night (Thursday) did it. We'll beat a lot of teams this season."

In many ways, Capener feels fortunate to be where he is. He was recruited by many big schools out of high school, such as Arizona State, the University of Utah and Brigham Young University, where his brother is a guard on the Cougars' basketball team.

But the mission to Japan took the edge off his game. At an age when other young players are making the transition from high school ball to the college level, Capener was traveling around a foreign land. At best, he says, he was able to play basketball once a week. He did stay in shape, however, by running religiously.

Capener feels he was in better shape emotionally to play the game upon his return than when he left. And, once back in the states, he was able to return to his full ability through year-around practice. "Down here at USD, I played a lot during the summer," said Capener. "A lot of good people play here. Some of the Clippers come here. Joel Kramer of the Suns plays here, and Paul Westphal."

"I was able to play against some really good players. When you can go out there and do well, it really helps your confidence."

Many coaches who were around the USD campus gave Capener pointers on his game, as did some players. The one perhaps helped him the most was Westphal.

"Westphal talked to me mainly about working on my footwork, my first step," Capener said. "I was having problems getting open on my jump shot. He told me how to get a quick first step and get my shot off. He told me to jump rope and do footwork drills."

Apparently, the advice worked. Capener has a picture perfect jump shot, and is comfortable shooting in the 18-20 foot range. Capener says that his confidence has increased now, and he should be shooting more as the season progresses.

With a business major and an understanding of the Japanese language, Capener wants to pursue a career in international business, hopefully with regular stints in Japan.

It appears that, while Capener brought back a touch of Japan with him, he also left something behind in that country. And it wasn't his jump shot.

— Staff photo: Jeff Smith

Don Capener holds off Aztec defender

DON CAPENER

Cager learns lessons during Tokyo mission

By JEFF SMITH

A sense of Oriental tranquility has flavored Don Capener's life these days.

Now a junior starting guard on the University of San Diego's basketball team and a former Torrey Pines High star, Capener was influenced by the ways of the East while on a two-year Mormon mission in Japan. He gained maturity on that sojourn (which came after his freshman year in college), he says, and developed a different attitude towards the things that are important to him.

"I put basketball more into perspective," said Capener Friday. "I had a lot of time to think about things. I practiced with a team at a Japanese University and saw something different in them. They enjoy playing, but they don't view it like they do over here. Now, I can see it's not everything."

"I feel fortunate that I have a chance to play basketball on this level, and to have a scholarship to go to school, but it put me in a different frame of mind."

Thursday night, USD played one of its most important games of the year, the annual contest with crosstown rival San Diego State University. Capener played well in that game, hitting three of five shots and maintaining his position on defense. He had a chance, however, to send the game into overtime with a last second, 18-foot jumper. His hurried shot bounced off the far end of the rim, and USD did not achieve the upset win.

In the past, he candidly admits, that missed opportunity would have haunted him for weeks. But now, he is able to analyze what happened, and to keep in mind that the loss does not ride on his shoulders.

"If that had happened in my freshman year, I would be pretty crushed," said Capener. "Getting the last shot, and barely missing it... It was a half inch from hitting the back rim and going in. It hurts when it's that close.

"But there are so many things that we could say: 'If we did this, if we didn't do that.'"

Instead of chastizing himself, Capener looks at the game as the catalyst, the unifying factor, for the team.

"I thought from the start that we would be able to play with them," said the 6-5, 185-pound Capener. "I knew we would be there in the end. I felt that, although we physically didn't match up, we executed better than they did."

"I think we're just coming together as a team. In the two

Please turn to page 12

— Staff photo: Jeff Smith
Former Falcon Don Capener

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

DEC 20 1982

USD BASKETBALL/ Long Beach State led the entire game in posting an 87-62, non-conference basketball win over the University of San Diego Saturday in Long Beach. The 49ers are 4-2. USD dropped to 3-4. Guard Rich Davis paced the Toreros with 11 points. Mike Whitmarsh, Robby Roberts and Anthony Reuss each had 10 points. The 49ers shot 62.1 percent from the floor. The Toreros shot 42.3 percent.

CITIZEN

DEC 15 1982

Local talent in

Who would have thought...

Ray Wersching, Graig Nettles, Greg Minton, Don Capener. These local athletes were in the news last week, but for reasons that were unexpected:

Who would have thought Ray Wersching, the San Francisco 49ers' place-kicker nonpareil who had booted 48 consecutive extra points, would have missed an attempted conversion against the San Diego Chargers?

Wersching's missed kick kept the 49ers down 31-30 in the fourth quarter Saturday. On the following kickoff, the off-season Luecadi resident popped the football high but short. The Chargers returned it to their 40-yard line, and six plays later, Rolf Benirschke connected on a 41-yard field goal to give the Chargers a four-point lead.

Though the Niners scored to go up 37-34, San Diego countered with another score of their own to secure a 41-37 victory.

In the locker room following the game, Wersching was quiet but answered all questions.

"That was a great game," he said. "I just simply pulled it (the extra-point try). It goes with the business."

Who would have thought Graig Nettles, the New York Yankees' splendid third baseman, would ever part with his pinstripes? Rumors early in the week had Nettles, of Del Mar, being sent to the news from coast to coast

the San Diego Padres. The 38-year-old Yankee captain has one year remaining on his contract and reportedly wants to return to his hometown.

Nettles is a left-handed power hitter and is a Gold Glove fielder.

John Shea

NORTH COUNTY NOISE

The Padres need such an infielder and could profit from Nettles' experience and leadership.

If Nettles leaves New York, the Padres could have the best chance of acquiring him. Nettles is a 10- and 5-player—at least 10 years in the majors and at least five years on the current club—so he has the right to stop a trade involving his name.

The San Diego High and San Diego State grad, therefore, virtually has the power to pick his next playing mates.

12 — Saturday, December 11, 1982 CD, DM, RSP

Don Capener . . .

Continued from page 11
wins before — although we won — we didn't really come together. Last night (Thursday) did it. We'll beat a lot of teams this season."

In many ways, Capener feels fortunate to be where he is. He was recruited by many big schools out of high school, such as Arizona State, the University of Utah and Brigham Young University, where his brother is a guard on the Cougars' basketball team.

But the mission to Japan took the edge off his game. At an age when other young players are making the transition from high school ball to the college level, Capener was traveling around a foreign land.

At best, he says, he was able to play basketball once a week. He did stay in shape, however, by running religiously.

Capener feels he was in better shape emotionally to play the game upon his return than when he left. And, once back in the states, he was able to return to his full ability through year-around practice.

"Down here at USD, I played a lot during the summer," said Capener. "A lot of good people play here. Some of the Clippers come here, Joel Kramer of the Suns plays here, and Paul Westphal."

"I was able to play against some really good players. When you can go out there and do well, it really helps your confidence."

Many coaches who were around the USD campus gave Capener pointers on his game, as did some players. The one perhaps helped him the most was Westphal.

"Westphal talked to me mainly about working on my footwork, my first step," Capener said. "I was having problems getting open on my jump shot. He told me how to get a quick first step and get my shot off. He told me to jump rope and do footwork drills."

Apparently, the advice worked. Capener has a picture perfect jump shot, and is comfortable shooting in the 18-20 foot range. Capener says that his confidence has increased now, and he should be shooting more as the season progresses.

With a business major and an understanding of the Japanese language, Capener wants to pursue a career in international business, hopefully with regular stints in Japan.

It appears that, while Capener brought back a touch of Japan with him, he also left something behind in that country. And it wasn't his jump shot.

— Staff Photo: Jeff Smith
Don Capener holds off Aztec defender

SAN DIEGO UNION
DEC 18 1982

USD Plays Tonight At Long Beach

Still muttering about last week's 47-45 loss to San Diego State, the University of San Diego ends a 10-day vacation tonight by playing another team the undefeated Aztecs have beaten.

The 3-3 Toreros will be in the Long Beach Arena to meet Long Beach State, 3-2 and fresh from a runner-up finish in the Cougar Classic at BYU, at 7:35 in the Long Beach Arena.

Guard Rich Davis (11.2 points per game), 6-7 center Robby Roberts (10.8 points, 8.8 rebounds) and 6-6 forwards Mike Whitmarsh (9.3 points) and Brian Setencich (7.5 points, 4.0 rebounds) give the Toreros a balanced attack.

Long Beach State, which lost to San Diego State 93-80 earlier this month, has 6-4 guard Joedy Gardner (16.2 points), 6-5 forward Ray Mosby (15.2 points) and 6-9 center Michael Zeno (12.2 points, 9.2 rebounds).

USD Can't Handle The Tough Exam At Long Beach State And Fails 87-62

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

LONG BEACH — Ten days and a round of final exams after playing its best basketball game of the year, the University of San Diego last night played its worst.

Paced by the long-range bombing of guard Joedy Gardner and 6-9 center Michael Zeno, Long Beach State blitzed the Toreros 87-62 in Long Beach Arena.

The contest was close briefly. The 49ers (4-2) took an 8-0 lead with four jumpers from beyond what would have been three-point range and were not headed. Consecutive baskets by Brian Setencich brought USD close at 16-12, but Long Beach State put on a burst and steadily pulled away.

The 49ers led by 12 at the half 40-28, led by 20 at 71-51 with 7:41 to go, and substituted liberally thereafter. USD fell to 3-4 and plays Texas Tech Tuesday night in the USD Sports Center.

"We were absolutely in a daze," USD coach Jim Brovelli said. "There was no emotion. We should have played a running clock and gone home early."

"Not one player could be singled out for having a good game. We were totally lethargic."

There might be a reason: exhaustion. In their last game, the Toreros lost a heart-breaking 47-45 decision to heavily favored San Diego State.

Since then, the Toreros have been taking final exams. Last year, USD suffered a similar collapse in the wake of exams. "We're taking final exams, that's about what we're doing," Brovelli said. "Still, you shouldn't use that as an excuse. You should be able to play a basketball game. And we didn't."

USD turned the ball over 21 times last night. Long Beach State made eight mistakes. The 49ers also negotiated 13 steals to the Toreros' three.

The main difference, however, was the shooting. Long Beach State shot 62 percent. Ten of Long Beach's first-half field goals came from beyond 15 feet — seven from the realm of three-point territory.

"We got them to take the shots we wanted them to take, and they buried us with them," Brovelli said.

Gardner did not miss on nine tries. Zeno, shooting from far afield, was 7 for 11. Forward Ray Mosby also scored 14 points, and 6-11 freshman center Ivan Verberck scored 10.

USD shot 42 percent and got 11 points from point guard Rich Davis and 10 apiece from front-liners Mike Whitmarsh, Robby Roberts and Anthony Reuss.

If there was one good thing about the Toreros' game it was in the rebound statistics. Led by Roberts' eight, USD outrebounded the taller 49ers 32-24.

"We got off to a fast start tonight," Long Beach coach Tex Winters said. "USD wanted to control the tempo. When they're down 8-0 after 2½ minutes, they can't do it."

"We just didn't do any of the things we should have done," Brovelli said.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 2 1 1982

Aztecs, USD Get Home Tests Tonight

San Diego State University's basketball team ends a 10-day layoff for semester exams and puts its undefeated record on the line tonight against Howard University.

Tipoff for the non-conference games is 7:35 at Peterson Gym on campus. KSDO radio (AM-1130) has the live radio broadcast.

Meanwhile, across town at the University of San Diego's Athletic Center in Alcalá Park, the Toreros will host Texas Tech's Red Raiders in another 7:35 contest.

San Diego State coach Smokey Gaines hopes the respite from activity since a last-second, 49-47 victory on Dec. 11 at Oregon — the Aztecs' sixth straight — won't result in diminished caliber of play against a 3-2 Howard team.

"It can hurt you to have a break when you're going good," said Gaines, who gave his troops three days off last week. "But we're in good shape and if we can keep our mistakes to a minimum we should be all right."

Howard — a Washington, D.C. school — has victories over St. Paul's, Bradley and Towson State and losses to George Washington and Cal State-Fullerton. The latter defeat was by a 69-51 margin Saturday night.

The Bisons have been led in scoring by the lone senior on their roster, 6-5 guard Bernard Perry, who has been averaging 18 points per game.

San Diego State could equal the school record for a start of the season winning streak with a victory. The 1971-72 team began 7-0.

The Aztecs will, as usual, count on junior forward Michael Cage. The 6-9 Cage has averaged 19 points and 15 rebounds per game and his 91 rebounds for the season have moved him to fifth on the school's career list with 702. Ten rebounds tonight would move Cage past Joel Kramer and into fourth place on the Aztec career charts.

Center Leonard Allen (12.5) and guards Keith Smith (11.5) and Eddie Morris (11.5) also are averaging in double figures for San Diego State.

Eddy Gordon (6.8 points, 6.3 rebounds per game average) will start at forward opposite Cage as Gaines refrains from changing his starting lineup. "There's no need to right now," Gaines said.

Following tonight's game the Aztecs travel to Arizona to take on the Wildcats Thursday night in Tucson.

USD (3-4) hopes to end a two-game losing streak against Texas Tech (2-5).

It will be the second game back after a semester exam break for Coach Jim Brovelli's USD team. The Toreros were defeated by Long Beach State 87-62 in a lackluster performance Saturday at Long Beach.

— Hank Wesch

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 2 2 1982

Aztecs, USD post victories

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego State University and the University of San Diego both registered home-court victories Tuesday evening.

The Aztecs, ranked 19th in the nation by UPI, improved their record to 7-0 by blasting non-conference opponent Howard, 89-61, while the Toreros evened their mark at 4-4 with a 56-53 victory over Texas Tech.

Guards Eddie Morris and Keith Smith scored 19 and 16 points respectively to power the Aztecs past Howard, a Washington, D.C. university.

The 7-0 Aztecs are now off to their best start in 10 years.

Pulling away from a 36-30 half-time lead, the Aztecs outscored the Bisons 14-2 at the outset of the second half to build a 50-32 advantage.

The Aztecs' largest lead of the night, 77-49, came with 4:36 remaining on a basket by Michael Cage, who led the Aztecs with nine rebounds and added 13 points.

Howard got 11 points from reserve guard Dwight Walker. Bernard Perry and Kevin Scott contributed eight points apiece.

Howard, which fell to 3-3, was outrebounded by the Aztecs, 39 to 33. The Aztecs shot 53 percent from the field, compared to 42 percent for the Bisons.

The last time the Aztecs began a season with seven consecutive victories was 1971-72. Smokey Gaines' team will try to break that mark Thursday when they travel to Tucson to take on the University of Arizona.

The Aztecs had not played for 10 days before Tuesday evening's game.

In USD's victory, Rich Davis connected on an 18-foot jump shot with 19 seconds to play and Mike Whitmarsh made two free throws with three seconds to go, giving the Toreros their win over Texas Tech.

Bubba Jennings put Texas Tech ahead 53-52 by sinking two foul shots with 56 seconds left. San Diego worked the ball around until Davis hit his outside jumper to put the Toreros ahead for good.

Brian Setencich led San Diego with 13 points and seven rebounds. Whitmarsh and Davis added 11 and 10 points, respectively, for the Toreros. Robby Roberts also had 10 points for the winners.

Jennings led all scorers with 18 points. Dwight Phillips added 14 points for the Red Raiders, who fell to 2-6.

The game was close all the way. The contest was tied 24-all at halftime. Neither team led by more than four points in the second half.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

DEC 2 2 1982

Whitmarsh aids Torero victory

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Rich Davis connected on an 18-foot jump shot with 19 seconds to play and former Monte Vista High School athlete Mike Whitmarsh made two free throws with three seconds to go Tuesday night, giving the University of San Diego a 56-53 non-conference college basketball victory over Texas Tech.

Bubba Jennings put Texas Tech ahead 53-52 by sinking two foul shots with 56 seconds left. San Diego worked the ball around until Davis hit his outside jumper to put the Toreros ahead for good.

Brian Setencich led San Diego, which is now 4-4, with 13 points and seven rebounds. Whitmarsh and Davis added 11 and 10 points respectively. Robby Roberts also had 10 points for the winners.

Jennings led all scorers with 18 points. Dwight Phillips added 14 points for the Red Raiders, who fell to 2-6.

The game was close all the way. The contest was tied 24-all at halftime. Neither team led by more than four points in the second half.

Anthony Reuss, formerly of El Cajon Christian High School, had four points for the Toreros.

EVENING TRIBUNE

DEC 2 2 1982

Swisher by Davis sends Toreros over Raiders

With a fourth victory of the season tucked away, the University of San Diego Toreros will take to the road tomorrow night against the San Jose State Spartans in an 8:30 game that could put the team in black ink for the third time this basketball season.

Twice before the 4-4 Toreros have boasted of more victories than defeats, but they always came back to ground after playing taller, tougher teams.

However, they succeeded in beating a nationally recognized team last night when Rich Davis and Mike Whitmarsh combined on some last-minute heroics to topple Texas Tech 56-53 at the USD Sports Center.

Guard Davis buried a 15-foot jumper with 18 seconds on the board to put the team up by one point and then Whitmarsh calmly swished two free throws to put the game out of reach.

"It's about time," said Torero Coach Jim Brovelli, who has lamented his players' inability to put the ball into the hoop. "At season's start I thought we were going to be a good shooting team and perhaps we will be if this game is an indication."

USD made only 10 of 18 free throws against the 2-6 Red Raiders, but those that went in came at just the right time in the game.

The Toreros will use the San Jose game as a springboard for the Big Blue Classic, which is scheduled to start at the University of Utah Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the USU Gulls will try to get into the victory circle after 10 straight losses tonight at 8 when they take on the Delaware State Hornets at Mira Mesa High.

The Gulls lost their 10th in a row last night to the same Hornet team 70-67 despite Nigel Lloyd's 31 points for the losers.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 2 4 1982

THE WAY TO SAN JOSE HARD

Special to The San Diego Union

SAN JOSE — Junior guard Darrell Johnson scored a game-high 20 points in leading San Jose State to 66-61 victory over visiting University of San Diego.

The Spartans (4-4) jumped out to a quick 5-0 lead and increased it to 17-6 and 21-10 before the Toreros closed the margin to a bucket at 25-23 with five minutes remaining in the first half.

The Toreros (4-5) were led by Brian Setencich with 17 points and seven rebounds.

The Spartans held a 35-29 halftime lead and maintained that advantage throughout the second half. USD got its closest at 65-61 with 42 seconds remaining.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

DEC 2 9 1982

Utah State Beats USD in Tourney

Utah State defeated the University of San Diego, 65-50, in the opening round of the Big Blue college basketball tournament Tuesday night in Logan, Utah.

USD rallied from a 33-23 halftime deficit and trailed by only 47-44 with six minutes to play, but Utah State took control down the stretch.

Greg Grant led Utah State (9-1) with 17 points. Rich Davis scored 13 points and Mike Whitmarsh 11 for USD (4-6), which plays Idaho State in tonight's consolation game.

Toreros Get Even, Nip Tech

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

It was a shot that ran counter to the main problem plaguing the University of San Diego basketball team — a shot of confidence.

With 18 seconds to play last night, Torero guard Rich Davis buried a 15-foot jumper to lead USD to a 56-53 victory over Texas Tech at the USD Sports Center.

Fifteen seconds after Davis' game-winner, Mike Whitmarsh swished two free throws on command from Torero Coach Jim Brovelli to put the game out of reach.

"It's about time," Brovelli said after USD evened its record at 4-4 against the Southwest Conference school that has not had a losing season in 12 years under Gerald Myers.

"Before the season started," Brovelli continued, "I thought we were going to be a good shooting team. I still believe it. But we've had problems putting the ball in."

Shooting the ball is the most fundamental of all basketball skills. And it's the one that's failed USD most often this young season. Up until the closing minutes, last night was no exception.

USD made only 10 of 18 free throws against the 2-6 Red Raiders. Worse than the percentage was the timing. Brian Setencich missed the front end of a pair of one-and-one opportunities within 15 seconds late in the first half while the hosts were battling a four-minute scoring drought. Then, with a chance to expand their lead to six points midway through the second half, the Toreros watched Davis miss the front end of a one-and-one after Robby Roberts had missed both ends of a two-shot opportunity.

When Texas Tech mounted a rally behind the outside shooting of Bubba Jennings (18 points) and the inside play of Dwight Phillips (14 points), it appeared the Toreros had wasted a strong defensive and floor-play effort because of their spotty shooting.

But sophomore forward Anthony Reuss scored off a power inside move with 34 seconds to play to cut the Texas Tech lead to 53-52 and set the stage for Davis, who hit after Jennings had missed a foul shot at the other end.

The San Diego Union/John Gibbins

USD guard John Prunty sneaks a pass around Texas Tech defender Bubba Jennings as Dave Reynolds helps out.

"I think that shot will give us a lift," said Davis. "We beat a major university tonight. I've been feeling more confident all along. I think the shots are going to start falling."

They better. USD lives and dies off the high-percentage shots it gets off of its patterned offense. Last year the Toreros shot 47.3 percent from the floor and 68.7 percent from the foul line and still finished 11-15. They came into last night's game shooting 45 percent from the floor and 62.8 percent from the foul line.

Three of USD's four main guards entered the fray shooting less than 40 percent from the floor.

"We're playing great defense," said Brovelli. "And we're running our offense well now... we're getting the shots. Now we just have to make them."

The coach was buoyed by the finish. When Texas Tech fouled Whitmarsh in desperation, Brovelli sent the 6-foot-6 forward to the line with, "Will you put it away." The comment was expressed more as a demand than a question. Whitmarsh responded in the affirmative.

Setencich paced USD with 13 points and seven rebounds on a strong inside game. Whitmarsh scored 11 while Davis and Roberts had 10 apiece. Another encouraging sign to Brovelli was the midrange jumpers being taken by the 6-7 Roberts when the Texas Tech defense sloughed back off the power forward. "He took the shot and hit a couple," said Brovelli. "Tonight was most encouraging."

Utah State Freshman Dominates USD In Big Blue; USIU Loses Again

Special to The San Diego Union

Utah State freshman forward Greg Grant scored 17 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and dominated every phase of the game as the host team defeated the University of San Diego 65-50 in the first round of the Big Blue Classic in Logan, Utah.

Utah State (9-1) will play Texas Christian (9-1) tonight in the final, and USD (4-6) will play Idaho State (2-7) in the consolation game.

The Toreros fell behind 10-2 and never got going in the first half. They were down 33-23 at the half.

Mike Whitmarsh and Rich Davis, who played most of the second half with 4 personal fouls, triggered a second-half rally that brought USD back to 48-46 on Whitmarsh's 14-footer with 4:52 remaining.

"When we were within two there were two questionable calls that went against us," USD coach Jim Brovelli said.

The 6-7 Grant hit on a jumper, and four Utah State free throws made it 54-46 with 1:54 left. The Toreros couldn't catch up.

Whitmarsh totaled 11 points and 11 rebounds, and Davis added 13 points before fouling out.

"The game was a lot closer than the 15-point difference," Brovelli said. "They had one more field goal than us. However, they out numbered us on the free throw line." The Toreros were whistled for nine more fouls than Utah State, which gave the Aggies 12 more free throws.

In Abilene, Texas, U.S. International University played tough again, but lost its 12th decision in 13 games, 62-58 to Hardin-Simmons in the consolation game of the Cowboy Classic.

Nigel Lloyd and Chuck Weaver led the Gulls (1-12) with 11 points each. Donald Johnson took high-scoring honors for the Cowboys with 19. Willie Maree and Ferrell added 16 points each for the host Cowboys.

McNeese State, who came from behind to beat the Gulls the night before in the first round 73-69, defeated Austin Peay 66-60 to capture the championship.

Chico State shot 71 percent from the floor as it advanced to the second round of its own tournament by downing Point Loma College 85-65 in Chico.

The Wildcats (6-4) jumped out to a 12-0 lead and cruised as Tim Taylor poured in 28 points.

Keith Jones led Point Loma (6-5) with 19 points as the Crusaders only managed hitting 42 percent of their shots.

The Crusaders, who play Redlands tonight, could only get within 10 points with 14 minutes remaining before the hosts pulled away for the last time.

January 1983

JAN 3 1983

DOWNTOWN

IN STEP WITH SENIORS

EXERCISE CLASSES AND LECTURE PROGRAM SET

By Evelyn Herrmann

The University of the Third Age sponsored by the University of San Diego at Alcalá Park is celebrating its fifth year. This program offers a variety of lecture series and physical exercise classes. It is for those who are 55 years of age and older. Classes are held on the campus of the University of San Diego. The only requirements are applicants must be able to provide their own transportation and must be in good reasonable health.

The program is scheduled to run from January 5 through January 20. Fee for registration is $35. Some of the courses offered See SENIORS/Page 7 relate to American history, money matters, national issues for discussion, government spending, and nuclear disarmament. Applications for admission to these courses are available by phoning 293-4585.

SENIORS/F

LA JOLLA LIGHT
JAN 6 1983

Parishes launch Job Program

The unemployment problems of the La Jolla community are being approached through a Job Program formed in November under the auspices of All Hallows and Mary Star of the Sea Parishes.

Sara Finn, a member of All Hallows Parish and director of public relations for the University of San Diego, is program coordinator.

Presently, 34 persons' resumes are on file which represent a variety of skills, experience and ages. Following a series of meetings for the unemployed, a meeting was held for potential employers to review the resumes. Believing that direct contact is the most effective, Finn spoke at all of the Masses at the two churches last Sunday. The resumes will be available for review in each parish hall.

In response to the requests of the unemployed, a Job Awareness Night will be held at All Hallows Parish Center on Jan. 10, 1983. The 7:30 p.m. program will open with an economic forecast by Dr. Robert O'Neil, associate professor of economics at the USD School of Business Administration.

The program will continue with a slide presentation on dressing for the job by Susan Bennett, owner of a color consulting firm; round table discussions led by experts on "Writing Resumes" by assistant dean Carol Anderson, MBA, and "Changing Jobs Within Your Career" by Dr. Dennis Briscoe, associate professor of management and personnel.

"Dr. James Kassner, dentist and health services coordinator, will discuss "Getting Into Sales." Ken Willig, business consultant, will lead a discussion on "Broadening Your Viewpoint and Finding a New Focus."

Unemployed persons who are within the La Jolla area may register by submitting a typed resume to the All Hallows Parish.

SAN DIEGO UNION
JAN 8 1983

Program Planned For Unemployed

A job awareness night will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday at All Hallows Parish Center, 6602 La Jolla Scenic Drive, in response to requests from unemployed people in La Jolla.

Sara Finn, a member of All Hallows Parish and director of public relations for the University of San Diego, is coordinating the La Jolla Job Program operating under the auspices of All Hallows and Mary Star of the Sea Parish, also in La Jolla.

"I just thought this was a problem the church should be involved in," Finn said. "Do we care about our unemployed here in our own town?"

Only a few sessions have been held to discuss the problem, but 34 resumes are already on file and a meeting has been held for employers to review the resumes.

Monday's program will include an economic forecast by Dr. Robert O'Neil, associate professor of economics at the USD School of Business Administration; a slide presentation on dressing for a job by Susan Bennett, owner of a color consulting firm; and sessions on writing resumes. Also covered will be getting into sales work and career changes.

SAN DIEGO UNION
JAN 8 1983

✓ The Seventh Annual Canon Law Institute will be held tomorrow through Jan. 21 at the University of San Diego. The institute, sponsored by the Western Regional Canon Law Society and USD's Continuing Education Department, is designed to bring participants up to date on the workings of marriage tribunals. Reservations and information about fees may be obtained by calling 293-4585.

SD BUSINESS JOURNAL
JAN 10 1983

GENERAL BUSINESS

PAUL MILLER, a member of the Center for Public Interest Law at the University of San Diego, was appointed by former Gov. JERRY BROWN to the State Structural Pest Control Board. Another San Diego board member, NEIL GOOD, administrative assistant to Supervisor LEON WILLIAMS, was recently elected president of the board.

SAN DIEGO UNION
JAN 11 1983

Review Of New Program At USD Set For Jan. 30

University of San Diego alumni from a program providing continuing education for men and women over 55 will meet at 2 p.m. Jan. 30 in the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing Auditorium to hear a review of USD's recently created "Overseas People-to-People" program.

C-2 THE TRIBUNE (2) San Diego, Tuesday
JAN 4 1983

HAZEL TOW

TRIBUNE SOCIETY EDITOR

THE OLD GLOBE THEATRE'S 1983 season opens Friday with a pre-curtain dinner and a performance of Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth." The black-tie dinner at the San Diego Hilton Hotel is sponsored by the theater board and the Globe Guilders.

The opening-night event begins with cocktails at 5:15 p.m.; dinner service is at 6:15 p.m., and the play at 8 p.m. in the theater in Balboa Park. This is a return to the opening-night format of the years before the original Old Globe was destroyed by fire in 1978. Last year's opening season in the new theater, "The Year of Celebration," featured post-performance suppers and other parties.

Mrs. Henry M. Hedges is chairman of the 1983 season's opening-night dinners, and her co-chairman for Friday's party is Mrs. John Schall. Mrs. E. Donald Kaufmann of Del Mar is taking reservations and arranging seating. Mrs. Mitchell Kay of La Jolla is chairman of hosts and hostesses.

The next opening in the Simon Edison Centre for the Performing Arts' theater complex will be "Mass Appeal" Jan. 19 on the Cassius Carter Centre Stage. There will be a pre-curtain dinner at the Kona Kai Club sponsored by the Old Globe board and the Guilders.

Mrs. Roger Stebleton and Mrs. J. Stewart Elder are co-chairmen of receptions being given by the San Diego Hall of Science for the premiere of the newest Omnimax film, "Tomorrow in Space," Jan. 13 at the Reuben H. Fleet Space Theater in Balboa Park.

Col. Robert F. Overmyer and Dr. William B. Lenoir, two of the astronauts who flew the most recent space shuttle mission, will be honored guests at the premiere and give brief addresses before the screening of the film for members of the Hall of Science. Show times are 5:30 and 7 p.m. Membership information is available from Robin Turner or Pam Crooks at the space theater.

DR. AUTHOR E. HUGHES, president of the University of San Diego, and Mrs. Hughes have issued invitations for the 10th annual President's Club dinner honoring members of this support group for the university. The black-tie event will include cocktails in the French Parlor and dinner and dancing in the James S. Copley Library on the USD campus.

In addition to President's Club members, the USD School of Law's Maudsley Fellows and the More Hall Advocates have been invited to participate.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JAN 4 1983

Unemployment in La Jolla may not seem like a major problem, but members of the Catholic parishes of All Hallows and Mary Star of the Sea have found 34 persons to assist in finding work. Under the direction of Sara Finn, a job awareness night will be held in the All Hallows Parish Center at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 10 for potential employers; resumes are to be turned in by Jan. 7. So far, 34 persons of varied skills, experience and ages have joined the program.

LA JOLLA LIGHT
JAN 6 1983

'Presidents' dinner

Invitations have been mailed for the 10th annual President's Club Dinner to be held Jan. 22 at the University of San Diego. The black tie event will begin with cocktails in the French Parlor at 7 p.m., followed by dinner and dancing at 8 p.m. in the James S. Copley Library. Members of the President's Club donate $1,000 annually for unrestricted use. Members of the USD School of Law's Maudsley Fellows and More Hall Advocates also are invited to attend.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

JAN 6 1983

Law Professor Talks

Bob Fellmeth, professor at USD Law School, will talk on "The Revolution Against Regulation at the State Level—What's Happening in California," tomorrow, January 7, noon, in the Grace Courtroom (located on 3rd floor of the law school).

SENTINEL
JAN 5 1983

Alcohol awareness is the topic

An "Alcohol Awareness Hour" focusing on employee assistance will be held from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, Jan. 8 in Camino Hall at the University of San Diego.

Admission is free. Call 292-5749 for details.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 8 1983

Religion

CHURCH ROUNDUP

Catholics plan Canon Law Institute

The seventh annual Canon Law Institute on Roman Catholic church law and chancery procedures will be held tomorrow through Jan. 21 at the University of San Diego by USD and the Western Regional Canon Law Society. Among the participants will be the Rev. Michael Gallagher and the Rev. John G. Proctor Jr. of the San Diego Catholic Diocese's marriage tribunal; the Rev. Edwin J. Dillon of Atlanta; the Rev. Richard A. Hill of the Jesuit School of Theology in Berkeley; the Rev. John Follmer of San Francisco; the Rev. John Hedderman of Salt Lake City; and the Rev. Helmut Heffner of Los Angeles.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

JAN 13 1983

Editorials

Parishes reach out to jobless

All Hallows and Mary, Star of the Sea parishes are to be commended for recognizing unemployment for the very real problem it is for many La Jollans and for taking action to help solve that problem.

The two parishes jointly sponsored a Job Awareness Night at All Hallows last Monday at which professionals and educators discussed various aspects of job-hunting — from resume writing to dressing for an interview to job possibilities.

The organizers expected an audience of 40 to 50 people, but instead were surprised by a crowd of twice that many — an indication to us that those who live in La Jolla are far from immune to losing their jobs and not being able to find new ones.

Such a realization cannot help but give pause to those of us fortunate enough to have jobs. Perhaps, employers, too, could take note of this situation and the churches' efforts to help the community's unemployed.

Remember, many of those at Monday night's meeting were professionals with marketable skills but nowhere to apply them.

Again, we commend the members of All Hallows and Mary, Star of the Sea parishes for their continuing efforts. Another meeting will be held next Monday, at 7:30 p.m. at All Hallows.

VIEW
ActionSan Diego County
Thursday, January 13, 1983/Part VBARBARA MARTIN / Los Angeles Times
Robert Fellmeth became a Nader's Raider 15 years ago.Consumer Crusader Stays on Course at USD Center

By WAYNE SWANSON

SAN DIEGO — It has been nearly 15 years since a curious late-night encounter with Ralph Nader drew Robert Fellmeth into the forefront of the consumer movement.

At that time, Nader was just beginning to gain prominence for his attacks on the auto industry, and Fellmeth was a Harvard law student spending the summer in Washington. He had written to Nader asking if he could help in the auto safety campaign, and the reply was a note telling him to be at a Washington fish restaurant the following night at 11.

As Fellmeth remembers it, he and a friend waited in a booth in the somewhat seedy restaurant for 20 minutes, until a tall man in a trench coat finally walked up and asked curtly, "You Fellmeth?"

The man sat down and, without any introductions or pleasantries, said, "There is an agency in Washington pulling the wool over the eyes of the public, and it's been getting away with it for years. Of course, you know which one it is."

Fellmeth didn't, but after several wrong guesses, the man in the trench coat, Ralph Nader, told him.

This was Nader's brusque way of letting Fellmeth know that he was recruiting students to investigate the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), an agency he contended was allowing business to rip off consumers rather than protect them.

'Nader's Neophytes'

When Fellmeth and six others took up Nader's challenge and began poking around the FTC, they were derisively dubbed "Nader's Neophytes." But six months later, when they released a blistering report on the FTC that prompted numerous reforms, they had become something else — Nader's Raiders.

Over the next few years, Fellmeth and his associates, joined by thousands more, pushed Nader's campaign, which became an inexorable force for consumer rights. What has become of them, now that the battle cry of getting government off people's backs has replaced the cry for consumer power?

"For the past six or seven years we've been biding our time, waiting for a better political climate," Fellmeth said from his office at the University of San Diego Law School. "But these things are cyclical. In 5 or 10 years, we'll see a resurgence."

In the meantime, most of the activists have found their own means

Please see FELLMETH, Page 2

SHELLEY GAZIN

2 Part V/Thursday, January 13, 1983 J

Los Angeles Times

FELLMETH: Crusader Stays on Course With Center for Public Interest Law at USD

Continued from First Page

of keeping the movement alive. Fellmeth, 36, has played a particularly active role.

He has served as an assistant district attorney in San Diego, handling a variety of consumer-oriented white-collar crime and antitrust cases. Included was the landmark decision in 1981 that struck down the sales commission practices of California Realtors as a form of price fixing.

Now he teaches law at USD, where he directs the Center for Public Interest Law, established in 1980. He's also a director of the Consumers Union, he is writing four books—including a casebook on consumer law—and until recently he was a member of the Del Mar Air Board.

He retains the rumpled, harried and slightly menacing appearance that characterized Nader and his followers in their heyday, and he remains captivated by Nader's central theme.

'Ninth-Grade Civics'

"His whole schtick is ninth-grade civics," Fellmeth said. "He's saying, 'I like so much what I was told government was like in ninth grade that I'm going to create that government.'"

What was taught about separation of powers and checks and balances has been lost to pressures from special interests and collusion between government and the business sector, the Nader argument goes, so the goal of the consumer movement must be to return government to its civics class purity.

Fellmeth pursued that goal with Nader for five years, helping research and write the FTC report and several others, including the controversial "Politics of Land," a 73-page attack on California land use. He also served as a major recruiter and fund-raiser and as a director of the Nader Congress Project, which produced detailed profiles on every member of Congress.

The Center for Public Interest Law at USD is a continuation of that pursuit. With about 40 law students and four faculty members, the center's major responsibility is to play watchdog over the more than 60 governmental regulatory agencies in California.

"One of the enormous deceptions the right wing has put on is the notion that the consumer movement has been responsible for the overregulation of America," Fellmeth said. "The fact is that the vast majority of regulation is for business and to the benefit of business. With the exception of environmental and health and safety regulation, most regulation has been established by business to avoid the marketplace and to allow collusion."

Monitoring Agencies

Fellmeth's students monitor the activities of agencies ranging from the Coastal Commission and the Department of Food and Agriculture to the Board of Cosmetology and the Structural Pest Control Board. Four times a year they publish the California Regulatory Law Reporter, a thick journal chronicling and critiquing the performances of the state agencies.

Leading off the most recent issue is a study of the Board of Fabric Care that typifies the center's view of regulation. It says the board, which licenses and regulates dry cleaners, is in the unusual position of possessing a $1-million surplus and annual budget of $806,000.

"How, you may ask, in light of the current political consensus against unnecessary government regulation and spending, does an agency like the Board of Fabric Care not only survive but seemingly prosper? The answer is very simple and straightforward. The Board of Fabric Care exists because dry cleaners want to be regulated and their trade association has the political clout to ensure that they are."

Fellmeth contends many industries want regulation to control competition and that, whether or not the regulating agencies are necessary, they are often bogged down in ridiculous debates.

"They're doing all sorts of crazy, crazy things," said Fellmeth, who for four years served on the state Athletic Commission. "We had a full-length presentation before the Athletic Commission once for a real 'Battle of the Network Stars.' I mean, they really wanted to duke it out. They even had Jim Brown and Grizzly Adams lined up for the first fight."

Recognizing the overregulation problem, the state set up the Office of Administrative Law in 1980 to review all existing and proposed regulations and streamline the regulation process. The center has taken an active role in the process by submitting critiques of the agencies it monitors.

"These 40 students are having a major impact," Fellmeth said, "because their critiques are being incorporated into the new rules."

Another activity of the center has brought it more local visibility. Earlier this year it proposed that a

'Most regulation has been established by business to avoid the marketplace.'

nonprofit consumer utility board, the Utility Consumers Action Network, be established to represent the consumer viewpoint before the Public Utilities Commission (PUC). If established, the network would become an autonomous consumer organization, separate from the center.

A decision is pending on a proposal to solicit support for formation of a pilot group through notices placed in San Diego Gas & Electric Co. billings.

The idea is vigorously opposed by SDG&E, but Fellmeth contends it's only fair.

"We're asking for the right for ratepayers to get together so they can counter the organized interests that now dominate PUC discussions," he said.

A recurrent theme when Fellmeth speaks about reforming government is the need to provide a voice for those who are underrepresented.

"The consumer movement is an attempt to organize groups that have been traditionally unorganized," he said. His long-term goal is to establish an advocacy organization for children—the "ultimate unrepresented group."

As it stands now, Fellmeth contends that the business sector has been successful in controlling government through aggressive trade association action, lobbying and political contributions. The result is that the country is moving toward what Fellmeth calls industrial socialism—"where the means of production owns and operates the state."

"Businessmen want big government," he said, as long as it is controlled by business.

The charges are the type of rhetoric that reached a wide audience when Nader's Raiders were a potent force and the consumer movement was a popular front. Interest has ebbed, but Fellmeth is certain the issues are still valid and the consumer movement is still a "powerful latent force."

In fact, he believes the Reagan Administration will turn out to be a catalyst for renewed interest in consumer issues.

"The Reagan Administration identifies with a certain class of people, and it wants to favor them in a very direct way," he said. "Abuse in one direction galvanizes people the other way."

But time is limited for the consumer movement to once again capture the attention of the nation with the movement's goal of government as presented in ninth-grade civics.

"I'd give us 20 years to turn it around," Fellmeth said. "After that, we may need another revolution. And I'm not talking about a Marxist revolution. I'm talking about a revolution to restore the government of Jefferson and Washington and Adams."

LA JOLLA LIGHT

JAN 13 1983

Job Awareness Night attracts a crowd
Parishes recognize needs of unemployed in community

By MIKE KREY:

Mr. A., an architect of some repute in another country, finds it difficult to establish himself here.

Miss B., fresh from obtaining a master's degree in accounting, has returned to a San Diego job market tighter than she expected.

Student C. attends UCSD full time, but needs a part-time job. Mr. D., a retailer for more than 20 years, hopes to transfer into the management field.

Teens in sweatsuits and 60-year-olds in business suits attended Monday's Job Awareness Night, sponsored jointly by All Hallows and Mary, Star of the Sea parishes. The four persons identified above joined the middle-aged educator who has spent years looking for a job in her field and the recent Navy retiree who wants to return to the private sector.

Organizers expected a crowd of perhaps 40 or 50, but more than twice that number showed up.

"And some people actually believe the effects of the economy haven't reached La Jolla," said organizer Sara Finn. "Well, many of your neighbors are out of work."

The community's Catholic parishes have battled the situation since November, although Monday's program was their most ambitious and greatest effort. Clearly, the parishes see a need.

Finn told the gathering that a "painful letter" from a parishioner instigated the job program.

"That person had been out of work six months and wanted to know if anyone out there cared," Finn told the group.

Yet, Monday's was not a tear session. Instead, it focused on the problem and attempted to sharpen the skills needed to obtain a job.

A small announcement in the parish bulletins heralded the start of the job program. Parish leaders saw evidence of the need when 34 persons came to that initial meeting.

Already the parishes have on file a number of resumes. A job board lists possibilities. The response resulted in unsolicited contributions from parishioners and a staffed office will begin operating at All Hallows.

The job program has even included a gathering of employers, but Finn said the turn-out was disappointing. That was not the case Monday, where the group included several potential employers.

Resume writing, dressing for the job, getting into sales, changing jobs within your career and broadening your viewpoint were topics discussed.

In his opening talk, Robert

O'Neil, associate professor of economics at USD, tempered his prediction by warning of the unpredictability of economics.

"The joke is that students say my test questions are always the same," O'Neil told the group. "True, but I change the answers."

O'Neil said the statistics are not in themselves encouraging: 10.8 percent unemployed; 1.8 million people who have given up hope of finding jobs; 2.6 million out of work more than six months.

"The key is that recently the Federal Reserve Board has taken a stimulative policy," O'Neil said. "Instead of following the federal fund rate, the Fed is pushing the federal fund rate."

"Leading indicators have risen seven out of the past eight months. Unemployment claims are down the past three weeks and new car sales are up 38 percent.

Please see JOB, A7

JOB

Continued from A1

"Unfortunately, unemployment tends to lag. I don't expect a strong, robust recovery, but an average recovery. I think unemployment will peak this month and fall below 10 percent by the end of the year."

Dennis Briscoe of USD's business school, emphasized using every conceivable contact.

"But ultimately you'll have to sell yourself," he said. "Discover an employer's need and try to fill it."

"And recharge yourself periodically. Get away and do something you really enjoy."

Carolyn Anderson, an assistant dean at USD's business school, stressed brevity, neatness and organization in resume writing.

"Make no errors and use quality paper," she said. "Be professional. Don't be cute, but at the same time don't be afraid to be personable. Never be modest, but don't blow smoke."

James Kassner, a dentist and health services consultant, focused on sales.

"The tougher the times, the more you need salespersons," he said. "By far, the largest category of jobs seen in classified ads are for sales.

"Try to distinguish the trend from the fad. A fad starts with a celebrity and will never last. Trends start at the bottom and you can't change them."

Susan K. Bennett, a color consultant and owner of her own business, said a job seeker never gets a second chance to make a first impression. She said every person looks best in a certain range of colors and that everyone should try to tailor his or her wardrobe to himself or herself.

Business consultant Ken Willig outlined a questionnaire he uses in helping job hunters find the position best for them.

"Where did we ever get the idea that our work is going to be something we don't like to do," he said.

Discussion of that questionnaire is scheduled for Monday at 7:30 p.m. at All Hallows, when the job program continues. Finn said evaluations of Job Awareness Night showed that almost all participants found it a "positive experience."

"I think the program's message is hope," Finn said, "but it's up to the job seekers to carry on themselves. They have to go out and make the calls."

Church support groups help the jobless here

By Jimmy Thornton
Tribune Consumer Writer

ABOUT THE WORST thing that can happen to a consumer is to lose a job. You can't buy much without money, money most people get through employment. And unemployment is an economic reality in San Diego County, where the jobless rate is hovering around 10.8 percent.

At least three churches in San Diego have not only recognized the jobless problem affecting their parishes, but are doing something about it. Call it modern-day manna.

All Hallows Catholic Church and Mary Star of the Sea Catholic Church have joined to establish a joint job program in an effort to help people in the La Jolla area find jobs and cope with the uncertainties of unemployment.

Another church, Our Mother of Confidence Catholic Church on Governor Drive, also has a support program aimed at helping jobless people in its parish.

Please see EMPLOY, D-2

★Employ

Continued From Page D-1

Under the La Jolla program which began in November, a series of meetings has been held to help the unemployed put their best feet forward in writing resumés, which are prepared with the help of experts in the field.

A chemical engineer who lost his job in September has praise for the resumé-writing program which has helped him prepare a new resumé. He has had 180 resumés printed and is now in the process of sending them to prospective employers.

A spokesman for the San Diego Catholic Diocese said as far as he knows, the three parishes are the only ones here with such programs.

The parish centers of the three churches serve as rallying points where potential employers and the jobless meet. While the churches are Catholic, all people within the parishes they serve are eligible to participate. The unemployed should submit resumés to the parish nearest them.

Sara Finn, director of public information at the University of San Diego, said the program has drawn in about 54 resumés and that the university is assisting the churches by supplying speakers, counselors and other experts via its community outreach program and speakers bureau. The churches encourage employers to make job openings known to them.

Finn said program leaders hope the La Jolla group will serve as a model that other churches, regardless of religion, can use as a guide in setting up their own programs.

The program is voluntary and aimed at achieving the following goals:

- How to prepare a resumé.
- How to conduct a job interview.
- How to dress for a job hunt.
- How to change careers.
- How to evaluate one's talents and apply them in other careers.
- How to get into sales jobs.

Volunteer speakers from the churches and the university give talks on how to pursue a career realistically in these hard times.

Finn said so far, the program is too young to realize its full potential. She said it has taken until recently to gain the confidence of the unemployed, who range from engineers and persons with doctoral degrees to recently graduated college students, among others.

Finn said one big problem confronting the support groups is finding jobs for women 40 and older who want either to enter or re-enter the job market. Many have husbands who recently lost jobs.

She said 90 percent of the jobless in their program have college degrees. They range in age from 20 to 63.

So far, a handful of participants have landed jobs since the program started in November.

It began when a man approached two pastors, Monsignor Patrick Fox of All Hallows and Monsignor James Gilfillan of Mary Star of the Sea, and told them he had been out of work for six months and wanted to know if the churches were going to help the jobless in their parishes. The two pastors saw an area where Christian charity could be put to work to aid the jobless.

The program is announced at each mass and in the church bulletins.

The churches also will be posting jobs that are available, and community businessmen are invited to offer jobs through the support groups, which meet Monday nights.

Two weeks ago, a Job Awareness Night was observed at All Hallows Parish Center. It included an economic forecast by Dr. Robert O'Neil, associate professor of economics at the USD School of Business Administration; a slide presentation on dressing for the job interview; round table discussion on writing resumés and a talk on career changes. All the speakers donated their time.

So far, only $100 has been spent on the entire job program, for refreshments at a support group meeting.

At Our Mother of Confidence, the support groups meet in its parish center on Wednesdays. The following notice ran in its bulletin Sunday:

"Search. Anyone who is not employed and is searching for full-time employment or who feels present employment is only temporary and is looking for employment commensurate with one's skills and training, is invited to attend a support group meeting held on Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. in the Parish Resources Center. One does not have to be a member of the parish to participate."

The support groups are more than job exchanges. As the name implies, members give each other moral support in hard times, when the trauma of job loss increases self-doubt. The groups meet and share experiences and offer advice on how to cope.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

JAN 13 1983

World Bank Director At Law School Talk

James Burnham, U.S. Executive Director of the World Bank, will talk on "International Lending for Development in an Uncertain World" next Wednesday, Jan. 19, 12:30 p.m., in Grace Courtroom at USD (located on 3rd floor of law school).

Burnham received his A.B., Cum Laude, at Princeton U., and his Ph.D. in 1970 following graduate study at Washington U. in St. Louis.

He served as a special assistant to the Chairman and Staff Director of the President's Council of Economic Advisors last year before being appointed to his position with the World Bank.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 14 1983

TOM BLAIR

SAN DIEGO SEEN: Jeff Marston, the savvy young aide to former Sen. Sam Hayakawa, lost his job when Hayakawa lost his. And so he went down to the unemployment office on Wednesday — and figured he was in good company when he heard a clerk call out: "Ernest Hahn! Ernest Hahn!" Slip of the tongue. She meant, the clerk explained, to call for a former employee of Ernest Hahn Inc. ... Pat Mooney, marketing man for Carta Blanca beer, a co-sponsor of tomorrow's Cop'er Bowl game, heaved a sigh when word came yesterday that the Jets-Raiders game would be blacked out. "The Heat and County Mounties should be a better show anyway," figures Mooney. "In this game, you don't have pass attempts, you have quotas." ... Would it amuse you to learn that Isobel Law is director of admissions at USD Law School? Then you may stop reading.

LA PRENSA

JAN 14 1983

Law School To Offer Courses In Mexican Legal System

The Mexico-U.S. Law Institute of the University of San Diego School of Law will offer an 18-session course in the Mexican legal system beginning in late January, according to an announcement by Sheldon Krantz, dean of the School, who described the project as "the first of many similar efforts to increase understanding about the Mexican legal system for lawyers and other interested persons in the San Diego area."

The course is structured to provide an introductory pair of sessions in late January (date to be announced), followed by seven weeks of two sessions each, covering topics including "Introduction to the Study of Mexican Law and the Origin and Evolution of Legal Education in Mexico," "The Mexican Government Legal Structure Today," civil, commercial, business, and trade laws, the Mexican Federal Civil code, the law of the sea, criminal law and penal code, and "Mexico and International Law and Diplomacy." Members of the faculty are: Professor Alfonso DeLimon, USD adjunct faculty member and consultant to the Institute; Dr. Miguel Acosta Romero, dean of the Law School of the Universidad Nacional Autonoma de Mexico; Dr. Raul Cervantes Ahumada, dean of Graduate Legal Studies, Universidad Nacional; Professor Michael W. Gordon, University of Florida; Professor Guillermo Floris Margadant, Universidad Nacional; Dr. Jorge Vargas, visiting scholar at UCSD's United States-Mexican Studies Program and adjunct professor at the USD law school; Dr. Jose de Jesus Ledesma, dean of the School of Law Iberoamericana; and Dr. Cesar Sepulveda director of Matias Romero Institute of Diplomatic Studies.

Dean Krantz described the course faculty as "leading scholars" and said they will provide knowledgeable and stimulating insights into the Mexican legal system.

DeLimon said the course is open to USD law students, students of other area law schools on an audit basis, attorneys, and academics. There will be no charge for the course beyond the cost of reproduction of related materials, estimated at $50. All sessions will run on Mondays and Wednesdays from 1 to 3 p.m. The complete schedule is available by contacting the USD School of Law, Alcalá Park, San Diego 92110 or by calling 619/291-6480, extension 4816.

EVENING TRIBUNE

JAN 15 1983

Eastern rite led way for married Catholic priests

By Robert Di Veroli
Tribune Religion Writer

Although the San Diego Roman Catholic Diocese will ordain its first married Western rite priest next month, he will not be the diocese's first married Catholic pastor.

Two former pastors of Our Lady of Perpetual Help Ukrainian Catholic Church — the Rev. Michael Koltitsky and the Rev. Sylvester Salamon — were married when they pastored the church at 4014 Winona Ave.

The church's current pastor, the Rev. Michael Kurylo, isn't married, nor was its first, the Rev. Stefan Semchuk.

The Ukrainian church is one of two Byzantine rite Catholic churches in San Diego that permit married priests. The other is Holy Angels Byzantine Catholic Church at 2235 Galahad Road, but its current priest, the Rev. Joseph Ridella, isn't married, nor have its past priests been.

A married priesthood is permitted in most Byzantine, or Eastern rite, Catholic churches, but is forbidden in the Latin, or Western rite, which includes most churches in Europe and the Western Hemisphere and is by far the larger.

Under a special policy promulgated by Pope John Paul II in 1980, however, former Episcopal priests who have joined the Catholic Church are eligible for a dispensation from the Western rite clerical celibacy rule.

Three such priests were ordained last year in the United States. The fourth, the Rev. Dr. Raymond O. Ryland, a professor in the religious studies department at the University of San Diego, will be ordained Feb. 12 at St. Mary Magdalene Catholic Church.

Ryland, who will be the diocese's first married Western rite Catholic priest, was an Episcopal priest from 1950 until 1963.

The Rev. Michael Gallagher of the diocesan marriage tribunal said clerical celibacy is a practice that goes back to the beginning of the Catholic Church, but was made mandatory only in the 12th century.

Even though it was not obligatory, celibacy was practiced in both East and West by monks, bishops and many priests who wished to follow the example of celibacy set by Christ and most of the Apostles, Gallagher says.

"Priestly celibacy had been a long tradition, though not mandated by law, and they kept trying to make laws about it," Gallagher said.

But while celibacy was the unwritten, though not universally followed, law throughout the early centuries of the church, the Eastern and Western Catholic churches parted company on the issue in the 12th century, when the Western church made it mandatory, Gallagher said.

The rule was decreed by the First and Second Lateran Councils at that time and reaffirmed by the Council of Trent in 1563 in response to Martin Luther and other Reformers who advocated a married clergy.

B-10 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

①

Saturday, January 15, 1983

Married USD Professor Will Be Ordained As A Catholic Priest

By RITA GILLMON
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Though a married man with grown children, Ray Ryland will be ordained a priest in the Roman Catholic Church here next month.

Ryland, a professor of Religious Studies at the University of San Diego and a former Episcopal priest, is eligible for ordination under a 1980 ruling from the Vatican whereby married men who are former Episcopal priests can practice their priesthood in the Catholic Church.

The ruling came after a group of Episcopal priests left the Episcopal Church following its decision to ordain women in 1976 and petitioned for acceptance into the Catholic Communion and the right to continue practicing as priests.

Ryland, though not a member of this group, will benefit from the ruling.

Normally, to be ordained a priest in the Western Rite Church, a man must take a vow of celibacy. The dispensation states that this is an exception and if such an ordained man becomes a widower, he must remain single. Three other married Episcopal priests in the United States have already been ordained under this dispensation.

They are the Rev. James Parker of Springfield, Mo.; the Rev. Daniel Munn of Augusta, Ga.; and the Rev. Dennis Kuhn of Henderson, N.C.

Bishop Leo T. Maher of the San Diego Catholic Diocese, said he petitioned for Ryland to be ordained as soon as the ruling was made. "We have a two-page letter from the Congregation of the Faith giving permission for his ordination," Maher said.

"Ryland also took all the examinations for priest candidates."

The ceremony will take place at 10:30 a.m. Feb. 12 at St. Mary Magdalene's Catholic Church.

Ryland, who was an Episcopal priest for 13 years, joined the Catholic Church in 1963 out of conviction that it teaches the truth. He has been teaching at the University of San Diego since 1969 and, he says, praying for the opportunity to practice as a priest.

"My wife and I have both been praying for this day. We are together on this, as we have been on everything," Ryland said. "We are just very thankful."

He has been a permanent deacon since 1970 and for the past year has been assigned to St. Mary Magdalene's helping with pastoral duties. As a deacon he was not able to celebrate Mass, the central act of worship for the church, or hear confessions.

"After my ordination, I will still be a teacher as my full-time profession," Ryland said.

The traffic is not all one-way. Clergy of the Episcopal Church have moved to the Catholic Church as well.

The Episcopal Church is one of the Anglican branches of the church which developed out of the Church of England. This was formed in the 16th century when the English branch of the church broke away from the Catholic Church. Of all the churches formed during the Protestant Reformation, including the Lutheran and Reformed Churches, the Anglican churches retained the most elements of the larger church.

The San Diego Union/Jerry McHard

Ray Ryland in his office at the University of San Diego.

The Episcopal Church has bishops, as the Catholic church does, but does not recognize the pope as the head of the church.

Down the street from St. Mary Magdalene's is St. David's Episcopal Church where the Rev. Bill Mahedy, who was an Augustinian priest in the Catholic Church, is on the staff.

"I just think this is very good news, even though I don't know Ryland. I think this validates the cross traffic. I have been telling Episcopalians to visit Catholic churches and encouraging Catholics to investigate Episcopal spirituality," Mahedy said.

Mahedy said that as a Catholic chaplain, he first became impressed with the Anglican tradition while overseas. "I found the Book of Common Prayer very similar to what we used in the Augustinian Order," he said.

Mahedy however, did not have to be re-ordained to be a priest in the Episcopal Church. "That is intellectually untenable (re-ordination) because all the theologians have agreed there isn't a dime's worth of difference between the Catholics and Anglicans," he said. "Maher no doubt has to go along with Rome on this."

"As a priest, I was received and welcomed by the Bishop of Los Angeles (the Right Rev. Robert Rusk) as a priest for this branch of the Catholic Church," Mahedy said.

Gallagher said a form of celibacy is still practiced in the Eastern rite churches. Monks and bishops are required to be celibate, and priests may not marry if they become widowers or are unmarried at ordination.

Most of the 13 churches in the Byzantine rite of the Catholic church — largest of four Eastern rite Catholic churches — still follow this rule.

Kurylo, of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, said Eastern churches have a different rule on celibacy because Eastern rite churches have "a different mentality, philosophy, spiritual life and tradition" from Western churches.

He says there are legitimate arguments both for and against a married priesthood.

"You must remember that St. Peter was a widower, although the rest of the Apostles probably were not married," Kurylo said.

Ridella said the differences between Eastern and Western churches aren't doctrinal.

"They have the same doctrines, the difference being a matter of style," he said.

He said a 1929 rule promulgated by the Vatican prohibits the ordination of married Eastern rite priests in the United States, but permits their ordination elsewhere. The Ukrainian Catholic church's two married pastors were ordained either before 1929 or received the sacrament of Holy Orders somewhere besides in the United States, Ridella said.

Gallagher said the priestly celibacy rule is still viable in the 20th century.

"It's worked well in the church from a practical point of view," Gallagher said.

"It's not a denigration of marriage," he said. "What it comes down to is the freedom of the heart, a gift from God to witness to the fact that God's love extends even to the unmarried state, to anticipate the kingdom in the next life, where Jesus said (Matthew 22:30) there would be no marriage."

He said this is repeated in Luke 20, which says that "they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that (the next) world and the resurrection from the dead neither marry nor are given in marriage."

"It's a sign that reaches beyond this life to the next," Gallagher said. "Marriage, in a way, is a sign, too, because it's a sign of God's love for the church, but the two signs go together."

"Strangely enough, wherever marriage is valued highly, celibacy is also valued highly and where marriage is denigrated, celibacy is denigrated. The two go together in a very paradoxical way."

Gallagher said the church has always viewed celibacy as a special vocation which, according to Matthew 19:10-12 and 1 Corinthians 7:7, is a practice not all men can accept.

Choice in education extolled *Furay

By Sister Sally Furay
Vice President
University of San Diego

My view is that it is to the advantage of the nation to maintain a policy which ensures for its citizens access and choice in higher education.

Because there is a large public sector of education, independent or private schools have the role of providing students with their choice in education.

The Reagan administration has proposed severe cuts in financial aid to schools. Fortunately, Congress has not agreed with him up to now.

If the administration wants to keep the private sector strong, as it has said all along, it is favoring a policy that will do the opposite. Budget cuts already made are forcing the private sector to close.

SISTER SALLY FURAY
USD administrator

Continued from Page X-59

ing students into public institutions and forcing the government to pay more in funding to support these additional students.

The net effect of this cutback will be the closing of a number of smaller institutions. Some of the private prestigious schools, such as Harvard and Yale, won't be affected because they'll always have students who want to attend. And there are selective liberal arts colleges that will survive.

But the greatest risk of all is to the small liberal arts colleges in less densely populated, or rural, areas, in states that are losing population. I feel a number of them will close.

You add the decline in school-age population and the decrease in federal funding, and you have a crisis situation for some small colleges.

SD BUSINESS JOURNAL

JAN 17 1983

Judge LOUIS M. WELSH, recently retired jurist of the California Superior Court, has joined the San Diego Law Center at the University of San Diego Law School where he will develop programs and teach civil procedure classes.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JAN 17 1983

James Burnham, U.S. executive director of the World Bank, will speak at University of San Diego on Wednesday at 12:30 in Grace Courtroom, More Hall. The topic will be "International lending for development in an uncertain world."

SD BUSINESS NEWS

JAN 17 1983

Judge Louis M. Welsh, recently retired from the Calif. Superior Court, has joined the faculty of the SD Law Center at the University of San Diego School of Law.

JAN 19 1983

Tribune photos by John Gibbins
Jim Donovan, seeking a job as a chemical engineer, looks over the job board at All Hallows Church with pastor Monsignor Patrick Fox, above. Below, Sara Finn, left, reads resumes with Jill Pflaum, who's looking for work in the sales/marketing field, and Donovan.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 20 1983

TOM BLAIR

Read Between The Dots

PLEASE STAND BY: The Old Globe Theatre's historic experiment with live TV — the national broadcast Tuesday night over PBS of "The Skin of Our Teeth" — came off with a minimum of stumbles. And artistic director Jack O'Brien's mixing of theater and television was masterful. Perhaps too masterful. At the opening of the third act, actor Jonathan McMurtry, playing the part of "Stage Manager," came out to announce that several actors had fallen ill. It would be necessary, he said, for crew members to fill in. From the booth, O'Brien's across America: "We're with you, Jon. Just keep going." McMurtry did, of course, and so did the cast; it was all in Thornton Wilder's script. But in the staged confusion, a technician at WNET, the PBS affiliate in New York, apparently decided to spare our Globe embarrassment. He cut from the theater to his station's logo.

SAN DIEGO SHUFFLE: Cover boy: Steve Garvey was back in San Diego this week, his second visit since signing his multimillion-dollar pact with the Padres. Garvey's frenetic Tuesday schedule included posing for the cover of Sport Magazine (April issue), North County Entertainer (March), SD Magazine (April), and a raft of publicity stunts. On his own time, he bought four season tickets and traded autographs. Garvey signed a baseball for Chargers quarterback Dan Fouts; Fouts signed a football for Garvey. ... Padres Pres. Ballard Smith signed a football for Garvey. ... Padres Pres. Ballard Smith arrived a bit late for a speech Tuesday to the SD Wholesale Credit Assn. "I was busy talking with Steve Garvey," he explained. "Actually, I was talking to him about a loan. He's got all our money." ... Pete Wilson has tapped Katherine Holladay, a former tennis pro, as No. 2 aide in his regional Senate office here. Holladay, once ranked tops in women's doubles in Southern California, is a former aide to Rep. Wayne Grisham. ... Rolf Benirschke was the subject in that local taping of Ralph Edwards' pilot for a resurrected "This Is Your Life." "A six-hanky half-hour," says an observer.

DON'T CALL US: Dana Bigboy, the 22-year-old San Diego man who was rendered a paraplegic five years ago after a car crash on Proctor Valley Road, won a $2.25 million judgment against the county last fall. Bigboy claimed the county was negligent in not posting proper warning signs on the curvy road. A jury agreed. But Bigboy's no millionaire today. A Superior Court judge lowered the jury award to $1.75 million. The county, according to Bigboy's attorney, Brian Monaghan, indicated it would appeal. And so Bigboy appealed the lowered judgment. That ties up the money while Bigboy, his wife and family subsist on Social Security and welfare. Barely. Last month, he ran up a hefty phone bill with calls to New Mexico after his brother's 17-year-old wife died there. Winter heating bills sent his SDG&E bill skyrocketing. He couldn't pay. The Gasco threatened to cut off service. PacTel did. But this week, Bigboy says he worked out repayment schedules with both utilities. SDG&E won't be cutting him off. And PacTel has restored phone service — for incoming calls only. Meanwhile, interest on the money Bigboy can't touch accrues at $437 a day.

DOTTED NOTES: Among students who've come through USD Law School under director of admissions Isobel Law: Martha Lawless, and John Moot, an attorney with Federal Defenders, is a fourth-generation Moot in court. ... Linda Schaefer, who co-anchored the Channel 39 news for a year (until last June), is moving to Texas. She's signed as a co-anchor at KTBC, the CBS affiliate in Austin. ... Stern warning on a sign outside Satin Scissors, the Pt. Loma groomers and pet supply: "These Premises Protected By An Attack Gerbil." ... National University would appear to be changing image. Lisa Longacre and Sharon Jones, first and second runners-up in the Miss California USA pageant, are NU coeds.

SENTINEL

JAN 30 1983

USD will host wine tasting seminar

"Contrast in excellence," a wine seminar that compares selections of the finest wines, will be held at the University of San Diego on four consecutive Tuesday evenings from 6:30 to 9:00 p.m. beginning Feb. 1.

Sponsored by USD's division of Continuing Education, "Contrast in Excellence" will be led by Dan Berger, wine columnist for six publications including the San Diego Union and San Diego Home-Garden Magazine. For information and registration, call 293-4585.

Registration is $20 for individual sessions; $60 for the four seminar series. A Valentine special is available at $100 per couple.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

JAN 20 1983

Grace Courtroom Talk

"A Conservative Program for Protecting Consumers" will be laid out by Timothy Muris, Director of the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection, at USD's Grace Courtroom (3rd floor of law school), on Jan. 27, 1 p.m.

Muris graduated from S.D. State U. in 1971 with high honors and distinction in his special major combining history, economics and political science. He received his Juris Doctorate from UCLA in '74.

Most recently, Muris has served as Deputy Counsel for the Presidential Task Force on Regulatory Relief.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JAN 20 1983

Attys. Roberta Robinson and Colin Fort will lead a special presentation on "New Changes in the Probate Court" at noon Tuesday, Jan. 25, in the Salomon auditorium in De Sales Hall at the University of San Diego.

Subjects to be covered will include elimination of testamentary trust accountings, statutory wills, expansion of Section 630 and interest rates in pecuniary bequests.

There will be no charge for attendance. Sack lunches will be provided at $3.50 if requested in advance. Reservations are being taken by Shirley Taylor, assistant for planned giving, at the university.

NEWS-CHIEFTAIN

JAN 20 1983

Michael Furgal

receives degree

Michael J. Furgal son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Furgal of Poway, received his BBA in December from the University of San Diego, Magna Cum Laude.

Furgal, a 1980 graduate of Poway High School, is married and lives with his wife, Debbie, in San Diego.

Saturday, January 22, 1983

La Jolla Parishes Helping Job-Seekers

By RITA GILLMON
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

When people lose their jobs, they will usually turn to a private employment firm or the state Employment Development Department. One man asked his pastor, "Can I expect help from my church?"

Response to this question has led to development of a jobs program at the All Hallows and Mary Star of the Sea Catholic parishes in La Jolla.

Monsignor Patrick Fox, pastor of All Hallows, and Monsignor James Gilfillan, pastor of Mary Star of the Sea, were disturbed about a letter they received from a man who had been unemployed for six months and wondered if anyone in the La Jolla community, known for its well-to-do atmosphere, cared about those without work.

"There is a terrible stress in losing a job. It is like losing a loved one," Fox said. "Our emphasis with this program is on hope. We had one man who has been attending our meetings say that even if no job came out of this, at least he knew the church was reaching out to him."

The program is being coordinated by Sara Finn, public relations director of the University of San Diego, but most of the actual work, she said, is being done by the unemployed themselves.

"We just provided the resources from the parish, the community and the university, for helping people re-evaluate their situation and to feel good about themselves again," Finn said. "We are trying to serve the La Jolla area, but not restricting ourselves to Catholics."

The group of unemployed has met several times at All Hallows and has had instruction in preparing resumes, conducting job interviews and evaluating their skills. Many of the unemployed in La Jolla, including professionals, have little experience in resume-writing or interviewing for a job, since they have never been out of work before.

Finn has also rounded up employers to attend the meetings and list job openings with the program.

"We are now in the process of printing the list by job categories and calling those unemployed in our program who will fit one of those jobs. We don't get the job for them. They have to do that themselves," Finn said.

Doris Dee is one of the unemployed persons who have volunteered time to work on the job program at All Hallows. "I have the resumes that have been turned in and am helping prepare a job list," Dee said. "These are mature people who are highly competent, many with high specialization. One of the problems when they are looking for work, is employers don't recognize that competence if it isn't in their specific area. There is very little scrutiny of people's ability to shift gears."

Dee is an unemployed teacher of art history who last worked in her field for three years at UCSD.

"I have done other things just to live — publishing, translating and other creative projects — but not teaching. It is 10 years of training going to waste. Also the longer you are away from it, the further behind you get and you lose touch with your former colleagues," she said, adding that the same problem afflicts most professionals who are out of work.

Ken Willig, a business consultant who has participated in the meetings of unemployed at All Hallows, said he is trying to get those thrown out of work to look at it as an opportunity, rather than a disaster.

"One of the things I have been doing in recent years, is counseling people on career changes," Willig said. "It is sometimes hard to get them to look beyond the slot they are in because it involves a risk. If they are unemployed it is easier. They are willing to look at options."

Willig, a member of All Hallows Parish, said he tries to convince people that they are not just looking for a job, but are seeking peace, joy and happiness.

"Rarely do we plan our careers with this in view. Many people just fall into a particular career by happenstance," he said. "They should be seeking what is God's will for their lives in view of their God-given gifts and talents."

Willig said the job program has benefitted La Jolla's unemployed, even before they have gotten a job. "When a person loses a job, there is a fast growth of insecurity and anger. As soon as they get started in this process of evaluating their skills, they feel better," he said. "Isn't it wonderful the community is reaching out and doing this without waiting for the government? I hope seeing these people using their talents this way is contagious and spreads elsewhere."

Finn said that she has already had inquiries from a church in Newport Beach about visiting there to tell them how to set up a program like this.

"We obviously can't expand this program to cover a large area, but I hope other neighborhoods begin to do this," Finn said. "It is important for the unemployed to run the program themselves. It is their program. We are there to provide expertise."

As a beginning at sharing the idea, Finn said a meeting has been set up Feb. 1 at USD for diocesan priests and university experts to plan a way to reach other communities.

Fox said he wants others to know about the program, but, "We don't want them to get the idea they can't do this themselves. Most communities have more resources than they think." "If nothing ever comes of this, at least I know the church is reaching out to me," said a woman who has attended the meetings.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

JAN 20 1983

USD Third Age Alumni Meeting

Alumni of USD's University of the Third Age will meet on Sunday, Jan. 30, 2 p.m. in the Hahn Nursing Auditorium. Contact: 291-6480, ext.4271.

There will be a slide presentation of last summer's project which took USD students and faculty advisors to Peru to learn of the life and culture of people living in Chulucanas.

$500,000 Gift Made To USD By Rancho Santa Fe Couple

The University of San Diego is the recipient of a $500,000 gift from C. Ray Harmon and his wife, Lou, of Rancho Santa Fe to be used for the School of Education.

The gift was announced by USD President Author E. Hughes at the university's annual President's Club dinner yesterday.

Harmon is a businessman and investor in California and the West. The Harmons are members of the President's Club and parents of a USD student, Heather, a sophomore business major. They made the gift as part of the university's capital campaign announced in November 1982.

The gift equals one given by San Diego businessman Douglas Manchester in 1981, and the two represent the largest single gifts ever given by an individual or non-foundation benefactor.

Harmon said the gift was given out of more than the "special affection" we have for the university and the fact that our daughter is enrolled on campus.

"The University of San Diego," Harmon said, "represents the best of what private education is all about, in its dedication to excellence and its concern for the human as well as the academic development of its students."

A building that is to be used for the School of Education will be renamed "Harmon Hall" and become the first of the campus' present structures to bear the name of a donor.

The building now houses the School of Business. After extensive renovation, made possible by the Harmons' gift, it will become the new home for the growing School of Education, when the business school moves into new quarters in 1984.

The renovated building will contain four classrooms, a seminar room, 22 faculty offices, a curriculum resource center, student lounge, dean's office and administrative center.

Dr. Edward DeRoche is dean of the school, which was established in 1972 and currently has 325 students. It offers master's degrees in counseling education, curriculum and instruction, educational administration and special education and a doctorate in educational leadership.

USD receives $500,000 gift from family

The University of San Diego has received a gift of $500,000 from C. Ray and Lou Ann Harmon of Rancho Santa Fe.

The donation, announced by USD President Author Hughes at the university's annual President's Club dinner Saturday, is said to equal the largest single gift to USD from an individual.

The money will be used to renovate the School of Business Administration building to house USD's expanding School of Education, Hughes said.

When the renovation is completed, probably in the fall of 1984, the building will be known as Harmon Hall. It will contain four classrooms, a seminar room, 22 faculty offices, a curriculum resource center, student lounge, dean's office and administrative center.

JAN 2 4 1983

RSF couple give $500,000 to USD

SAN DIEGO — Saying their "special affection" for the University of San Diego was one of the reasons, a Rancho Santa Fe couple has given the school a $500,000 gift.

C. Ray Harmon, a businessman and investor, and his wife Lou asked that the gift go to USD's School of Education, a building which is being renovated.

Author E. Hughes, president of USD, announced the gift at the university's annual President's Club dinner Saturday. The gift equals the largest previous donation, made in 1981 by San Diego businessman Douglas Manchester.

Hughes said the building housing the School of Education will be renamed "Harmon Hall," the first building of the campus' present structures to be named for a donor.

Harmon said the gift was given out of more than the "special affection" we have for the university and the fact that our daughter is enrolled on campus.

"The University of San Diego represents the best of what private education is all about, in its dedication to excellence and its concern for the human as well as the academic development of its students," Harmon said.

A RANCHO SANTA FE COUPLE has given $500,000 to the University of San Diego. Ray Harmon, a businessman and investor, and his wife, Lou, asked that the gift go to USD's School of Education, a building which is being renovated. Author Hughes, president of USD, said the gift equals the largest previous donation, made in 1981 by San Diego businessman Douglas Manchester. Hughes said the building housing the School of Education will be renamed Harmon Hall, the first building of the campus' present structures to bear the name of a donor. The Harmons have a daughter attending the university.

SAN DIEGO NEWSLINE

JAN 2 6 1983

— Bureau of Consumer Protection director Timothy Muris will speak at the University of San Diego, in the Grace Courtroom of More Hall at 1 p.m. 291-6480, ext. 4296.

VISTA PRESS

JAN 2 4 1983

USD gift of $500,000

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Saying their "special affection" for the University of San Diego was one of the reasons, a Rancho Santa Fe couple has given the school a $500,000 gift.

C. Ray Harmon, a businessman and investor, and his wife Lou asked that the gift go to USD's School of Education, a building which is being renovated.

Author E. Hughes, president of USD, announced the gift at the university's annual President's Club dinner Saturday. The gift equals the largest previous donation, made in 1981 by San Diego businessman Douglas Manchester.

Hughes said the building housing the School of Education will be renamed "Harmon Hall," the first building of the campus' present structures to be the name of a donor.

BLADE TRIBUNE

JAN 2 5 1983

Topic Of Talk Is Consumerism

SAN DIEGO — Bureau of Consumer Protection Director Timothy Muris will speak at University of San Diego Thursday, Jan. 27 at 1 p.m. in the Grace Courtroom, More Hall.

"A Conservative Program for Protecting Consumers," will be presented by Muris, consumer protection director since October 1981.

The public is invited to attend the presentation coordinated by USD Distinguished Professor of Law Bernard Siegan.

Muris, who holds a J.D.,

Order of the Coif, from the University of California, Los Angeles, served as deputy counsel, Presidential Task Force on Regulatory Relief in 1981. From 1976 to 1981, Muris was on the faculty of the University of Miami School of Law.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JAN 2 6 1983

Judge Louis M. Welsh, who recently retired from San Diego Superior Court, has joined the San Diego Law Center at the University of San Diego School of Law, where he also will co-teach classes in civil procedure.

Sheldon Krantz, dean of the law school, said Welsh will work with Atty. Carol Hallstrom in developing alternatives to litigation in business disputes.

The Dispute Resolution Center of the San Diego Law Center was established last October, funded in part by a $125,000 grant from the Weingart Foundation. A demonstration project is expected to be under way by the end of this academic year.

HAZEL TOW

TRIBUNE SOCIETY EDITOR

THE BIG NEWS WAS ANNOUNCEMENT of a $500,000 gift to the University of San Diego but there was even more encouraging news for members of the USD President's Club at Saturday's dinner gathering on the university campus. Dr. Author E. Hughes made the announcement of the gift and added that last year the collective contributions of club members totalled more than $400,000.

Dr. Hughes praised members for their participation in the growth of the university and thanked them for financial support as well as interest in campus programs. He also noted that through the club and members of the Ronald Maudsley Fellows, $1,360,000 was contributed to the university in 1982.

The new gift from Mr. and Mrs. C. Ray Harmon will be used to renovate the School of Business building for future use by the School of Education, he said. The Harmons are members of the club, but were not present for the announcement. Their daughter Heather is a sophomore business major at USD.

Dr. Hughes's remarks came after dinner served in the James S. Copley Library, a facility to be expanded by the addition of a larger building next door and to be named the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library. Ground-breaking took place late last year.

Some 175 members and guests attended Saturday's black-tie dinner marking the 10th anniversary of the club. They were welcomed by Dr. and Mrs. Hughes and Josiah L. Nepper, club president, and Mrs. Nepper, in the foyer of Founders Hall. During the reception hour, student musicians David Conroy on cello, Patsy Conroy, vocalist, and Amy Wayne at the piano, entertained in the adjoining French parlor.

Following dinner and the program of introductions, music director Bob Austin presented four students in a vocal program — Cathleen Hannasch, David Walling, Eric Jensen and Jim Morlino. Then the Windjammers played for dancing.

DINNER TABLES WERE COVERED in white and centered with clusters of magnolia leaves with white spider chrysanthemum blooms around large hurricane lamps holding white candles. The invocation was given by the Rev. Lawrence Dolan, university chaplain.

Guests included the Most Rev. Leo T. Maher, bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of San Diego, and other members of the clergy and of the university staff and faculty. Among the latter was Dr. Edward DeRoche of the education department, who was elated at the prospect of new quarters, and Mrs. DeRoche.

For some guests this was the second night on the black-tie party circuit. Among those who had attended Friday's dinner dance given by THE COMMITTEE at the new Reflections Lounge and Sheppard's restaurant at the Sheraton Harbor Island Hotel were Dr. and Mrs. Edmund L. Keeney, Mr. and Mrs. Alex De Bakcsy, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hazard and Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy.

Many guests had attended several of the President's Club parties and some were attending for the first time. In the latter group were Mr. and Mrs. Larry D. Hartwig, who moved to Rancho Bernardo less than a year ago. The Hartwigs have lived in the Far East for eight years, most recently in Manila where he was posted with the Bank of America. Mr. Hartwig, an executive with the bank here, is among the new members of the club.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilmi Bayindirli, who joined after moving to La Jolla from abroad, attended with Drs. Burt and Ethel Aginsky, also of La Jolla. Law professor C. Hugh Friedman was there with his wife, Lynn A. Schenk, and others from the legal community included Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hughes.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Ninteman of Leucadia attended a wedding reception in the afternoon and then changed into evening clothes at his office where nary a safety pin could be found when his tie came loose. Mrs. Ninteman managed to fasten it with a straight pin and promised to deliver a sewing kit to the office in case of future emergencies.

Dr. and Mrs. Milan Brandon brought son Mark. Mrs. Carlos Tavares attended with Robert Holmer, and more in the crowd were retired Rear Adm. and Mrs. Edward E. Grimm, Dr. and Mrs. Manuel Barba, Dr. and Mrs. Richard A. Gilman (it was their first club party), the Harold Sadlers, Douglas Manchesters, Lawrence W. Coxes, S. Falck Nielsen and George Vojtkos.

Scene ...

Tribune Photos
by Ian Dryden,
Carol Woods and George Smith

... Around Town

A President's Club dinner at USD, the San Diego Symphony Women's Committee luncheon and fashion show and a San Diego Consular Corps dinner dance were among the week's social events.

Ed and Jackie DeRoche, at the left, and Dr. Author Hughes are pictured at the USD President's Club dinner in photo at top left, and Sister Sally Furay, left, and Lynn Schenk chat at USD event, left.

W. Daniel Larsen, left, consul of Denmark in San Diego, accepts promotion to Knight of First Class of the Royal Order of Dannebrog in photo at top right. Henning Kristiansen, consul general of Denmark in Los Angeles, made the presentation for Queen Margrethe II of Denmark. Ray Lubach, left, Netherlands consul, and Hans W. Kraukau, German consul, chat at the same party.

And a model takes to the ramp at the Sheraton Harbor Island Hotel during the San Diego Symphony Women's Committee luncheon and fashion show.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

"September Song," says Marge Hughes, wife of University of San Diego President Author Hughes, "is our favorite song," but the Hugheses didn't get a chance to dance to it when it was played at the President's Club dinner-dance at USD's Copley Library. They were too busy being congratulated on the sweet music that president Hughes announced a few moments earlier, that the C. Ray Harmons had given $500,000 to renovate the Business Administration School for the School of Education.

Others present at the conclave included the Terrence Casters and the Michael Pearlmans, who are new life members; the Douglas Manchesters, whose leadership gift of $500,000 last year has been applied to funds for a new executive conference center; Eileen Monaghan Whitaker, the Josiah Neepers (Joe's emceeing added extra pizzazz to the meal); the Bernard Siegans, Clare Tavares with Bob Holmer, the David Fleets, Lowell Davieses, Bill Doyses, Frank Alessios, Joe Capozzi, O. Morris and LaWanda Sievert, the Ed Grimms, John Murphys, Bruce Hazards and Leo Roons, and Grayson Boehm with Dr. Ed. Sullivan.

Orange (Co.) Marmalade. Ele Darnell was the hostess at a whale-watching cruise and champagne luncheon at Dana Point for a boatload of "dental" wives from San Diego, Fallbrook and Mission Viejo. Her husband, retired Rear Adm. William Lloyd Darnell, is former head of San Diego's Naval Dental Center.

La Jollans Jim and Kathryn Colachis hosted a benefit dinner for the Laguna Beach Museum of Art at the newly decorated Towers restaurant of their Surf and Sand Hotel on the oceanfront at Laguna Beach.

— WILLIAM SULLIVAN

SD BUSINESS NEWS

JAN 3 1 1983

Herbert I. Lazerow, professor of law at the University of San Diego School of Law, has been awarded the Diplome D'Etudes Superieures Specialisees from the University of Paris as the result of a program in French taxation and corporate law.

The San Diego Union/Bob Redding

At the 10th annual President's Club dinner dance Saturday, USD president Author Hughes and his wife, Marge, dancing above; Anna and Leo Roon, below.

THE PARTY LINE

BURL STIFF

Bruce has worn a tux three nights in a row," grinned Mary Hazard, "and you know he doesn't like that."

The third black-tie party for the Hazards — and for many another guest — was the 10th annual President's Club dinner dance Saturday at the University of San Diego.

USD president Author Hughes and his wife, Marge, joined Rita and Josiah Neeper (he heads the President's Club Council) in greeting more than 150 university benefactors in the foyer of Founders Hall.

From there guests moved into the French Parlor for cocktails and then on to the James S. Copley Library for dinner and dancing. (The President's Club began in 1973 at a dinner party given by Helen and the late Jim Copley.)

At cocktail time, an exhibit called "Passionate Detail: Sculpture from the Grand Tour" lured partygoers like the Leo Roons, Happy Redfearn, Nathan Taylor, and the George Vojtkos into the university gallery. (A bronze, ivory and onyx Art Deco figure of Little Egypt, that legendary hootchy-kootchy dancer, is one of the show's treasures.)

After dinner, Author Hughes had a few words to say — including news of a $500,000 gift to the university from Lou and C. Ray Harmon of Rancho Santa Fe. That, Hughes pointed out, equals a 1981 gift from the Douglas Manchesters as the largest in the school's history from a private, non-foundation source.

The Harmons couldn't make the party Saturday night, but the Manchesters were there, along with other patrons of USD like Charlotte and Falck Nielsen, the George Pardees, Jane and John Murphy, Mary and Hal Sadler, LaWanda and Morris Sievert, Darlene and Lowell Davies, Celeste and Gene, Brenda and Frank Alessios, Lee and Larry Cor, and Doris and Peter Hughes.

Bishop Leo Maher was among the guests, and so were Louarn and David Fleet, Val and Jack Frager, Lynn Schenk and Hugh Friedman, Esther and Dr. Edmund Keeney, and Fran Steber with Bill Spangenberg. (Fran's dress — gray, studded with silver — was the one she wore to President Reagan's Inaugural Ball in Washington.)

USD students pitched in to help with the party, too. They parked cars, checked coats, played cocktail music, and staged an after-dinner musicale.

JAN 3 1983

San Diego, Monday,

San Diego Notepad

USIU, USD 'reopen' basketball season at home

Area college basketball action resumes tomorrow night with U.S. International University and University of San Diego both scheduled for games on their home courts.

USIU's Gulls, with only one win in their first 14 games, open a more favorable second half of the season — as far as home games are concerned — with an 8 p.m. contest against Chapman College (8-4) at Mira Mesa High.

USIU, which plays nine of its last 14 games at the Mira Mesa facility, continues to be paced by Nigel Lloyd, who is averaging 23.1 points per game. Lloyd has been hitting 52.1 percent of his field goal attempts and 85.7 percent on free throws.

Meanwhile, the Toreros shoot for a 500 record when they host Oklahoma Christian with a 7:30 tipoff. USD (5-6) hasn't played since defeating Idaho State 71-63 for third place in the Big Blue Tournament Wednesday night in Logan, Utah.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 4 1983

Toreros Await Flight Of Eagles

Oklahoma Christian College. For the record, they are the Eagles from Oklahoma City, members of the Sooner Athletic Conference.

OCC (13-2) also is one of the top small college basketball teams in America, currently ranked second by the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

Tonight the Eagles will visit the University of San Diego at 7:30 in Alcalá Park.

Last year the Eagles compiled a 33-3 record and spent most of this season ranked No. 1 by the NAIA. OCC features 6-11 Kenneth Orange (17.3 points, 8.6 rebounds), 6-9 Ron Webb (16.5 points, 9.7 rebounds), 6-6 Norvell Brown (19.5 points, 7.4 rebounds) and 6-3 guard Kelly Jobe (11.4 points, 9.8 assists).

USD has a 5-6 mark and is coming off a third-place finish at the Big Blue Classic at Utah State.

"We're improving," said Torero coach Jim Brovelli. "We've played well enough to be 6-5 or 7-4. We're starting to meld. I thought we played an outstanding second half in a loss to a Utah State team that is 10-1 in the first round of the Big Blue tourney."

Brovelli praised the recent improvement of forwards Rusty Whitmarsh (first team all-tournament in Utah), Anthony Reuss, Dave Melver and Robby Roberts and the play of point guard Rich Davis.

Davis is USD's leading scorer with 11.9 points a game. Whitmarsh is second at 10.4, followed by Roberts (8.6 plus 7.2 rebounds), Brian Setencich (8.3) and guard John Prunty (7.5).

— Bill Center

EVENING TRIBUNE

JAN 4 1983

LOCAL HOOPS — Tonight USD (5-6) hosts 13-2 Oklahoma Christian at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center. USIU (1-13) plays Chapman College at 8 at Mira Mesa High.

The Toreros won the consolation game of the Big Blue Classic at Logan, Utah, last week when they shot 60 percent and beat Idaho State 71-63 after being down nine points at the half. Forward Mike Whitmarsh made the all-tournament team. Oklahoma Christian is ranked second in the NAIA poll, and features a frontcourt that goes 6-foot-6, 6-9 and 6-10, and averages 18 points per game apiece.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

JAN 5 1983

Basketball:
USD rallies for win

• Guard Don Capener scored all of his 14 points in the second half Tuesday night, rallying the University of San Diego to a 70-61 college basketball victory over Oklahoma Christian College. The non-conference victory lifted USD's record to 6-6, while OCC dropped to 14-4.

Los Angeles Times JAN 5 1983

Toreros Escape With a 70-61 Victory

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Schedules are the darndest things. The University of San Diego sets up its basketball schedule two or three years ahead of time, and "there's no way to tell who will be good by then," said Coach Jim Brovelli.

USD is struggling to develop a reputation as a contender in its fourth season of Division I play. A few wins over small college teams won't hurt. But losses to them will.

When Tuesday night's opponent, Oklahoma Christian College, showed up at the USD Sports Center with a 14-3 record, a 6-11 center and a second place ranking in the National Assn. of Intercollegiate Athletics, the worrying began.

And the worrying didn't stop until USD won, 70-61. But the Toreros had fallen behind by eight points in the second half and there were plenty of sweating on the home bench.

USD came back in the second half with some solid rebounding and hot outside shooting (6 of 10) by Don Capener, who finished with 14 points. The Capener bombs loosened up the Eagle defense and allowed the home team to start scoring on a regular basis, something it didn't do early in the second half.

Oklahoma Christian came out after halftime and made an eight unanswered points to take a 36-28 lead. "We thought we'd come out crisp but we came out flat," Brovelli said. The lead was never more, but it was eight again twice before the home team began to assert itself.

When Oklahoma Christian center Kenneth Orange was taken out with three fouls five minutes into the half, it helped. By the time Orange came back three minutes later, USD had cut the lead to 42-40 with the help of two Capener field goals.

"Orange makes a big difference," said Brovelli. "He really makes a big difference. It just shows when you've got one bonafide player he can make a pretty good team."

Orange was never the same, and a Capener field goal at 11:13 tied the game, 42-42.

But the Toreros didn't break the game open until forward Mike Whitmarsh nearly broke his hip with 3:17 left.

Whitmarsh drove for a layup and scored, but his hang time allowed an Eagle player to get under him. Whitmarsh crashed to the floor and immediately grabbed his hip in pain. He was carried to the locker room.

Capener, who had taken a short hiatus on the bench, came in to replace Whitmarsh and made both of the intentional-foul free throws.

That four-point play put the Toreros up, 59-49, and the visitors were never close again.

Torero center Robby Roberts led USD with 16 points and 10 rebounds, while Whitmarsh had 15 points and five rebounds. Guard John Prunty, who helped spark a first half comeback, finished with 10 points.

The conclusion?

"There are no easy games," Brovelli said. "The talent is spread out everywhere."

USD is 6-6. It plays twice again before it opens its West Coast Athletic Conference season at home against St. Mary's College Jan. 21.

USD's Anthony Reuss gets his shot away despite blocking foul by Eagle Ron Webb.

Capener Gets Hot; USD Gets Even

By BILL CENTER

Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Don Capener shoots the jump shot the way the Leaning Tower of Pisa defies gravity.

Balance has nothing to do with it.

At the start of his jumper, Capener leaves the floor like a rocket bent on self-destruction. He starts falling off toward the right as he lets fly. As hard as it is to understand, he hits a high percentage. Or he always has until this year.

He came into the University of San Diego's 12th

JAN 5 1983

Patient Toreros learn to play

By T.R. Reinman

Tribune Sportswriter

"It just wasn't a very good game early," said USD Coach Jim Brovelli after his team beat Oklahoma Christian College 70-61 last night. "We came out flat in both halves, played poorly, found ourselves behind and battled back. This team has done it all year. But I'd like to have a 10-point lead at some point."

For the first five minutes or so of both halves last night, the University of San Diego looked almost as interesting, and interested, as the USD gym in which it was playing. And OCC, last year's NAIA champion, looked like the team it was — one that had gotten in from a two-game trip to Hawaii in the wee hours of yesterday morning.

Things picked up eventually, but you had to be as patient as USD is almost all of the time. The Toreros didn't score a field goal until 6:39 into the game, and OCC scored eight straight to open the second half. But some very solid defense and an impressive motion offense finally gave USD a record of 6-6.

USD had a 10-point lead once, late, but who knows what they'd do with one much earlier than that? They've had them at times earlier this season, but four of the Toreros' six wins have been by four points or less and in three of those they've trailed with less than a minute to play.

"We've gotten to the point where we know we can be in it at the end," explained Brovelli. "It's just a matter of doing the things we have to do to win. Tonight when we got ahead we really did them. I think we're starting to learn how to play with a lead."

They might never have gotten the lead if OCC had been playing with a full deck. Norvell Brown, a 6-foot-6 forward, a first-team NAIA All-American last year who was averaging a team-high 19.5 points this year, was cut from the team in Hawaii. No further explanation was forthcoming from the OCC staff.

As it was, USD might have folded had it not turned up a full house with forwards Mike Whitmarsh, Robby Roberts and Dan Capener. They ended up with 16, 15 and 14 points, respectively, and guard John Prunty added 10.

Capener came into the game shooting 38.7 percent and averaging 4.7 points. Not great stats for somebody who's supposed to be one of USD's designated hit men. But last night he made six of 10 shots from the field, four from 15 feet or more.

"All year when we've played against zones I've felt it was my calling to make them come out," said the 6-5 forward. "Tonight it was pretty much the same thing. I guess my time had come."

It came with 13:48 left in the game, when USD trailed 42-34. Through the next 3½ minutes Capener scored eight of 10 Torero points with a layup and three bombs and tied the score 44-44 on a 25-footer. When the Eagles went to a man-to-man, USD shifted into a spread offense. Roberts then took a pass on the high post and cut to the hoop. For awhile it looked like one of those speeded-up time-lapse films taken of a freeway at rush hour.

"They've got confidence in that offense," said Brovelli. "We don't have great ball skills. I don't let 'em dribble. They just get it and go. It worked pretty well."

Whitmarsh scored seven points on layups and a free throw off that scheme, and, when he was low-bridged and Capener hit two free throws in his place, USD finally had

DAN CAPENER
15 points

ROBBY ROBERTS
14 points

its 10-point lead, 59-49, with 3:17 to play.

Kenneth Orange, OCC's 6-11 center scored 23 points, had nine rebounds and three blocked shots in as fine a performance as USD has seen all year. "It just goes to show that when you've got a bona fide player who can shoot, rebound and block shots you can have a good team," said a smiling Brovelli. "So I guess that means we're only one player away, right?"

It was a night for joking around at USD. The Toreros

JAN 5 1983

C-2 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

②

Toreros Get Even
As Hot Capener
Singles The Eagles

(Continued from C-1)

"I knew I was on tonight," Capener said after the Toreros balanced their record at 6-6 against an OCC club that is 14-4 against lesser competition.

"I knew it when I missed my first shot. I'm a rhythm and streak shooter. When I released my first shot, I knew this would be the night. It felt good."

Capener scored all 14 of his points in the second half while Robby Roberts was scoring 10 and Mike Whitmarsh was adding 9 before being hurt on a flagrant foul as the Toreros overpowered an OCC club that had shot its way to fast starts in both halves.

"We didn't get off well at the start of the game (USD was down 10-3 and didn't get a field goal until forward Anthony Reuss came off the bench to hit a five-footer after more than 6½ minutes had expired) or at the beginning of the second half (OCC scored the first eight points of the second half)," said USD Coach Jim Brovelli.

"But we kept our poise and hit some good shots to get back into it. We got a big lift from Capener, who has really been struggling."

As a sophomore last season, Capener hit 43 percent as Brovelli's designated shooter, being inserted into games when the Toreros needed a quick offensive lift. While he's starting this year as the wing guard, the Torrey Pines High product has been ineffective as a shooter.

"When he's on, his shooting gives us a lift," said Brovelli. "We need it."

Last night was a perfect example. Capener hit four straight jumpers around a Whitmarsh baseline jumper as USD started its rally with a 10-3 run to get to within a point at 45-44.

After Rich Davis hit a jumper from the lane, the Toreros took the lead for good at 48-47 when Whitmarsh scored on a 3-on-1 fast-break pass from Roberts. Roberts then tipped in Capener's lone miss of the second half and Whitmarsh hit a backdoor-play layin to shoot the Toreros to a five-point lead.

Now the Toreros were on a roll. And they capped the explosion with one of the season's fanciest plays and potentially one of the game's most dangerous.

First, Roberts, who has had problems at times, negotiated a behind-the-back dribble in the lane and scored a twisting layin around OCC's 6-foot-11 Kenneth Orange to put USD up by six and the game all but beyond the Eagle's reach.

Then USD got a basket and a pair of free throws on a play that saw Whitmarsh scored a layin then have his legs knocked out from under him while he was still in the air. OCC's Ron Webb was ejected from the game for the foul. After Whitmarsh was helped from the floor, Capener sank the two free throws to put USD up by 10. Whitmarsh suffered deep bruises to his lower back and right shoulder.

Roberts paced the Toreros with 16 points, 10 rebounds and four assists while operating against Orange, who had a game-high 23 points and nine rebounds. Whitmarsh finished with 15 points and five rebounds while Capener had 14 points and guard John Prunty, who gave the Toreros a first-half lift with his outside shooting, had 10 points.

OCC, playing without NAIA All-American Norvell Brown, also got 12 points from guard Kelly Jobe.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 5 1983

USD BASKETBALL Guard Don Capener scored all of his 14 points in the second half Tuesday night, rallying the University of San Diego to a 70-61 victory over Oklahoma Christian College at the USD Sports Center. The victory lifted USD's record to 6-6. Oklahoma Christian dropped to 14-4. Oklahoma Christian had taken a 42-34 halftime lead, but Capener hit five straight jumpshots during a 25-7 scoring spree by the Toreros midway through the second session. Mike Whitmarsh had 15 points and Robby Roberts scored a team-high 16 points for the Toreros. Roberts also had 10 rebounds.

JAN 7 1983

USD AT RENO — University of San Diego's basketball team, fresh from an upset of Oklahoma Christian Tuesday, travels to Nevada-Reno tomorrow night at 7:30 with the prospects of climbing above .500. The Toreros evened their record at 6-6 by defeating the Oklahoma team.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

JAN 9 1983

Nevada Reno Beats USD

RENO (AP)—Ken (Tree) Green scored 31 points as Nevada Reno came from behind Saturday night to take an 88-76 nonconference victory over the University of San Diego.

Nevada point guard Billy Allen handed out 12 assists and now is 14 shy of breaking the all-time NCAA career assists record of 830 held by Sean Tuohy of Mississippi.

San Diego scored 16 straight points in a seven-minute stretch late in the first half and led, 38-33, at intermission. But Nevada outscored the Toreros, 14-2, in the first six minutes of the second half and never trailed again.

Nevada forward Sam Mosley, the NCAA field goal percentage leader this week, was 6 for 6 from the floor, scored 15 points and had a game-high nine rebounds.

Four San Diego players scored in double figures, led by guard Rich Davis' 20 points.

Nevada finished its nonconference schedule with a 7-6 record, while San Diego fell to 6-7.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 9 1983

Toreros Tumble; USIU Drops 16th

Ken "Tree" Green scored 16 of his game-high 31 points in a nine-minute span at the start of the second half to trigger a Nevada-Reno comeback that led to an 88-76 victory over the University of San Diego in a non-conference college basketball game last night at Reno.

Green, a 6-7 senior forward, was the catalyst as the Wolf Pack (7-6) outscored USD (6-7) 24-11 in the first nine minutes of the second half to erase a 38-33 Torero half-time lead and assume a 59-49 advantage. Thereafter the closest USD could come was six points, 73-67 with 4:08 remaining.

"We played a very good first half, but the first five minutes of the second half we just went dead in the water," said USD coach Jim Brovelli.

USD's halftime lead was largely the result of a run of 16 straight points the Toreros put together which lifted them from a 27-18 deficit to 34-27 lead. Anthony Reuss scored six points in the spree and finished with 13 for the game and team-high nine rebounds as the Toreros outboarded Reno 39-36.

Rich Davis led the USD scoring with 20 points while Robbie Roberts contributed 14 and Don Capener 12.

Sam Mosley, a 6-7 forward who leads the nation in field goal percentage, went six-for-six from the floor in backing Green with 15 points for Nevada-Reno. The winners' margin was forged at the free throw line, where they hit on 26 of 34 to USD's 12 of 23.

USD was without guard Mike Whitmarsh, sidelined with a shoulder injury incurred last Tuesday against Oklahoma Christian.

EVENING TRIBUNE

JAN 10 1983

Realignment would banish USD, USIU to Division II

By T.R. Reinman

Tribune Sports Writer

At once, the whole thing is simple and complex, crucial and moot. Similar change in the recent past has gone by largely unnoticed, yet this development could mark revolutionary change in American college sports.

Proposal 71 is what it is, a proposed amendment in the by-laws and up for consideration at the annual NCAA meetings scheduled this week at the Town and Country Hotel.

Simply put, it is an attempt to set new, and redefine existing, membership criteria for Division I basketball.

Under the proposal, current Division I schools which do not include football among their eight varsity sports would have to have averaged 3,500 in paid attendance per home basketball game over the last four years to remain in Division I for basketball.

The proposal is not likely to pass this week, although some form of the amendment probably will become law in the not-too-distant future. When it does, U.S. International University and the University of San Diego would be two of about 80 schools dropped from the 277 now playing Division I basketball.

"If I were forced to label the source," says Judy Holland, the senior assistant athletic director at UCLA and a member of the NCAA Council, "I'd have to say it was 'big-time' athletic programs."

The impetus in part came from the Division I basketball coaches who last year voted to allow all members of Division I to participate in the NCAA basketball tournament.

"The bottom line is that this is a money issue," said USD Athletic Director Rev. Patrick Cahill. "The larger schools run their programs on income. If everyone were eligible for the tournament, the pie would be cut into an awful lot of pieces."

Perhaps predictably, the proposition is strongly opposed by the local institutions, although this is only USD's fourth year in Division I, USIU's third. But, Cahill says, "Obviously we want to be where we are. And we should be able to determine that for ourselves."

Dr. Al Palmiotto, USIU athletic director, is more vehement. "If they had made clear from the beginning the philosophy of who they think belongs in Division I, that would be one thing," he says, "but if certainly isn't clear in the rule books. It would cost us just as much to belong to Division II as I, why settle for number two? We met every criteria for membership just two years ago, and now they're changing those criteria. It is patently unfair."

"The NCAA is supposed to be a regulatory body for college athletics. It is losing sight of its mandate. Our basketball program is for our students. We are the governing body. The NCAA shouldn't be able to tell us how or where to spend our dollars."

"All of those are important, valid arguments that should be appreciated by everyone involved," said UCLA's Holland. "But it becomes a larger issue than any one school, and that's what so difficult for some of these smaller schools to realize."

When Division I football membership criteria were similarly adjusted a few years ago, a number of schools with long traditions were switched to Division I-AA. They didn't go without a fight, although, as Holland pointed out, there were several incentives to go, such as a national championship.

"To make a comparison between the football and basketball realignment proposals: The former was probably like having your appendix removed and this is more like losing your stomach."

— Judy Holland of UCLA

onship playoff format and guaranteed television appearances. There are no such incentives in the proposed Division I basketball plan, which further diminishes the enthusiasm of borderline programs.

"It's an emotional issue," said Holland. "To make a comparison between the football and basketball realignment proposals: the former was probably like having your appendix removed and this is more like losing your stomach."

"Of course, we are opposed to it and will vote against it," said Cahill, echoing the sentiments of Palmiotto. "But I don't think we'll live or die if it passes. We don't have a long tradition in Division I. We won't suffer any enrollment difficulties or prestige problems."

"Any organization can change its requirements. But we should have the right to determine our own destiny. Each school should."

JAN 10 1983

TOREROS LOSE/ Ken "Tree" Green scored 31 points as Nevada-Reno came from behind Saturday to take an 88-76 non-conference victory over the University of San Diego. Nevada point guard Billy Allen handed out 12 assists and now is 14 shy of breaking the all-time NCAA career assists record of 830 held by Sean Tuohy of Mississippi. USD played without the services of junior Mike Whitmarsh, who was sidelined with a shoulder injury. The Toreros fell to 6-7. They'll host the University of Denver Thursday at 7:30 p.m. In other college games Saturday, Point Loma College lost to Victoria, B.C. 71-69 in the finals of Point Loma Classic; United States International University fell to Northern Arizona 67-60 in Flagstaff; and UC San Diego ripped Cal Tech 85-25. Point Loma is 9-7. USIU is 1-16. UCSD is 6-6.

EVENING TRIBUNE

JAN 12 1983

USD coach quits after NCAA probe of grid program

By T.R. Reinman

Tribune Sports Writer

After seven years as head football coach at the University of San Diego, Bill Williams has resigned. His resignation closely follows an NCAA investigation into the Torero football program.

The Tribune has learned from sources close to the investigation that the USD athletic director, the Rev. Patrick Cahill, conducted an investigation into alleged loans to football players and then reported his findings to the NCAA.

The NCAA then conducted its own investigation into the matter, but has withheld official announcement concerning the outcome of the probe.

However, a source said the NCAA already has decided to place USD on one-year football probation and to deny the school's team permission during that period to appear in a bowl game or on television. According to the source, if Williams had decided to remain at the university the NCAA also would have prohibited him from recruiting players for a one-year period.

"Bill has resigned and the position is open," said Cahill. "An announcement is forthcoming, but we aren't free to say anything more than that until the NCAA issues its statement."

Asked when that statement is expected, Hale McMenamin, assistant director of enforcement for the NCAA, would only say, "At this juncture we would be unable to confirm or deny an investigation of the institution."

However, it has been learned that the university was informed of the NCAA's decision on Dec. 22 and that the following day USD told the NCAA it would not appeal the sanctions.

"I have resigned, effective Saturday," said Williams. "I'm not trying to be evasive, but that's all I have to say at this point, other than that I had a very positive experience at USD in my years there, and I wish them well."

BILL WILLIAMS

18 — The Blade-Tribune

Thursday, January 13, 1983

USD Football Coach Resigns

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — University of San Diego football coach Bill Williams resigned Wednesday in a move that reportedly was prompted by a pending NCAA suspension of the Toreros for illegal loans to players.

The San Diego Tribune reported Wednesday that USD athletic director the Rev. Patrick Cahill had conducted an investigation into allegations that Williams lent money to some of his players. The probe reportedly revealed that Williams had made three small loans to players between 1978 and 1980.

Cahill reported his findings to the NCAA, which then launched its probe, the article said.

Cahill confirmed that Williams quit but declined comment until the NCAA released its findings.

USD's football team will be barred from participating in any post-season games and from appearing on live television in 1983, the NCAA said in a statement prepared at its Mission, Kan., headquarters.

Cahill said that school plans to continue fielding a football team.

"We have a healthy program and we intend to keep on with it," he said. "It wasn't a huge, rampant violation of NCAA rules. We were the ones, who discovered the violations, investigated them and reported them to the NCAA, and preserved our integrity by doing that."

According to the NCAA, the head coach twice in 1978 loaned a "substantial amount" of money to a player, but no attempt was made to repay the money.

On two occasions in 1979, the NCAA said, the coach gave money to a player for educational expenses, and on five other occasions in the spring of 1981, helped a player pay some personal expenses.

JAN 11 1983

USF looks into program revival

Almost as soon as the University of San Francisco dropped basketball at the end of last season, the rumors started about plans for the return of the program. Apparently they are now more than just rumors.

The university has set up a committee to research the idea of restarting the program. USF Athletic Director Bill Fusco, in town for the NCAA meetings this week, has indicated that USF's re-acceptance into the NCAA's Division I, without sanctions, is essential to university approval of a new program.

Division III is out as an alternative because there aren't enough opponents for the Dons in the Bay Area. And Division II would be just as expensive as Division I. With the expanded tournament format expected to pass, Division I then is the only attraction for USF. The NCAA is expected to informally review the situation. And according to Fusco, that review could come as early as next month. If everything goes as planned, USF could be back on the floor by next winter.

The other USF basketball rumor, is that University of San Diego Coach Jim Brovelli is the likely candidate for the new head coaching position. But then, there is also talk that he may wind up as an assistant next season with the San Diego Clippers.

T.R. Reinman

COLLEGES NOTEPAD

ON THE ROAD TO UTAH — This trip has seldom been fun in the past, but San Diego State may be picking the right time to go to Utah this season. The Aztecs, with a 9-2 record, play at 4-9 BYU Friday, and 5-8 Utah Saturday.

The Aztecs have lost all four of their games at BYU by an average of 23 points. Their first ever win at Utah was by two points last season.

But the times have changed. BYU hasn't had a losing record at this point in a season since 1977-78, when it was 2-11 and finished at 12-18. Now the Cougars are 4-9, although their average loss has been by only six points, and they've played three top 20 teams.

Utah, meanwhile, has its worst record at this point since 1975-76. Again, playing Top 20 teams has been a factor. The Utes have lost to Houston and Virginia in the Sunbelt Classic at Tokyo, and Nevada-Las Vegas by three in Las Vegas Jan. 1.

ONCE AROUND THE WAC — Texas-El Paso is another team with a disappointing pre-conference record. The Miners are 8-4 after beating Texas-San Antonio 52-50 last night. Picked as State's top challenger for the league title this winter, injuries, more than opponents, have been the Miners' downfall. UTEP has lost leading scorers Fred Reynolds with a calf injury and Juden Smith with a damaged knee. Both will be out for the season. And the Miners' third-leading scorer, Kent Lockart suffered a broken nose a couple of weeks ago, but only missed one game. ... One more word on the injury front: Wyoming's much-discussed 6-foot-10 freshman center, Mark Getty, has also been lost for the season with a knee injury.

JIM BROVELLI
Changing teams?DEAN SMITH
Changing fortunes

Statistical leaders: BYU forward Devin Durrant 21.6 points per game; Air Force forward Rick Simmons, 20.5; San Diego State forward Michael Cage, 18.0. ... Cage's 14.5 per-game rebound margin leads the nation, and his dominance is clear in the league. Second to Cage in the WAC is BYU's Greg Kite, with 8.6. ... State's Keith Smith, last year's WAC assist leader, again leads with 6.8 per game.

THE NCAA STAT SHEET — Wyoming's record may be only 8-5, but it leads the nation in field-goal defense, holding opponents to 39.3 field-goal attempts per game, and ranks ninth in rebound margin at 8.8. ... Oregon, which held San Diego State to 47 points in the Aztecs' two-point win a month ago, ranks second in scoring defense. ... USIU rates 12th in free-throw percentage, and the Gulls' Nigel Lloyd is 12th nationally in scoring, with 23.1 points per game. ... The San Diego State women's team is second in free-throw percentage at 78.5, and center Judy Porter is 13th in scoring at 24.7, 19th in field-goal percentage (61.9) and 21st in rebounding (12.1).

EXPERIMENTS — ACC: 30-second clock (off in the last four minutes of the game), 19-foot three-point shot. ... Big East and Southwest: 45-second clock (off in the last five minutes), no three-pointer. ... Big Ten: no clock, 21-foot three-pointer. ... Southeastern: 45 seconds through entire game, no three-pointer. A total of 13 Division I conferences have some sort of experiment going this season.

NOTEPAD — Before the season, North Carolina's Dean Smith said, "Our schedule poses a tremendous problem. We could lose 10 or 12 games and still be an outstanding team." Twenty of the Tar Heels' opponents played in post-season tournaments last year, and nine of Carolina's first 11 games were on the road. After a 3-3 start, UNC has won its last seven. After his team beat then-12th-ranked Missouri for the title in the Rainbow Classic, Smith said, "We've improved. We're going to be a very good team." Nine days later they blew out then-ninth-ranked Syracuse in Chapel Hill.

Both were good quotes at the time, but it doesn't look now like UNC could lose 10 or 12 games.

T.R. Reinman's College Notepad appears each Tuesday in The Tribune.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

JAN 13 1983

USD coach resigns in wake of loan probe

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The head football coach at the University of San Diego has resigned after an investigation by school officials turned up evidence of alleged illegal loans to athletes, according to newspaper reports.

Bill Williams, head coach at USD since 1975, told a San Diego newspaper on Wednesday that he submitted his resignation to the school, and that the resignation takes effect Saturday.

"I have resigned," Williams said. "I'm not trying to be evasive, but that's all I have to say at this point."

Results of the school's investigation have been turned over to the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The NCAA is expected to make an official determination on penalties next week.

The newspaper, citing an unidentified source, said the NCAA has already decided to place the private school's football program on one-year probation, prohibiting appearances on television and bowl games.

The NCAA has been holding its annual convention in San Diego this week. But Hale McMenamin, assistant director of enforcement for the association, said he could neither confirm nor deny the newspaper reports.

According to the paper, the results of the investigation uncovered evidence of illegal loans made by an assistant coach and then by Williams.

"We are not talking huge figures," said the Rev. Patrick Cahill, USD athletic director. "And that is why I feel so bad, in a sense, because things are going to get out and make things sound a lot worse than they are."

The newspaper report said "sources indicate" the matter arose last spring when a football player showed Cahill a promissory note signed by an assistant coach. The note, in effect, guaranteed a loan to the player, who said he needed the money to stay in school.

USD's Williams Resigns After Investigation

Bill Williams, head football coach at the University of San Diego since 1975, has resigned the job after school officials in an internal investigation uncovered evidence of alleged illegal loans to athletes.

Results of the investigation by university officials were turned over to the NCAA, which is expected to make an official determination sometime next week.

Neither USD officials nor the NCAA would comment on details of the investigation, but reports published yesterday said it turned up evidence of illegal loans made by an assistant coach and then by Williams himself.

"We are not talking huge figures," said the Rev. Patrick Cahill, USD's athletic director. "And that is why I feel so bad, in a sense, because things are going to get out and make things sound a lot worse than they are."

Cahill said he could not say more.

(Continued on C-5, Col. 1)

USD Coach Quits After Investigation

(Continued from C-1)

about the results of his investigation because he signed a statement with the NCAA that he would not. He said, however, that the NCAA did not conduct an independent investigation and will base its findings solely on evidence supplied by the university.

"I can confirm that our coach has resigned and that the position now is open," Cahill said. He said he already has received several telephone inquiries from potential applicants.

Cahill said he did not ask for Williams' resignation. "We never had to cross that bridge," he said.

Reached at home, Williams confirmed that he was not asked to resign but that he will, officially, Saturday.

"It was a combination of things," he said. "I really had a good experience (at USD), but I think for my own personal benefit and for the school, too, that it is better that I move on."

"There comes a time to stay and a time to move on. It is now a time to move on."

Published reports claim that last spring a USD football player showed Williams a promissory note signed by an assistant coach guaranteeing the athlete a loan and making it possible for him to remain in school. USD is an NCAA Division III school and is not permitted to award football scholarships.

The student did not take the loan and transferred to another college, the report said. The assistant coach was dismissed.

But this incident led to an investigation by athletic director Cahill corroborating the assistant coach's note and also turning up evidence that Williams, himself, had made three small but illegal loans to players during a three-year period from 1978 to 1980.

In each case, the report said, the loan recipient did not have enough money for rent or food and that Williams was personally motivated by the athlete's plight.

But for that, reports claim, the NCAA has decided to place USD on a one-year football probation, denying the school's appearance in bowl games or on television. Had Williams stayed at USD during the probation, it was reported, he would not have been permitted to recruit players.

"I can't comment on the details because of the NCAA," Williams said, "but as far as any wrong doing or anything like that, I don't feel like I have done anything wrong from a moral standpoint."

He said he has been fairly treated by Cahill. "Father has just been super. He is not the reason I am resigning. He has been behind me all the way on things."

Williams said he will make a decision on his future early next week.

Cahill, meanwhile, said he feels handcuffed by the NCAA's inaction.

"We are under strict orders from the NCAA not to release anything until they do. But it is getting to the point where the secret is no longer a secret."

"I told them at (the NCAA's) convention here it is becoming a problem, that the coach has resigned, and I am not going to deny that because it has nothing to do with the NCAA."

"But we feel handcuffed because that is all we can say at this point."

Cahill said he expects the NCAA to make an official statement sometime next week. After that, he said, the university will make a statement.

Williams came to USD as a defensive coordinator in 1974. He became head football coach in September 1975. The overall record of the Toreros under Williams is 34-36-1.

He was named District 8 coach of the year in 1978. His best season was 9-1 in 1981. That record enabled the school to get CBS television exposure last season during the NFL strike.

JAN 13 1983

University of San Diego Gets One-Year Probation

By STEVE DOLAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego football team has been placed on probation for one year because of an NCAA rule violation.

Coach Bill Williams, who resigned in the aftermath, admitted that he loaned money out of his own pocket to three players from 1977-79. An assistant coach was also fired last spring for giving a player a promissory note, it was learned.

The investigation was conducted by Rev. Patrick Cahill, the USD athletic director, who reported his findings to the NCAA. An official announcement will come Wednesday from the NCAA Office.

Williams said that the three players came to him when they had no money for rent or food. According to Williams, each player was given "a small sum" of money.

"I know I broke an NCAA rule,"

Williams said. "From a moral standpoint, I don't feel bad about helping them. In each case, the kids came to me as a friend. The sad thing is, it would have been fine if I was just their friend. The fact that I am a coach made it so that it was not fine."

Under terms of the probation, USD will not be eligible for postseason play in 1983. The Toreros will also be prohibited from playing on television. If Williams had remained, he would not have been permitted to recruit off campus.

USD had made its television debut last season during the NFL strike. The Toreros lost to Occidental College, 34-20, in a game nationally televised by CBS.

"We wouldn't have been on television next year, anyway, because of the NFL strike," Williams said.

Please see USD, Page 10

JAN 13 1983

USD Takes On Denver Tonight

From a Times Staff Writer

The University of San Diego basketball team completes its nonconference schedule tonight with a 7:30 game against Denver at the USD Sports Center.

USD forward Mike Whitmarsh, who was injured in the Torero's win over Oklahoma Christian College a week ago, is doubtful. Whitmarsh has a bruised hip and strained shoulder ligaments. He averages 10.4 points and four rebounds per game. He did not play in USD's last game, an 88-76 loss to the University of Nevada Reno. USD is 6-7.

Denver (11-4) is a Division II school in basketball. The Pioneers are led by 6-8 center Mark Langkamp.

JAN 13 1983

The Daily Californian □ East San Diego Co

USD football coach quits amid probe

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The head football coach at the University of San Diego has resigned after an investigation by school officials turned up evidence of alleged illegal loans to athletes, according to newspaper reports.

Bill Williams, a head coach at USD since 1975, told The Tribune Wednesday that he submitted his resignation to the school, and that the resignation takes effect Saturday.

"I have resigned," Williams said. "I'm not trying to be evasive, but that's all I have to say at this point."

Results of the school's investigation have been turned over to the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The NCAA is expected to make an official determination on penalties next week.

The Tribune, citing an unidentified source, said the NCAA has already decided to place the private school's football program on one-year probation, prohibiting appearances on television and bowl games.

The NCAA is holding its annual convention in San Diego this week. But Hale McMenamin, assistant director of enforcement for the association, said he could neither confirm nor deny the newspaper reports.

According to The Tribune, the results of the investigation uncovered evidence of illegal loans made by an assistant coach and then by Williams.

"We are not talking huge figures," said the Rev. Patrick Cahill, USD athletic director. "And that is why I feel so bad, in a sense, because things are going to get out and make things sound a lot worse than they are."

Cahill told the San Diego Union that he could not talk about the results of the investigation because he signed an agreement with the NCAA that he would not.

The Tribune said "sources indicate" the matter arose last spring when a football player showed Cahill a promissory note signed by an assistant coach. The note, in effect, guaranteed a loan to the player, who said he needed the money to stay in school.

Since USD is a Division III NCAA school, it is unable to award football scholarships, although tuition is about $8,000 a year.

The player never took the loan, The Tribune said, and transferred to another school. The assistant coach, who The Tribune said acted without the knowledge of Williams, was immediately dismissed.

During the school's investigation Cahill found that Williams had made three small, but illegal, loans to a player or players between 1978 and 1980, the paper said. In each case, the loans were made because the student-athlete had no money for food or rent, and Williams' motives were personal.

"I understand the NCAA's point, but I wouldn't say I've done anything wrong from a moral standpoint," Williams said.

Williams had a 34-36-1 overall record at USD and was named the District 8 coach of the year after he led the Toreros to a 7-3 record in 1978. His best season was in 1981, when USD finished with a 9-1 record.

JAN 14 1983

Denver is ready as USD falters

By Rick Davis

Tribune Sports Writer

Pete Caruso came into last night's basketball game against the University of San Diego as the third-leading scorer on the University of Denver team. A 6-foot-5 senior forward, he showed solid, respectable figures: 10.9 points and 7.5 rebounds a game.

What transpired in the 39 minutes of play that followed made it an evening to forget. Fortunately for the 6-foot-5 senior forward, there was a 40th minute though, just enough time to make up for all that had gone wrong before that.

"Did I score the winning basket? Oh, yeah, I guess I did," remembered Caruso after the Pioneers had pulled out a 54-51 victory over the Toreros in a nonconference affair at the USD Sports Center.

"I ended up fouling out. I didn't score much. It was one of my worst games. But we won and I did contribute something at the end, so I'm happy about that."

Caruso's driving basket with 43 seconds left capped a comeback in which the visitors, helped by some poor shot selection and free-throw shooting by the hosts, overcame a seven-point deficit (51-44) in the final 2:35. Before his late heroics, Caruso had registered six points, three rebounds and four fouls.

"Denver played well at the end and deserved to win," said USD Coach Jim Brovelli, whose club fell to a 6-8 record heading into West Coast Athletic Conference play next week.

The Toreros missed the front end of four one-and-one situations in the final eight minutes. They also had four shots after Caruso's basket produced a 52-51 Denver lead, but missed them all. Two free throws by Mike Wilson with two seconds left netted the final result.

"My players were patient down the stretch. They waited for the good shots and the good shots dropped," noted Pioneer Coach Floyd Theard, whose NAIA club is 12-4.

The winners finished with 50 percent (24 of 48) field-goal shooting and added a perfect 6-for-6 effort on free throws. Meanwhile, the Toreros hit 39 percent (19 of 49) from the field and 13 of 24 on free throws.

The absence of starters Mike Whitmarsh (out with shoulder and back injuries) and Robby Roberts (who left the floor after being poked in the eye less than five minutes into the game) hurt. Whitmarsh is averaging 10.4 points and Roberts 9.6 points a game. And each has been hitting 50 percent on field goals.

"Maybe that's part of the problem," said Brovelli. "Maybe the other guys are looking over their shoulders for Robby and Mike. Or they're waiting for a teammate to do the job."

JAN 14 1983

Toreros Lose To Denver ... Themselves

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

The University of San Diego last night failed one of the tests of a good basketball team. It failed to overcome adversity.

Worse yet, the Toreros failed to overcome the University of Denver.

Leading by seven at 51-44 with 2:35 to play, USD missed a couple of bad shots from the floor, a couple of shots from the foul line and made three bad passes while Denver was running off 10 straight points to score a 54-51 upset at the USD Sports Center.

"We didn't deserve to win it," said Toreros coach Jim Brovelli as USD fell to 6-8 and short of its goal of being 500 going into next week's start of West Coast Athletic Conference play.

"No matter what else had happened, we had the lead. We didn't do the things we needed to do to protect it. We beat ourselves."

USD started the game without forward Mike Whitmarsh. The team's second-leading scorer is still recuperating from a bruised shoulder and a lower back sprain suffered when he was low-bridged in a game nine days ago.

Before last night's game was five minutes old, USD's other front-line standout, center-forward Robby Roberts — the Toreros' leading rebounder and No. 3 scorer — was poked in the eye and retired for the night with an injury that was at first feared to be serious.

While both should return for the opening of WCAC play, the Toreros struggled in their absence. When guard Rich Davis took a breather in the second half, USD was fielding a lineup that averaged only 24.8 points a game. Freshman center Mario Coronado doubled his season's playing time with four minutes in the first half.

USD struggled early. The Toreros were down 26-19 at the half.

But with Davis scoring 14 of his season-high equaling 20 points in the second half, USD quickly moved back into the contest against the NCAA Division II Pioneers, who are now 12-4.

Davis tied it at 34-34 with 13:01 to play and USD blew the game open to 49-42 and 51-44 as John Prunty passes set up Anthony Reuss. Davis and Dave Melver for rapid-fire baskets. Melver's slam with 2:35 to play, however, accounted for the last points USD was to score — not that the hosts didn't have ample opportunity.

With 1:29 to go, Don Capener missed the front end of a one-and-one while USD was still up 51-46. With 1:10 to go, a pair of long shots by Denver guard Doug Wilson having cut the deficit to one, Reuss heaved an in-bounds pass beyond Davis as the guard broke away from the pulled-in Denver defense.

(Continued on C-2, Col. 5)

The Toreros Lose Lead, Then Game

(Continued from C-1)

"It was an option we have," Brovelli explained of the long pass. "It was the wrong option."

USD had more chances. But Davis missed an off-balance 18-footer. And after burly Pete Caruso made a power move inside to score and give the Pioneers the lead at 52-51, Capener missed a jumper from the side. Poway native Charles Lee hit two free throws for Denver with seven seconds to play.

Still, USD was not out of it.

With two seconds to go, Reuss made an inside move that drew a foul from Caruso. Reuss shot for the basket and the possible tying three-point play fell off the rim. The strategy then called for Reuss to make the first free throw and miss the second. He missed the first. Final: Denver 54, USD 51.

"It was that type of a night," said Brovelli. "We played dumb. We didn't shoot well. We got beat. Denver deserved to beat us."

Denver hit half its 48 field goal tries, the Toreros shot 39 percent. Denver got just six free throw opportunities, but made them all. USD hit on just 13 of its 24 tries and missed the front ends of four one-and-ones in the second half.

SAN DIEGO UNION

Friday, January 14, 1983

The San Diego Union/Bob Ivins

Torero Robby Roberts shoots — and misses — over Denver's Ty Sherbert (42) and Mark Langkamp (50).

JAN 14 1983

DIGEST LOCAL NEWS

USD LOSES/ The University of San Diego gave away a basketball game Thursday night in the Toreros' gym. USD led the University of Denver 51-44 with 2:35 to play. The Toreros failed to score another point. Denver took advantage of some poor shooting by USD to steal a 54-51 victory. Denver's Pioneers improved to 12-4, while USD slipped to 6-8. Guard Rich Davis led the Toreros with 20 points. USD again played without its second-leading scorer Mike Whitmarsh. He injured a shoulder and his back when he was low-bridged during a game nine days ago. USD lost another starter, Robby Roberts, Thursday before the game was five minutes old. Roberts was poked in the eye. Both Whitmarsh and Roberts are expected to return to the lineup when the Toreros open WCAC play by hosting St. Mary's Jan. 21.

JAN 14 1983

Bill Williams, head football coach at the University of San Diego for seven years, has resigned following an NCAA investigation of the school's football program, the San Diego Tribune said.

The paper quoted an unidentified source as saying the NCAA has already decided to place the football program on one year's probation for alleged illegal loans to players.

JAN 14 1983

Roberts Is Injured in Toreros' Loss to Denver

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The USD basketball team went into Thursday night's game against the University of Denver with a height handicap and it got worse as the night went on.

This helped give Denver, a Division II team, which normally plays powers like Chadron State, South Dakota Tech and Rockmont College, a 54-51 upset victory over the home team at the USD Sports Center.

The Toreros went into the game missing starting forward Mike Whitmarsh, who is third on the team in rebounding. Whitmarsh suffered a shoulder and hip injury in last week's victory over Oklahoma Christian College, but is expected to be back in action for the team's West Coast Athletic Conference opener against St. Mary's.

Six minutes into the contest, the Toreros' leading rebounder, center Robby Roberts, caught an elbow in the eye and was lost for the night. "The doctor said it could be a serious eye injury," said Torero Coach Jim Brovelli.

Besides the lack of rebounding, the team caught a cold on the side. Cold shooting, that is. The Toreros shot an awful (19 for 49) 39 percent from the floor and a paltry (13 for 24) 54 percent from the free throw line.

It added up to disaster and dropped USD to 6-8 entering that Jan. 21 league opener at home.

"We didn't deserve to win the game," Brovelli said. "We beat ourselves."

Indeed, USD, despite poor play through most of the game, had a seven-point lead, 49-42, with three minutes remaining. But the visiting Pioneers used good outside shooting to cut that to one-point, 51-50, with 1:10 left.

The visiting Pioneers are 12-4 but they don't play the cream of college basketball. "Denver played well at the end and deserved to win the game," Brovelli said.

JAN 21 1983

San Diego Notepad

USD placed on 1-year football probation

The University of San Diego's football program has been placed on a one-year probation by the NCAA for violation of rules against loans and gifts to student athletes, says Rev. Patrick Cahill, the university's athletic director.

Reports last week said that football coach Bill Williams had resigned in the face of a school and a NCAA investigation.

Cahill said, "The NCAA never investigated or probed USD's program. The full investigation was carried out internally and self-reported to the NCAA. The Infractions Committee not only accepted the report in full, but highly commended the university for its integrity, investigation and prompt action."

sources indicate that the matter arose last spring when a football player showed Cahill a promissory note signed by an assistant coach. That note, in effect, guaranteed a loan the player said he needed to remain in school. As a Division III football school, USD is unable to award football scholarships, despite a tuition of approximately $8,000 per year.

As it turned out, the player never took the loan and transferred out of USD. No money changed hands. The assistant coach involved, who apparently acted without Williams' knowledge, was dismissed immediately, a source said.

But when Cahill conducted his own investigation, it was determined that Williams had made three small loans to a player or players during a three-year period, from 1978 to 1980. In each case the loan recipient had no money for rent or food and Williams' motivation was personal.

"Bill was being a sucker for a sob story—it comes down to that," said one source close to the investigation.

Apparently there is still some question as to whether the money was accepted as a loan or a gift, although neither is legal under NCAA rules.

"I understand the NCAA's point," said Williams, "but I wouldn't say I've done anything wrong from a moral standpoint."

Williams joined the USD coaching staff as defensive coordinator in 1974. In 1976, he assumed the head coaching position, and since then has compiled an overall record of 34-36-1.

In 1978, the Toreros were 7-3 and Williams was named the District 8 coach of the year. His best season was 1981, when the Toreros went 9-1 and finished in the Top 20 of Division III after being ranked as high as seventh. That showing helped earn the team television exposure this fall when its game at Occidental was aired by CBS during the National Football League strike.

JAN 21 1983

USD's Football Program Given 1 Year's Probation

The National Collegiate Athletic Association yesterday announced a one-year probation of the University of San Diego's football program for violation of NCAA rules against loans and gifts to student athletes.

Last week it was reported that the USD head football coach, Bill Williams, had resigned after the university discovered Williams had made illegal loans to an unnamed student-athlete. The Rev. Patrick Cahill, USD's athletic director, said at the time, "We are not talking huge figures."

Neither the university nor the NCAA yesterday would disclose the amounts involved, but an NCAA release described them as "significant amounts of money."

"Although the (infractions) committee believes the violations to be quite serious," said Alan Wright, NCAA infractions committee chairman, "it should be emphasized the violations were discovered by the (USD) director of athletics and reported to the NCAA."

Wright indicated the penalties would have been more severe had it not been for USD's internal investigation and voluntary report to the NCAA.

The probation, which went into effect retroactively to Dec. 22, 1982, means the university's football team cannot take part in any post-season play next season; neither can it participate in any games that are telecast.

The NCAA said that on two occasions in 1978 Williams gave a substantial amount of cash to a student-athlete for the athlete's personal use.

"Further, although it was described as a loan," the NCAA said, "no attempt to repay the money was made."

The NCAA said that in the fall of 1979, Williams advanced a substantial amount of cash on two occasions to a student-athlete for educational expenses at the university.

In 1978, the NCAA said, Williams gave a student-athlete cash for personal expenses. And in September 1981 an unnamed assistant football coach, since resigned, signed a note guaranteeing payment of a bank loan for a student-athlete.

In a separate release, Cahill said USD reported the violations to the NCAA when the USD investigation was completed early last summer.

"It is unfortunate that NCAA rules were violated," Cahill said, "because the university does everything possible to preclude any irregularity. In this case a few misjudgments were made, and we have to pay the price."

"More than 300 students have gone through this program since 1978, and they must not be overlooked because of the poor judgment of a few individuals."

"We have a healthy Division III football program at USD, and, from the flood of inquiries I have received for the head coaching position, evidently a lot of others think so, too."

JAN 21 1983

USD gets one-year probation

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "We knew it was coming," a University of San Diego official says of the decision by the NCAA to put the school's football program on one year probation.

"It's embarrassing. We feel badly about it," said the Rev. Patrick Cahill, athletic director at the private Roman Catholic college.

The NCAA imposed the sanctions Thursday, saying the head football coach and an assistant coach violated regulations by giving "significant amounts of money" to four players.

JAN 21 1983

USD Football Team Placed on Probation

From a Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego football team has officially been placed on one-year probation by the NCAA, it was announced Thursday.

Coach Bill Williams admitted last week that he had loaned "a small sum" of money to three players in 1977-79. He also said that an assistant coach was fired last spring for giving a promissory note to a player.

Williams resigned in the wake of the investigation, which had been reported by USD to the NCAA. In seven years, Williams had a 34-36 record with the Toreros.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

JAN 21 1983

College Football: USD on probation

• The University of San Diego football team has been slapped with a one-year probation because its head coach and an assistant coach gave "significant amounts of money" to four players, the NCAA. The school will be prohibited from participating in any post-season competition or appearing on live television in 1983. The NCAA did not name the coaches responsible for the violations. However, Coach Bill Williams resigned earlier this month when it was announced the NCAA was investigating the University of San Diego football.

JAN 22 1983

WCAC Is Issued A Gael Warning

By BILL FINLEY
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

The last time St. Mary's College won a West Coast Athletic Conference championship in basketball, the star of its team was Tom Meschery.

Meschery, moreover, was a sophomore. It has been 24 years since St. Mary's last finished first, but the Gaels took a significant step toward ending this drought when they outfinished the University of San Diego 61-56 last night at USD.

St. Mary's trailed 27-24 at the half. With 11½ minutes remaining, it lagged 42-36. Past St. Mary's teams might have buckled in such a circumstance, but this one pressed on. Indeed, the Gaels made eight of their last 10 shots from the field and nine of their last 10 free throws. As a result, they won a conference opener played before 400 fans in the Sports Center.

As St. Mary's Defeats USD 61-56

"Obviously, this was a big win for us," Coach Bill Oates said. "San Diego is well-coached and very basic in the things they do. They give everybody a tough time, and to beat them—especially here—is very encouraging."

Oates, who coached Athletes in Action before moving to Meraga in 1979, was reluctant to term his club a contender for the WCAC championship.

"It's too soon to say," he hedged, but the Gaels are obviously a team on the come.

The St. Mary's lineup includes a freshman and three sophomores. The Gaels paid for this inexperience early in the year, losing five of their first six games. More recently, however, they are 7-1, the setback coming to San Diego (Continued on C-3, Col. 1)

WCAC Issued A Gael Warning

(Continued from C-1)
State two weeks ago in Peterson Gym.

Clearly, the Gaels are beginning to believe in themselves, and they stiffened perceptibly with the game on the line last night.

Senior forward Peter Thibaux, who led both sides with 24 points, scored 10 of them in the last 11 minutes. Sophomore guard Paul Pickett scored 12 of his 20 points in the same stretch. Still, it was reserve guard Billy Knox who made the decisive play of the game.

With 31 seconds remaining, a 15-foot, turnaround jumper by USD's Mike Whitmarsh had trimmed St. Mary's lead to 56-54. The Toreros promptly called time, and Coach Jim Brovelli suggested they foul Knox, a 63 percent free throw shooter. Robby Roberts fouled him, all right, but not until Knox was attempting a layup.

The shot went in the basket. So did the ensuing free throw. St. Mary's emerged with a five-point lead, and 18 seconds later it began celebrating its victory.

"We were trying to get Knox at mid-court, but we couldn't catch him," Brovelli said. "By the time we did, it was a little late."

USD received 14 points from Rich Davis and 13 from Whitmarsh, but the Toreros were outshot 68 percent to 49 and outrebounded 26-18.

Now 0-1 in the WCAC and 6-9 overall, USD must face powerful Santa Clara (9-4) tonight at 7:30 in the Sports Center, and Brovelli is concerned.

"In close games like this one, you've got to make some plays in the last minute if you're going to win, and we just aren't making them," he said. "We had a chance to tie with a minute to go, and missed two jump shots. We couldn't even give the foul at the end."

The San Diego Union/Roni Gulgano

USD's Rich Davis steals the ball from a fallen Gael and heads downcourt convoyed by teammate Don Capener behind him.

JAN 22 1983

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

TOREROS LOSE/ Forward Peter Thibaux sank 24 points and guard Paul Pickett added 20 more Friday night to lead St. Mary's to a 61-56 basketball victory over the University of San Diego in a West Coast Athletic Conference game at the USD Sports Center. It was the first conference game for both teams. The win improved St. Mary's overall record to 8-7. USD fell to 6-9. USD received 14 points from guard Rich Davis. Teammate Mike Whitmarsh, coming off a two-week layoff because of a shoulder injury, contributed 13 points.

USD Loses by Five to St. Mary's

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Before the game, University of San Diego basketball Coach Jim Brovelli had called this "a new life, the second season."

And for a while it seemed it might be. But poor play late in the game—a return of some of the problems that had plagued USD during the non-conference schedule—was costly as St. Mary's beat USD, 61-56, in the West Coast Athletic Conference opener for both schools Friday night at the USD sports Center.

"It is the little things you have to do at the end to come out on top," said Brovelli after the game. "You have to make those plays if you are going to win."

The visitors had a 50-48 lead with four minutes remaining when Brovelli sent center Robby Roberts back into the game. Roberts had been in foul trouble and been removed with nine minutes remaining. It seemed that might give the Toreros the needed muscle to come back and win. The lead had seen-sawed throughout.

But USD couldn't again catch up with the quick play of St. Mary's star, senior forward Peter Thibaux, who finished with a game-high 24 points, and his teammates.

USD didn't tie the game again, though it closed the lead to 56-54 with 30 seconds remaining on a Mike Whitmarsh field goal.

Field goals and free throws by the Gaels Paul Pickett (20 points) and Billy Knox ended the threat. USD simply couldn't find the range on numerous late field-goal tries.

The Toreros had grabbed a 27-24 halftime advantage by staging a nifty comeback after playing weakly early. The visitors tied the game, 8-8, five minutes into play on a field goal by forward David Boone. The Gaels then knocked off eight unanswered points.

The Toreros switched to a zone offense midway through the half and it slowed down the visitors, but St. Mary's still had a 24-17 lead with four minutes remaining when Thibaux picked up his third foul and St. Mary's coach Bill Oates pulled him.

USD then used its more aggressive zone defense to collect two steals and create two turnovers, which helped it to its halftime advantage.

"We had a good run at the end of the first half," Brovelli said. "But you have to sustain it."

USD now must do better than sustain. The Toreros play host to the University of Santa Clara tonight at 7:30 at the Sports Center. Santa Clara (12-4) has the best pre-conference record of any WCAC team, its losses having been to North Carolina, Louisville, USC and San Jose State.

And, USD (6-9) will face Santa Clara after the Bronco have had a night off. Normally, Santa Clara would have played the University of San Francisco Friday night, but USD dropped men's basketball after last season.

"The schedule is against us that way," Brovelli said. "They are waiting in the stands to play us. With no USD we face a fresh team this way throughout the season."

He needs to freshen up the Toreros as well. USD had 14 costly turnovers and shot only eight for 13 (62%) from the free throw line.

For the Toreros, Rich Davis had 14 points, Whitmarsh 13 and Roberts 12. Nine players saw action. St. Mary's is now 8-7 overall.

San Diego Notepad

Aztecs juggle lineup; USD loses

While San Diego State basketball Coach Smokey Gaines fiddles with his lineup, the Aztecs are doing a slow burn after losing their first two games in the Western Athletic Conference, a conference they were picked to win.

The Aztecs have shot poorly from the outside. As a result, Gaines will insert Eddie Morris into the starting lineup tonight in Honolulu when the Aztecs meet Hawaii in another WAC game (9:35 p.m., KSDO-1130 AM).

"In both losses last week," said Gaines, "the teams were jamming the middle and giving us the 15-foot jump shot. If that's the way teams are going to play us, we've just got to be able to hurt them from the outside. Eddie Morris is probably our best outside shooter."

Meanwhile, last night, the University of San Diego Toreros continued to stagger as they bowed to St. Mary's 61-56 at the USD Sports Center. Tonight's pickings aren't any easier. The Toreros meet powerful Santa Clara (9-4) at 7:30 at the Sports Center.

The Toreros dropped to 6-9 overall and 0-1 in the West Coast Athletic Conference. USD received 14 points from Rich Davis and 13 from Mike Whitmarsh, but they were outshot 68 percent to 49 and outrebounded 26-18.

Up the freeway, UCSD's Bob Goodman hit a basket with no time left as the Tritons defeated Fresno Pacific 59-58 at UCSD.

And, at the other end of town, Point Loma College dropped a 53-52 decision to Biola.

In women's basketball, San Diego State trounced University of Arizona 82-60 as Marci Blackman canned 11 of 18 from the field for 22 points. Tonight it gets a little tougher for the Aztecs when they host the Arizona State Sun Devils at 7:30.

A WCAC Challenge: Top Last Year

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

There is no way the West Coast Athletic Conference basketball race can be better than it was a year ago. The University of San Francisco dropped its program. That in itself has hurt the WCAC's prestige and power.

Still, USD did not win the WCAC title a year ago. Pepperdine did.

Yet the Waves, featuring two of the WCAC's top four scorers in guard Dane Suttle and power forward Orlando Phillips, rank as no better than preseason co-favorites with the University of Santa Clara.

"From top to bottom, the spread between the teams is not as great this year," says University of San Diego coach Jim Brovelli, whose Toreros have made steady progress in their first three WCAC seasons.

USD, which begins its WCAC season tonight at the USD Sports Center against St. Mary's at 7:30, debuted in the WCAC in the 1980 season and placed eighth at 2-14. In 1981, USD was 3-11 and seventh, and last year the Toreros were fifth at 4-10.

USD might be hard-pressed to do as well in 1983. This season, in pre-WCAC play, the Toreros ranked last among conference teams in field goal shooting accuracy and next-to-last in free-throw percentage. To make its ball-control tactics work against faster, stronger WCAC opponents, USD has to hit a high percentage of its shots.

"I think we've reached the point where we can beat anyone in this conference," Brovelli says. "We're competitive. All that's left is to win the games we're competitive in."

Here's a look at the WCAC race (pre-WCAC records in parentheses):

Pepperdine (10-6) — A Top 20 team a year ago, the Waves have been a bit of a disappointment thus far. The 6-foot-7 Phillips leads WCAC teams in rebounding (10.0) and field goal accuracy (64.1 percent) and ranks fourth in scoring at 20.8 points a game. Guard Dane Suttle ranks second in scoring at 22.8, and 6-8 Victor Ander (8.9) and 6-6 Bill Sadler (8.4) rank third and fourth in rebounding. Sadler is averaging 14.4 points a game, Ander 11.2. Off guard Mark Wilson, the shortest of the regulars at 6-2, is second in the WCAC assist statistics at 5.7 per game. As a team, Pepperdine shoots a WCAC-leading 54.2 percent from the floor. Suttle and Phillips were second-team all-WCAC picks a year ago. The one question is a lack of depth.

Santa Clara (12-4) — Three of the Broncos' losses have been to USC, Louisville and North Carolina. A balanced attack features 6-3 sophomore guard Harold Keeling (15.8 points, 4.3 rebounds), 6-7 forward Gary Hopkins (11.0 and 3.7), sixth-man Scott Lamson (11.0 points) and 7-foot, sophomore center Nick Vanos (7.5 rebounds). Forward Michael Norman is a fine all-round player. The Broncos regularly use eight men. A very physical team.

St. Mary's (7-7) — Forward Peter Thibaux (6-8, senior) was second-team all-WCAC a year ago and ranks fifth in scoring this season at 17.6 points. Also averages 7.5 rebounds and shoots 62.5 percent from the floor to rank second in the WCAC. St. Mary's beat Fresno State in Fresno to end Bulldogs' string of 26 straight home-court victories. Guard Paul Pickett averages 14.3 points, followed by 6-7 sophomore forward David Cooke (9.1 points, 5.2 rebounds) and 6-6 freshman forward David Boone (7.9, 6.7). St. Mary's is a ball-control team in the style of USD.

University of San Diego (6-8) — Brovelli sat his team down this week and talked about its shooting problems. Toreros are shooting just 45 percent from the floor and 63 percent from the foul line. Half the preseason losses (by margins of 2, 2, 5 and 3 points) were directly the result of poor foul shooting. "We're rebounding better than I thought we would and are playing better in some respects," Brovelli says, "but our shooting is terrible. We can't win unless we shoot better." Toreros will be better with the return of 6-6 forward Mike Whitmarsh (10.4 points, 4.1 rebounds) from a shoulder injury and 6-7 Robby Roberts (9.1, 6.9) from an eye injury. Point guard Rich Davis leads USD in scoring at 12.6. Support comes from forward Brian Setenich (7.4, 4.2), guard John Prunty (7.3), forward Anthony Reuss (6.0, 4.7) and guard Don Capener (5.9).

Gonzaga (7-7) — The Bulldogs beat DePaul in Chicago last week. As a team, Gonzaga shoots 51 percent from the floor, the second best mark in the WCAC. Gonzaga is paced by 6-3 forward Bryce McPhee (15.6 points, 4.8 rebounds), 6-8 forward-center Jason Van Nort (12.1, 5.3) and 6-1 guard John Stockton (12.4, 6.4).

Loyola-Marymount (7-8) — The Lions can fill the basket. Double transfer Greg Goorjian, the coach's son, leads the WCAC in scoring (24.6) and ranks third in assists (5.7). And 6-7 forward Forrest McKenzie averages 21.7 points and 7.2 rebounds. Six-six runningmate Johnny Brown averages 13.7 points and ranks second in WCAC rebounding at 9.7. Lions average 79.5 points a game, the second most in the WCAC. They also allow 78.5.

Portland (6-10) — The WCAC's lowest-scoring team (58.1 points a game), but also the stingiest (59.5) and most disciplined. The balanced attack is paced by 5-9 guard Brian Fundingsland (9.3 points, 5.0 assists), 6-7 forward Dennis Black (9.2), guard Kevin Williams (8.3), 6-9 center Bryan Beard (7.2) and 6-8 forward Darran Jenkins (4.1).

In other action for San Diego area colleges yesterday, United States International University bowed to Northern Arizona 67-60 at Flagstaff. Point Loma College was edged by the University of Victoria 71-69 in the championship game of the Point Loma Classic. UCSD routed Cal Tech 85-25 and San Diego State's women's team bested USD 83-56.

Bill Morales scored 26 points, Nigel Lloyd 16 and Anthony Rosser had 11 points and as many rebounds and Mike Elliot a season-high 14 rebounds in a losing effort for USIU. The Gulls (1-16) led 4-0 in early but surrendered the lead at 13-12 with 3:59 remaining in the half.

NAU assumed a 10-point lead (44-34) early in the second half, but USIU pulled were within four at 55-51 in the final three minutes. Northern Arizona's Eric Wade scored seven of his 16 points in the final 2:30 to keep the Lumberjacks (6-5) in command.

Eli Pasquale scored 27 points as the team from British Columbia, Canada held off Point Loma in the closing minutes of a game that was close all the way.

Chester Hood paced Point Loma with 19 and Paul Walker scored 16 for the Crusaders who are now 9-7 on the season.

At UCSD, guard Robert Goodman had 14 points, guard Kent Doseh 10 and center Mike Dabasinskas 12 as the Tritons cruised to a record-levelling (6-6) victory.

Heidi Bauer scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in 26 minutes of playing time and Judy Porter contributed 16 points and 11 rebounds in San Diego State's triumph over USD. Bauer hit on nine of 12 field goals and five of six free throws as SDSU raised its record to 7-5. USD (2-7) benefited from 16 points and 12 rebounds by Chayo Moreno.

Jim Brovelli

The San Diego Union/James Skovmand

USD's Robby Roberts goes up for two points.

Broncos Rap USD 71-57

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

The University of San Diego didn't wait until the final minute to lose a basketball game last night. It lost it in the final 38 seconds of the first half.

Up until then, the Toreros were battling the University of Santa Clara to a 19-19 draw at the USD Sports Center. But the Broncos, capitalizing on two crucial mistakes by Torero point guard John Prunty, scored six points in the final 38 seconds to go up 25-19 at the break.

After expanding the lead to as many as 18 points midway through the second half, Santa Clara held off a late USD surge to score a 71-57 West Coast Athletic Conference victory.

"The last half minute of the first half killed us," said Toreros coach Jim Brovelli. "We can't afford to make mistakes like that."

Although the Toreros led only briefly in the first half, neither team had held more than a two-point lead when USD guard Rich Davis downed a 10-footer to knot the score at 19-19 with 1:03 to go.

Steve Kenilvort hit a 25-foot bomb to put Santa Clara back up on top and the Toreros seemed satisfied to work for the last shot of the half and a tie when disaster struck.

First, Prunty, trapped along the sideline, bounced a pass out of bounds to hand the ball back to Santa Clara. When Davis ran over the back of Santa Clara's Terry Davis, the Bronco went to the line and hit two free throws to make it 23-19 with 10 seconds showing.

Then, Prunty double-dribbled to turn the ball back over to Santa Clara with six seconds to go. As time ran down, Kenilvort hit an 18-footer from along the baseline — 25-19.

With freshmen guards Kenilvort and Davis each hitting for 12 points in the best games of their careers, Santa Clara pulled out to a 50-32 lead before USD rallied but pulled no closer than 62-53 with 1:49 to play.

USD made 12 of its 22 turnovers in the first half while blowing several opportunities to take a larger lead.

Mike Whitmarsh had his best game of the season for USD, hitting 8 of 12 shots from the floor while scoring 18 points and pulling down 10 rebounds. Davis scored 17 points while Robby Roberts had 10 points and seven rebounds.

Brovelli last night started Bill Penfold at guard, used 6-9 freshman center Mario Coronado a season-high 15 minutes (three points, six rebounds) and determined that both will be getting more playing time the remainder of this 6-10 season.

Santa Clara, a preseason WCAC co-favorite, improved to 13-4.

Santa Clara Sends U. of San Diego to 71-57 Loss

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—One of the hardest things to take is a disappointing performance.

But the University of Santa Clara basketball team lived up to its billing Saturday night at the USD Sports Center.

Santa Clara came into its first West Coast Athletic Conference game with the league's best non-conference record, 12-4.

And the losses were to North Carolina, Louisville, USC and San Jose State, not exactly the light weights of college basketball.

The visitors tripped USD, 71-57, sending the Toreros to 0-2 in the WCAC.

"We do have a lot of good character kinds," said Santa Clara Coach Carroll Williams, in his 13th season with the Broncos. "Winning is very important to them."

Santa Clara had some trouble with the home team in the first half, but took charge early in the second half—going up 46-32 midway through the period—and maintained a hefty margin until the finish.

The only disappointment on the Bronco squad was leading scorer Harold Keeling, who had a bad shooting night and finished with nine points, six under his average.

USD was hurt again by turnovers—22—and by committing seven more personal fouls than Santa Clara.

"They are hard to play," said Williams about USD. "They picked us apart defensively early in the game."

Santa Clara and Williams have been noted for defensive play.

It was a two-point game in the first half until, with 30 seconds left, the visitors moved out to take a 25-19 lead into the locker room.

The Toreros might have been able to pull away in the first half and take command, except for a whopping 12 turnovers, five of them from Center Robby Roberts, who finished with 10 points.

The last two turnovers were in the last half minute, setting up two Santa Clara free throws from Guard Terry Davis and a field goal from Guard Steve Kenilvort.

Santa Clara had trouble adjusting to USD's control of offense, which kept the ball away from the Broncos for long spans.

Also, USD Coach Jim Brovelli switched defenses liberally, confusing the visitors.

Santa Clara relied heavily on Keeling to get rolling. Keeling had eight points in the first period, and all of those came during his team's first 10 points.

The Toreros' loss Friday night was to WCAC foe St. Mary's, 61-50. Last year USD beat each of these teams once during its home-and-away series, and that accounted for half of the Toreros' four league victories, which placed them fifth.

USD is at the distinct disadvantage of having to play a fresh team the second night of each weekend this season. This weekend, for example, Santa Clara would normally have played the University of San Francisco Friday night, but since USD dropped men's basketball after last season, that date is open.

"We practiced all week for San Diego," said Williams. "But Jim (Brovelli) had to split his time between St. Mary's and us. It's not fair."

Brovelli used nine players, again trying to find a combination that will make USD (6-10) a winner.

Forward Mik Whitmarsh led the team in scoring with 18 points and in rebounds with 10. Guard Rich Davis had 17 points.

Santa Clara was led by Kenilvort, forward Gary Hopkins and Davis, who each had 12 points.

Santa Clara whips Toreros

Steve Kenilvort, Gary Hopkins and Terry Davis scored 12 points apiece to lead the Santa Clara Broncos to a 71-57 West Coast Athletic Conference season opening basketball victory over the University of San Diego Saturday.

Although former Monte Vista High School and Grossmont College player Mike Whitmarsh scored 18 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for USD and Rich Davis added 17 points, it was not enough to put the Toreros on top. The Toreros made 22 turnovers, 14 of them in the first half, to Santa Clara's 16.

USD pulled to within 10 points (45-35) with 14:36 to play, but never came any closer.

JAN 27 1983

USD will host tennis elite

By Elson Irwin
Tribune Sportswriter

The first major tennis tournament for male college players — the San Diego Intercollegiate Tournament — is scheduled for the University of San Diego Feb. 17-19. The elite of the nation's teams have been invited, according to Ed Collins, tournament director.

Teams scheduled to play here include: Pepperdine, USC, UCLA, USD, San Diego State, U.S. International University, UCSD, Point Loma College and Southern Methodist.

The first major open adult tournament in San Diego County is the Heart Tennis Tournament at Morley and Robb fields over two weekends, Feb. 19-20 and 26-27.

Below is a list of San Diego County adult tournaments through August of this year:

Feb. 5, 12, 19, 26: Men's Winter Doubles League, various locations, 465-9575.
Feb. 6, 13, 20, 27: Mixed Winter Doubles League, various locations, 465-9575.
Feb. 5-6, 12-13: Vista Tennis Club Open Prize Money Tournament, Vista Tennis Club, men's and women's open singles, 459-1541.
Feb. 12: Heart-to-Heart Mixed Tournament, Martin Luther King Park, 421-1648.
Feb. 12-13: TLC Merchandise Tournament, various high schools, open, 5, C, novice singles, 295-4777.
Feb. 17-19: San Diego Intercollegiate Tournament, USD and San Diego State, singles, 291-4888, ext. 4272.
Feb. 19-20, 26-27: Heart Tennis Tournament, Morley and Robb fields, 296-4888 or 287-1417.
Feb. 26: Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Tournament, Martin Luther King Park, singles, doubles and mixed, 421-1648.
Mar. 5, 12, 19, 26: Men's Winter Doubles League, 465-9575.
Mar. 6, 13, 20, 27: Mixed Winter Doubles League, 465-9575.
Mar. 3-6: Pacific Coast Doubles Championships, La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club, 454-7126.
Mar. 5-6: TLC Merchandise Tournament, 295-4777.
Mar. 5-6, 12-13: Vista Tennis Club Open Prize Money Tournament, Vista Tennis Club, singles only, 459-1541.
Mar. 18-20, 26-27: March of Dimes Tournament, Morley Field, 296-4888 or 435-1255.
Mar. 24-27: Helix South Seniors Tournament, Helix South Tennis Club, 355 to 755, singles and doubles, 444-0416, 465-0155.
Mar. 26-27: TLC Merchandise Tournament, singles, 295-4777.
Mar. 26-27: Women's Tennis Tournament, various private courts, 224-5748.

June 11: Equitable Family Classic, local qualifier, Rancho Bernardo Inn, 296-4888.
June 11-12: TLC Merchandise Tournament, 295-4777.
June 11-12, 18-19: Fallbrook Tennis Tournament, Fallbrook Tennis Club, 728-1431.
June 18-19: Stewart Reynolds Memorial Senior Tournament, Coronado Tennis Center, singles and doubles, 435-0200.
June 18-19: TLC Merchandise Tournament, 295-4777.
June 18-19, 24-26: LaRiza Open Classic, San Diego State, 296-7047.
June 25-26: Uplior Tea Mixed Doubles, qualifier, Pt. Loma Tennis Club, open mixed, 224-5748.
June 30, July 4, 9-10: Imperial Savings La Jolla Tennis Championships, singles, doubles, mixed, 459-9950.
July 9: Equitable Family Classic, district qualifier, Rancho Bernardo Inn, 296-4888.
July 9-10, 16-17: University City Racquet Club Tournament, Standley Park, doubles, 452-5683.
July 10: NAACP Tournament, Martin Luther King Park, 421-1648.
July 16-17: TLC Merchandise Tournament, 295-4777.
July 23-24, 30-31: Balboa Tennis Club Championships, Morley Field, singles, 296-6345.
July 31, Aug. 7, 14, 21, 28: University City Racquet Club Tournament, Standley Park, 452-5683.
Aug. 6-7, 13-14: Vista Tennis Club Open Prize Money Tournament, Vista Tennis Club, 459-1541.
Aug. 13-14: TLC Merchandise Tournament, 295-4777.
Aug. 20-21, 27-28: San Luis Rey Downs Open, San Luis Rey Downs TC, 758-3762.
Aug. 20-21, 27-28: Tierrasanta Tennis Club Championships, Serra High, 569-0036.
Aug. 27-28: TLC Merchandise Tournament, 295-4777.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

JAN 27 1983

USD on Probation 1 Year For NCAA Rules Violations

The Rev. Patrick Cahill, CSV, U. of San Diego Athletic Director, has announced that in the spring of 1982 information reported to him by a student indicated possible violation of University and NCAA regulations regarding the conduct of the University's Division III football program.

Investigation dating back to 1978 involved 2 coaches, one of whom was dismissed last spring.

The University reported the violations to the NCAA when the investigation was completed in early summer. This week, NCAA released its action against the USD football program.

Cahill said "It is unfortunate that NCAA rules were violated, because the University does everything possible to preclude any irregularity. In this case, a few misjudgments were made and we have to pay the price. More than 300 students have gone through this program since 1978 and they must not be overlooked because of the poor judgement of a few individuals. We have a healthy Division III football program at at USD, and from the flood of inquiries I have received for the head coaching position evidently a lot of others think so too."

"I read with interest the media (Tribune, Union, L.A. Times) reports and commend the reporters and their sources. Now that we are free of NCAA restrictions, I can say that the reporters and their sources, with one exception, were factually correct. For the record, I would like to correct that one error. The NCAA never investigated or "probed" USD's program. The full investigation was carried out internally and self-reported to the NCAA. The NCAA Infractions Committee not only accepted the report in full, but highly commended the University for its integrity, investigation and prompt action," Father Cahill said.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

JAN 28 1983

USD Plays Host to Loyola Marymount

From a Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego will play host to Loyola Marymount tonight at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center.

Loyola leads the West Coast Athletic Conference with a 2-0 record and is 10-6 overall. USD is 0-2 and 6-10.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

8 Part III/Saturday, January 29, 1983/J *

USD Shoots Past Loyola Marymount

Davis Controls Tempo, Leads Toreros to a 75-67 Victory

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The fortunes of war did an about-face Friday night at the University of San Diego Sports Center.

USD, riding a three-game losing streak, knocked off Loyola Marymount, riding a four-game winning streak, 75-67. The Toreros are now 7-10 overall and 1-2 in the West Coast Athletic Conference. Loyola Marymount dropped to 9-9 and 2-1.

The victory was accomplished because for the first time in recent games USD's control offense actually controlled the tempo. Guard Rich Davis orchestrated the floor game and his ballhandling was largely responsible for dropping the Toreros' turnover total to five from 22 against Santa Clara last Saturday.

"He played a very heady game tonight," said USD Coach Jim Brovelli. "He played an excellent floor game."

Davis credited the win to an intense week of practice. "We worked hard on our control this week in practice," Davis said. "We took the good shots tonight."

While Davis, who finished with 16 points, and company were taking the good shots, they also were trying to stop the high-scoring Lions from taking theirs.

The visitors came into the game averaging 79.2 points per game.

Although Greg Goorjian, son of Loyola Coach Ed Goorjian, hit his average of 26 points, his teammates were well under theirs.

"Goorjian earned everything he got tonight," Brovelli said.

Indeed, His points came on turn-around jumpers and 20 footers with hands waving in his face.

Another about-face for USD was at the foul line. The Toreros, who had been averaging 65%, made 27 of 35 (77%).

"We finally made our free throws at the end of the game," Brovelli said. "If we had done this earlier, we'd have five more wins now."

Most of the successful free throws came off the palms of forward Mike Whitmarsh, who led the team with 20 points. He was six for six from the line in the last minute of play and that closed the door on the Lions.

The Lions actually led at halftime, 34-32, with the help of a three-point play by guard Darren Lee, a graduate of Sweetwater High, with two seconds left.

But USD tied the game at the start of the second half, and the lead saw-sawed until the Toreros went ahead for good, 52-50, on a field goal by Whitmarsh with 7:15 left.

The Lions, who had gone into a full-court press only minutes before, were only able to force one turnover.

The Toreros also were able to control the backboards, outrebounding the Lions 31-23. Whitmarsh and center Robby Roberts, who had eight points, each had seven rebounds.

Forward Mario Coronado, who started for the first time this season but had foul trouble early in the second half, finished with 12 points.

Lion guard Forrest McKenzie had 12 points, nine under his average.

USD can't even savor the victory. It entertains WCAC pre-season favorite Pepperdine (11-7, 1-1) tonight at 7:30 at the Sports Center. Pepperdine, which has already been upset by Gonzaga, 69-68, didn't lose a WCAC game last year.

JAN 27 1983

Where is Jon Freeman?

By JEFF NAHILL
Star-News Sports Editor

The Southwestern College basketball team is not having what one would consider a good season.

The Apaches had a 6-13 record and 1-5 mark in Pacific Coast Conference play heading into this week.

The present might be dimmed but the future could be bright for Bill Foley's crew.

YOU SEE, the long-time South Bay mentor will have the likes of George Stuart, Thor Dekker, Paul Nelson, Larry Irwin and Jon Freeman returning next year.

What's that, you say? Jon Freeman doesn't appear in any of the Southwestern boxscores? That's true, but he will next year.

The All-CIF guard out of Bonita Vista has left the University of San Diego and is currently redshirting at SWC.

"I left USD simply because I want to play," said Freeman, who saw limited playing time as a freshman last year and even less at the beginning of this season. "During my freshman year, I just said to myself 'I'm a freshman, maybe I shouldn't be playing.'"

He's alive and well
at SWC

Star-News photo by Janice Gordon

JON FREEMAN
Shooting hoops at SWC

"THIS YEAR I felt I was in the same position as last year so I figured it was time to move on."

"There was no conflict between Coach (Jim) Brovelli and myself. He had guards playing ahead of me and I wasn't one of them. He only plays about three guards."

So Freeman has returned home and he couldn't be happier about the future.

Freeman, who hails from a family long on basketball talent (Jim played at Point Loma College and David played at Southwestern and is now at UC Riverside), made his mark in high school in one game.

Although he had a steady senior year (15.3 ppg) and led the Barons to a Metro co-championship garnering Star-News "Co-player of the Year" honors, Freeman had an absolutely outstanding game in the CIF title contest against La Jolla.

THE VIKINGS were led by prep All-American Ken Johnson, who dominated the game, but every time Johnson tried to pull La Jolla to a big lead, Freeman responded. The latter finished with 23 points, four steals and a scholarship offer from the Toreros. Most local observers felt Freeman

"BROVELLI saw him in that CIF championship game and he decided to take a chance on Jon. He wanted to get some good kids into the program."

"I tried to tell Jon to come to Southwestern, play 30 games a year for two years and he would increase his sellability. You don't get any better sitting on the bench or just practicing."

Foley said that the Freeman situation is typical of what he has to fight against with kids coming out of high school.

"We have to convince more local guys to come here and play," said the coach. "The key is whether you are going to get to play at a four-year school right away. Just look at Aaron Combs at Oklahoma. He's redshirting this year."

"I REALIZE that some high school kids have to go away to go to college, but we can compete with anyone at this level and we move kids along to a four-year school at an average of two a year."

Freeman could have played immediately at the semester break this season for the Apaches, but he realized after a year and a half of inactivity he needed a full season to get back to his proper level.

What did Freeman learn in his time on the four-year level and does he have any regrets?

"Maybe going in as a freshman I should have been more confident," said the player. "Maybe I could have played more. I had a real good time at USC. I had fun with the academics, but I wanted to play basketball."

"ON THE COURT, I need to work on my defense. The players are a lot quicker in college. Also my ballhandling skills are average. They put a lot of pressure on you bringing the ball up court."

"There were only a couple of schools I could have transferred to, but I know Coach Foley and his system because a lot of the stuff we ran in high school and it's only 10 minutes from my house."

"I look for him to have a super season next year," said Foley. "He has the great things a point guard needs plus he has size. We have a lot of key players coming back and with him at point guard that jumps us up a little bit."

For the Southwestern basketball program, having Jon Freeman around two years late is better than not having him at all.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

JAN 27 1983

USD Hoopsters To Play Pair

USD Toreros start their second season this weekend as they open up the West Coast Athletic Conference with St. Mary's College on Friday and Santa Clara University on Saturday. Both games will be played in the USD Sports Center with a tip-off time of 7:30 p.m.

St. Mary's College is coming off an 11-16 season from a year ago and a 7th place finish in the WCAC with a 3-11 record. The Gaels lead the series 4 games to 2 with the Toreros winning the last contest by a score of 73-62. The Gaels have had their ups and downs so far in this 7-7 season with their biggest victory coming against Fresno State on the road (52-51). The Gaels return four starters from last year's squad, including three freshmen. The only two seniors on the team are forwards Peter Thibault and Brandon.

Next week's action has the Toreros hosting Loyola Marymount Friday, Jan. 29, and Pepperdine Saturday. Both games start at 7:30 p.m. in the USD Sports Center.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 27 1983

Toreros seek WCAC wins

The University of San Diego will host Loyola Marymount and Pepperdine in a pair of West Coast Athletic Conference basketball games this weekend.

The Toreros will be looking for their first conference win when they play the Lions Friday at 7:30 p.m. USD and the Waves play at the same hour Saturday. The Toreros are 0-2 in WCAC games and 6-10 overall. The Lions are 2-0 and 9-8. Pepperdine is 1-1 and 11-7.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 28 1983

USF's Absence Hurting USD In League Play

No team in the West Coast Athletic Association is more affected by the University of San Francisco's decision last spring to drop basketball than the University of San Diego.

USF and USD were to have been traveling partners this season. When USF dropped the sport, USD became a lone wolf in scheduling. Each WCAC team that faces USD has only one conference game that week — the Toreros.

"It's hurting us," Toreros coach Jim Brovelli says. "Every team we play has just us to prepare for. Last Friday, the entire Santa Clara coaching staff took in our game with St. Mary's. We're not getting anyone unprepared on the second night."

This week, the Toreros — 0-2 in WCAC play and 6-10 overall — host Loyola Marymount tonight and Pepperdine tomorrow night at 7:30 at the USD Sports Center. Loyola Marymount's Lions, 9-8, feature two of the conference's top scorers in guard Greg Goorjian (24.9, 7.2 rebounds) and 6-foot-7 forward Forrest McKenzie (21.4, 7.2 rebounds) while 11-7 Pepperdine is the defending WCAC champion with such notables as forwards Orlando Phillips (6-7, 20.4 points, 10.3 rebounds) and Bill Sadler (6-8, 14.5 points, 8.3 rebounds). 6-8 center Victor Anger (11.3 points, 8.4 rebounds) and guard Dane Suttle (22.2 points).

USD is making a major lineup adjustment. Six-foot-8 freshman center Mario Coronado, coming off a strong effort against Santa Clara, will start with Robby Roberts (9.3 points, 6.9 rebounds) moving to forward opposite Mike Whitmarsh (11.4 points). Bill Penfold and Rich Davis will open at guard.

— Bill Center

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 29 1983

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

TOREROS WIN/ Forward Mike Whitmarsh, formerly of Monte Vista High School and Grossmont College, sank 20 points and hauled in seven rebounds Friday night, leading the University of San Diego to a 75-67 basketball victory over Loyola Marymount in a West Coast Athletic Conference game at the USD Sports Center. The triumph gave the Toreros their first conference win of the season. They improved their overall mark to 7-10, 1-2 in the WCAC. The Lions slipped to 9-9 overall, 2-1 in conference play. With 5:12 remaining, USD held a 58-56 lead after being behind at the half 34-32. But during the final five minutes, the Toreros outscored the Lions 17-11, moving out to a 75-65 advantage with 20 seconds left, their biggest lead of the game. Guard Rich Davis scored 16 points for USD. Freshman center Mario Coronado, starting his first game of the year, contributed 12 points.

The agonized look on Torero Mike Whitmarsh's face may mean he knows he is about to be smacked by Loyola's Steve Haderlin.

USD Finally Gets Lift(s)

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Jim Brovelli has been waiting the length of this difficult basketball season for a floor leader to emerge on his University of San Diego team.

Last night he got double his wish. Paced by the play of guard Rich Davis and forward Mike Whitmarsh, the Toreros snapped a four-game losing streak with a 75-67 victory over Loyola-Marymount University in the USD Sports Center.

Davis finished with 16 points and eight assists while Whitmarsh had 20 points, seven rebounds, two steals and three assists.

"We played an excellent second half," said Brovelli after USD's first West Coast Athletic Conference triumph of the season.

"No bad shots. No bad mistakes. Good defense. The second half was by far our best basketball of the season."

To defeat the Lions, who were off to a 2-0 WCAC start and stood 9-8 after a 3-24 season a year ago, the Toreros had to harness the scoring of guard Greg Goorjian and forward Forrest McKenzie.

Despite the defensive work of Davis and his cohorts in the USD zone, Goorjian hit for 26 points, one over his season average. McKenzie, meanwhile, scored only 12, 10 below his normal production.

"When we needed to play defense and score some good points, we made good plays," said Brovelli. "If we had done this earlier, I think we might have five or six more wins." As it is, the Toreros are 7-10.

But if they are mounting a comeback,

(Continued on C-3, Col. 1)

Leaders Emerge in USD Victory

(Continued from C-1)

their timing might be perfect. Tonight, USD hosts defending WCAC champ and preseason favorite Pepperdine in the Sports Center at 7:35.

"Coming off a game like tonight's is going to be a big boost for us," said Brovelli.

"I know it's said all the time, but we came together tonight," said Davis. "We jelled. I thought we were a good basketball team in the second half. When the game could have gone either way, we did things to make it go ours."

The game was tied at 50-50 when the Toreros started doing those things.

When USD began to hold the ball, the visitors switched immediately from zone to man-to-man defense. With 7 1/2 minutes to play, Davis found Whitmarsh breaking along the baseline and hit him for a layup that put the Toreros ahead to stay.

The hosts pushed the advantage to as many as 10 with 20 seconds to go. They did it mostly by hitting free throws — the inability of which had foiled them on four previous occasions this season.

On this night, USD hit 21 of 27 free throws in the second half and shot 77 percent from the line overall — 14 percent over their season average. The Toreros also had their best shooting game of the year from the floor, hitting 52 percent.

Then he praised freshman center Mario Coronado.

"Coronado, for a first start, was outstanding (12 points in a 17-minute effort cut short by foul trouble)."

Although Goorjian scored 26, Brovelli praised Davis' defensive effort.

"Goorjian made some great shots," said Brovelli. "But he earned everything he got."

All but dead, USD comes to life

By T.R. Reinman
Tribune Sportswriter

The University of San Diego basketball team, loser of four straight games and without a win since Jan. 4, and probably given up for dead by most in the West Coast Athletic Conference, surprised the league-leading Loyola-Marymount Lions last night 75-67.

Playing at the USD Sports Center, the Toreros trailed 34-32 at the half, but outshot the Lions 61 percent to 54 percent from the field in the second half, and made 21 of 27 free throws compared to 7 of 10 for the Lions, to win their first league game and improve their overall record to 7-10. The Toreros had lost two previous league contests.

"We made our free throws at the end... that was the difference," said USD Coach Jim Brovelli. "If we had done that earlier, we'd have five or six more wins today."

"We played an excellent second half... no bad shots, no bad mistakes. We broke their press well. When they fouled us, we made the free throws. We had some good points."

USD led virtually all the way until it was caught at 50-50 with 8:39 to go in the game. At that point, the Lions switched from a zone defense to man-to-man, and the Toreros scored three layups and two free throws to send them on their way.

Mike Whitmarsh made two of those layups, and was USD's leading scorer with 20 points, 4 1/2 above his WCAC average. Point guard Rich Davis added 16, and guard Mario Coronado, making his first start of the season, scored 12.

Whitmarsh downplayed his role. "I didn't have to do much. I got some great passes," he said. "I'm finally playing the way I can. I'm finally feeling comfortable. I think the biggest thing was getting over those nagging injuries."

The Lions' top man, point guard Greg Goorjian, who leads the WCAC in scoring with a 24.5-point average per game, and, who was named last week's Player of the Week in the conference, scored 26, but Forrest McKenzie, the other Loyola player who is averaging 20 points per game, was held to 12.

"We worked over everything in practice this week," said Davis, who was assigned to watch Goorjian. "It took a long time to get the bugs out of this. I thought I had Goorjian forcing up some bad shots, but everything he was taking, was going down. I knew he had to miss sooner or later."

In the last 4 1/2 minutes of the game, USD scored 11 of its 15 points from the free-throw line, but it took its biggest lead of the game on a baseline jumper by Whitmarsh bringing the score to 63-56 with 3:47 to go. Whitmarsh was also the game's leading rebounder, with six. Brovelli singled out Whitmarsh as the catalyst to his team's win.

"There were two keys: Whitmarsh taking control of the boards, and hitting the baseline jumpers. That was a shot we just haven't been making."

Tonight at 7:30 at the Sports Center, USD hosts defending league champion Pepperdine, which has an 11-7 record, including 1-1 in the WCAC.

RICH DAVIS

had some good points when we had to have some good points."

USD Falls to Pepperdine, 61-58

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—After the Pacific Ocean battered the San Diego coastline most of the week, the last thing the USD basketball team needed was for the Waves to arrive Saturday night at the Sports Center.

The Pepperdine Waves eroded the USD defense just enough to come away with a 61-58 win. The visitors didn't take the lead for good until 11 seconds remained in the West Coast Athletic Conference game.

The winning field goal came off the hand of guard Dane Suttle, who finished with 18 points. USD immediately called a timeout with the score 59-58 and Coach Jim Brovelli sketched an offensive play on the sideline. But, the desperation shot by Torero Center, Robby Roberts from the corner failed, and Suttle was fouled immediately after the rebound. He made both ends of a one-and-one to polish off the home team.

"I want to give Jim's team credit," said Pepperdine Coach Jim Harrick. "I thought they played an outstanding game. We are lucky to get back in it."

"This was a great win for us," Harrick said. "We're struggling."

Pepperdine (12-7) is 2-1 in the WCAC. Last season the Waves went undefeated in the league. USD dropped to 1-3 in the league, 7-11 overall going into a two-game road trip.

The Toreros had been up, 56-53, with 1:34 left, following two John Prunty free throws. But two free throws by Suttle and a steal and field goal by Wave Victor Anger put the visitors back in it.

The erosion of the USD defense was accomplished none too fast by the Waves.

"Our inability to get the ball inside to Orlando Phillips kept the game close," Harrick said. "It's a struggle to win here."

Forward Orlando Phillips was the game's high scorer with 24, but he got only 12 shots from the floor, making 10 of them.

USD, pressed by the Wave defense much of the night, returned to its old problem—turnovers. USD had 16, as compared to only five Friday night in its 75-67 win over Loyola Marymount.

The USD zone defense showed its stuff as well, causing the visitors 17 turnovers.

USD outrebounded Pepperdine, 25-21, but made two-thirds (16 of 24) of its free throws.

Roberts led USD with 17 points. Forward Mike Whitmarsh had 12 and Guard Rich Davis 11.

Pepperdine played without the services of starting guard Mark Wilson, who is out for the season because of torn ligaments in his right wrist.

Torero Mike Whitmarsh collides with Wave Carmel Stevens under basket as the San Diego player drives for a layup.

Pepperdine Bomb In Final Seconds Stops USD 61-58

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

With 24 seconds to play last night and his team clinging to a one-point lead, University of San Diego basketball coach Jim Brovelli asked for help from a higher source.

"Just one time, let it go our way," he said. "Let it go our way... just once."

It wasn't to be.

With 10 seconds to play, Pepperdine guard Dane Suttle hit a 23-foot bomb to put the defending West Coast Athletic Conference champions ahead en route to a 61-58 victory over the Toreros before a packed house at the USD Sports Center.

Twice in the last minute, Torero forward Robby Roberts missed shots that might have won the game for USD. With 40 seconds to play and USD up 58-57, Roberts missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw opportunity. And with two seconds to play, he rimmed the basket with a 10-foot shot.

Suttle was fouled on the ensuing scramble for the loose ball and hit two free throws to seal the decision.

"The kids can't play any better," said Brovelli. "They deserved to win it as far as I'm concerned... maybe it takes a little luck... two straight years it's gone like this."

Last year, after a disputed five-second violation gave Pepperdine the ball, Suttle hit an off-balance 25-footer to give the Waves a 63-61 victory at the buzzer.

"One of these years that shot is not going to go," said Brovelli. "If we keep doing the things we're doing, one of these times we will succeed."

Last night seemed to be the night, right up to a disputed call with 74 seconds to play.

Prunty had just hit two free throws to put the Toreros ahead by five at 58-53 when Suttle lost control while trying to drive to the basket. Although he dribbled the ball into Prunty's leg, the USD guard was whistled for a foul by official Steve Fraira.

"It was one of the worst calls I've ever seen," said Brovelli. "It was no foul. Plus, Suttle traveled with the ball while dribbling into Prunty."

Still, Suttle went to the line and sank both foul shots. Seconds later, Pepperdine's Victor Anger intercepted a USD pass and scored a dunk to bring the Waves to within a point at 58-57.

USD had gone from a five-point lead to a one-point lead in 18 seconds. The Toreros almost made it three again, but Pepperdine forward Orlando Phillips blocked Mike Whitmarsh's attempt for a layup off the USD delay game. When the ball was inbound, Pepperdine wasted no time in fouling Roberts, a 62 percent foul shooter on the season. He missed.

"It's a shame," said Brovelli. "Robby had an outstanding game, one of his best (17 points on 8-for-10 shooting from the floor and five rebounds)."

Now 12-7 overall and 2-1 in WCAC play, Pepperdine was paced by Suttle and Phillips. The 6-foot-7 forward shot 10-for-12 from the floor and finished with 24 points and 10 rebounds.

In addition to Roberts, USD had 12 points from Whitmarsh and 11 from Davis. USD is now 7-11 and 1-3 in WCAC play.

SHORT TAKES — Point Loma College improved its record in NAIA District 3 basketball play to 4-1 with a 69-48 victory over Cal Baptist College Saturday night in Riverside. Deon Richards' 17 points and 13 rebounds paced the Crusaders, who are 12-10 overall... In other games involving area teams, U.S. International University lost to Texas Southern 82-80 at the Sports Arena and University of San Diego was edged by Pepperdine 61-58 in the USD Sports Center. Robby Roberts' 17 points led USD's Toreros, who are 1-3 in West Coast Athletic Conference play and 7-11 overall... UCLA defeated San Diego State 72-56 in women's basketball Saturday night in Peterson Gym. The losers are 1-4 in Western Collegiate Athletic Association play and 8-11 overall.

TOREROS LOSE — The University of San Diego let another one get away Saturday. The Toreros led Pepperdine by one point with 24 seconds to play. But the Waves' Dane Suttle hit a 23-footer with 10 seconds left to help Pepperdine escape with a 61-58 victory. Former Grossmont College standout Mike Whitmarsh had 12 points for USD. Pepperdine improved to 12-7 and 2-1 in the WCAC. USD fell to 7-11 and 1-3.

February 1983

SAN DIEGO
MAGAZINE

FEB 1983

Sun 'Yu Selects—Oriental treasures from the San Diego Museum of Art are on exhibit at Founders Gallery, University of San Diego, Feb. 11-Mar. 4. Opening reception Feb. 10, 7-9 p.m. Mon.-Fri. noon-5, Wed. til 9. USD, Alcalá Park. 291-6480.

EVENING TRIBUNE
FEB 1 1983

Course on Mexican legal system set

An 18-session course on the Mexican legal system will be offered by the University of San Diego School of Law. Professor Alfonso DeLimon will open it with a discussion of "Introduction to the Study of Mexican Law and the Origin and Evolution of Legal Education in Mexico" Feb. 7 and 9 at the school.

In subsequent weeks, the Mexican federal civil code, criminal law, the penal code and other subjects will be discussed.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 4 1983

USD presents Haydn's "Symphonia Concertante" and Telemann's "Quartet in D Minor" at 12:15 p.m. Wednesday in the French Parlor, Founders Hall, USD. Information: 291-6480.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 4 1983

UNIVERSITY OF SAN DIEGO (Founders Hall, French Parlor). Haydn's "Symphonia Concertante" and Telemann's Quartet in D Minor will be performed at 12:15 p.m. Wednesday.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 4 1983

TOM BLAIR

A Soupcon Of Snippets

NEWSPEAK: A brochure ballyhooing a new set of sound effects, suitable for film or video, came across Regina Morin's desk at the USD Media Center this week. Among the chilling sounds: "Stalking a vampire, throat and wrist cutting, stabbings, pistol silencers, various tortures, imaginary and hideous scavenging." And the company producing this audio mayhem? Films for the Humanities.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 5 1983

An Interfaith Seminar Series, "Women and Issues," will be presented on Thursdays from 7:30 to 9 a.m. at the DeSales Hall Boardroom, University of San Diego.

The first program Feb. 17 is titled "Rags to Riches: How Hebraic Women Lost Their Rights," and will be given by Ita Sheres, professor of comparative literature at San Diego State University. Future programs will be on psychotherapy, midlife, sexual harassment, language and sexism, and the gender of deity.

The program is sponsored by the Continuing Education office at USD, the San Diego County Ecumenical Conference, and the National Conference of Christians and Jews. For information call Sister Marleen Brasefield, 293-4586.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 6 1983

Pro Bono Publico

The San Diego Legal Aid Society, which assists the indigent to obtain attorney services, now finds itself in need of assistance. Austere times have reduced by nearly 50 percent the number of persons the society can serve.

To alleviate the impact of budget cuts on the society, the San Diego County Bar Association and the Law Center of the University of San Diego want to recruit at least 400 attorneys who would be willing to represent indigents without compensation.

If anything, the announced goal of this laudable effort is too low. Certainly, more than 400 of the approximately 5,000 attorneys in San Diego County should volunteer their talents to the needy.

Indeed, the California Business and Professions Code states an attorney should never "reject for any consideration... the cause of the defenseless, or the deprived."

Properly linking the ethical obligations of attorneys with an expanding social requirement, U.S. Attorney Peter Nunez has encouraged his staff to participate in the volunteer program. Other heads of government legal agencies, private law firms, and corporate legal departments should follow Mr. Nunez's example.

Pro bono publico is the Latin phrase used by attorneys to describe legal work performed without a fee. It is precisely "for the public good" that every San Diego attorney should volunteer.

4A SAN DIEGO DAILY TRANSCRIPT WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1983

UCSD, USD Sponsor Forum On Constitution

By BILL BURRIS
SAN DIEGO DAILY TRANSCRIPT Staff Writer

A free public forum on viability of the U.S. Constitution in the 1980s begins with a session from 8 to 10 p.m. today in room 2100 at the UCSD School of Medicine.

The forum, which is to run for four Wednesday evenings, is being sponsored by UCSD Extension in conjunction with the USD School of Law and the UCSD Department of History.

A White House staff member, experts on federalism and an author of the proposed balanced-budget amendment now before Congress are to be among speakers.

"The Founding Fathers: Their Intentions and Purposes... Do the Ideas of the 1780s Apply Today?" will be the subject for this evening's opening session.

Dr. Forrest McDonald, a University of Alabama professor who has written eight books on the founding fathers — five of which have been nominated for Pulitzer Prizes — will be guest speaker.

Moderating will be Dr. Michael Parrish, a UCSD history professor who specializes in the U.S. Constitution and legal history.

The 8 p.m. Feb. 9 session will shift to the courtroom of the USD School of Law and will cover "Federalism: New and Old... A Strong Federal Government or Decentralization?"

Robert B. Carleson, special assistant for policy development to President Reagan, and Dr. Harry N. Scheiber, a member of the UC Berkeley law faculty, will be featured.

Carleson serves as an advisor for federal policies and has served as executive secretary of the Cabinet Council on Human Resources.

Scheiber, a leading economic and legal historian, is in the process of writing a major study of American federalism.

Moderator will be Dr. Bernard H. Siegan, a USD distinguished professor of law and director of law and economic studies at the USD School of Law.

Feb. 16's forum session, also scheduled at the USD School of Law, will be on "The Justice System and the Constitution... Is Our Criminal Justice System Consistent with the Constitution?"

Richard D. Huffman, San Diego County assistant district attorney and former state deputy attorney general in charge of the Southern California Organized Crime Unit, and Alex Landon, executive director of Defenders Inc. in San Diego, will be speaking. Siegan will again be moderator.

"Economics and the Constitution... Should the Constitution be Amended to Require a Balanced Budget?" will be discussion topic for the final session Feb. 23 in room 2100 at UCSD School of Medicine.

Dr. William Craig Stubblebine, chairman of the national committee which drafted the proposed federal spending limitation amendment now before Congress and a professor of political economy at Claremont Graduate School, is to speak.

Also speaking is to be Jonathan D. Varat, professor of law and associate dean of the UCLA School of Law, a specialist on American citizenship and interstate equality and a former clerk for Supreme Court Justice Byron White. Parrish will moderate.

No advance registration is needed. More information may be obtained by calling UCSD, Extension.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 4 1983

Exiled Soviet writer to speak at USD

Alexander Yanov, exiled Russian political writer and historian, will lecture on "Russia After Brezhnev" at 8 p.m. Feb. 15 in the University of San Diego's Salomon Lecture Hall.

Yanov left the Soviet Union in 1974 and came to the United States. Since that time, he has held faculty positions at UC-Berkeley, the University of Texas in Austin and Columbia University in New York.

The free, public lecture is sponsored by USD's Associated Students and Cultural Arts Board.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 5 1983

Friday through March 17

Wood Block prints — "Nagare — Evolution of the Japanese Wood-Block Print," will be on exhibit from noon to 5 p.m. weekdays and noon to 9 p.m. Wednesdays, at the University of San Diego Founders Gallery, Alcalá Park, San Diego. The public is welcome.

SENTINEL

FEB 6 1983

USD schedules free classical music show

Hayden's "Symphonia Concertante" and Telemann's "Quartet in D Minor" will be performed in a concert at the University of San Diego Wednesday at 12:15 p.m.

The concert will be held in the French Parlor of USD's Founders Hall.

The selections will be performed by Donald Atlas, oboe; John Ottalano, bassoon; Shirley Weaver, violin; Caroline Lasker, piano and Marjorie Hart, cello.

BLADE TRIBUNE

FEB 3 1983

Works By Haydn, Telemann Slated For USD Concert

SAN DIEGO — Haydn's "Symphonia Concertante" and Telemann's "Quartet in D Minor" will be performed at the University of San Diego on Feb. 9. The concert is set for 12:15 p.m. in the French Parlor, Founders Hall.

The concert, sponsored by the Associated Students

Cultural Arts, is offered free to the public. For information call 291-6480.

The selections of Haydn and Telemann will be performed by Donald Atlas, oboe; John Ottalano, bassoon; Shirley Weaver, violin; Caroline Lasker, piano; and Marjorie Hart, cello.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 5 1983

Wednesday

Classical concert — Haydn's "Symphonia Concertante" and Telemann's "Quartet in D Minor," will be performed at 12:15 p.m. in the French Parlor, Founders Hall at the University of San Diego, Alcalá Park. Selections will be performed by Donald Atlas, oboe; John Ottalano, bassoon; Shirley Weaver, violin; Caroline Lasker, piano, and Marjorie Hart, cello.

READER

FEB 3 1983

Chamber Music Concert, featuring works by Haydn and Telemann, will be presented Wednesday, February 9, 12:15 p.m., French Parlor, Founders Hall, USD. Free. 291-6480.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 4 1983

MICROCOMPUTERS/ The University of San Diego's school of education has scheduled a series of microcomputer courses beginning with "Introduction to Visicalc," from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 5, in DeSales Hall, Alcalá Park at the university. Other courses are scheduled through May. Fee is $50 per course. For additional information, call 291-6480.

SENTINEL

FEB 6 1983

Art

"NAGARE — EVOLUTION of the Japanese Wood-Block Print," will be exhibited at the University of San Diego Founders Gallery from Friday to March 17. An opening reception will be held from Thursday night from 7-9.

The exhibition, selected by Sung Yu of the San Diego Museum of Art, is on loan from that museum; kindred works will be exhibited simultaneously at the San Diego Museum of Art as part of a cooperative venture between the two institutions.

According to USD Gallery Director Therese Whitcomb, "Nagare" follows the development of the Japanese wood-block print from its beginning association with Iwasa Matabei (1578-1650) through artists of the nineteenth century.

Sentinel Sunday, February 6, 1983 A11

in free forum

The forum moderator is Bernard H. Siegan, a USD distinguished professor of law and director of law and economic studies at the USD School of Law. The forum is sponsored by UCSD Extension, the USD School of Law and the UCSD Dept. of History.

Open free to the public, the forum does not require advance reservations. Information is available by calling 452-3400.

Topic Is Survival Of Whale

SAN DIEGO — Survival of the gray whale is the topic of a presentation sponsored by University of San Diego School of Law International Law Society Feb. 14.

The presentation will be held from 5 to 6:30 p.m. in Grace Courtroom, More Hall. The public is invited free of charge; for information call 291-6480, ext. 4806.

USD visiting professor and consultant to the Mexican/U.S. Law Institute Jorge Vargas will discuss the "Mexican Legal Framework Applicable to the Survival of the Gray Whale." A slide presentation will depict the history and character of the gray whale including their migration, breeding and birthing cycles. Vargas will outline the legal apparatus effected by the Mexican government to protect the breeding of gray whales off Baja, California.

Vargas was graduated summa cum laude from Mexico's National University, attended Brown University orientation program in American law and received an LL.M. from Yale Law School Foreign Graduate Program and is a candidate for the J.S.D. degree from that institution.

Vargas also holds a visiting research fellowship, Center for US-Mexican Studies, University of California, San Diego and is director of international relations, Center for Economic and Social Studies of the Third World, Mexico City.

READER

FEB 10 1983

"The Justice System and the Constitution," a public forum featuring Richard Huffman, San Diego County's assistant district attorney, and Alex Landon, executive director of Defenders Incorporated, will be presented as the third part in a four-part series on the United States Constitution, Wednesday, February 16, 8 p.m., courtroom, School of Law, USD. Free. 452-3400.

'Women and Issues' seminar set to begin Feb. 17 at USD

"From Rags to Riches: How Hebraic Women Lost Their Rights" will be the topic of the first in a series of seminars Feb. 17 in DeSales Hall Board Room at USD. Dr. Ita Sheres, professor of comparative literature at San Diego State University, will speak.

The seminar will include six discussions of "Women and Issues" sponsored by USD's Continuing Education in cooperation with the San Diego County Ecumenical Conference and the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Registration for the seminar is $10, which includes materials and a continental breakfast. Advance registration may be made by calling 293-4585. The seminar will be from 7:30 to 9 a.m.

The remaining five seminars are:

- "Psychotherapy: Promise, Power-Base or Pit?" — Dr. Ina Weitzman and Dr. Mara Jo Grimes, Feb. 24.
- "Midlife: A Time of Celebration?" — Dr. Irene Fine, director, Women's Institute for Continuing Education, March 3.
- "Sexual Harassment Is Not a Laughing Matter" — Dr. Johanna Hunsaker, assistant professor of management, USD School of Business Administration, March 17.
- "Mother Tongue: Faith and Sexism" — the Rev. Margaret Sulter, pastor of Lutheran Church of the Reconciliation, March 24.

Further information may be obtained at USD.

MUSIC

Today — A chamber music concert will be presented at 12:15 p.m. in the French Parlor, Founders Hall.

University of San Diego. Works by Haydn and Telemann will be performed.

FEB 9 1983

THE SURVIVAL of the gray whale will be the topic of a free talk Monday, Feb. 14 from 5 to 6:30 p.m. in Grace Courtroom of More Hall at the University of San Diego.

USD visiting professor and consultant to the Mexican-U.S. Law Institute, Jorge Vargas, will discuss "Mexican Legal Framework Applicable to the Survival of the Gray Whale."

A slide show depicting the history and character of the whale will be included. The program is sponsored by the USD School of Law International Law Society.

The public is invited. Call 291-6480 Ext. 4806 for details.

Justice in America is focus of free

Is our criminal justice system consistent with the U.S. Constitution?

Alex Landon, executive director of Defenders Incorporated in San Diego says he'd like to think so, "because those are the rules we follow. Although there are many interpretations, the Constitution provides guidelines for our criminal justice system."

Richard Huffman, San Diego County's assistant district attorney, believes the criminal justice system is consistent with the Constitution "in so far as it protects the rights of victims."

Landon and Huffman will discuss "The Justice System and the Constitution" in a free public forum scheduled for 8-10 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 16 in the USD School of Law Courtroom.

Sponsored by UCSD Extension, the USD School of Law and the UCSD Dept. of History, the forum is the third in a four-part series titled "We the People: The Viability of the Constitution in the 1980s."

Landon is a prominent attorney and the recipient of several awards, including the 1981 Civil Liberties Award from the San Diego Chapter of the ACLU, the 1981 Volunteers in Parole Distinguished Service Award, and a 1981 USD School of Law Disting-guished Alumni Award. In addition to his work at Defenders Inc., he is a counselor at the ACLU Legal Clinic, and the Military Law Clinic in San Diego.

Huffman was formerly a state deputy attorney general in charge of the Attorney General's Organized Crime Unit and Specialized Prosecution Section for Southern California, and a special assistant U.S. Attorney, in which capacity he prosecuted organized crime figures and participated in federal grand jury investigations.

In the free public forum, they will discuss several aspects of the criminal justice system, including the exclusionary rule.

The moderator for the forum will be Bernard

READER

FEB 10 1983

"Mexican Legal Framework Applicable to the Survival of the Gray Whale," a slide-illustrated lecture by Jorge Vargas, USD visiting professor, will be presented Monday, February 14, 5 p.m., Grace Courtroom, More Hall, USD. Free. 291-6480 x4806.

BLADE TRIBUNE

FEB 10 1983

PUBLIC FORUM — "WE THE PEOPLE: THE VITALITY OF THE CONSTITUTION IN THE 1980s" — sponsored by UCSD Extension in conjunction with USD School of Law. 8-10 p.m. Admission free. Feb. 16: "The Justice System and the Constitution... Is Our Criminal Justice System Consistent with the Constitution?" USD School of Law, Grace Courtroom. Feb. 23: "Economics and the Constitution... Should the Constitution be amended to Require a Balanced Budget?" Room 2100 UCSD School of Medicine. Information: 291-6480.

BLADE TRIBUNE

FEB 10 1983

Wood-Block Show

Opening Reception Planned Tonight

SAN DIEGO — "Nagare — Evolution of the Japanese Wood-Block Print," will be exhibited at the University of San Diego Founders Gallery from Feb. 11 to March 17.

An opening reception will be held from 7-9 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 10.

Founders Gallery is open free of charge to the public on weekdays from noon to 5 p.m. and on Wednesdays from noon to 9 p.m. For information call 291-6480.

The exhibition, selected by Sung Yu of the San Diego Museum of Art, is on loan from that museum and kindred works will be exhibited simultaneously at the San Diego Museum of Art as part of a cooperative, educational venture between the two institutions.

According to USD Gallery Director Therese Whitcomb, "Nagare" follows the development of the Japanese wood-block print from its beginning association with Iwasa Matabei (1578-1650) through artists of the 19th century.

Included in the exhibition are wood blocks, a rare preparatory drawing by Hokusai (1760-1849) and tools instrumental in the execution of the technique. "Nagare" was designed and installed by USD students.

San Diego, Thursday, February 10, 1983

DATEBOOK

The survival of the gray whale will be the topic of a free presentation sponsored by the International Law Society of the University of San Diego School of Law from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday in More Hall's Grace Courtroom on the campus. For information, call 291-6480, extension 4806.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 11 1983

WHALE SURVIVAL/ The survival of the California Gray Whale will be discussed from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 14, in Grace Courtroom, More Hall, at the University of San Diego Law School, Alcalá Park. University of San Diego visiting professor and consultant to the Mexican/U.S. Law Institute Jorge Vargas will discuss the "Mexican Legal Framework Applicable to the Survival of the Gray Whale," including a slide presentation. Admission is free. The public is welcome. For more information, call 291-6480, Ext. 4806.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 11 1983

CRIMINAL JUSTICE/ Alex Landon, executive director of Defenders Incorporated and Richard Huffman, San Diego County's assistant district attorney, will discuss "The Justice System and the Constitution" from 8 to 10 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 16, in the University of San Diego School of Law Courtroom, Alcalá Park. Admission is free. The public is welcome. For more information, call 452-3434.

BLADE TRIBUNE

FEB 10 1983

Exhibition Features Wood-Block Prints

In order to show the development of the Japanese wood-block print, Founders' Gallery will host an exhibition selected by Sung Yu of the San Diego Museum of Art.

The works, on loan from the San Diego Museum of Art, will be exhibited simultaneously with kindred works at that museum, in a cooperative, educational venture between the two institutions.

In Japan the prints came out of a school of painting called Ukiyoe — "Pictures of the Floating World." Its beginning is associated with Iwasa Matabei (1578-1650).

Until his time painting, just as it was in the West, was mostly devoted to religion and the enrichment of temples or to the decoration of palaces, with appropriate subject matter. Matabei turned from the conventional subject matter of his day and presented genre subjects which were shocking but appreciated by his generation.

Japanese prints were made by first drawing the design on thin paper, then the engraver pasted it face downward on a flat block of wood (usually cherry), scraped the paper away at the back until the design showed clearly, and cut away the wood in the areas that were not to be inked, leaving the design raised.

This block was printed in black, and the artist filled in his color by hand. Later, when color was printed rather than applied by hand, other blocks were made, raised in those areas where color was desired. Rice paste was mixed with the colors to keep them from running.

The instant pictures could be made so cheaply the Ukiyoe prints in Japan were available to a large public, a much larger public than could ever own paintings.

These prints came at a time when the Japanese capital Yedo (now Tokyo) and the old capital of Kyoto were teeming. They were reflections of the popular taste and fashions decade after decade. They were frowned upon by the critics of the day; but they were made by some of the best artists. A long line of artists is now famous for its prints and scarcely known for its paintings.

Among those famous artists whose works are included in the exhibition are Ippitsusai Buncho (active 1765-1775), Kitagawa Utamora (1753-1806), Katsushika Hokusai (1760-1849), Utagawa Hiroshige (1797-1858), Torii Kiyomitsu (1787-1868), Nichimura Shigenaga (1697-1756), Isoda Koryusai (ca. 1760-1800), Igusa Kuniyoshi (1797-1861), Ikeda Eizen (1790-1848), Isunado Kunisada (1786-1864), and Utagawa Toyokuni (1769-1825).

Wood blocks, a rare preparatory drawing by Hokusai and tools instrumental in the execution of the technique will also be exhibited.

The exhibition is installed and designed by USD students in Exhibition Design. The Gallery will be open noon to five weekdays, and Wednesday noon to nine.

READER

FEB 10 1983

Galleries

"Nagare," an exhibition of Japanese wood-block prints, will open with a reception, Thursday, February 10, 7 to 9 p.m., and will remain on view through March 17. Founders Gallery, USD. 291-6480.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 11 1983

"THE JUSTICE SYSTEM AND THE CONSTITUTION... IS OUR CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM CONSISTENT WITH THE CONSTITUTION?" (Courtroom of the University of San Diego Law School, Alcalá Park). Forum will be held from 8 to 10 p.m. Wednesday.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 13 1983

WINNERS CONCERT — The San Diego District Metropolitan Opera Audition Winners Concert, featuring mezzo soprano Nancy Carol Moore, tenor Glenn Fernandez D'Abreo, baritone William Nolan and contralto Diane Houghton, will be held at 7:30 p.m. today in the Camino Theater, University of San Diego.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 12 1983

Tuesday

Russian lecturer — Russian political writer and historian Alexander Yanov will speak at 8 p.m. at the University of San Diego's Salomon Lecture Hall, DeSales Hall. Since being exiled from the Soviet Union in 1974, Yanov has held various positions in universities across the country. Admission is free. For details, call 291-6480.

Few Business Ethics Taught

Should Students Lack Philosophy?

By R. D. WILLIAMS

(SAN DIEGO DAILY TRANSCRIPT Staff Writer)
While some might consider business ethics a contradiction in terms, a group of local educators spent most of last weekend discussing the best way to instill them in students.

As business schools have become increasingly interested in the practical aspects of corporate life, critics contend they have neglected the psychological and ethical development of students.

The conference, officially billed "The Teaching of History and Ethics in Programs of Business Administration," brought together some 30 educators from Western schools. It was cosponsored by San Diego State University and the University of San Diego.

The group got an unexpected taste of "real world" criticism Friday when a local businessman suggested MBA graduates have ethical standards that resemble silly putty.

"They are the most easily manipulated people in the world because they can't deal with things that don't fit in a theory," said Ron Lewis, general manager of the local division of Ohio-Sealy, a mattress manufacturer.

Lewis, who was involved in corporate training for Levitz Furniture Corp. during its early years, explained that company's recruiting strategy.

"When we needed a new manager, we would go out to the local Kinney's shoe stores," he said. "We would find the best shoe salesman and teach him to be a manager."

"When the company grew, we decided we had to have MBAs from good colleges. What we found were very inflexible people who only saw black and white when the business world is actually gray," said Lewis.

(Continued on Page 14A)

Ethics

(Continued from Page 1A)

While the shoe salesman had strong ethical values, he explained, the MBA graduates had "Nixon-like" loyalty to the people they perceived to be the most powerful.

Lewis implored the professors to stress the most basic of values in their courses. "Teach them to be nice to other people and teach them to tell the truth," he said. "That's all we need in business."

Many of the educators, though, countered they have no time to teach values because they spend so much time on the nuts-and-bolts applications of business study.

Albert W. Johnson, academic vice president at San Diego State, suggested universities should return to the "prehistoric times" when practical experience was not part of higher education.

He said society now touts higher education as the road to affluence rather than the "liberating and expanding experience" it once was.

Allan W. Bailey, dean of the College of Business Administration at San Diego State, says that same type of thinking is what has all but destroyed liberal arts education at the college level.

"There is a constant battle between so-called liberal and practical education," said Bailey. The problem with traditional liberal arts studies, he added, "is its failure to bring curriculum into the 20th Century."

"You have to deal with the reality of students, rather than trying to change their ideas about what they want," said the dean. "And most students want life after the university."

But despite practical training, there's still a place for teaching ethics, according to Bailey.

"There is some consensus on the need to teach ethics in business," he said. "The disagreement is over how to do it. We do pick it up in a number of courses, but we don't have a single three-unit course dealing with just ethics."

"I think ethical considerations will continue to be more and more important in business schools during the next five years," said Bailey. "I can't predict beyond that."

The dean said one option under discussion would team up philosophy and business professors to teach classes.

FEB 17 1983

Ambassador Richard M. Fairbanks III, special advisor to the secretary of state and special negotiator in the Middle East peace initiative, and his wife Shannon Fairbanks, deputy assistant director for economic development in the White House office of policy development, will be at USD March 10-11 as guest speakers at the law school. Fairbanks will discuss peace in the Middle East at 4 p.m. March 10. Mrs. Fairbanks will discuss housing and economic recovery at noon on March 11.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 17 1983

Music by Mendelssohn and Frank Martin are performed by pianist Robert Sage in the French Parlor, Founders Hall, USD, at 12:15 p.m. Wednesday.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 18 1983

PIANO RECITAL (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park, French Parlor of Founders Hall): Eight preludes by Frank Martin and a sonata by Felix Mendelssohn will be performed by Robert Sage at 12:15 p.m. Wednesday.

BLADE TRIBUNE

FEB 17 1983

Robert Sage Featured In Noon Recital

SAN DIEGO — A noon concert at the University of San Diego on Feb. 23 will feature Robert Sage in a piano recital at 12:15 p.m. in the French Parlor, Founders Hall. Eight preludes by Frank Martin (1890-1974) and a Sonata by Felix Mendelssohn (1809-47) will be performed by Sage in the concert which is offered to the public free of charge. Recently appointed to the faculty of the School of Music at Azusa Pacific University, Sage received his master of music and doctor of musical arts degrees from the University of Southern California under the tutelage of Lillian Steuber. He has also studied at the Geneva Conservatory and Loma Linda University.

FEB 17 1983

TOM BLAIR

And It Comes Out Here

DOUBLE SCOOP: Local Variety Club members, miffed at Andy Williams for failing to pick up his Heart Award at their Tuesday luncheon, should find it in their hearts to forgive. Williams hasn't even shown for his own golf tournament this week. He was admitted to Scripps Hospital in Encinitas Wednesday morning after complaining of chest pains. A heart attack has been ruled out. If further tests prove negative, doctors could release the 52-year-old crooner tomorrow. ... Automaker John De Lorean, who upped the price of his Pauma Valley estate from $4 million to an inflated $5.25 million after his cocaine bust last fall, is ready to deal. On the house. Of course his ball's been reduced. Realtor Athan Vlahos, who's handling the estate, says De Lorean's been calling "two or three times a week" to see if there's been any action. There hasn't. When he called yesterday, he asked Vlahos to set a more realistic sales price. They settled on $3.7 million. If you're interested, De Lorean would take $1.5 million cash and personally finance the rest. And Vlahos would be happy to give you a tour of the property — in his own De Lorean.

WHEELS OF JUSTICE: Mike Lipman, chief of the U.S. Attorney's fraud division here, is quitting after seven years to go into private practice. He'll join former U.S. Attorney Jim Lorenz at Finley, Kumble, Wagner, et al. Meanwhile, Joe Bello, the defendant in one of Lipman's more publicized cases, has been released from prison after serving three years and three months for mail fraud and tax evasion. The government seized some $3 million in cash and assets when Bello's MB Financial toppled in November 1978. It went into bankruptcy in January 1979, and Bello went to jail in November that year. "Bello's out, and I'm leaving the U.S. Attorney's office," says Lipman. "But that $3 million is still in bankruptcy court. Except, of course, what's been paid to attorneys, accountants and the courts." (Upwards of $500,000 to attorneys and accountants and another $50,000-$75,000 in expenses. Assets today, with interest: about $3.5 million.)

LINE ITEMS: "Going to the beach," says Bill Ballance, "is a lot like cleaning out your attic. You're always amazed at the kind of antiques you find in trunks." ... When Amy Wayne, a freshman at USD, told her father, Morrie, the Sleep World proprietor, she'd won the lead in the university production of "Once Upon a Mattress," he was accommodating. "Take your choice," he said. "Serta, Beautyrest, Sealy." ... Bill Gabriel passed the Oceanside discount-furniture store, painted a garish day-glo yellow, and appreciated the quiet contrast on the sign out front: TIMID SALESMAN ON DUTY.

SAN DIEGO UNION FEB 18 1983

University of San Diego faculty will present a Lenten series of programs in the parish hall at All Hallows Catholic Church, 6602 La Jolla Scenic Drive, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The theme of the program is "From Death to Life: The Journey of the Christian," and Gary A. Macy will discuss "The Uncertainty of The Way." Future talks will include: Kathleen M. Dugan, "For What Do We Hope"; E. Jane Via, "The Holy Barren Fig Tree," and the Rev. Ronald Pachence, "Forgiving and Being Forgiven."

SENTINEL

FEB 20 1983

USD plans concert

Pianist Robert Sage will perform in a free concert Wednesday afternoon at 12:15 in the French Parlor of USD's Founder's Hall. Eight preludes by Frank Martin and a sonata by Felix Mendelssohn will be performed by Sage.

Recently appointed to the faculty of the School of Music at Azusa Pacific University, Sage received his master of music and doctor of musical arts degrees from the University of Southern California.

He has also studied at the Geneva Conservatory and Loma Linda University.

Sage was a semifinalist in the Busoni and Pozzoli competitions in Italy, in the Bachauer in Utah and The Concert Artists Guild in New York City. He has performed in concerts throughout the United States and Europe.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 20 1983

Founders Gallery: Nagare: The Evolution of the Japanese Block Print. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 20 1983

ROBERT SAGE — The pianist will perform works by Martin and Mendelssohn at 12:15 p.m. Wednesday in the French Parlor, Founders Hall, University of San Diego.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

FEB 23 1983

University of San Diego's School of Law has received a grant from the Gerald and Inez Parker Foundation of La Jolla for reestablishment of the law school's Neighborhood Legal and Family Service Program in Linda Vista. The grant will provide $8,500 per year support for two years.

Walter Heiser, USD law professor and director of legal clinics, said the Linda Vista program had been active from 1972 to 1981 in cooperation with the Family Service Assn. and provided free legal and social services to low-income clients.

"Low-income persons often do not know their rights or the legal options available to them, and lack the resources to obtain needed legal services," he said.

"These problems are compounded when language and cultural differences are involved, as they are among the Asian refugee population."

The program will continue operating out of the Family Service Assn. offices.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 27 1983

Founders Gallery: Nagare: The Evolution of the Japanese Block Print. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

SENTINEL

FEB 20 1983

USD plays host to White House advisor

Ambassador Richard M. Fairbanks, III, special advisor to the Secretary of State and special negotiator in the Middle East peace initiative, and his wife Shannon Fairbanks, deputy assistant director for Economic Development in the White House Office of Policy Development, will be at the University of San Diego March 10 and 11 as guest speakers with the USD School of Law.

The ambassador will speak at 4 p.m., March 10 in the Grace Courtroom School of Law on "Chasing the Chimera: A Status Report on the Search for Peace in the Middle East." The address is open to the public without charge.

Mrs. Fairbanks will discuss "Housing: Leading Out for Economic Recovery" at noon, March 11, in the Rose Room of Camino Hall, also on campus. The luncheon and an 11:30 a.m. cocktail reception which precedes it are open to the public. Reservations are $12 and may be made by contacting Mrs. W. Haley Rogers at 299-8800.

Checks should be made payable to the University of San Diego and sent to Mrs. Rogers at 3635 7th Avenue, No. 12-A, San Diego 92103. Seating is limited.

SENTINEL

FEB 20 1983

USD's Linda Vista legal clinic back on its feet again

The University of San Diego's School of Law has received a grant from the Gerald and Inez Parker Foundation of La Jolla to re-open the law school's Neighborhood Legal and Family Service Program in Linda Vista. The grant will provide support of $8,500 a year for two years.

According to USD law professor Walt Heiser, director of USD's legal clinics, the Linda Vista program resumed operation last week.

Active from 1972 to 1981 in cooperation with the Family Service Association, the program provided free legal and social services to low-income clients.

It was terminated when revenue-sharing funds were lost through county cutbacks, and United Way support alone could not maintain the clinic.

"The clinic is badly needed," says Heiser. "The Legal Aid Society has reduced its staff and consolidated all of its neighborhood offices into one office in southeast San Diego. It is overwhelmed with clients and can no longer offer the level of assistance needed in the Linda Vista community, which has one of the largest concentrations of minorities in the County."

In 1970, the area had the fourth highest total of persons at the poverty level of all county subregions.

"Low-income persons often do not know their rights or the legal options available to them, and lack the resources to obtain needed legal services," Heiser explained.

"These problems are compounded when language and cultural differences are involved, as they are among the Asian refugee population."

VIEW
Action

A Married Man's Painful Path to Catholic Priesthood

DAVE GATLEY / Los Angeles Times
The Rev. Ray Ryland, a newly ordained Catholic priest, stands outside the Immaculata church at the University of San Diego. Married and the father of five, he used to be an Episcopal priest.

USD Teacher and Ex-Episcopal Priest Fulfills a Dream

It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

—Matthew 19:24

By MIKE GRANBERRY,
Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — Ray Ryland is not a wealthy man, at least in an economic sense. But he can sympathize with the plight of the camel in passing through a space as small as the eye of a needle.

The eye of Ryland's needle—the fulfillment of a dream—was becoming a priest in the Catholic church. It was a long and often arduous process, one marked by indecision and anguish. In the end it proved—by almost any standard—an incredible journey.

Ryland, 61, is married and the father of five children. Celibacy is something he's read about, never practiced.

Furthermore, Ryland—who last Saturday was ordained as a priest—was not born into the faith, as were most of his new colleagues.

For 13 years, until 1963, he had been an Episcopal priest. But he and his wife were born and grew up, not as Episcopalians, but as followers of the Disciples of Christ (the Christian church), in what Ryland calls the "Bible Belt" of Oklahoma and Texas.

Ryland's decision to enter the Catholic church becomes even more poignant when he reveals what happened on the afternoon that he and his wife joined.

"On the day we were received (in June of 1963)," he said, "we were so happy, so joyful. We wanted to celebrate. But we knew absolutely no Catholics we could invite. All our friends were Episcopalians."

That sense of joy was a long time in coming. Inwardly, the Rylands had fought the decision for a long time. The realization that, for them, the Catholic church was the one true church was, in the beginning, a purely intellectual discovery.

By the time the conversion was complete, they had resolved the problem internally. But all of their friends, and the shared history of the past, was left behind—with another faith. Therefore, any joy they felt was, at first, bittersweet.

No Desire to Convert

As Ryland explains, his conversion marked the end of a long crisis of conscience, one that initially left him "very downcast," because—and he offered this in a whisper—"I had no desire to be Roman Catholic. None whatsoever. My whole career, my friends, my whole life—it was all in the Episcopal church."

Thus, Ryland, who has taught at the University of San Diego since 1969, is sometimes asked: Why?

Why was it necessary to leave behind a community of friends, a promising career in one faith and strike out in a new and uncharted direction?

He said the answer was in his many years of soul-searching coupled with denial. And he freely admits that "sorrow" was the universal reaction of Episcopal friends, mixed with grumbles of disagreement.

"Over a period of 16 years," he said, "dating back to a time before my ordination (as an Episcopal priest), my wife and I gradually realized Christ had established one church—the Catholic church—and, because we were Christians, we had

Please see PRIEST, Page 6.

Part V/Thursday, February 17, 1983 J

PRIEST: Fulfillment of Dream for Ex-Episcopalian

Continued from First Page
to enter that church.

"It's really that simple." Becoming a priest in that church was not nearly as simple. Ryland had sought Catholic priesthood since joining the church but had been repeatedly told by sympathetic bishops that his chances were slim to none—about like those of the camel in passing through the eye of a needle.

His break came in 1980, when Pope John Paul II agreed to grant special dispensations to a number of former Episcopalians who wished to become priests in the Catholic church. For the most part, the men had converted because of a disagreement with the Episcopal church's decision to allow women in the priesthood.

Dispensation Applied

Of course, said Richard Duncanson, secretary to Leo Maher, the Catholic bishop of San Diego, that situation didn't apply to Ryland. But the dispensation did. In his case, it allows for a waiver on celibacy as long as his wife is alive. Should she die, he would not be allowed to remarry and would be required to remain celibate until his own death.

Ryland elaborated on the dispensation by saying, "The response of the church was the rule of celibacy is the rule—that's not in question at all. My interpretation is that if there had been any doubt in anyone's mind about the rule of celibacy the dispensations would not have been issued."

"The rule of celibacy is so well established that the church made these exceptions—but they're exceptions only. This is not the opening wedge for optional celibacy; it's just an exception."

"She (the church) has made exceptions in Europe, in Holland and Germany and Denmark, in Australia, and now in the United States. (In this country, Ryland's is the fourth such exception granted since 1980.)"

Ryland said he had been praying for a Catholic priesthood since his conversion more than 20 years ago; a conversion, he noted, that marked the beginning of a life "that simply fell into place" after a long period of theological examination.

In explaining his conversion, he hastened to add that he didn't believe the Catholic church was the only church but the only one that answers the problem of "doctrinal authority."

He said the Catholic church recognized that.

Please see PRIEST, Page 7.

The Rev. Ray Ryland

'Over a period of 15 years... my wife and I gradually realized Christ had established one church—the Catholic church—and, because we were Christians, we had to enter that church.'

LA JOLLA LIGHT

FEB 24 1983

Breakfast seminar series planned

The University of San Diego's expanded "UPDATE" Breakfast Seminar series begins its spring series on March 4 and will be held again in La Jolla at the La Jolla Village Inn from 7:30 to 9 a.m.

Registration is $140 for the eight-session series; $20 for single sessions. Each seminar includes a continental breakfast, presentation and materials. For information and reservations, telephone 293-4585.

"UPDATE" is presented two times each year and focuses on topics of concern to business and community leaders. Business persons are provided an opportunity to interact with each other, as well as with the university's business faculty, and to learn of recent developments in the business environment. "UPDATE" is held at two locations; the University Club of San Diego and the La Jolla

Village Inn. The La Jolla Village Inn schedule follows:

March 4 — "Management of Innovation and Technology," Gary Whitney, Ph.D., associate professor of management.

March 11 — "Up Your Productivity," Robert Johnson, Ph.D., associate professor of economics.

March 18 — "Toughening Up in a Turbulent Economy," Fred Bahr, D.B.A., professor of management.

March 25 — "The Listening Game — Old Ways vs. New Techniques," Robert Arnold, Ph.D., adjunct faculty lecturer, management.

April 1 — "Me and My Micro," Eugene Rathswohl, Ph.D., assistant professor of information management systems.

April 8 — "Profiles of Successful Managers," Tom Baker, Ph.D., adjunct faculty lecturer, economics.

April 15 — "How to Teach Your Subordinates to Love the Job They May Hate," James Evans, Ph.D., associate professor of business and government.

April 22 — "The Art of Managing People," Phillip Hunsaker, D.B.A., professor of management.

"UPDATE" is sponsored by the USD School of Business Administration and Continuing Education.

SD BUSINESS NEWS

FEB 28 1983

The University of San Diego's School of Law has received a grant from the Gerald and Inez Parker Foundation, La Jolla, to re-establish the Law School's Neighborhood Legal and Family Service Program in Linda Vista. The grant will provide support of $8,500 a year for two years.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT
FEB 24 1983USD Offers Seminars:
Me and My Micro

The tenth series of Update Breakfast Seminars, sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Business Administration and Continuing Education, will present eight consecutive Friday morning seminars from 7:30-9 a.m., beginning Mar. 4 and continuing through Apr. 22.

The spring series of business seminars will be held at two locations, The University Club of San Diego and the La Jolla Village Inn.

Seminar topics include the listening game — old ways versus new techniques; the art of managing people; how to teach your subordinates to love the job they may hate; profiles of successful managers; toughening up in a turbulent economy; me and my micro; up your productivity; and management of innovation and technology.

Registration for the entire series is $140; single sessions are $20 each.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT
FEB 28 1983

A $4.5 million gift to the University of San Diego was announced Friday by the Olin Foundation. The funds are to be used to build and equip a 46,000-square-foot building for USD's school of business administration. Expected to be completed for use in the fall semester, 1984, the building will replace a much smaller structure on campus. USD has about 1,200 undergraduates and 285 graduate students in its business school.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 28 1983

The "Update" Breakfast

READER

FEB 24 1983

"Nagare," an exhibition of Japanese wood-block prints, will remain on view through March 17, Founders Gallery, USD. 291-6480.

Seminar series, sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Business Administration and Continuing Education, will be from 7:30 to 9 a.m. each Friday in March and April at two locations. This week's topics are "The Listening Game — Old Ways vs. New Techniques" in the University Club, 1333 7th Ave., and "Management of Innovation and Technology" in the La Jolla Village Inn. Registration is $140 for the entire series or $20 for single sessions. To register, call 293-4585.

Los Angeles Times

J Thursday

PRIEST: Married Man Takes Anguished Path to Priesthood

Continued from 6th Page

ognizes other denominations as having "churchly reality" but is the only church that can claim to have been established by Christ himself.

"By what criterion do we determine authentic Christianity?" Ryland asked. "The Oxford Encyclopedia of World Christianity, published in 1982, claims there are more than 28,000 recognizable denominations of Christians, all of them contradicting one another—in some instances, in very basic matter."

Doctrinal Confusion

"The question is, is this where Christ left us? My wife and I assumed God knew what he was doing when he redeemed the world in Christ and through Christ, appointed the apostles to be his successors. We couldn't imagine the doctrinal confusion that characterized Christendom as being something that had taken God by surprise.

We knew that if God doesn't make some provision for the truth getting through—if you just leave it up to human beings—there's going to be disagreement and contradiction."

All 28,000 denominations agree, Ryland said, that somehow the truth will prevail with most of the Protestant ones relying on the Bible as the final arbiter.

"But the problem is, you have the Bible and all of these conflicting interpretations and who's to say who's right?"

He referred to Acts 15, where it is noted that circa 50 A.D., about 15 years after Jesus' death, the church was "split wide open" over the issue of whether Gentiles had to become Jews to then become Christians.

"Had that not been resolved," he said, "there would obviously have been a continuous proliferation of sectarian groups, and Christianity would have been effectively destroyed."

"The problem was resolved rather simply by taking it to the apostles (who formed the Catholic church). Their decision was it."

However, it took Ryland the first 40 years of his life to come to the conviction that the Catholic church was the one Jesus and the apostles had intended for "all mankind."

"Unfortunately," he said, paraphrasing G.K. Chesterton, "you can't put the Bible on the witness stand, ask it questions and expect to get answers."

"I thought the Episcopal church had the answer to this problem. I hold great and deep love for the Anglican tradition and its very special qualities, but over the years I learned the same problem exists within Anglicanism that exists within the Protestant faiths. So I began to investigate other possibilities."

His final decision did not leave him feeling embittered at the Episcopal church, he said. Quite the contrary.

"As an Anglo-Catholic (another term for Episcopalian) I had tried to make her over into a carbon copy of the Catholic church," Ryland said.

"The Anglo-Catholics do that."

"Once, I simply said, 'No, she's not Catholic, she's beautiful in her own way, but she's Protestant, she's limited. . . well, then I was fine."

'This is not the opening wedge for optional celibacy; it's just an exception.'

During their period of introspection, the questions he and his wife raised "ate on us for months," Ryland said, "and we were forced against our will—no, I should say our inclination—to look at Rome."

Will played a part, however, because Ryland grew up in an area of Oklahoma not known for its tolerance of Catholicism.

Incident in Oklahoma

He remembers the time when a handful of conservative Protestant spokesmen publicly challenged the priest at a nearby Catholic church to let them search the premises of his house of worship for firearms—their response to the debate swirling around Catholicism during the presidential campaign of John F. Kennedy.

One of his closest friends, a surgeon in Alaska, told him recently he grew up believing that the Catholic church in his small Oklahoma town stored its arsenal of guns on the third floor of the rectory.

Ryland said "such amazingly widespread prejudice" affects more than just the minds of small-town citizens. He talks about the "misinformation" of some of his postgraduate theology professors, including the noted Paul Tillich and Reinhold Niebuhr.

"I was told," he said, "that Catholics actually believe—and the church teaches—that when the priest offers the holy sacrifice he is in fact repeating what happened on Calvary. Not true."

"I was told that Roman Catholics try to cover up the Second Commandment prohibiting the worship of graven images."

"I was taught, especially by Reinhold Niebuhr, that the church is demagogically arrogant in claiming to stand above the word of God."

"He (Niebuhr) said, again and again, that the Catholic church claims to stand above the word of God, is superior to the word of God. He calls this a demonic pretension."

"The church was appointed to be the custodian of the word and to interpret the word, but in no way is in command of the word of God."

Niebuhr Teaching

But Ryland, who will continue teaching religious studies at USD while serving as an assistant to the pastor of Saint Mary Magdalene Church, said he "swallowed whole" the teachings of Niebuhr and Tillich.

"Finally I came to the growing realization," he said, "that something was wrong within the confines of non-Roman Catholic denominations. Given the radical contradictions within them and wondering, 'Is this all there is?' I realized no one could know the truth at key points."

"The question (of his conversion) kept popping up, and I kept suppressing it."

He looked down for a moment, then managed a slight smile.

"Either it took the Holy Spirit a long time, or the Rylands are awfully slow learners."

Sports

San Diego, Tuesday, February 1, 1983

THE TRIBUNE D-3

They've courted 7 straight wins

In the pre-season polls, the Aztecs have four of six players back from last year's team that finished fifth in the NCAA. And Coach Carol Plunkett claims freshman Cindy MacGregor, "could be the recruit of the year." MacGregor is playing No. 2 behind NCAA championship runner-up Micki Schilling.

State's women gymnasts rate ninth nationally, despite a rash of early-season injuries. They scored a 171.9 last week, and figure to do even better now with Sandy Ellis ready to compete again and overall ace Sydney Jones in mid-season form. They visit Oklahoma State Friday and defending NCAA champion Utah Monday.

USIU NOTES — It's been a long basketball season at USIU, where the men are 2-21 and the women are 5-16. The bright spot has been Jamie Glassford, a 5-8 junior guard from Madison High, who is leading the Gulls in scoring for the third straight year. Glassford, the first woman at USIU to score more than 1,000 points, has 1,336. This year, despite switching from forward to guard, she is averaging 17.3 points and 47 percent field goal shooting.

USIU, which last year finished fifth in the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women golf competition, hosts a six-team women's golf tournament Feb. 7 at Shadowridge in Vista. Senior Gisela Linner, who last year won three invitationals, is the No. 1 player for the Gulls.

TORERA TALK — USD's women's basketball team ended a 10-game losing streak Saturday night when it beat UC Santa Barbara 91-83 in double overtime at USD and last night beat Skagit (Wash.) Junior College 71-40. Chayo Moreno, who was averaging 12 points and 6 rebounds per game, has scored 40 with 23 rebounds in the last two wins. The Toreras' record is now 4-13.

At 2-15, the USD women's swimmers are even a little worse off, but three school records have been set this season. Jean McTaggart swam the 1,000-meter freestyle in 11:31.00, Jan Hallahan did the 400-meter individual medley in 5:01.00, and Laurie Maddock finished the 200-meter butterfly in 2:20.14.

ONCE AROUND THE WAC — Surprise, surprise... The WAC lead is at stake Thursday when 5-2 Utah plays at 6-1 BYU. Pre-season pickers had estimated this game would be for about fourth place, not first.

The make-or-break trip of the season comes this weekend for both 4-2 Hawaii and 3-3 San Diego State. Thursday the Aztecs play at 3-3 New Mexico while Hawaii's at UTEP, and Saturday the visitors switch sites.

T.R. Reinman's College Notepad appears each Tuesday in The Tribune.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 2 1983

COLLEGE TENNIS — The University of San Diego men's tennis team ripped Fullerton State yesterday 8-1, but the San Diego State men were beaten by the same 8-1 score by Southern California. Tye Ferdinansen led the way for the Toreros, winning both his singles and doubles. Matt Anger and Tim Pawsatt of USC led the onslaught against the Aztecs. Pawsatt is a former Tribune Tennis Tournament winner. Anger defeated Troy Collins 6-2, 6-1, while Pawsatt ripped Chris Jochum 6-0, 6-1.

2B The Daily Californian □ East San Diego Cou

FEB 3 1983

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

USD BASKETBALL / The University of San Diego travels north for a West Coast Athletic Conference basketball game against Gonzaga University tonight in Spokane. The Toreros move down to the University of Portland Saturday night. USD is 1-3 in the conference and 7-11 overall. Gonzaga has scored impressive road victories over Pepperdine (69-68) and DePaul (72-71). Former Grossmont College standout Mike Whitmarsh is USD's top scorer (15.8 points per game) and second-leading rebounder (6.3) against WAC competition.

FEB 4 1983

Los Angeles Times

Gonzaga Beats U. San Diego

From a Times Staff Writer

Guard John Stockton scored 19 points and passed out eight assists to lead Gonzaga to a 64-55 Western Collegiate Athletic Conference win over the University of San Diego Thursday night at Gonzaga.

USD (7-2, 1-4) led by three points at halftime, 22-19, but Tony Neal scored 10 points from the floor and Bryce McPhee added 13 as Gonzaga came back in the second half.

Mike Whitmarsh scored 19 points, including 13 from the foul line, and grabbed 11 rebounds for USD. Rich Davis added 10 points.

USD returns to action Saturday night against the University of Portland at 7:30.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 4 1983

Gonzaga Topples USD

SPOKANE, Wash. — John Stockton led the Gonzaga University shot a school record 78.9 percent in the second half to overcome the University of San Diego 64-55 here last night.

Gonzaga's Bulldogs overcame a 22-19 halftime deficit to take a 31-30 lead on a jumper by Bryce McPhee with 14:10 remaining. Gonzaga proceeded to score the next seven points and USD never caught up.

Both teams shot poorly in the first half as USD hit only 8 of 24 for 33 percent and Gonzaga made only 7 of 20 for 35 percent. USD's Rich Davis made all 10 of his points in the first half to keep the Toreros ahead. Mike Whitmarsh led the Toreros with 19 points as he made 13 of 13 free throws.

The second half was all Gonzaga as it hit 15 of 19 shots, many from the outside over the Torero zone. McPhee scored 13 of his 17 in the second half and Neal scored all 10 of his points in the second half from the outside.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 4 1983

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

TOREROS LOSE / John Stockton scored 11 of his 19 points in the second half to lift Gonzaga past the University of San Diego 64-55 in a West Coast Athletic Conference basketball game Thursday night in Spokane. Stockton's second-half performance helped lead the Bulldogs back from a three-point halftime deficit. Gonzaga took the lead for good with 13:30 to play on Bryce McPhee's 20-foot baseline jumper. Gonzaga then reeled off seven straight points to take a 38-30 advantage with 9:47 to play. San Diego was unable to get closer than five points after that. The Toreros trailed 40-35 after John Prunty hit a reverse layup with 8:31 remaining. For Gonzaga, McPhee scored 17 points, Jason Van Nort had 14 and Tony Neal hit for 10. Former Monte Vista High School player Mike Whitmarsh led San Diego with 19 points. Rich Davis added 10, all in the first half, for the Toreros. The win evens Gonzaga's overall record at 10-10 and gives the Bulldogs a 2-3 mark in WAC play. San Diego drops to 7-12 overall and 1-4 in league action.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

FEB 4 1983

Gonzaga gets bullish on Toreros

SPOKANE (AP) — John Stockton scored 11 of his 19 points in the second half to lift Gonzaga past the University of San Diego, 64-55, in a West Coast Athletic Conference basketball game Thursday.

Stockton's second half performance helped lead the Bulldogs back from a three-point halftime deficit.

Gonzaga took the lead for good with 13:30 to play on Bryce McPhee's 20-foot baseline jumper. Gonzaga then reeled off seven straight points to take a 38-30 lead with 9:47 to play.

San Diego was unable to draw closer than five points, trailing 40-35 after John Prunty hit a reverse layup with 8:31 remaining.

For Gonzaga, McPhee scored 17 points, Jason Van Nort had 14 and Tony Neal hit for 10.

Mike Whitmarsh led the Toreros with 19 points. Rich Davis added 10, all in the first half.

The win evens Gonzaga's overall record at 10-10 and vaults them to 2-3 in WAC play. San Diego drops to 7-12 overall and 1-4 in league.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 6 1983

Portland Defeats Toreros 74-51

Darren Jenkins scored 12 of his 15 points in the first half as Portland defeated the University of San Diego 74-51 last night in a West Coast Athletic Conference game in Portland, Ore.

Jenkins, a 6-foot-8 sophomore, and Dennis Black, a 6-7 junior, helped the Pilots dominate the Toreros on the boards. Portland outrebounded USD 22-8 in the first half and 45-22 for the game.

Portland led 36-26 at halftime, despite 14 points by USD's Rich Davis. The Toreros threatened early in the second half when they cut the lead to 37-30, but the Pilots pulled away and led by as many as 21 points at 64-43.

Davis led the Toreros with 21 points. Black scored 18 points and led both teams with 12 rebounds. Jenkins scored his points in 17 minutes of action.

Portland, which won its first WAC game, is 1-4 and 7-14 overall. USD is 1-5, 7-13.

FEB 6 1983

Los Angeles Times

USD Loses to Portland, 74-51

Special to The Times

PORTLAND, Ore. — The University of Portland had its best game of the season Saturday night at the expense of the University of San Diego, downing the Toreros, 74-51, in a WAC game.

The Pilots outshot (48% to 43%) and outrebounded (45-22) San Diego in raising their record to 7-14 overall and 1-4 in the conference.

San Diego, led by Rich Davis' game-high 21 points, had its record slip to 7-13 and 1-5.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 7 1983

TOREROS LOSE / Dennis Black scored 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds Saturday night as the University of Portland won its first West Coast Athletic Conference basketball game of the season 74-51 over the University of San Diego. Portland, playing its first WAC home game, bolted to a 14-7 lead and never led by fewer than six points the rest of the way.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 7 1983

Meanwhile, USD was losing to Portland 74-51 in the Oregon city, as the Pilots dominated the boards 45-22.

It was Portland's first West Coast Athletic Conference win this season and USD dropped to 1-5 in league and 7-13 overall.

On the winning side was San Diego State's women's basketball team, which defeated Arizona 64-63 on a 23-foot jumper by Marci Blackman with seven seconds left.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 8 1983

USD's Brovelli: What if...?

The phrase pops up often about a coach who receives more respect than his team

★Brovelli

Continued From Page D-1

Brovelli's lot in life is not unlike the Myth of Sisyphus. He has spent these last four seasons in Division I basketball rolling a heavy stone up a steep hill and knowing it is destined to roll back down. Last week, the rock hit bottom in a 74-51 loss to the University of Portland, and defeats of that magnitude are not the stuff for recruiting pitches.

"There was a time when not many kids knew about us," Brovelli said yesterday. "They'd say, 'Who are you?' Kids only know what they read about in the papers or watch on TV. At that time they knew about Pepperdine, USF, the Pac-10."

"But they've heard of us now and they know what conference we play in. If we could get over the hump and beat some of the good teams we've lost to by a point or two during the past few years that would really mean something when we go out recruiting. I know we can do it. If not, I guess I'll just get gray hair and ulcers."

USD's basketball tradition is not exactly brimming with saviours. A kid named Bill Bradley took Princeton to the Final Four in 1965, but history rarely repeats itself by chance. And the odds that it will happen at a little Catholic college in San Diego are even slimmer.

Logic suggests that Jim Brovelli one day will find his way back to the University of San Francisco, where he played guard in the early '60s. When USF was searching for a coach in May 1980, Brovelli's name was mentioned but Pete Barry got the job instead. Now that the Dons are considering re-instating basketball after dropping it amid scandals last year, Brovelli is once again a candidate to lead USF to the promised land.

When the Clippers were considering a bench coach to aid Paul Silas a few months back, Brovelli's resume was under study. But the Clippers proceeded to hire Bob Kloppenburg as their chief scout, and Kloppenburg has since moved to the floor where he has taught the Clippers the fundamentals of team defense.

"Both Paul and Pete Babcock thought very highly of Jim," Clippers' GM Paul Phipps said. "But for continuity sake, we didn't want to shake things up any further. We thought Pete should stay on the bench for a while."

"But I'm a big believer in the Jim Brovelli-type coach. If there's any one area that's lacking in NBA coaching, it's the Xs and Os coaching. There are not enough guys who have that technical understanding of the game. No player ever stops needing to be schooled on fundamentals."

"I remember Paul Phipps calling me and asking if I'd be interested," Brovelli explained. "I said I'd like to sit down with him but that's as far as it went. I know I've said this many times before but I don't look too far in the future. I'm just concerned about the development of our basketball team."

"I really enjoy coaching these kids and I don't even think about what it would be like coaching a team full of blue-chippers. In time, I hope we have those blue-chippers here."

"Some of the other coaches in our conference tell me that they're picking us to win it in 1990. I tell them that if schools in our conference keep dropping basketball it could happen even sooner."

Jim Brovelli laughs and you know he doesn't want to discuss USF or the Clippers. He'd rather keep playing the same old chess game with the pawns of his chosen profession.

There is a certain underdog's charm to USD's level of competition for sure. It is fun to watch and clinically correct for the most part. But dignity, it seems, does not allow Brovelli to admit that the road he's traveling here is destined to remain a steep hill. Unconquerable to the last.

Story by Bud Shaw, Tribune Sports Writer
Photo by Russ Gilbert, Tribune Photographer

THE BASKETBALL Jim Brovelli coaches is nice and neat and fundamentally correct, a game of sharp passes and hard-angle cuts to the basket, a precision drill team performing to a symphony of rubber squealing against hardwood.

In its purest form, this game the University of San Diego plays is a marriage between geometry and chess. But watch it once or twice and you understand the tragic flaw. It is not so much the brand of basketball as the level at which it is being choreographed.

Watch it once or twice and you wonder what the game would be like if the pieces were something other than pawns. What if Brovelli could look out on the court and see vertical jumps considerably higher than his players' ages? What if the geometry remained intact but the lines were brushed-stroke by the artistic expression of adolescence? Maybe a floor-to-ceiling pirouette. Just a little something to fill the seats.

This is not, it should be pointed out, Jim Brovelli's lament, just the fantasy of every one who knows him. Even the people he works for, the people who run the little Catholic school where 3.5 averages are acceptable numbers in both classrooms and basketball box scores.

"I've had other athletic directors tell me that they'd love to have Jim coaching their team if they had a spot available," said USD Athletic Director Rev. Patrick Cahill. "They tell me that right to my face."

"I feel good that he's so respected. And I know he sees a lot of pluses in staying at USD. But at the same time I can see that he has to be a little frustrated at times. Anyone who's seen us play knows how competitive a team we have even though our record has never been sterling in Division I. But you have to wonder what Jim would do with a team of blue-chippers."

"We're all on one-year contracts here. And Jim is in more demand than me. If he wanted to take another job and thought it was something that would be good for his career, I'd respect any decision he'd make."

Brovelli sighs and says that he's happy at USD. He says he turned down a couple of job opportunities a few years back because they just weren't right for him. Apparently, this job is, even though the Toreros are 7-13 and fading in the West Coast Athletic Conference with a 1-5 record.

Please see BROVELLI, D-5

SAN DIEGO UNION
FEB 9 1983

Vacant USD Post Attracts Top Talent

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

The winningest coach in the history of NCAA Division III football is the leading candidate for the vacant University of San Diego job.

John Gagliardi, of St. John's University in Collegeville, Minn., is one of three coaches scheduled to be interviewed this week by USD athletic director Rev. Patrick Cahill. Gagliardi's career coaching record is 218-71-7.

USD has been without a coach since Bill Williams resigned under pressure three weeks ago, after the school received a year's probation for violating NCAA financial aid policies.

Gagliardi, 56, has coached 30 seasons at St. John's. His teams won the NAIA national championship in 1963 and 1965 and the NCAA Division III title in 1976. Last season, St. John's went 9-1, losing in the first round of the playoffs.

USD officials were surprised at Gagliardi's interest.

"When I got Gagliardi's application, I was shocked," Cahill said. "My initial question to him was, 'Do you really want to start over after building such a successful program?' He assured me he was (interested)."

Gagliardi said yesterday that he has turned down other coaching opportunities over the years and that this is the first time he has applied for a job. He said he did so because of San Diego weather.

(Continued on C-7, Col. 1)

USD May Hire Winningest Division III Coach

(Continued from C-1)

"I'm sitting here now looking out the window at a snow drift," Gagliardi said from his home, 80 miles northwest of Minneapolis. "It's four degrees below zero. I haven't seen the ground since the end of the football season. That's the big reason. San Diego is a paradise."

"The question is: Do I want to sacrifice everything I've built here to move to paradise?"

Gagliardi has visited San Diego once. He spoke before a St. John's alumni group in 1977.

"My first impression was, 'My God, what a nice place.' I told a friend of mine that if something ever opened up at USD, he should let me know. He wired me about three weeks ago."

"I was a bit naive. I didn't know places like San Diego existed. I want to see some of those places. I'm not planning on retiring soon — I think I'll coach for at least another decade — but I will (retire) someday. What better place than San Diego? In some ways it's like St. John's, a small Catholic college where the most important thing is education."

Like USD, St. John's does not offer football scholarships.

USD has not committed itself to Gagliardi, nor has Gagliardi committed himself to USD.

"I've heard the cost of housing in San Diego is high, and that scares me a little," Gagliardi said. "I don't real-Honestly, we are very interested and honored that a coach with Gagliardi's credentials has applied for our position. On the other hand, we're still interested in hearing from everyone on our final list."

John Gagliardi

Beyond Gagliardi, the Toreros' list of three finalists includes a major college assistant coach and the head coach of a Los Angeles-area Catholic high school. Cahill would not identify them.

"If we're satisfied, we could have a new coach next week," Cahill said.

Gagliardi is known best among his peers for some of his unusual practice methods. St. John's does not own a blocking sled and does not operate a weight room.

"Some of that has been overblown," the coach said. "We do practice on blocking, but we don't scrimmage in practice. We try to have some fun. I enjoy it that my players are able to say they enjoy practice."

An official at St. John's said Gagliardi's acceptance of the USD position "would be a serious blow to our school, beyond the sport of football. But we understand. A lot of us would like to be in his position."

ly know if they want me, and I don't know for sure that I want to move.

"But friends have told me I'll fall in love with the school, the campus and the location. It'd be such a great place to finish my career."

"John told me that after 30 years in Minnesota, San Diego would be 'like moving to another planet,'" said Cahill. "We have made no decision, though. We aren't playing games."

VISTA PRESS
FEB 10 1983

Gagliardi finalist for USD grid coaching job

SAN DIEGO (AP) — John Gagliardi, one of the winningest coaches in college football history, is a finalist for the University of San Diego's football job, the school confirmed yesterday.

Gagliardi, 56, built St. John's University of Collegeville, Minn., into a small college power over the past 30 years. He has a career record of 218-71-7.

"It's fair to say there is genuine interest on both parts," said The Rev. Patrick Cahill, USD athletic director.

D2 TIMES-ADVOCATE, Escondido, Ca., Wednesday, Feb. 9, 1983

Sportsgram

College Football:

USD has a candidate

• John Gagliardi, coach of St. John's University in Collegeville, Minn., is a leading contender for the vacant head football coaching job at the University of San Diego. Gagliardi, 56, one of the winningest coaches in college football history, has a career record of 218-71-7. He has guided St. John's NCAA Division III football program for 30 years. Last season, he led St. John's to a 9-1 record. USD has been without a head coach since Bill Williams resigned under pressure three weeks ago when it was disclosed that the NCAA was investigating illegal cash loans given to several football players at the private Catholic college. The NCAA subsequently placed USD on a year's probation for violations of the association's financial aid policies.

Beyond Gagliardi, USD is set to interview a major college assistant coach and the head coach of a Los Angeles-area Catholic high school.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 9 1983

Football coach applicant at USD big winner in NCAA Division III

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A leading contender for the vacant head football coaching job at the University of San Diego is John Gagliardi, coach of St. John's University in Collegeville, Minn.

Gagliardi, 56, one of the winningest coaches in college football history, has a career record of 218-71-7.

He has guided St. John's NCAA Division III football program for 30 years. Last season, he led St. John's to a 9-1 record.

USD has been without a head coach since Bill Williams resigned under pressure three weeks ago when it was disclosed that the NCAA was investigating illegal cash loans given to several football players at the private Catholic college.

The NCAA subsequently placed USD on a year's probation for violations of the association's financial aid policies.

Gagliardi is one of three coaches scheduled to be interviewed this week by USD athletic director, the Rev. Patrick Cahill. "When I got Gagliardi's application, I was shocked," Cahill said. "My initial question to him was, 'Do you really want to start over after building such a successful program?' He assured me he was (interested)."

Gagliardi said he applied for the job because he likes the weather in San Diego.

"I'm sitting here now looking at a snow drift," Gagliardi said from his home, 80 miles northwest of Minneapolis. "It's four degrees below zero."

Beyond Gagliardi, Cahill said he will interview a major college assistant coach and the head coach of a Los Angeles-area Catholic high school. Cahill would not identify them.

If a coach is not selected from among those three, Cahill said he will interview two alternates. The list of five candidates was culled from a field of 85 applicants, Cahill said.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 17 1983

KELLY JONES
Double winner

USC leads as Pawsatt wins pair

By Elson Irwin
Tribune Sports Writer

Tim Pawsatt, a freshman at the University of Southern California, didn't figure to be No. 1 right out of the starting gate.

The former Tribune Tennis Tournament titleholder, who lives up the road in Santa Ana, knew he could hold his own at the college level, but he didn't think he would be playing top dog on the nation's No. 1-ranked tennis team with such standouts as Jim Agate, Gary Lemon, Rafael Osuna, Ric Bengston and Brad Cherry. Yesterday, however, in the San Diego Collegiate Tennis Tournament, Coach Dick Leach decided to go with the tall, hard-serving youngster.

Pawsatt responded with a double win, a tough 7-6 (7-3), 6-4 triumph over Long Beach State's Steve Cluse, who in the first set seemed determined to pull off an upset, and then an easier victory in the afternoon over Mark Finerman of UC-Santa Barbara 6-2, 6-2.

His two wins in the top flight plus SC's depth gave the Trojans a commanding lead in team play over UCLA and No. 2-ranked Pepperdine University. "He was a bit tired," said Leach, who admitted Pawsatt has played better early this season en route to eight straight wins against no defeats.

"He (Cluse) is a good player and returns the ball well," said Pawsatt after his first-round win. "I wasn't as sharp as I can be and if I didn't get my first serve in, he'd jump on my second."

When Pawsatt, who won the Tribune event in 1980, uncoils with the first serve, it tends to shake up an opponent and when he spreads that tall frame around the net, very little gets by him.

Meanwhile, Pepperdine was also using a San Diego-nurtured player in its top spot. He is Kelly Jones, also a freshman, and he, too, came through with a pair of wins, the first over Brigham Young's Paul Steele 6-2, 6-4, the second over Chapman College's Troy Turnbull 6-2, 7-5.

Jones, the former Point Loma High star, made it look easy with a solid serve and volley game that kept his opponents guessing all the way.

The first major upset in the top flight (No. 1 and No. 2 players) was when Arizona's Eric Quade, the No. 5 seed, bowed to Chapman's Roger Alex in the second round 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Alex had to play a three-setter in defeating Alex Levie in the morning, but the extra "practice" seemed to set him up for his battle with Quade in the afternoon, another three-setter which saw him lose the first set 3-6, but come back to take the next two 6-4, 6-2.

But the major surprise of the day came when San Diego State's No. 1 player, Troy Collins, was knocked into the consolation category in his first-round match, losing to Jerome Jones of Pepperdine 6-3, 7-5. Collins was seeded No. 3.

After two rounds of singles, USC led in team competition with 12 points, followed by UCLA with 9, Pepperdine 7, San Diego State and UC-Irvine with 6, Arizona, University of San Diego, UC-Santa Barbara, Chapman, Redlands and Long Beach State with 4, Brigham Young 3, U.S. International, UC-Bakersfield and UCSD with 2, and Arizona State with 0.

The finals in each flight begin at 9 a.m. tomorrow at USD.

SAN DIEGO UNION
FEB 17 1983

Toreros' Chapman Sparks First Victory

Mark Chapman's two-run double in the fourth inning gave the University of San Diego its first victory of the season yesterday as the Toreros defeated the University of California at San Diego 4-2 at the Tritons' Olsen Field.

USD is now 1-4; UCSD is 2-4. UCSD plays Occidental College today at home.

SAN DIEGO UNION
FEB 17 1983

2 More USD Home Games

The University of San Diego closes its home basketball season this weekend with games against the University of Portland tonight and Gonzaga University tomorrow night.

Both games at the USD Sports Center will start at 7:30 p.m. Tomorrow night's game will be preceded by the Toreros' first Alumni Game.

USD enters the weekend with a 1-5 mark in West Coast Athletic Association play, 7-13 overall. Portland is 8-14 overall and Gonzaga is 10-11. Both are 2-4 in WCAC play and both have homecourt victories over USD.

Guard Rich Davis paces USD with a 13.3 points average. Forward Mike Whitmarsh is averaging 12.2 points, but is doubtful with a strained Achilles tendon.

SAN DIEGO UNION
FEB 17 1983

S.D. Tennis Tourney Opens

Sixteen of the nation's top men's tennis teams will compete today through Saturday in the 10th annual San Diego Intercollegiate Invitational Tennis Tournament, co-sponsored by the University of San Diego and The San Diego Union.

Play begins today at 7:45 a.m. and continues all day at USD and San Diego State. Quarterfinal and semifinal play runs all day tomorrow at USD starting at 8 a.m., with singles finals and doubles semifinals and finals at USD Saturday beginning at 9 a.m.

Defending NCAA champion UCLA and perennial powers USC and Pepperdine are the favorites for the team title. Among the list of entrants includes 1982 tournament finalist Jim Snyder and former Point Loma High star Kelly Jones, both of Pepperdine.

Other teams entered are USD, SDSU, USU, UCSD, Arizona, Arizona State, UC Santa Barbara, UC Irvine, Chapman, BYU, Cal State Bakersfield, Redlands and Long Beach State.

EVENING TRIBUNE
FEB 17 1983

Some of the nation's best college tennis teams and players are participating in this year's San Diego Intercollegiate Invitational Tennis Tournament. Preliminary contests for the 10th annual event were held all day yesterday and today. Finals are tomorrow beginning at 9 a.m. at the University of San Diego West Courts. Admission is free.

TWO JONESES IN FINAL

Top Intercollegiate Seed Upset

Unseeded Jerome Jones of Pepperdine eliminated No. 1 seed Tim Pawsat of Southern Cal 7-5, 6-4 in the semifinals of the San Diego Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament at USD yesterday.

Jones will face another Jones, Pepperdine's Kelly, in this morning's final at 9:30. Kelly Jones, seeded No. 2 in the tournament, downed Michael Kures of Arizona 7-5, 6-1.

In second-round doubles action, the No. 1-seeded team of Pawsat and Gary Lemon defeated San Diego State's Ned Eames and G. Espley-Jones 7-5, 6-1.

The semifinals and finals of doubles competition will be played following the singles final.

At Tucson, Ariz., San Diego State's

women's team advanced to the finals of the University of Arizona Invitational when it defeated Texas 6-3.

The Aztecs will meet Trinity College in today's championship.

Micki Schillig, the Aztecs' top singles and doubles player, recorded easy victories in her two matches.

SAN DIEGO UNION
FEB 17 1983

LOS ANGELES TIMES

6 Part III/Saturday, February 19, 1983 J

This Time Toreros Hold the Lead

USD Pours It on Portland for a 71-57 WCAC Victory

SAN DIEGO—The USD basketball team found a remedy for its nagging ability to blow basketball games in the late going. The Toreros simply built a lead that was so big they couldn't possibly lose it.

The Toreros moved ahead of the University of Portland by 16 points with six minutes left to play and coasted home to a 71-57 West Coast Athletic Conference victory over the University of Portland Friday night at the Sports Center.

The win was a reversal of a game played two weeks ago, when Portland whipped USD, 74-51, at Portland. It also enabled the Toreros to move into a tie for sixth place in the WCAC with the Pilots. Both are 2-5.

A win in tonight's 7:30 Sports Center game against Gonzaga could move the Toreros as high as fourth. It's the last home game for USD.

"It didn't come easy I'll tell you that," said USD Coach Jim Brovelli, referring to Friday night's struggle. Brovelli has seen his team struggle to a 8-13 overall record and lose many close games.

"Tonight we played well for 40 minutes," Brovelli said. "We've played this well in a lot of games, but not for 40 minutes."

A major reason for the victory win was the fact USD outrebounded the Pilots, 38-26. When the teams last met, it was just opposite as Portland won the battle of the boards, 45-22.

"This week in practice we really stressed keeping them off the boards," said Torero forward Mike Whitmarsh, who was the game's high scorer with 15 points and had six rebounds. "They play rough underneath."

Portland's rough play showed in the final stats. The Pilots had 26 personal fouls to 19 for USD.

Torero forward Robby Roberts, who finished with 14 points, was the game's leading rebounder with 13.

"We played defense as well as we have all year," Brovelli said. "To keep them off balance we felt we would have to change."

Consequently, it was a night of Brovelli yelling defensive signals, and his team responding. The Toreros also managed to respond with 11 steals, an unusually high number.

USD had a 31-27 halftime lead, but didn't break the game open until midway through the second half.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 20 1983

Kelly Jones Wins Singles At USD

An all-Pepperdine, all-Jones final climaxed an impressive showing by the Waves this week in the San Diego Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament. Kelly Jones defeated his teammate Jerome Jones 7-5, 7-5 in yesterday's Nos. 1-2 singles final at USD.

Pepperdine did not win the team championship, finishing third behind USC and UCLA. But considering Pepperdine, the No. 2-ranked team in the nation, played without its three top players, Glenn Michibata, Richard Gallien and John Van Nostrand, the performance was amazing.

Pepperdine's Brad Ackerman won the 3-4 singles, defeating Jim Agate of USC 2-6, 7-5, 7-5.

USD's pair of Tim Pawsat and Gary Lemon defeated Mark Ramos and Eric Quade of UC-Irvine 6-3, 7-5 to win the No. 1 doubles final.

UCLA's Mark Bashaw defeated USC's Brad Cherry 6-1, 6-2 to win the 5-6 singles. USC finished with 50 points, edging UCLA with 44. San Diego State finished sixth, 41 points. USD was 11th and UCSD finished last in the 16-team tournament.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

6 Part III/Sunday, February 20, 1983 J

Things Start to Happen for USD

A Little Rest, Whitmarsh Help Toreros Whip Gonzaga

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—A lot of good things have happened to the University of San Diego the past two nights.

First of all, the Toreros defeated Gonzaga 58-53 Saturday night in the Sports Center.

Coupled with Friday night's, 71-57, victory over Portland, it meant the Toreros had won consecutive league games for the first time since joining the Western Athletic Conference four seasons ago.

But more importantly, it meant USD had gone from being alone in the league cellar to a 3-5 record, good enough for fourth place ahead of Portland, Gonzaga and Loyola Marymount.

"With about five minutes left (USD was ahead 46-43) we knew it would come down to a free throw shooting contest and defense," USD Coach Jim Brovelli said. "If we made our free throws and played good defense it was ours. That's what you've got to do. We did."

USD's last 12 points were on free throws.

The Toreros, 9-13 overall, had lost a number of games this season for failing on defense and at the free throw line. Brovelli attributed the change to being fresh mentally. He had given the team time on the bench during the two week break before Friday night's game.

"I believe this game is mental," he said. "When you are in a mental slump it makes the game difficult. I gave the guys a couple of days off."

The rest certainly showed in the play of junior forward Mike Whitmarsh, who had the game high 22 points. He also was eight for eight at the foul line, seven for nine from the floor, had six rebounds and seven steals.

Seniors Robby Roberts and guard Rich Davis finished with eight and 12 points, respectively.

The win was even more of a surprise because Gonzaga, 10-12 overall, is a successful road team. The Bulldogs have collected victories in away games at DePaul, Pepperdine and Montana.

The visitors were led by forward Bryce McPhee with 18 points and guard John Stockton with 13.

USD finishes its season with four league games on the road. The Toreros fourth place finish in the WAC last year was their best ever.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN
FEB 19 1983

TOREROS ROMP/

Forward Mike Whitmarsh, a graduate of Monte Vista High School, put in 15 points and grabbed six rebounds as the University of San Diego downed the University of Portland 71-57 in a West Coast Athletic Conference basketball game Friday at the USD Sports Center. Center Robby Roberts contributed 14 points and a game-high 13 rebounds for USD. Guard Rich Davis added 14. USD, 2-5 in the WCAC and 8-13 overall, led at the half 31-27. Portland closed to within one point, 40-39, with 13:59 left. But USD extended its lead to three points at 13:01 before burying Portland with 11 unanswered points.

SAN DIEGO UNION
FEB 20 1983

Aztecs' Streak Ends In Arizona Split

San Diego State ended one winning streak yesterday and then started another, splitting a wild double-header with the University of Arizona at Tucson.

The Aztecs, who had won their first six games this season, dropped the first game 15-8, then rallied to win the second 13-12 in a strong wind that fueled the slugfest.

Steve Sossacret's grand slam home run sparked a seven-run fifth inning for the Aztecs in Game 2. Arizona rallied for five runs in the bottom of the fifth to tie the game at 12. With one out in the Aztec ninth, Terry Jones and Chris Gwynn singled. Jim Goeris followed with a game-winning single up the middle. Phil Torres nailed down the victory with 3½ innings of shutout relief.

Flavio Alfaro hit his first homer of the season for SDSU in the first game, but Arizona pounded the Aztecs' relievers for 13 runs in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings. SDSU out-hit Arizona in the two games 29-23.

In other action, a four-run seventh in the second game of a double-header enabled USD to sweep Cal Poly Pomona 9-2 and 6-5.

The Toreros trailed 5-2 going into their last at-bat. With two outs, one run in and the bases loaded, Laci Nagypal ripped a double that was bobbled by the right fielder, enabling all three runs to score.

USD pounded out 12 hits in the first game, led by Eric Bennett (3-for-5, 3 RBI) and Bruce Tomlinson (2-for-5, 3 RBI).

Point Loma College also swept, defeating Occidental 4-3 and 10-5.

In the first game, Tony Botte scored the winning run in the bottom of the seventh when Occidental pitcher Ed Miegs fielded a routine grounder and threw over the first baseman's head. Gary Page went the distance, surrendering seven hits and striking out seven.

In Game 2, Botte had two doubles and one RBI and Mark Undereth had a two-run double.

Ed Miegs fielded a routine grounder and threw over the first baseman's head. Gary Page went the distance, surrendering seven hits and striking out seven.

In Game 2, Botte had two doubles and one RBI and Mark Undereth had a two-run double.

H-2 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

①

Sunday, February 20, 1983

USD Defeats Gonzaga 58-53 To Complete A Weekend To Remember

By BILL CENTER

Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

For the want of a free throw here or there, the University of San Diego might be 13-9 today instead of 9-13.

Last night, the Toreros showed again how important foul shooting can be — and how good they can be from the line — in a 58-53 victory over Gonzaga University at the USD Sports Center in a game that was perplexing and enjoyable to Coach Jim Brovelli's corps.

In four of the six games the Toreros have lost by five points or fewer, USD led during the final 90 seconds. USD could have scored non-league victories over Air Force, San Diego State and Denver and West Coast Athletic Conference leader Pepperdine with some clutch foul shooting.

Instead, the Toreros converted just 65 percent of their free throws. "Foul shooting alone cost us four games, maybe more," said Brovelli.

"Tonight shows you what we're capable of," said forward Mike Whitmarsh, who paced USD with a season-high 22 points. "It's a little maddening to think where we might have been had we done this all along."

When Gonzaga took to fouling last night in an effort to claw back, the Toreros hit 12 of 13 foul shots in the last 4:42 and finished the second half with 19 of 21.

Whitmarsh hit 7 of 7 down the stretch. Robby Roberts hit four straight, and Dave Melver hit four of five tries.

That and some second half heroics by Whitmarsh proved enough to turn back Gonzaga, which got outstanding baseline bombing from forward Bryce McPhee (18 points, 6 rebounds and 6 assists) and guard John Stockton (13 points, 6 assists) while going without leading rebounder and third-leading scorer Jason Van Nort, who has torn knee ligaments.

Whitmarsh, himself playing with an injured toe on his right foot and a strained Achilles tendon on his left, pushed himself to one of the better all-round games in recent USD history with six rebounds, seven steals and two assists. He missed only two of nine shots from the floor and also helped shut off Gonzaga's inside game.

It was Whitmarsh's five points in 14 seconds midway through the second half that turned a 37-37 score into a 42-37 USD advantage. First, he converted two free throws after drawing a foul on a drive — the foul that also pushed Gonzaga over the limit for a half. Seconds later, Whitmarsh stole the ball at midcourt, drove in for the layup, was fouled and hit the free throw. Two foul shots by Rich Davis (12 points) pushed the lead to seven with 10:02 to go. From that point it was a matter of USD hitting its free throws.

"With five minutes to go, I called a timeout and told them it was going to be defense and free throws, and we delivered on both ends," Brovelli said.

"Individually, I can't say enough for Whitmarsh. He had some great steals, some key baskets and key rebounds." Thanks to Whitmarsh, USD had its greatest weekend in the WCAC. Now in its fourth WCAC campaign, USD never had won both games on a weekend and never had beaten Gonzaga. On Friday night, the Toreros beat Portland.

In the two games, Whitmarsh had 37 points, 12 rebounds, 6 assists, 9 steals and shot 12 of 20 from the floor — excellent totals for a player who on Wednesday was told he might have to miss the last three weeks of the season if his Achilles tendon strain didn't begin to respond to treatment.

USD is 3-5 in WCAC play, but finishes with four games on the road. Gonzaga is 10-12.

Gus Magee, a power forward who is the school's career rebounding leader, was honored last night as the first inductee into the recently formed University of San Diego basketball Hall of Fame.

Magee, 6 feet 6, played four seasons at USD from 1966-70 after coming out of the Air Force. He played for Phil Woolpert and Bernie Bickerstaff. Since being graduated in 1970, Magee has served as a Torero assistant coach under Bickerstaff and Jim Brovelli.

Magee had 948 rebounds for his four seasons and also holds Torero records for most rebounds in a game (24) and highest rebounding average in a season (14.3, 1968-69). He also averaged 12.2 rebounds in 1969-70 and ranks 10th among all-time USD scorers with 977 points.

FEB 18 1983

C-2 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

②

USD Pulls Switch, Keeps Portland In Dark 71-57

By BILL CENTER

Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

The University of San Diego never has professed to have the most talented basketball team in the NCAA. But it may have one of the smartest. Last season, for example, the Toreros placed six players on the 15-player West Coast Athletic Association's all-academic team.

Last night, the Toreros put their smarts to work. Switching defenses almost every time down floor, the Toreros confused and stymied the University of Portland, scoring a 71-57 victory in the USD Sports Center over a club that routed USD 74-51 two weeks ago in Oregon.

"In the past, we've made some mistakes when we went from one defense to another," Torero forward Mike Whitmarsh said. "Tonight everyone knew what we were doing."

"The defense played about as well as it has any time this year," USD coach Jim Brovelli said. "We handled the switching of defenses very well. I thought it hurt them recognizing what we were doing."

What USD did was score its most lopsided victory since the season's fourth game, a 25-point victory over St. Thomas College. They also stopped a three-game losing streak while winning a second WCAC game against five losses. USD is 8-13 overall going into tonight's home finale against Gonzaga at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center.

"We have played this well in a lot of games before," Brovelli said. "This is the first time, though, that it's been a 40-minute deal."

After squandering most of a 10-point lead near the end of the first half, USD led 40-39 with 14 minutes to go before going ahead 55-41 with a 15-2 run sparked by the play of guards Rich Davis and Bill Penfold and forwards Whitmarsh and Robby Roberts.

A play by Penfold typified the way the Toreros played. He blocked an outside jump shot at Portland's end, picked the ball out of the air, shoveled it to Davis on the fast break, then scored a rebound basket at the other end.

"We had everyone clicking," Brovelli said. In Portland two weeks ago, the Pilots won the boards 48-22. Last night, USD reversed it 38-26. USD shot 56 percent from the floor and had 12 steals. Portland shot 40 percent against the USD pressure.

"We did a good job taking away their inside game," Brovelli said.

USD put four players in double figures (Whitmarsh 15, Roberts and Davis 14, Penfold 12), and Roberts had 13 rebounds.

USD wing guard Don Capener told Brovelli this week that he was going to give up his senior season of basketball in order to transfer to BYU to finish his studies.

FEB 2 1 1983

COLLEGE BASKETBALL — Forward Mike Whitmarsh scored 22 points and snatched six rebounds to lead the University of San Diego to a 58-53 West Coast Athletic Conference basketball win over Gonzaga University Saturday night at USD. Guard Rich Davis helped out the Toreros cause with 12 points. The Toreros raised their WCAC mark to 3-5 and their overall record to 9-13.

The game was tied at halftime 27-all, but USD went ahead to stay by scoring seven straight points midway through the second half for a 44-37 lead, from which point they managed to hold on for the victory.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 2 1 1983

● In other college baseball, USD swept a twin bill from Cal Poly-Pomona 9-2 and 6-5 Saturday. In the nightcap, USD was down 5-3 with two outs and the bases loaded when Laci Nagypal powered a double that was kicked around by the outfield, allowing all three runs. USD pounded out 12 hits in the opener, led by Eric Bennett's 3-for-5 and three RBI, plus Bruce Tomlinson's two hits for three RBI.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 2 2 1983

WHITMARSH IS HONORED

University of San Diego forward Rusty Whitmarsh yesterday was honored as co-player of the week in the West Coast Athletic Conference.

The 6-foot-6 forward, playing on a strained Achilles tendon, shot 12-for-20 from the floor, scored 37 points and had 12 rebounds, six assists and nine steals in victories over Portland and Gonzaga. Behind Whitmarsh, USD swept a weekend's slate for the first time in five seasons in the WCAC.

Sharing the honor with Whitmarsh was Santa Clara freshman guard Steve Kenilvort, who had 32 points and seven assists in victories over Pepperdine and Loyola-Marymount.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 2 2 1983

WHITMARSH HONORED Forward Mike Whitmarsh of the University of San Diego has been honored as the West Coast Athletic Association co-basketball player of the week. The 6-foot-6 junior hit 12 of 20 floor shots, had 37 points, 12 rebounds, six assists and nine steals in victories over Portland and Gonzaga. Whitmarsh played with a strained Achilles' tendon. Santa Clara freshman guard Steve Kenilvort shared the honor. He had 32 points and seven assists in wins over Pepperdine and Loyola-Marymount.

VISTA PRESS

FEB 2 2 1983

Gagliardi shuns USD job, will remain at St. John's

COLLEGEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — Football Coach John Gagliardi announced on yesterday he will remain at St. John's University and will turn down an offer to become head coach at the University of San Diego.

"I don't know how I ever thought I could leave St. John's. Only when the stark reality of leaving faced me did I realize how much St. John's means to me," the coach said.

Gagliardi has a career record of 218 victories, 71 losses and seven ties, giving him the third highest number of victories among active college football coaches.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 2 1 1983

TOREROS ROLL Former Monte Vista High School player Mike Whitmarsh scored a season-high 22 points and grabbed six rebounds Saturday night, leading the University of San Diego to a 58-53 West Coast Athletic Conference basketball victory over Gonzaga at the USD Sports Center.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 2 2 1983

WHITMARSH GETS HONOR — Rusty Whitmarsh, star forward for the University of San Diego basketball team, was honored as co-player of the week in the West Coast Athletic Conference. The 6-foot-6 forward, playing on a strained Achilles tendon, shot 12-for-20 from the floor, scored 37 points and had 12 rebounds, six assists and nine steals in victories over Portland and Gonzaga. Sharing the honor was Santa Clara freshman guard Steve Kenilvort, who had 32 points and seven assists in victories over Pepperdine and Loyola-Marymount.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 2 2 1983

USD FOOTBALL Brian Fogarty, a winning high school coach in one of Southern California's toughest leagues, has been named head coach at the University of San Diego. Fogarty, 32, replaces Bill Williams, who recently resigned after the school drew a one-year NCAA probation for illegal financial aid to some of the players by coaches. USD, a non-scholarship Catholic institution, had offered the job to St. John's coach John Gagliardi, the most successful Division III head coach in NCAA history. Fogarty had a 28-18-2 record in four seasons at St. Francis High in La Canada, a Los Angeles suburb. He led St. Francis, his alma mater, to the Southern Section CIF playoffs all four seasons in the Big Five Conference. Twice St. Francis reached the semifinals and last year his club won the Del Rey League title.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 2 3 1983

Toreros Throw Blanks

The University of San Diego's Russ Applegate yielded two first-inning singles then pitched no-hit baseball as he finished with a two-hit, 8-0 shutout of Point Loma yesterday at USD.

San Diego, Tuesday, February 22, 1983

San Diego Notepad

USD hires La Canada prep coach;

The University of San Diego has chosen a football coach and he's Brian Fogarty, who led his St. Francis High (La Canada) team to the Southern Section-CIF playoffs in four straight seasons in one of the toughest Southern California prep leagues — the Big Five Conference.

Fogarty, 32, had a 28-18-2 record at St. Francis in four years as head coach. Twice his teams reached the semifinals and, last year, his club won the Del Rey League title.

Fogarty, a graduate of Los Angeles State, began his coaching career as an assistant at St. Francis in 1970 and took the head coaching job in 1979.

Fogarty replaces Bill Williams, who resigned under fire after the Toreros drew a one-year probation for illegal financial assistance to players.

There were 90 applicants for the USD position, including John Gagliardi of St. John's, Minn., who eventually turned down the job.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

FEB 2 2 1983

Fogarty new USD head coach

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Brian Fogarty, a winning high school coach in one of Southern California's toughest leagues, has been named head coach at the University of San Diego, school officials said.

Fogarty, 32, replaces Bill Williams, who recently resigned after the school drew a one-year NCAA probation for illegal financial aid to some of the players by coaches.

USD, a non-scholarship Catholic institution, had offered the job to St. John's

Coach John Gagliardi, the most successful Division III head coach in NCAA history.

Fogarty had a 28-18-2 record in four seasons at St. Francis High in La Canada, a Los Angeles suburb. He led St. Francis, his alma mater, to the Southern Section-California Interscholastic Federation playoffs all four seasons in the Big Five Conference.

Twice St. Francis reached the semifinals and last year his club won the Del Rey League title.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 2 2 1983

USD Chooses Prep Coach Fogarty

Brian Fogarty, a successful high school coach in one of Southern California's toughest leagues, was appointed head football coach at the University of San Diego yesterday.

Fogarty, 32, accepted the position after St. John's (Minn.) coach John Gagliardi, the most successful Division III head coach in NCAA history, rejected the USD job. Fogarty was No. 2 among the three finalists for the position.

Fogarty had a 28-18-2 record in four seasons at St. Francis High in La Canada. He led St. Francis to the Southern Section-CIF playoffs all four seasons in the top-rated Big Five Conference. Twice St. Francis reached the semifinals. Last year, his club won the Del Rey League title.

A graduate of St. Francis High and Los Angeles State, Fogarty began his coaching career at St. Francis as an assistant in 1970 and remained at the school for 13 seasons.

"We may have found a sleeper in Fogarty," said the Rev. Patrick Cahill, USD's athletic director. "Everyone I've talked to has been impressed with Brian's coaching skills and personal integrity."

USD had been looking for a coach for its Division III program since Bill Williams resigned under fire after the Toreros drew a one-year NCAA probation for illegal financial assistance to some players by coaches.

"Fogarty had the personal qualities that we wanted," said Cahill.

"I think Brian Fogarty and USD is a nice fit," said the new coach. "I agree with what they're trying to do, the idea of non-scholarship football as a part of an academic institution."

Fogarty decided last fall to seek a college coaching post in 1983 and had already resigned his position at St.

Francis, "because it's not right to look for one job while holding another," he said.

"I like St. Francis. I just thought it was time to try something else and broaden my horizons."

From 90 applicants for the job, USD had narrowed the search to Fogarty, Gagliardi and Notre Dame University scouting coordinator Mike Stewart.

The job was offered to the 56-year-old Gagliardi, but he turned it down yesterday, citing Southern California's high housing costs and the success of his program at St. John's College in Collegeville, Minn.

"In San Diego, I'd be coaching a program somewhere down the line of sports activities in the community," said Gagliardi. "Here I'm a big fish. It's a small pond, but I like it. San Diego is beautiful. I'd love to live there. But I'll stay in the snow."

— Bill Center

FEB 2 2 1983

Los Angeles Times

Fogarty Replaces Williams as USD Football Coach

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Brian Fogarty, who compiled a 28-18-2 record in four seasons at St. Francis high school in La Canada, was named head football coach at the University of San Diego on Monday.

Fogarty, 32, replaces Bill Williams, who resigned under pressure five weeks ago after USD, which plays in Division III, was given a year's probation by the NCAA for violating financial aid policies.

The school first offered the job to John Gagliardi of St. John's University in Collegeville, Minn., the winningest coach ever in Division III football.

But Gagliardi, who had applied for the job, turned down USD on Sunday after St. John's, where he has compiled a 218-71-7 record, made a counter offer.

Fogarty is anxious to try college football, he said. His entire coaching experience is 13 seasons at St. Francis, the first nine as an assistant.

"I've always thought this kind of a job would be nice," Fogarty said. "I wanted to get into college coaching one way or another."

He actually resigned at the end of last season because he needed a change, he said.

"I talked with him about that," said Rev. Patrick Cahill, USD athletic director. "He simply felt it was time to move on. He also went to high school at St. Francis and he was tired of it."

Fogarty played football at Pasadena City College, but an injury ended his career shortly after it started at Cal-Santa Barbara. He then transferred to Cal-State-Los Angeles where he received a B.A.

Cahill likes Fogarty's reputation.

"I did as close as I could to an FBI investigation regarding his background," Cahill said. "He has done a great coaching job and is every bit the person his recommendations said he was."

Despite coaching the smallest school in the Big 5

Conference, Fogarty took St. Francis to the C.I.F. playoffs all four years and the semi-finals twice. In 1982 the team won the Del Rey League championship.

Fogarty will inherit Williams' nine assistant coaches and a team that went 4-5 last season. After one season he will have the option of keeping or replacing the assistants, Cahill said.

Fogarty believes the players will accept him.

"They like Bill (Williams)," Fogarty said. "Even if he hadn't been the coach I'd still have to win them over. In talking to players on the interview board it doesn't seem it will be too bad."

Besides Fogarty and Gagliardi, USD also interviewed Mike Stewart, the scouting coordinator for the university of Notre Dame. Stewart was a high school coach in Kentucky before joining Gerry Faust's staff in 1981.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 2 5 1983

Toreros Hit Road

Winners of two straight at home, the University of San Diego Toreros begin a season-ending four-game road trip this weekend with a game at Pepperdine tonight and another at Loyola-Marymount tomorrow night.

The defensive-minded Toreros will be taking on the league's top four scorers this weekend. Pepperdine, tied for the West Coast Athletic Association lead at 6-2, including a comeback behind 61-58 win over USD in the first meeting, is led by Dane Suttle, the league's No. 2 scorer at 23.4 points per game, and Orlando Phillips, the fourth-leading scorer at 19.9. Phillips also leads the WCAC in rebounds at 10.3 per game.

Loyola-Marymount (2-6), a 75-67 loser in San Diego, features WCAC scoring leader Greg Goojian (26.5) and No. 3 Forrest McKenzie (20.0).

USD will be led by 6-6 forward Mike Whitmarsh, who earned co-WCAC Player of the Week honors last week. He is averaging 12.8 points a game, second-high on the Toreros to guard Rich Davis (13.2).

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 2 4 1983

USD BASKETBALL The University of San Diego puts its two-game winning streak on the line, visiting Pepperdine University Friday at 7:30 p.m. in a West Coast Athletic Conference contest. The Toreros defeated Portland and Gonzaga last week, the first time USD has swept a pair of weekend games in WCAC play. USD went from last place to fourth, raising its record to 3-5. Pepperdine shares first place in the conference with St. Mary's and Santa Clara. All are 6-2.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

FEB 2 4 1983

USD to Close Season Saturday

U. of San Diego hoopers play their last homestand of the year this weekend when they host the U. of Portland Friday and Gonzaga U. Saturday.

Both games will be played in the USD Sports Center starting at 7:30 p.m. The Toreros last game was on Feb. 5th, a 74-51 setback against Portland.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 2 5 1983

TOREROS ON THE ROAD — University of San Diego's basketball team winds up its season with four road games, starting tonight against Pepperdine and another tomorrow against Loyola-Marymount.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 2 6 1983

Waves Rap Toreros 82-69

From The San Diego Union's News Services

Forward Orlando Phillips scored 31 points and grabbed 16 rebounds last night, leading Pepperdine to an 82-69 West Coast Athletic Conference basketball victory over the University of San Diego.

Guard Dane Suttle added 22 points and was credited with a game-high five assists for the Waves, who raised their WCAC-leading record to 7-2 and their overall mark to 17-8.

Forward Mike Whitmarsh led San Diego, which fell to 3-6 in league play and 9-14 overall, with 26 points and seven rebounds. Guard Rich Davis added 22 points for the Toreros.

The Waves connected on 58.5 percent of their field goal attempts to 50.9 percent for the Toreros. Pepperdine outrebounded San Diego 35-22.

In a crosstown rivalry, Point Loma College edged UC San Diego 59-55 to claim the NAIA District 3 Southern Division championship. Both schools will compete in the district playoffs beginning Thursday with opponents yet to be determined.

New Mexico 71, BYU 70 — Guard Niles Dockery scored 16 points and teamed with fellow reserve Alan Dolensky to lead New Mexico to a 71-70 upset victory over Brigham Young, putting a dent in the Cougars' Western Athletic Conference title hopes.

The Brigham Young loss, coupled with Texas-El Paso's victory over Utah last night, gave Texas-El Paso sole possession of the league lead with a 10-3 record.

UTEP 55, Utah 43 — Kent Lockhart had 19 points and Luster Goodwin chipped in with 14, sparking Texas-El Paso to the vital WAC triumph.

The Miners can clinch the title with a win over Brigham Young today in El Paso.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

FEB 2 6 1983

Pepperdine 82, U. San Diego 69

MALIBU — Forward Orlando Phillips scored 31 points and grabbed 16 rebounds, leading Pepperdine to a West Coast Athletic Conference victory over the University of San Diego.

Guard Dane Suttle added 22 points and was credited with a game-high five assists for the Waves, who raised their WCAC-leading record to 7-2 and their overall mark to 17-8.

Forward Bill Sadler contributed 17 points for Pepperdine, making eight of his 10 field goal attempts.

Forward Mike Whitmarsh led San Diego, which fell to 3-6 in league play and 9-14 overall, with 26 points and seven rebounds. Guard Rich Davis added 22 points for the Toreros.

The Waves led nearly all the way. It was 42-36 at halftime.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 2 6 1983

MORE COLLEGE HOOPS — University of San Diego's basketball team was blindsided by host Pepperdine last night 82-69 as Waves' forward Orlando Phillips scored 31 points and pulled down 16 boards.

Pepperdine leads the West Coast Athletic Conference with a 7-2 record, while the Toreros dropped to 3-6 and 9-14 overall. Mike Whitmarsh was high scorer for USD with 26 points.

In a crosstown matchup, Point Loma College squeezed by UCSD 59-55 to win the NAIA District 3 Southern Division championship. Both schools will compete in the district playoffs beginning Thursday against opponents yet to be determined.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 2 6 1983

TOREROS LOSE/ Forward Orlando Phillips scored 31 points and grabbed 16 rebounds Friday night, leading Pepperdine to an 82-69 West Coast Athletic Conference basketball victory over the University of San Diego in Malibu. Guard Dane Suttle added 22 points and was credited with a game-high five assists for the Waves, who raised their WCAC-leading record to 7-2 and overall mark to 17-8. Forward Mike Whitmarsh led USD with 26 points and seven rebounds. The Toreros fell to 3-6 in conference and 9-14 overall.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 2 7 1983

Loyola Loses to San Diego

Forward Mike Whitmarsh scored a career-high 37 points and had seven rebounds Saturday night while leading University of San Diego to an 82-79 West Coast Athletic Conference basketball victory over Loyola Marymount at the losers' gym.

Whitmarsh made 13 of 14 shots as the Toreros raised their WCAC record to 4-6 and their overall mark to 10-13.

Guard Greg Goorjian led Loyola, which fell to 2-7 in the WCAC and 9-15 overall, with 25 points and 13 assists. Forward Forrest McKenzie added 21 points and seven rebounds for the Lions, while forward Johnny Brown had 19 points and a game-high 13 rebounds.

EVENING TRIBUNE

FEB 2 8 1983

Whitmarsh named Player of the Week — again

University of San Diego's Mike Whitmarsh has been named the West Coast Athletic Conference Player of the Week for the second straight week.

Whitmarsh had 63 points, 14 rebounds, six assists and five steals in two games.

The 6-6 junior hit 10 of 15 shots for 26 points Friday night in a losing effort against Pepperdine. Saturday night he hit 13 of 14 shots and 11 of 19 free throws for 37 points as USD defeated Loyola-Marymount 82-79.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 2 8 1983

WHITMARSH HONORED/ University of San Diego forward Mike Whitmarsh has been chosen the West Coast Athletic Conference basketball player of the week for the second straight time. The former Monte Vista High School and Grossmont College athlete scored a career-high 37 points and pulled down seven rebounds Saturday to lead the Toreros to an 82-79 victory over Loyola in Los Angeles. Whitmarsh made 13 of 14 field goal attempts as the Toreros raised their WCAC record to 4-6 and overall mark to 10-13. The 6-foot-6 junior had 63 points, 14 rebounds, six assists and five steals in two games last week.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 2 8 1983

WCAC Honors Whitmarsh

University of San Diego forward Mike Whitmarsh has been chosen the West Coast Athletic Conference Player of the Week for the second straight week.

Whitmarsh had 63 points, 14 rebounds, six assists and five steals in two games.

The 6-foot-6 junior from Monte Vista High and Grossmont College hit 10 of 15 from the floor last Friday while scoring a then-season-high 26 points in a losing cause against WCAC leader Pepperdine.

A night later, Whitmarsh came within three points of the USD scoring record, hitting 13 of 14 from the floor and 11 of 19 foul shots for 37 points in a victory over Loyola-Marymount.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 2 7 1983

Whitmarsh Hits 37 As Toreros Win

Mike Whitmarsh scored a season-high 37 points to lead USD to an 82-79 victory over West Coast Athletic Conference opponent Loyola-Marymount in Los Angeles last night.

The Toreros held a 46-42 advantage at the half and expanded the lead to 11 points, 71-60, with 6:49 left behind the inside scoring of Whitmarsh.

The Lions cut the Toreros' lead to 74-73 with 1:43 remaining, but Dave McIver scored a three-point play with 1:21 left and the Lions couldn't get within two points after that.

Whitmarsh hit 13 of 14 field goal attempts and Rich Davis finished with 17 points as USD raised its WCAC record to 4-6 and 10-14 overall.

Loyola (2-7, 9-15) was led by the league's top scorer, Greg Goorjian, who finished with 25 points.

In a playoff for the Pacific Coast Conference second representative, Saddleback defeated San Diego City College 103-87 in Mission Viejo.

PCC champion Imperial Valley College finished off its regular season with a 64-55 victory over MiraCosta at Imperial.

USC, the nation's second-ranked women's basketball team, defeated San Diego State 89-63 last night at the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

Paula McGee led the 23-2 Trojans with 24 points, 15 rebounds, and teammate Cheryl Miller added 22 points.

APRIL 1983

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

APR 1983

Metepec: The Tree of Life—A collection of ceramic expressions of a single Mexican town, from private and museum collections, is on exhibit at USD's Founders Gallery Apr. 22-June 10. Opening reception Apr. 21, 7-9. Weekdays noon-5, til 9 Wed. University of San Diego, Alcalá Park. 291-6480.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

APR 1983

Once Upon A Mattress—Musical lark based on the fairy tale of "The Princess and the Pea" is presented by University of San Diego Theatre Apr. 14-17. Thur.-Sat. at 8, Sun. at 2:30. In Camino Theatre, USD. Tickets at the door. Info: 291-6480.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

APR 1983

Orwell: The Road to 1984—USD lecture series explores the work of George Orwell and the author's intentions from a humanities perspective. Tues. mornings 11:45-1:15. Apr. 12: "Winston and Julia." Apr. 19: "Orwell and Gandhi." Apr. 26: "Big Brother and Beyond: The Prospects for Democracy in the Post-1984 Era." Camino Hall 150. USD.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

APR 1983

Update Breakfast Seminars—Breakfast seminars for business professionals sponsored by University of San Diego are held at two locations on Fri. mornings, 7:30-9, thru Apr. 22. At the University Club, 1333 Seventh Ave.: Apr. 1, "Toughening Up in a Turbulent Economy," by Fred Bahr. Apr. 8, "Me and My Micro," by Eugene Rathwohl. Apr. 15, "Up Your Productivity," by Robert Johnson. Apr. 22, "Management of Innovation and Technology," by Gary Whitney. At La Jolla Village Inn: Apr. 1, "Me and My Micro," by Eugene Rathwohl. "Profiles of Successful Managers," by Tom Baker. Apr. 15, "How to Teach Your Subordinates to Love the Job They May Hate," by James Evans. Apr. 22, "The Art of Managing People," by Phillip Hunsaker. Registration & info: 293-4585.

RANCH COAST

APR 1983

University of San Diego's offer Kings, Bishops, Knights ... and Pawns? The Political Morality of Peace and War, Friday mornings 7:30-9:00, through April 22.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

APR 1983

Kings, Bishops, Knights and Pawns? The Political Morality of Peace and War—A breakfast seminar series for business executives, sponsored by the University of San Diego and presented by Major General Anthony Moore, USMC (Ret.), takes place Fri. mornings 7:30-9. Apr. 1: "Leadership Roles and Mechanisms to Preserve Peace and Diffuse Confrontation." Apr. 8: "Classification of Conflict and War Waging Forces." Apr. 15: "War and Peace—Issues of Prevention and Preservation." Apr. 22: "Options and Possible Solutions: Promoting International Stability." Info: 293-4585.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

APR 1 1983

"NAGARE" (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park, Founders Gallery in Founders Hall). Evolution of the Japanese wood-block print. Gallery is open from noon to 9 p.m. Wednesday and noon to 5 p.m.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

APR 1 1983

USD is sponsoring an Unemployment Fair on campus from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 30. Workshops will begin each hour covering different topics. Employment counselors, social service agencies and educational outlets will be represented.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 3 1983

Founders Gallery: University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

EVENING TRIBUNE

APR 4 1983

IT'S NOT TOO EARLY to think about getting those required courses in during the summer term. USD will offer more than 100 courses beginning June 1 that can be taken for either undergraduate or graduate credit in the schools of arts and sciences, education, business administration, nursing and law.

THE TRIBUNE

APR 4 1983

San Diego, Calif.

LINE UP CHORES

Students extend a helping hand

Know a senior who needs some light housework done? The city of San Diego's Senior Citizen Service Center is coordinating a helping-hand weekend later this month. USD students are volunteering their time to help older adults around their homes, doing light chores such as gardening. Heavy work and specialized jobs such as painting are not included in the effort. The center is also coordinating a program in which seniors who need carpentry work can get it done without labor costs. For information on either program, call the center at 236-5765.

MARK MONDAY

LA JOLLA LIGHT

APR 7 1983

University of San Diego — "Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec" is an exhibit depicting the artistic history of the ceramics of Metepec, Mexico. It opens April 14 with a fiesta from 7 to 9 p.m. and runs through June 15. Alcalá Park, San Diego. 291-6480.

A6 Wednesday, April 6, 1983 Sentinel

Free USD seminar explores law

"Effective Felony Defense" is the topic of a special three-session advanced education program for practicing criminal defense lawyers offered by the University of San Diego Law Center.

Sessions will be held from 6 to 9 p.m., April 21, May 12, and June 9 in the Grace Courtroom, School of Law, at USD off Linda Vista Road. There is no charge for admission, but a nominal fee will be assessed to cover costs of program materials. Because of limited seating, only the first 100 registrants will be admitted.

Each session will be designed around hypothetical cases, sent by mail to participants in advance of the session.

Format of the sessions calls for lecture-demonstrations by "some of the finest defense attorneys from within and without San Diego County," according to Sheldon Krantz, law dean. A one-hour workshop during which issues will be discussed and participants will practice skills outlined in the lecture and a half-hour wrap-up, are also scheduled.

Attendance at all three sessions will satisfy educational requirements of the Office of Defender Services. All programs will be videotaped and available for review by the defense bar.

Call Rick Barron at 291-6480, Ext. 4394 for details.

SENTINEL

APR 6 1983

USD to host employment fair

In answer to many inquiries on how to deal with the problems of the unemployed, the University of San Diego will offer an Unemployment Fair on the campus April 30. Workshops, employment counselors, social service agencies and various educational outlets will be represented at the 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. event.

Unemployed persons regardless of age, race, creed or skills are invited to the USD patio west of the Immaculata. In case of rain, the sessions will be moved to Serra Hall on campus. There is no admission. Workshops will run on the hour so participants may attend at least two, possibly three.

Topics include Writing and Updating Resumes, A Winning Approach to Interviews, Dress for Success, How to Establish a Counseling Group for the Unemployed at the Parish Level, Gaining Employment Through Career Change, How to Manage

Your Debts, Crisis Time: Utility Bills, etc. and Promoting Family Communication in Times of Stress.

Call 291-6480 ext. 4296 for details.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

APR 7 1983

Unemployment program slated

The All Hallows/Mary, Star of the Sea Job Program invites the unemployed of these neighborhoods of these churches to a program on Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the All Hallows Parish Center.

"Determining your Basic Interests and How to Deal With Change" are the topics to be addressed by Brother Thomas Kane, FSC. Brother Kane is the associate director of the Permanent Deacon Program and academic dean of St. Francis Seminary, San Diego Catholic Diocese.

The Job Program office at All Hallows is open Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

A job board is maintained. Employers with openings are asked to call and post the jobs.

READER

APR 7 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will open with a fiesta Thursday, April 14, 7 p.m. and remain on view through June 10, Founders Gallery, USD. 291-6480.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

APR 7 1983

La Jollan to perform leading role

Amy Wayne of La Jolla, a freshman at the University of San Diego, will play the lead in the school's annual musical production beginning Thursday, April 14.

The La Jollan, who is studying piano, will appear in "Once Upon a Mattress" as Princess Winnifred.

Wayne who is a recent recipient of the Sister Rossi Award, also will appear as a guest soloist with the USD Symphony Orchestra May 1. Proceeds from the concert will be directed to the university's music department.

Amy Wayne

Wayne will play the Mendelssohn Concerto in G Minor. The concert takes place in Camino Theater at 4 p.m.

BLADE TRIBUNE

APR 8 1983

USD Gallery Hosts Ceramics Exhibition

SAN DIEGO — "Arbol de la Vida, The Ceramics of Metepec" will be on view at the University of San Diego Founders Gallery and opens with a "fiesta" from 7 to 9 p.m. on April 14.

The exhibition will be open to the public through June 15 on weekdays from noon to 5 p.m. and on Wednesdays from noon to 9 p.m. For information call 291-6480.

"The Ceramics of Metepec" depicts the artistic history of the ceramics of Metepec, known for its complex trees of life, and traces the evolution of the tree of life.

"These 'arboles,' according to gallery director Therese Whitcomb, 'are a universally recognized example of Mexican folk art.' Featured in the exhibition is the work of Metepec's master potter Monico Soteno. Historic and contemporary pieces, as well as audio-visual presentations, will guide the gallery visitor through the stylistic and iconographic changes in the art of Metepec.

Whitcomb explains, "This unique folk art show encompasses the technical, ethnographic, and economic aspects of the art of a single town. Even more important, it considers these objects as art, not artifacts."

Sponsored through the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. John McBridge Thornton, the exhibition is curated by Linda McAllister and was designed by USD students. A catalogue will be available.

Director Therese Whitcomb hopes to continue the support of cultural exchange between Mexico and the United States.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

APR 9 1983

USD production — "Once Upon a Mattress," will be performed by University of San Diego (USD) students and alumni at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 14, through Sunday, April 17, in Camino Theater on the USD campus. A Sunday matinee will be at 2:30 p.m. Tickets cost $2, $3 and $4. Tickets will be available at the door.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 9 1983

USD Offers Unemployment Fair On Campus April 30

The University of San Diego will offer an Unemployment Fair on the campus April 30, featuring workshops, employment counselors, social service agencies and educational bodies counseling people facing unemployment.

Subjects include preparation of resumes; job interviews; debt management; family communications in time of stress, and establishing a counseling group at the parish level.

APR 11 1983

EDELMAN PHOTO !!

"Career Power" was the theme of a four-day program at the University of San Diego, highlighted by the appearance of 41 USD alumni representing 18 corporations, agencies, and professions. An estimated 1,000 students were counseled on careers and decisions. Dave Nager of Westinghouse (seated, left) and Bruce Alexander of NCR (right), discussed opportunities in the computer field with students. □

APR 14 1983

USD staging comedy

SAN DIEGO — "Once Upon a Mattress" will be presented at the University of San Diego Thursday through Sunday, April 14 through 17. Performances will be at 8 p.m., Thursday through Saturday, and at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, in Camino Theatre. General admission is $4, seniors and students $3, and children $2. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

USD Fine Arts Department faculty Robert Austin and Pamela Smith Connolly will co-direct the performance with Mr. Austin additionally providing musical direction. Choreography is by Marilyn Green.

APR 11 1983

DOWNTOWN

Friday/April Fifteen

• "Up Your Productivity," an Update Breakfast Seminar presented by the USD School of Business Administration, takes place at the University Club, 1333 Seventh Ave., 7:30 to 9 a.m. The cost is $20. To make reservations, phone 293-4585.

SENTINEL

APR 13 1983

USD holds new student orientation

College Visiting Day will be held at the University of San Diego from 12:30 to 5 p.m. Saturday, April 16 for incoming freshmen, transfer students and their families.

About 1,000 people are expected to attend the annual event, sponsored by the school's office of admissions. Parents and students will have the opportunity to meet with faculty and administrators.

SENTINEL

APR 13 1983

French artist at USD

Members of the French-speaking community are invited to attend a lecture sponsored by the Alliance Française by artist and writer Francoise Gilot Salk. The lecture, "Collette, from the Perception to the Language," will be held at the University of San Diego on Saturday, April 23 at 2 p.m. in Salomon Lecture Hall.

Admission of $3 for non-members may be paid at the door. For more information contact Dr. Jeanne Rigby at 291-6480, Ext. 4441.

The lecture on early 20th Century French writer Colette will be illustrated with slides. A reception follows the presentation.

The Alliance Française is a non-profit organization dedicated to French language.

READER

APR 14 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life, theme, will remain on view through June 10, Founders Gallery, USD, 291-6480.

THE TRIBUNE

APR 13 1983

HURRY CALL: Jill Player recently married Andrew Cotton and went to live in his native New Zealand. Her mother just received a cable: "Please rush lamb recipes."

NEWSBEAT: Try to make something of this: Maureen O'Connor and Roger Hedgecock, the candidates for mayor, were invited yesterday to a Tribune roundtable luncheon on May 4, the day after the election. Hedgecock accepted on the spot. An aide in O'Connor's office said she'd been told not to schedule anything for that day. ... Just like in the movies, Dave Copley reports: On the evening that "Porgy and Bess" had formally opened at Radio City Music Hall in New York, our city's Jack O'Brien, its director, walked into Sardi's. Supper guests stood and applauded. (O'Brien was back home at the Globe yesterday, busy with "Clap Your Hands," opening April 21. But today he was off on an overnighter in Ames, Iowa, as a member of a symposium on 16th-century drama). ... At University of San Diego, a list is in the works. Best guess so far: About 30 USD law professors and students have followed Ed Meese to the Reagan administration.

C6 Thursday, April 14, 1983

LA JOLLA LIGHT

Business

Local parishes work on 'Unemployment Fair'

By MIKE KREY

La Jollans will be instructed on how best to deal with the problems of unemployment in what is billed as San Diego's first "Unemployment Fair."

The fair will be on the University of San Diego campus on Saturday, April 30, from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

The fair is the most ambitious step yet in a program started by two La Jolla Catholic parishes late last year. The All Job Program provided the impetus for the Unemployment Fair.

The steering committee includes Monsignor Patrick Fox of All Hallows and Sara Finn, the La Jollan who organized the Job Program. Finn, director of public relations at USD, is joined on the steering committee by USD administrators Barbara Burke and Mal Rafferty.

"It's important to note that this will not be an employment fair," said Rafferty. "We can't guarantee people will find employment."

"Instead, there will be instruction on how best to seek and obtain a job, and how best to deal with the problems of unemployment."

The organizers also hope the fair will act as a launching pad for other parishes that may wish to start job programs, said Finn. The All Hallows/Mary Star of the Sea Job Program has placed 19 persons in full-time jobs and many others in part-time jobs, according to Finn.

"What we really want to do is get the word out to employers," Finn said. "Hopefully, the employers need employees, but the key ingredient is to show the interest."

Finn said she is receiving a good response from the more than 500 letters that have been sent to potential employers telling them about the fair.

Employers also have shown interest in the local job program.

The All Hallows/Mary Star of the Sea Job Program now conducts meetings one or two Monday nights a month. Through donations, the program now has an office at All Hallows staffed Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings.

The April 30 Unemployment Fair brings together many of the individual subjects that have been discussed at the job program meetings.

Rafferty said the fair is based on a similar event recently staged at Creighton University in Omaha, Neb., which attracted 1,500 persons.

Monsignor Fox said the fair is open to all interested persons.

"This is not only for La Jollans or Catholics," he said. "It's an ecumenical approach."

"Many other parishes have contacted us about our job program. This fair will be an opportunity to learn how it's done.

"Our job program has resulted in jobs, but it has also created a community spirit which, frankly, we never anticipated."

At least 14 workshops are scheduled at the Unemployment Fair. Subjects include "How to Manage Your Debts," "Consumer Credit," "Gaining Employment Through Career Change," "Dress for Success" and "A Winning Approach to Interviews."

A planning meeting held at USD was attended by representatives of 15 local parishes.

Jewish, Episcopal and Lutheran service groups are among others who have pledged support for the fair. Notices of the fair have been placed in church bulletins.

The Unemployment Fair will be at the university's Founders Hall and East Patio.

For further information telephone 291-6480, extension 4296.

LA JOLLA LIGHT Thursday, April 14, 1983

C5

Management issues focus of 'Update'

The final seminars in the University of San Diego's Spring "UPDATE" Breakfast Series will be held Friday, April 22, at the University Club of San Diego and the La Jolla Village Inn from 7:30 to 9 a.m. Telephone 293-4585 for reservations.

The spring series of eight business seminar closes with the topics "Management of Innovation and Technology" and "The Art of Managing People."

"Management of Innovation and Technology" will be held at the University Club of San Diego. Seminar leader Gary Whitney, Ph.D., associate professor of management, discusses how managing research and development differs from managing more routine business functions. Ways to manage the innovation process more effectively are provided.

The La Jolla Village Inn is the setting for "The Art of Managing People," a seminar that details how to build productive managerial relationships and suggests guidelines for building morale and influencing others. Led by Phillip Hunsaker, D.B.A., professor of management, "The Art of Managing People" is designed for persons interested in making the most of their personal and organizational productivity.

"UPDATE" is sponsored by the USD School of Business Administration and Continuing Education. Registration is $20 per seminar and includes a continental breakfast, materials, and parking.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

APR 14 1983

An update on ERISA (the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974) will be held April 23 in the Labor-Management Relations Center at the University of San Diego School of Law. Sessions are scheduled from 9 a.m. to 2:45 p.m.

Subjects for presentation including handling trust benefit claims involving participants and spouses, improving the relationship between employer and employee trustees in Taft Hartley trusts, and multi-employer withdrawal liability.

Also employee benefit plans in light of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act (TEFRA), collection of attorney fees under the Multi-Employer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980 (MPPAA) and collections.

Cost will be $30 for pre-registrants and $35 at the door and will include registration, coffee break, lunch and beverages. Additional information is available through the LMRC.

April 30 Unemployment Fair at USD

ALCALA PARK — The problems of the unemployed will be dealt with at an "Unemployment Fair" offered by the University of San Diego, April 30 from 10 a.m.-3 p.m.

Workshops, employment counselors, social service agencies and educational institutions will be represented. The fair is free. It will be held on the patio west of the Immaculate Church; if it rains, sessions will be conducted in Serra Hall.

WORKSHOPS WILL be one hour so participants can attend several. Some of the topics addressed will be writing and updating resumes, dressing for success, managing debts, handling overdue payments, and establishing a counseling group for the unemployed at parishes.

Potential employers who want to participate should contact Barbara Burke at 291-6480, ext. 4210.

The fair's steering committee includes Msgr. Patrick Fox, pastor of All Hallows Church; Father Douglas Regin, director of Catholic Community Services; Father Barry Vinyard, of St. John parish, Encinitas; and USD administrators Ms. Burke, Mal Rafferty and Sara Finn.

Steering Committee
'Problems of unemployed'

April 14, 1983, Southern Cross—3

LOS ANGELES TIMES

APR 15 1983

FOUNDERS' GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcala Park): The ceramics of Metepec, an evolutionary study of the Mexican tree of life, will be on display through June 15. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. weekdays, except Wednesday, until 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 17 1983

Founders Gallery: Arbol De La Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec. Through June 15. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

APR 19 1983

Random notes

Management of Innovation and Technology is the topic of a seminar 7:30 to 9 a.m. Friday at the University Club of San Diego. Gary Whitney, associate professor of management, is the speaker and the University of San Diego a sponsor. The Art of Managing People will be held at the same time at the La Jolla Village Inn. Phillip Hunsaker, professor of management, is the speaker. Registration is $20 a seminar. Call 293-4585 for reservations.

esday, April 19, 1983

Scene Around Town

Leslie Hughes, Jennifer Rowen, Maryann Burk and Michele Lablau, from the left, are pictures of rapt attention at Ticktockers parade.

Grant Boroff escorts daughter Stacy as senior Ticktockers were presented at Town & Country.

Phil Gildred Jr. joins family group at Gildred dedication.

Karen Strickler and ROTC Cadet Joe Kinnally, at the left, chat with special guest Maj. Gen. Calvin Franklin at the SDSU military ball.

Linda McAllister, left, and Terry Whitecomb check out some of the pieces at the reception for the Mexican ceramics show at Founders Hall Gallery on the University of San Diego campus.

Stephanie Gildred, left, and Richard and Harriet Levi at the Theodore Gildred Cancer Facility.

Tribune photos by Thane McIntosh,
Peter Koeleman
and Ian Dryden

A MILITARY ball at San Diego State University, a reception for the opening of a Mexican ceramics exhibition, a luncheon marking the opening of a new cancer facility, and the National Charity League's presentation of senior Ticktockers marked the week's social scene.

The luncheon was one of several events heralding the opening of the Theodore Gildred Cancer Facility at the UCSD Medical Center. There was a dinner Thursday, the luncheon and dedication Friday, and tours of the new facility.

Senior Ticktockers were presented in ceremonies at Town & Country Hotel, some by their fathers, others by their brothers. A fashion show with 10th graders modeling was also featured.

The reception for the Mexican ceramics exhibit also featured Mexican artifacts at Founders Hall on the University of San Diego campus.

And the San Diego State Military Ball was sponsored by SDSU, the College of Professional Studies and Fine Arts and the Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC units on campus. A former SDSU student, Maj. Gen. Calvin C. Franklin, commanding general of the District of Columbia National Guard, was a special guest.

APR 20 1983

"Management of Innovation and Technology" and "The Art of Managing People" are the subjects of this year's final University of San Diego "Update" breakfast series held at the University Club of San Diego and the La Jolla Village Inn from 7:30-9 a.m. 293-4585

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

APR 21 1983

"The Public's right to know" is to be examined May 2 at the University of San Diego in a panel discussion to bring together leaders in the fields of law, law enforcement and news media.

C. Hugh Friedman, professor of law at USD and president of the California Board of Education, will moderate the session, scheduled at 7 p.m. in Grace Courtroom at USD School of Law.

The panel discussion is to focus on a hypothetical confrontation involving the takeover of a nuclear power plant, "San Hanafi," about 40 miles north of "Santa Donna," second largest city in the state of "Golden."

Participating are to be Judges Richard Hanscom, Norbert Ehrenfreund, Gordon Cologne and Earl Gilliam. Law enforcement will be represented by Police Chief Bill Kolender and Deputy Dist. Atty. Melinda Lasater.

Other participants are to include Ed McIntyre, media attorney with Gray, Cary, Ames & Frye; Evening Tribune editor Neil Morgan; Daily Transcript city editor Gary Shaw and Stephanie Donovan of KFMB; Al JaCoby and Steve LaRue of the San Diego Union; Allison DaRosa of the Tribune; Dawn Garcia of the Oceanside Blade Tribune; and John Beatty of KCTV.

Dr. Jerry Rosander, superintendent of schools for the San Diego County Department of Education, will give welcoming remarks. James Granby, president of the San Diego County Bar Assn., will introduce Friedman and the panelists.

The panel discussion is to be among events offered as a public service during Law Week, May 1-6.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

APR 21 1983

"Twinkies revisited: Diminished capacity and insanity after Proposition 8," a symposium to assess new legal standards and their impact on the legal and mental health professions, is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. May 7 in Grace Courtroom, More Hall, at the University of San Diego Law School.

Registration for the symposium, sponsored by the law school's Center for Criminal Justice Policy and Management, is $40 per person and includes all sessions, a luncheon and written materials on prosecution and defense analyses of Proposition 8 and SB 2035.

"The Victim's Bill of Rights and Senate Bill 2035 have substantially altered the legal standards for mental defenses," said Stephen Robinson, symposium coordinator. "The implications for the legal profession and mental health community are profound."

READER

APR 21 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepex," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will remain on view through June 10, Founders Gallery, USD. 291-6480.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

APR 24 1983

President Author Hughes of the University of San Diego stood beside President Tom Day of San Diego State University with their wives to receive nearly 600 guests at the second annual SDSU Military Ball in Montezuma Hall. The joint affair (USD and SDSU have a joint Naval ROTC program) also attracted community members such as Col. and Mrs. Albert Arnheim. Maj. Gen. Calvin Franklin of the District of Columbia National Guard was guest of honor.

—WILLIAM SULLIVAN

APR 21 1983

Nuclear-arms control will be discussed by Rep. Jim Bates, D-San Diego, at 7 p.m. tomorrow in the University of San Diego School of Law's Joseph P. Grace Courtroom.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

APR 29 1983

WOMEN/ "Women: Self, Love, Work," a 30-hour program focusing on these three areas of life will be given by the University of San Diego in four sessions, April 19 to June 9, May 4 to July 23, May 23 to July 16, and June 7 to July 16. A tuition fee of $195 includes the sessions and materials. Times and locations for the classes vary. Call 293-4585 for more information.

Sports

SAN DIEGO UNION

SPORTS TODAY

● MISL SOCCER — The Sockers, gearing up for the playoffs, close out the regular season when they host the Golden Bay Earthquakes at the Sports Arena, 7:35 p.m., KSON-AM radio (1240).

● COLLEGE BASEBALL — San Diego State, rated No. 6 in the nation, hosts Texas-El Paso in a twin bill at SDSU's Smith field. First game, 4 p.m. In other double-headers, all starting at noon, Point Loma hosts Cal Baptist, USD entertains Long Beach State and UCSD hosts Southern Cal College.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 1 1983

Meanwhile, in Long Beach, the University of San Diego was hammered 10-4 by Cal State Long Beach, as the 49ers scored four runs in both the fourth and eighth innings. The Toreros dropped to 8-14-1 on the year. Andre Jacas was two-for-four with an RBI for USD.

EVENING TRIBUNE

APR 1 4 1983

San Diego Notepad

Toreros sign 4 prospects

The University of San Diego basketball team has announced the signing of four players to national letters of intent. Eric Musselman, the son of former San Diego Sails coach Bill Musselman, heads the Toreros' recruiting list after averaging 23 points and eight assists a game last season for Brecksville High in Broadview Heights, Ohio. The 5-foot-10 guard made 87 percent of his free throws as a senior.

The Toreros also signed 6-8 center Steve Krallman of Anaheim's Servite High, who averaged 18.5 points and 12.6 rebounds in being selected to the all-Orange County third team. A couple of junior college guards, Al Moscatel of Mesa College and Mark Bostic of Central Arizona College, will also play for coach Jim Brovelli next season.

LEMON GROVE

REVIEW

APR 7 1983

School Athletes Take February HoC Awards

U.S.D. forward Mike Whitmarsh and Judy Porter of the S.D. State U. Women's Basketball team were awarded Certificates of Achievement for the month of February by the San Diego Hall of Champions.

In addition, Lawrence West of the CIF 3A Champion Morse High School was selected as the Breitbard Prep Athlete of the Month. No amateur or professional Stars of the Month were selected.

Whitmarsh, recently selected to the WCAC First Team (West Coast Athletic Conference) averaged 19.0 points a game and shot 55% from the field for the conference season.

During the last 2 weeks of February Whitmarsh led his team to 3 conference wins in 4 games. He scored 100 points in those games, pulled down 26 rebounds and added 12 assists and two steals. For his efforts he was selected WCAC Player of the Week for 2 consecutive weeks. Whitmarsh graduated from Monte Vista and played 2 years at Grossmont College. A junior, he will return to the USD lineup for the 1983-84 season.

Porter closed out an outstanding 4-year career at SDSU as a holder of 20 school records. A back injury which caused her to miss 6 games prevented Porter from becoming the 10th player in women's collegiate history to exceed 2,000 career points and 1,500 rebounds. Her final totals were 2,318 points and 1,498 rebounds. For the season Porter averaged 22.5 points and 12 rebounds per game.

West led his Morse High Basketball team to the San Diego Section CIF Championship in the 3A category. He averaged 17.3 points per game and was a unanimous choice as CIF Player of the Year. Also the 6'7" senior was a third team selection to the Parade Magazine High School All-American Team.

EVENING TRIBUNE

APR 2 0 1983

TOREROS SIGN ANOTHER — The University of San Diego basketball team, which signed four players to national letters of intent last week, corralled another prospect when it announced that Nils Madden of Forestville will enroll in the fall.

Madden, a 6-foot-7 forward from El Molino High, averaged 17.8 points and 11 rebounds a game as a senior. He was first-team All-Sonoma County and runner-up in player-of-the-year voting.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

APR 1 6 1983

UC Irvine 6, San Diego 3: Cyndy Keeling led the host Anteaters to a nonconference win over the Toreros Friday.

Keeling defeated Maricarmen Casta, 6-3, 6-1. The Anteaters are now 16-10.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

APR 2 1 1983

Aztec-Torero game called

Wednesday's non-conference baseball game between San Diego State and the University of San Diego was canceled because of wet grounds.

The Aztecs, winners of 10 straight, host United States International University in a pair of non-conference double-headers Friday at 4 p.m. and Saturday at 5 p.m.

San Diego State is 39-8 and ranked sixth in the nation.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 3 1983

USD, Loyola Divide Pair

Freshman reliever Casey Morales pitched shutout ball over the final three innings to lead USD to a 9-8 win over Loyola in the first game of a double-header yesterday in Los Angeles. USD failed to get relief in the second game, however, as Loyola scored five runs in the final two innings for a 5-3 victory.

In other action, USIU also gained a split, beating Azusa Pacific 8-6 in the first game but dropping the nightcap 9-1.

UCSD, led by Keith Yokomoto's two saves, held on to win 4-3 and 7-6 in a double-header with NAIA District 3 foe Biola.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 9 1983

At Fullerton last night, Fullerton State scored after each of six errors by University of San Diego and punished the Toreros 11-1 in a Southern California Baseball Association game. Fullerton now is 28-12 and 5-1 in the conference, USD is 8-12 and 1-4 in the SCBA.

The teams play a double-header at USD today, starting at 1 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 1 3 1983

Toreros, PLC Win; UCSD Falls

The University of San Diego came from behind with four runs in the fifth inning and went on to blast host Pepperdine 10-3 in a Southern California Baseball Association game yesterday.

Johnny Mullen opened the game with a two-out solo homer in the first inning. The Waves countered with three runs in the third inning. Andre Jacas put the Toreros ahead to stay with a two-run single in the fifth.

Eric Bennett added a two-run single in the eighth as USD scored five more runs in the eighth and ninth innings. The Toreros improved their SCBA record to 2-6-1 and are 9-14-1 overall.

At Point Loma, the Crusaders improved their NAIA District 3 Southern Division record to 5-4 with a 3-2 victory over Southern California College.

Gary Page (6-5) went the distance for Point Loma (13-15-1) and helped his own cause with a double in the sixth inning. Bud Halle then came in to run for Page and scored the winning run on a one-out single by Kerry Everette.

In La Jolla, UC-San Diego did not fair as well in NAIA District 3 action, losing to Southern Division-leading Cal Baptist 7-3.

SENTINEL

APR 6 1983

Sports notes

THE USD BASKETBALL team may not have led the West Coast Athletic Conference in wins in the recent season. But the Toreros certainly had the best students.

For the third straight year, USD heads the list of players named to the All-WCAC Scholar-Athlete team. Six of the 10 players named to the squad are from USD.

Forwards Don Capener and Anthony Reuss and guard John Prunty are on the list for the second consecutive season. Joining them are teammates Dave McIvers and Mario Coronado, both center-forwards, and Brian Setencich, a forward. Prunty, an accounting major, had the highest grade point average (3.93) and scoring average (6.6).

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 1 0 1983

At the University of San Diego, Fullerton State got 12 hits off three USD pitchers to win the first game of a double-header, 11-5. The second game was called after seven innings because of darkness with the score tied 2-2.

The Toreros pulled to within 6-5 after six innings, but in the seventh the Titans Ray Roman got a two-out single and Torero pitchers Mike Fazekas and Chris Ciampa proceeded to walk the next four hitters for an 8-5 Fullerton lead.

First baseman John Mullen went 4-for-9 with 2 RBI for the double-header as USD fell to 8-13-1.

Thursday, April 14, 1983

THE SAN DIEGO UNION D-7

Musselman Among 4 Torero Signees

Eric Musselman, son of former college and professional coach Bill Musselman, was among four basketball players signing national letters of intent with the University of San Diego yesterday.

A 5-foot-10 guard at Brecksville High in Broadview Heights, Ohio, Musselman averaged 23 points and eight assists a game. He made 87 percent of his free throws last season. Eric's father has coached the University of Minnesota, the San Diego Sails of the ABA and the Cleveland Cavaliers of the NBA.

The Toreros also signed center Steve Krallman of Servite High in Anaheim and guards Al Moscatel of Mesa College and Mark Bostic of Central Arizona College.

Krallman, 6-8, averaged 18.5 points and 12.6 rebounds a game last season. He was named to the all-Orange County third team.

Moscatel averaged 14.2 points a game at Mesa, while Bostic averaged 18.5 at Central Arizona.

San Diego State made no announcements regarding signings yesterday.

U.S. International University does not use the NCAA's national letter.

BYU and UCLA have signed the two top prospects in California. BYU won the services of Mike Smith, a 6-foot-9 center from Los Altos High in Hacienda Heights, and UCLA signed guard Corey Gaines of St. Bernard's in Playa del Rey.

America's most widely recruited high school player — Reggie Williams, a 6-foot-7 forward from Baltimore Dunbar — signed with Georgetown yesterday.

Other first-team All-Americans signing were 6-5 guard Antonine Joubert of Detroit Southwestern (Michigan), 6-3 guard James Blackmon of Marion, Ind. (Kentucky), and 6-2 guard Dwayne Washington of Brooklyn Boys and Girls (Syracuse).

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 1 6 1983

Aztecs Win Two; USD Loses In 10

San Diego State University's baseball team continued its torrid pace with a doubleheader sweep of the University of Texas-El Paso in Western Athletic Conference action yesterday at Smith Field.

The Aztecs, who have now won 20 of their last 22 games, downed the Miners 4-0 and 7-2 behind the pitching of Bill Blount and Dean Armitage. SDSU is now 5-1 in the WAC's Southern Division.

At Long Beach yesterday, the University of San Diego baseball team left to Long Beach State, 8-7 in 10 innings, to slip to 9-15-1 overall and 2-7-1 in Southern California Baseball Association play.

Blount (7-0) allowed UTPEP only two hits in the opener at SDSU and received all the scoring support he required when Terry Jones singled in one run and Steve Durrett two in the first inning. In the nightcap Kent Torve was drove in three runs and Armitage (8-1) scattered seven Miner hits. Infielder Chris Cannizzaro went four-for-eight and scored four runs in the doubleheader for the Aztecs.

The teams tangle in another doubleheader today at 4 at Smith Field.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 2 0 1983

Sonoma Player Coming To USD

Nils Madden, runner-up in the voting for Sonoma County player of the year, has signed a national letter of intent to play basketball for the University of San Diego, Torero coach Jim Brovelli announced yesterday.

Playing for El Molino High in Forestville, Madden averaged 17.8 points and 11 rebounds a game last season. The 6-foot-7 forward shot 68 percent from the field and 82 percent from the foul line.

USD now has signed five players to national letters. Brovelli hopes to sign two or three more before the recruiting season is over.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 2 4 1983

USD, UC-Irvine Split Twin Bill

The University of San Diego pounded UC-Irvine 10-1 in the first game of a double-header with the Anteaters on the road yesterday. UC-Irvine came back to win the nightcap 7-2.

USD (11-19-1) moved its Southern California Baseball Association Record to 4-10-1. Eric Bennett led the Toreros with four RBI, including a three-run homer in the sixth inning of the first game. Russ Applegate went the distance for USD in the first contest and notched his third win of the season.

Point Loma dropped a double-header to Southern California College on the road, losing 2-0 and 6-1. The Crusaders are now 16-21-1 on the year and 6-8 in NAIA Division 3 Southern Conference play.

SAN DIEGO UNION

APR 2 7 1983

USD Gets Guard

Chris Carr, a 6-foot-4 guard from Santa Monica City College, will play basketball for USD's Toreros next season. Carr averaged 11.8 points per game.

EVENING TRIBUNE

APR 2 7 1983

TORERO EIGHTH

The University of San Diego's Bob McKenna shot a final-round 75 yesterday to take eighth place in the individual portion of the 54-hole West Coast Athletic Association Golf Tournament in San Francisco. As a team, the Toreros finished third with a 973 total, with the University of San Francisco and Portland taking the first two spots with scores of 965 and 970, respectively.

April 1983 (cont.)

SD BUSINESS
NEWS

APR 8 5 1983

"Effective Felony Defense," an educational program for lawyers, is being offered by USD Law Center, May 12 to June 9 from 6:00 to 9:00 p.m., at the campus. For registration call 291-6480.

SENTINEL
APR 27 1983

USD nursing school holds open house

An open house will be held at the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing at the University of San Diego this Thursday, from 4 to 6 p.m. For information contact Phoebe Lee at 293-4548.

USD faculty, students and alumni will be on hand to meet open house visitors and discuss the graduate nursing programs offered at the university. USD currently offers post-baccalaureate nursing programs in advanced psychiatric nursing, family health nursing, school health practitioner and nursing administration.

Admissions, eligibility, and financial aid information will be available at the April 28 open house.

Sentinel Wednesday, April 27, 1983 B5

USD public forum examines 'right to know'

"The public's right to know" will be examined May 2 at the University of San Diego in a panel discussion which brings together leaders in the field of law, law enforcement and media.

The panel discussion "Law and the Media in Community Crisis" will focus on a hypothetical confrontation, the take-over of a nuclear power plant, "San Hanafi", about 40 miles north of "Santa Donna" the second largest city in the state of "Golden."

The event, organized by Evonne Schulze and Bruce Braciszewski, is sponsored by the Center for Community Education, USD, and the San Diego County and American Bar Associations.

The discussion, to be moderated by C. Hugh Friedman, professor of law at USD and president of the State Board of Education, begins at 7 p.m. at Grace Courtroom, at USD's School of Law. There is no charge for the session. The general public and particularly students of journalism and law are encouraged to attend.

Friedman and the Committee for Law Education in the Community selected the panel members for their familiarity with environmental and law issues, and their role in determining their respective media's policy of coverage.

"The discussion should be hard-hitting and involving," Friedman said. "There are strong opinions going into this forum on both sides of this hypothetical disaster. I'm expecting an aggressive stimulating debate."

Participating in the panel will be judges Richard Hanscom, Norbert Ehrenfreund, Gordon Cologne and Earl Gilliam.

Representing law enforcement agencies on the panel will be Bill Kolender, San Diego Chief of Police and Melinda Lasater, Deputy District Attorney.

Ed McIntyre, media attorney with Gray Cary, Ames & Frye will be joined by editor Neil Morgan of the Tribune and Gary Shaw of the Daily Transcript.

Additional media participants will feature

Stephanie Donovan, KFMB Radio; Steve LaRue, San Diego Union; Alison DaRosa, the Tribune; Dawn Garcia, Blade Tribune; Al Jacoby, San Diego Union; and John Beatty, KGTV.

Dr. Jerry Rosander, Superintendent of Schools, County Department of Education, will give welcoming remarks and James Granby, President of the San Diego County Bar Association, will introduce Friedman and the panel members.

The panel discussion is one of the events offered as a public service during Law Week, May 1-6. Additional information on the forum can be obtained by calling 292-3753.

EVENING TRIBUNE
APR 8 1983

USD sets job fair for the unemployed

Jobless San Diegans can pick up useful information — and perhaps a job lead — at an unemployment fair Saturday at the University of San Diego.

They will have the opportunity to consult with social workers, career counselors, legal-aid professionals and potential employers. Workshops will focus on debt management, résumé writing, interview techniques and stress.

Neighbor troubles? Center wants to help

By Sue Edelman
Tribune Staff Writer

The petty disagreement had raged way out of proportion.

Finally, the 58-year-old Golden Hill landlady evicted the young man and impounded his motorcycle. A few days later last November, she was stabbed to death in her rooming house; the former tenant was arrested on suspicion of murder.

Neighbors say the emotions might have cooled and the two might have reached an accord without involving police or the courts if they had been able to take advantage of the Golden Hill Mediation Center.

The privately financed center opened Monday to resolve arguments among Golden Hill neighbors, family members, youths and adults, landlords and tenants, merchants and consumers, employees and employers. The center is in a peach-colored office in a Victorian building at 1004 24th St.

Please see MEDIANE, B-13

★ Mediate

Continued From B-1

In typical cases, residents can wrangle over barking dogs and parking spots before a neutral third person, who also is a member of their community.

The mediation is confidential, scheduled at the convenience of the combatants, and free of charge.

Sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Law and the San Diego County Bar Association, the center is designed as a people's alternative to the courts — civil, criminal and even small claims.

"We've become a very litigious society," said Carol Rogoff Hallstrom, an attorney hired by the San Diego Law Center, which represents both legal groups. Hallstrom won a $62,000 grant from the Weingart Foundation in Los Angeles to establish the mediation center.

"People have developed the mentality that when they're angry, they go into court," Hallstrom said. "We're trying to build an understanding that there can be ways to reach a more satisfactory resolution, in many cases without the cost, delays and aggravation of having to go through the judicial system."

The mediation center offers residents an alternative to calling the police when tempers flare during disputes. The police, in turn, can refer disputes to the center.

"This is the pioneer spirit," said police spokesman Dennis Johnson. "Instead of 'What is government going to do for us?' which you always hear, this is a neighborhood attempting to solve its own problems."

The program was planned by Hallstrom and a 17-member board comprising Golden Hill residents and business owners, a juvenile court judge and representatives of social agencies, the police, the city attorney's office and the probation department.

Dick Boss, a former San Francisco youth program director, was hired mainly to encourage people to use the center. Matt Leide was hired as case coordinator.

Sixteen community volunteers were chosen to serve as the mediators. They underwent 20 hours of training with a professional mediator.

Mediators listen to both sides — without deciding who is right or wrong — and assist the parties to come to some agreement, which is put in writing.

"While people may not emerge as best friends," Hallstrom said, "a workable compromise acceptable to both parties can often be worked out."

About 180 similar mediation or "neighborhood justice centers" recently have been established throughout the country, several in California.

Hallstrom chose Golden Hill for San Diego's first mediation center because she found it has an "enormous sense of community pride" and unusually great citizen involvement.

Also, she said, the community of 13,000 is rife with urban friction that mediation might easily solve.

When compared with the city average, based on 1980 Census data describing San Diego, Golden Hill has a richer ethnic mix; higher unemployment and more poverty; fewer adults with a high school education; more single-parent families; more rental units and a greater transient population; lower property value and more substandard housing; and a higher crime rate.

Since planning for the Golden Hill Mediation Center started, the county Board of Supervisors has granted the San Diego Law Center $70,000 to establish a similar center in another community, which Hallstrom is selecting.

BLADE TRIBUNE

APR 29 1983

Already has shown its muscle

USD law center fights for the consumer

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The University of San Diego's new Center for Public Interest Law burst onto the consumer-advocacy scene this month. The vehicle was the center's victory in a battle to wrest space for consumer messages in a utility company's billing envelopes.

The consumer organization has yet to be formed, but the center — drawing on the Catholic-oriented university's law faculty as a brain trust — has already shown its muscle.

When the California Public Utilities Commission agreed to allow the Utility Consumer Action Network to share the envelopes containing San Diego Gas & Electric Co. bills, the commissioners seemed to endorse the philosophy behind the University of San Diego's Center for Public Interest Law.

"In their decision," said Michael Shames, a member of the center's staff and one of the founders of the UCAN concept, "the PUC made it very clear that they really are trying to encourage public interest groups who are articulate and know what they are talking about to come before the PUC to advocate consumer interests."

Helping provide the expert input that will guide rate-payers through the maze of legalese that leaves most laymen in the dust at rate hike request hearings is what The Center for Public Interest Law hopes to accomplish.

The center was formed in 1980 to give USD law students a chance to test their wits in the jungle of regulatory law by keeping an eye on the operations of state regulatory agencies and to organize groups like UCAN.

A staff of four, headed by Robert C. Fellmeth, a law professor at USD, runs the center from a small suite on the USD campus with the help of 60 USD graduate and law students. The center also banks on USD's prestigious law faculty for advice.

Fellmeth called the formation of the UCAN, "a lesson in 9th grade civics," in which people with no money or titles came up with a new idea that gained acceptance.

"The purpose of the center is to start the idea," said Fellmeth.

"This organization (UCAN) has two functions," said Shames. "One is to provide information to the rate-payers, information that has been gathered by experts who really understand the issues and who explain the issues in (plain) English, which is unusual. And second, to play a representational role before the PUC."

The center began soliciting funds and members for UCAN as soon as the PUC ruled that space in SDG&E envelopes weighing less than one ounce is public property and may be devoted to literature from public groups.

Before any envelopes are stuffed, however, UCAN must go from the drawing board to reality. The center will pick a board of directors to organize UCAN and then will step back and let it work on its own, Fellmeth said.

Fellmeth said the center appeals to populism, which he said is as prevalent in San Diego County as is conservatism.

"People say 'Hey, I don't want to be pushed around by big government, but I also don't want to be pushed around by the big corporations,'" Fellmeth said.

San Diego County figures to be fertile terrain for the effort. Some SDG&E employees have insisted on using unmarked company cars to avoid verbal abuse about rates from irate customers.

"We are really anticipating more of the active support we've been receiving," Shames said. "When this thing was announced back in February, we started getting checks in the mail from people who heard we were planning to complain to the PUC."

"This is not an anti-utility proposal," cautioned Robert Simmons, a member of the staff at the center. "A strong, profit-making utility is in the best interest of the customer. What we propose to do is to make an effective voice available to SDG&E rate-payers."

"The whole idea is to get students involved in advocacy," said Fellmeth.

READER

APR 28 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will remain on view through June 10. Founders Gallery, USD, 291-6480.

LEMON GROVE
REVIEW

APR 28 1983

'Right to Know' Panel Set in 'Nuclear' Theme

"The public's right to know" will be examined Monday at the U. of San Diego in a panel discussion which brings together leaders in the fields of law, law enforcement and media.

The panel discussion "Law and the Media in Community Crisis" will focus on a hypothetical confrontation, the take-over of a nuclear power plant, "San Hanafi," about 40 miles north of "Santa Donna" the second largest city in the state of "Golden." The event is sponsored by the Center for Community Education, USD, and the S. D. County and American Bar Assns.

The discussion, to be moderated by C. Hugh Friedman, USD Professor of Law and president of the State Board of Education, begins at 7 p.m. at Grace Courtroom at USD's School of Law. There is no charge for the session.

"The discussion should be hard-hitting and interesting," Friedman said. "There are strong opinions going into this forum on both sides of this hypothetical disaster. I'm expecting an aggressive stimulating debate."

The general public and particularly students of journalism and law are encouraged to attend.

Participating in the panel will be judges Richard Hanscom, Norbert Ehrenfreund, Gordon Colegate and Earl Gilliam.

Ed McIntyre, media attorney with Gray Cary, Ames & Frye will be joined by Editor Neil Morgan of the TRIBUNE and Gary Shaw of the DAILY TRANSCRIPT.

Additional media participants will include Stephanie Donovan, KFMB Radio; Steve LaRue, SAN DIEGO UNION; Alison DaRosa, the TRIBUNE; Dawn Garcia, ELABE TRIBUNE; Al Jacoby, SAN DIEGO UNION; and John Beatty, KCTV.

SAN DIEGO UNION
APR 29 1983

'Unemployment Fair' Is Tomorrow

An "unemployment fair," offering free assessments of job skills and where they may be best used in the job market, is being given at the University of San Diego tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"This is for everyone who wants help in trying to find a job. We have people here to help the skilled and the unskilled, regardless of age, race, creed or anything else — we just want to help them find work," said Sarah Finn of USD, whose successful job program at All Hallows Church last year has now grown into a city-wide effort.

More than 30 corporations and businesses, plus nine vocational schools and private experts in job skills evaluations, will be at the campus to offer advice.

There will be 10 workshops.

"Everything from the printed materials to the refreshments has been donated and all the help is being given by volunteers," she said.

"And for anyone without transportation, the campus is easy to reach by bus, or car pools are being set up.

"If you absolutely can't get there, call your local Catholic church and ask them where you can get a ride," said Finn.

MAY 1983 (cont.)

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAY 1 1983

USD ORCHESTRA — The University of San Diego Orchestra, directed by Henry Kolar, will present the annual Sr. Rosal Scholarship Fund Concert at 4 p.m. today in the Camino Theater, University of San Diego. Soprano Kathleen Hannasch, pianist Amy Wayne and cellist Marjorie Hart will be the soloists in a program of works by Puccini, Gounod, Mendelssohn, Mozart, Kolar and Howard Hanson.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAY 1 1983

Founders Gallery: Arbol De La Vida: "The Ceramics of Metepec." Through June 15. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION
MAY 5 1983

Vargas Named To Head USD Law Institute

Jorge A. Vargas, an international authority on the law of the sea, has been named director of the Mexico-U.S. Law Institute at the University of San Diego School of Law.

The institute was established last fall to study the legal systems of the two nations, seeking to better understand them and reduce the barriers to trade and other relationships that the laws may hinder.

Vargas described the institute as "the only one in the country devoted to the analysis of legal issues between the two nations."

Vargas is currently a research fellow with the UC San Diego Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies, and has served as deputy director of the Office of International Fisheries Affairs, Mexico City, and as director of the International Relations area at the Center for Economic and Social Studies of the Third World.

The institute currently provides training and legal education to lawyers, academicians, students and corporate executives seeking better understanding of the relationships between the laws of the two nations. Vargas said he intends to expand the program to include a data bank on Mexican law at the USD and provide clerkships in Mexico for USD students.

RANCHO SANTA FE TIMES

MAR 23 1983

West named top athlete

University of San Diego forward Mike Whitmarsh and Judy Porter of the San Diego State University women's basketball team were awarded certificates of achievement for February by the San Diego Hall of Champions.

In addition, Lawrence West of the CIF 3A Champion Morse High School was selected as the Breitbard Prep Athlete of the Month.

Sports

SAN DIEGO UNION

EVENING TRIBUNE
MAY 3 1983

San Diego Notepad

Toreros land Thompson; 6-11 prep

The University of San Diego basketball team signed its sixth new recruit yesterday. And while it came nearly three weeks after most high school seniors began signing national letters of intent, this catch was obviously worth the wait.

The Toreros announced that Scott Thompson, a 6-foot-11, 235-pound center from Citrus Heights near Sacramento, has committed his services with Acala Park school. He was named the San Joaquin Section's player of the year after averaging 29 points and 16 rebounds for Mesa Verde High.

Thompson, who USD Coach Jim Brovelli called "the best recruit in our history," was sought by many of the West's top schools, including Washington State, USC and California. He finally chose the Toreros over Washington State and Pacific.

USD Is High On Scott Thompson, Its New 6-11 Center

By BILL FINLEY
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

Scott Thompson, a 6-foot-11 center from Sacramento who was considered one of California's top high school basketball players last season, confirmed last night he has signed a national letter of intent with the University of San Diego.

Thompson, a senior at Mesa Verde High in the Sacramento suburb of Citrus Heights, averaged 29 points and 16 rebounds a game this winter.

He was named the San Joaquin Section's player of the year after leading his team to a record of 28-3, and chose USD over Washington State and Pacific.

"I was looking for a smaller school," Thompson explained of his decision, "and I was hoping to find a place where I would get some playing time my first couple of seasons. USD was one of the first schools that contacted me — I made my official visit last fall, before the season began — and I always felt comfortable there. It's not too big, the coaches seem like good people to play for, and the program seems to be getting better every year. I just hope I can help them along."

Torero coach Jim Brovelli seems satisfied he will. "Scott's the best recruit in our history," Brovelli said, simply. "He's a big, strong, legitimate center, the kind of guy we've always needed to compete at the Division I level. I can't tell you how excited we are to sign this guy."

Thompson, perhaps the most dominating high school player in Sacramento history, was not well-known until his senior season. He averaged 18 points and 15 rebounds as a junior. In the last 12 months, however, he grew two inches and gained 30 pounds.

"I was always pretty tall," Thompson explained. "My dad's 6-4 and my mom's 5-10. I've always been taller than most of the kids my age, but I didn't start filling up my frame until the last year or year and a half. Finally, my coordination's starting to catch up with my body."

Four times this season Thompson scored 39 points in a game.

"Every time, we had a good lead and my coach took me out of the game," Thompson complained, laughing. "I begged him to leave me in for one more point, so I could say I'd scored 40, but I guess I wasn't too persuasive."

Mesa Verde reached the semifinals of the San Joaquin Section playoffs, but was eliminated by one point by East Union High of Manteca.

Thompson said he was surprised to receive the recruiting pressure he did this winter.

"I had no idea," he said. "Until this year, I always thought it was something that happened to other people. It never occurred to me that I might not have to pay my way through college. I started getting some phone calls last summer, though, and during the second half of the season I started getting them every day."

USD, Pacific and Santa Clara were among the first to recruit the 235-pounder. More recently, he received offers from Washington State, USC and California.

"Washington State was really tempting, there for awhile," Thompson said. "I was up there the night they beat UCLA, and it was something. If I could have signed that night, I probably would have. When I got home and started thinking it over, though, I started having second thoughts. And when Coach (George) Raveling left to go to Iowa, I narrowed it back down to the schools I'd been talking to all along."

This ultimately led to Alcala Park, and USD.

"This is the first time we've been able to break through and sign a well-known big man," Brovelli said. "We've come close, but always before we finished second or third, and that's worse than not coming close, because you've wasted so much time and energy."

"It was worth the wait, though, because Scott can definitely play. He can catch it, he can shoot it, he can rebound it. If we can get him the ball, he will score, that's all there is to it."

Obviously, the new USD big man is big from the ground up.

"He wears a size 16 shoe," Brovelli said. "I don't know where we're going to find shoes that big, we've never needed to before, but we'll find 'em somewhere, I promise."

MAY 1983

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

MAY 1983

Gaslamp Bazaar—The University of San Diego High School will hold its 1983 auction and dinner May 7 at 5 p.m. in the campus gymnasium, which will be decorated with a gaslamp theme. Complimentary cocktails, dinner and special raffles will precede the main auction. Reservations are limited. Donation is $50 a person. Info: 298-8277 ext. 21 or 465-3758.

SENTINEL

MAY 1 1983

Music

THE UNIVERSITY of San Diego Orchestra presents its annual Sr. Rossi Scholarship Fund concert today at 4 p.m. in USD's Camino Theater.

USD undergraduate audition winners Kathleen Hannasch, soprano, and Amy Wayne, pianist, will be the featured soloists. Hannasch will sing arias from Puccini's "La Boheme" and Gounod's

"Faust," while Wayne will play Mendelssohn's "Piano Concerto No. 1 in G minor."

The program will open with the USD Orchestra's performance of Howard Hanson's "Pastorale" for oboe, harp and strings. Professor Marjorie Hart, chair of the USD department of music, will be featured cellist in "Rhapsody for Cello and Orchestra," composed by orchestra conductor Dr. Henry Kolar, professor of music. For more information, call 291-6480.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

MAY 1983

ARBOLES DE LA VIDA

The Arbol de la Vida or Tree of Life is a ceramic fiesta of brilliant color and intricate forms. Multitudes of minute flowers and figures jostle one another in a raucous garden of Indian-Catholic narrative. This is the fantasy creation for which the potters of Metepec are famous. "Arbol de la Vida—The Ceramics of Metepec," on exhibit through June 15 at Founders' Gallery, University of San Diego, traces the development of this popular art form, which ranges from 1½ inches to 12 feet in height.

Curator Linda McAllister has brought together a historic progression of arboles that reveal a variety of religious themes. Pulche jugs, candelabra and incense burners exhibit the earlier stylistic sources of the trees. Particularly significant in this exhibit is a 36-piece cuadrilla or curing set, items designed to be used in curing ceremonies and then abandoned in the mountains. This set serves to point up the dual role of the potter of Metepec as creator of ritual arts for indigenous use and as businessman concerned with utilitarian and trade arts.

The show is unique in that it encompasses the historic, technical, and economic aspects of the art of a single town. The aesthetics of the tree of life are so central to Metepec that they encompass the entire range of ceramics produced there.

Too often folk art exhibits display works in a manner that suggests they are to be admired for their visual impact and exotic appeal alone, out of context from the environment that gives them function and meaning. McAllister has attempted to circumvent this pitfall by including audio-visual presentations and statements from the artists of Metepec themselves in her catalogue. "The Ceramics of Metepec" is a feast for the eyes and does not ignore the intellect.

Gallery hours are 12-5 weekdays; 12-8 Wednesdays. For more information call the USD Art Department, 291-6480.

—KATHRYN CALLAHAN-HENDERSON

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

MAY 3 1983

You can only guess at how they named an insanity plea symposium at the University of San Diego.

The seminar this Saturday assesses new legal standards and their impact on the legal and mental health professions after Proposition 8, the so-called Victim's Bill of Rights.

The symposium's title is "Twinkies Revisited."

C8

Sunday, May 1, 1983

Sentinel

In the spotlight

AN EXHIBITION and sale of original Oriental Art will be held Wednesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the USD Founders Hall Foyer.

Presented by Marson Ltd. of Baltimore, Maryland, the collection consists of etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, serigraphs and paintings.

SENTINEL

MAY 1 1983

Reading problems explored at USD

Parents and teachers are invited to a spring conference at the University of San Diego co-sponsored by the USD Division of Special Education and the San Diego branch of the Orton Dyslexia Society on Thursday, May 5 at 7:30 p.m. in DeSales Hall. For information call 299-4041.

San Diego State University associate professor of special education Dr. Anita Archer will present practical suggestions and information concerning children with severe reading and school problems. Dr. Archer's topic is "Assisting Your Child at Home or It's Homework Time Again." Admission for Orton members and students is $2.50 and general admission is $3. Refreshments will be served.

Sentinel Wednesday, May 4, 1983 C11

Future of education focus

"Educating Today's Child for Tomorrow's World" is the topic of the final seminar in the "Update for Educators" series held at the University of San Diego Thursday, May 19 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. in Camino Lounge.

Sponsored by the USD School of Education and Continuing Education, "Update" focuses on aspects of education important to teachers, administrators, and counselors in the San Diego area. Registration is $10 per seminar and includes presentation, materials, parking and a wine and cheese reception. For information and registration call 293-4585.

Hank Koehn, vice president of Security Pacific Bank, known for his presentations in the field of futures research, will lead the seminar addressing how schools are educating today's child for tomorrow's world and what one can do to make learning for tomorrow a reality.

Computers, the changing American family, and technological advancements in the work environment are included.

READER

MAY 5 1983

"Arms Race: Disarmament and Development," technical and political experts will speak Saturday, May 7, 9:30 a.m., room 150, Camino Hall, USD. Free. 233-3970.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

MAY 5 1983

Brass and organ concert

The University of San Diego will present a brass and organ concert and Festival Service of Vespers at 4 p.m. Sunday, May 8, in Founders Chapel.

Dirk Koman will direct the Classic Brass ensemble.

ble, Father Nicholas Reveles will play the organ, and the USD choir will present the concert with music by Bach, Gabrieli, Mozart and Hovhanness. Soprano Kathleen Hannasch will be featured in Mozart's "Laudate Dominum."

LA MESA COURIER

MAY 5 1983

Dr. Anita Archer will present "It's Homework Time Again," a workshop for parents of special education children, on Thursday, May 5, 7:30 p.m. in Solomon Hall of the University of San Diego. USD and the Orton Dyslexia Society is sponsoring the program. The suggested donation is $2.50 for Orton members and $3 for non-members.

EVENING TRIBUNE

MAY 5 1983

"Twinkies Revisited: Diminished Capacity and the Insanity After Proposition 8," a symposium by the University of San Diego, will be given from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday in the Grace Courtroom on the campus. Registration $40. Call 293-4813 for details.

READER

MAY 5 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will remain on view through June 10, Founders Gallery, USD. 291-6480.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAY 6 1983

FOUNDERS' GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park): The ceramics of Metepec, an evolutionary study of the Mexican tree of life, will be on display through June 15. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. weekdays, except Wednesday, when it is open until 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAY 8 1983

Founders Gallery: Arbol De La Vida: "The Ceramics of Metepec." Through June 15, University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

BLADE TRIBUNE

MAY 8 1983

Oriental art exhibit at USD

An exhibition and sale of original Oriental art will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, May 4 and 5, in the Founders Hall Foyer at the University of San Diego.

The collection consists of etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, serigraphs and paintings. Marson Ltd. is presenting the show, and a representative of the company will be on hand to answer questions. The public is invited.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAY 8 1983

FESTIVAL SERVICE OF VESPERS — The Classic Brass led by Dirk Koman, the University of San Diego Choir and organist Nicolas Reveles will present music by Bach, Gabrieli, Mozart and Hovhanness at 4 p.m. today in Founders Chapel, USD.

SD BUSINESS NEWS

MAY 9 1983

$2.6 million James S. Copley Library at the University of San Diego construction has been started by Dunphy Construction Company. Jonathan Tibbitts is project manager for Dunphy and Al Boreas is construction supervisor for the university. Architectural services were provided by Mosher Drew Watson Ferguson. George R. Saunders Associates provided structural engineering services and Mitchell-Webb Associates did the mechanical/electrical design. The Copley Library is scheduled for completion in December.

Free Show Tickets (See page five)

MISSION VALLEY NEWS

V. 1, No. 14

"A Community newspaper serving Mission Valley"

May 3-16, 1983

Construction begins on Copley Library

Construction of the $2.6 million James S. Copley Library at the University of San Diego has been launched by Dunphy Construction Company.

The two-story, 40,000 square-foot building will be connected by corridor to the existing campus library. Its exterior will feature precast concrete ornamentation to match the surrounding university buildings.

Jonathan Tibbitts is project manager for Dunphy and Al Boreas is construction supervisor for the university.

Architectural services were provided by Mosher Drew Watson Ferguson. George R. Saunders Associates provided structural engineering services and Mitchell-Webb Associates did the mechanical/electrical design.

The Copley Library is scheduled for completion in December, and will open to students in late January, 1984.

Scene

Landers/Movies/Theater

JOB MARKET

It's the worst in recent years for college class of '83

By Linda Dudley
Tribune Staff Writer

ALTHOUGH WASHINGTON is trumpeting the end of the economic recession, the 6,000 graduates of San Diego colleges and universities this month and next are heading into one of the worst job markets in recent years.

Armed with a storehouse of knowledge and a bachelor's degree, these new entry-level job seekers are not only finding fewer jobs, but lower salaries.

College placement officials call it a buyers' market for employers because of the depressed economy and corporate belt-tightening.

If you're about to leave the regimented campus life for the uncertainties of the business world, placement officials say, be aware that you're going to have to compete harder for a position and that you may even have to take a course in how to job-hunt.

"The class of '83 is going to have to keep its fingers crossed," said Judith Kayser, an official of the national College Placement Council.

"Graduates are very aware it's not the time to be coming out of school to look for jobs.

"Historically, there is a lag time between the first upward movement of the economy and the impact on employment," Kayser said in a phone interview from her Bethlehem, Pa., office.

Even though the economy grew at a rate of 3.1 percent for the first three months of this year and unemployment figures have been dropping since January, campus recruiting of seniors has decreased dramatically nationally. Graduating seniors are getting only about half the offers tendered as recently as last year.

A survey of the job market for local graduates revealed the following from college placement officials:

"Some local employers are finding that for the same salary they paid an entry-level college graduate last year, they can get a person with a year of work experience."

— Linda Scales, USD

"For the first time in our history, we've flooded the market with college graduates and now 25 percent of college graduates are in jobs which traditionally have not required college degrees."

— Dr. Neil Murray, UCSD

"We're telling graduates they will probably have to leave Southern California to get a job in less geographically desirable areas in order to gain that important experience."

— Merrienne Bieler, USIU

"Campus employer recruiting is off 20 percent from last year's 11,000 interviews."

— Judy Gumbiner, SDSU

"Some big employers such as McDonald's and Safeway are hiring students as young as sophomores on a part-time basis so they will have practical work experience before they graduate and join the firm full time."

— Kay Harkins, Point Loma College

But there are some signs of encouragement, signs that the job market picture is changing almost daily.

● San Diego Gas and Electric Co., which earlier had canceled recruiting on the University of San Diego campus because of a hiring freeze, conducted interviews on campus last week because the freeze had been lifted.

● The number of school districts recruiting teachers at San Diego State University has increased this year, according to Judy Gumbiner, associate director of counseling and placement. Furthermore, major department stores have immediate openings in fashion merchandising and retail management, Gumbiner said.

● George Drops, director of the career center for National University (which will award about 275 bachelor's degrees this July), sees an indication of a job market upswing in an increase in the number of employers participating in NU's informational Career Day May 20. He said the figure has increased 45 percent over last year.

Please see JOBS, D-3

USD, parishes stage jobs fair

Continued from page 1

you perceive it" either stops or continues the stress cycle. Stress is compounded when people think "It's all in the head. It's not real," she said.

The unemployed, especially those who regarded their fellow workers as "extended family," need to cultivate support groups. "Friends and family are a critical factor in preventing stress," Dr. Hall said.

"This whole fair was born out of a need for establishing community and cushioning the impact" of job loss, she suggested.

WHEN STRESS is bottled up it sometimes manifests itself physically (headaches, backaches and other ailments), behaviorally (drinking alcohol, child or spousal abuse, smoking cigarettes...) or emotionally, she noted.

"Obviously unemployment does not just happen to individuals, it happens to families," Dr. Hall said. Unemployment can bring the family closer together or can wedge it apart, she added.

Families need to understand that some unemployed persons have lost their feelings of significance, control, purpose, power, self-esteem and community. Additionally, the unemployed may have to change roles in the family while feeling like a "disruption" to the home system.

SHE SUGGESTED that families get together, with the television turned off, once or twice a week to talk about feelings. Children, who are "barometers" because they react to stress and mirror feelings long before they have been verbalized, should be a part of the discussion, she said.

Children are resilient and "have a great potential for stress management. And children can cope better with crises as adults if they are given a chance to deal with them" when they are young, Dr. Hall said.

If the family is aware of the feelings of the unemployed, it is easier to accept certain behaviors. For instance, a parent who acts autocratically to compensate for a feeling of powerlessness, can be better understood.

WORKSHOPS WERE held in classrooms in Camino and Founders Halls, and information tables were set up in an outdoor court near the Immaculata Church.

Many of the corporate participants, like Burroughs, an electronics-based information management company, were there to advise college graduates about job opportunities.

Radio Shack, on the other hand, accepted applications from non-college graduates and those who haven't had the benefit of computer training. "People with extensive computer backgrounds" know the equipment in Radio Shack stores, but they don't know how to sell computers," Thomas Preato, a district manager for Radio Shack, told one man who visited his information table.

SALES OPPORTUNITIES abounded. Herbalife, Encyclopedia Britannica, World Book — Childcraft Encyclopedia, Mary Kay Cosmetics and Yurika Foods were looking for distributors of their products.

Representatives of service agencies, including Father Douglas Regin, director of Catholic Community Services, were on hand to distribute information.

"We try to help people with problems," Sylvia Karzan, of Jewish Family Services, said. "We found most problems have to do with jobs," she added, so the social services program was expanded to include an employment counseling service which she leads.

JUST AS CCS is open to non-Catholics, JFS is open to anyone in San Diego County, she noted.

In addition to sales, health care appeared to be an open career area. Joseph Frisinger, director of personnel for Mercy Hospital and Medical Center, distributed a list of job openings which is updated weekly. Those who lamented the fact that all the openings require some training, were encouraged by Frisinger to attend community college courses.

Frisinger noted it takes just two years to train for a cardiopulmonary technician job that starts at $18,000 yearly. Some training courses take a year to complete, he noted.

OTHER HEALTH-care concerns represented were IMED, a company that manufactures medical products; the Professional Nurses Bureau, which helps find nurses, aides and companions for in-home care; Cajon Convalescent Center; and Council — Long-Term Care Nurses.

FAIR — Outdoor exhibits and indoor workshops on the USD campus Saturday were utilized by 500 persons attending an Unemployment Fair, co-sponsored by the parishes of the diocese.

Photos by Larry Plaster

Jobs

Continued From Page D-1

Kayser, of the College Placement Council, said the most vigorous signs of employment recovery are seen on the West Coast because of recent defense contracts and in the Northeast because of the high-tech industries.

The best fields to be in appear to be in engineering, computer science, chemistry, physics, geology and related technical fields.

Kayser believes the country is on the verge of a turnaround, but it may be fall before this is reflected in hiring.

"Companies which used to make four to five job offers to fill a post in competitive times may only have to make one or two offers to fill a job," Kayser continued.

Kayser analyzes survey data from 185 college placement offices submitted to the College Placement Council, a national nonprofit professional association which supplies information to employers and college placement offices around the country.

"The most important job the college graduate has this year is the job of finding a job," said Kayser.

"I have no doubt that there are graduates with bachelor's degrees working as bellhops but it may not be for lack of a job but due to lack of preparation to find a job."

"In the job market the way it is now, graduates had better be the best prepared with an appropriate resumé and excellent cover letter," Kayser continued.

"It is very competitive this year," echoed SDSU's Gumbiner.

Last year, engineers and technical graduates — which are the most sought after in terms of employment — could sit back and pick and just sign up for interviews on campus and then pick and choose from five offers, Kayser said.

"Not this year — even engineering and technical students have to go out and seek their own job."

The major for which there is the least demand, placement officials agree, is liberal arts.

"Liberal arts majors have had a tough time (in the job market) in recent years," said Linda Scales, coordinator of career counseling and placement at USD.

"We are advising these students — English majors, for example — to minor in computer science or business or to take some data processing courses. It will improve their chances of finding a job and using their skills greatly."

Scales said graduates who are having trouble finding jobs in the private sector are now turning to governmental agencies.

Kayser also recommended that graduates use the resources available to them, including the information for the asking at college placement offices, which is open to alumni as well as seniors. There are also books, classes, correspondence courses and workshops on the how-tos of job hunting. If you need help, enroll in one.

So what can graduates of the class of '83 expect in terms of pay?

For petroleum engineers with a bachelor's degree, the average is $31,000 for an entry-level position. A bachelor's degree in chemistry is worth $27,000 a year. A person with a BA in accounting can expect to start at around $18,700. Those who have liberal arts bachelor's degrees can anticipate annual salaries in only the $14,000 range.

In a survey of seniors in the UCSD class of '82, the average salary for all majors, based on 56 percent of the graduates, was just $14,800, said Dr. Neil Murray, director of career planning and placement at the university.

And entry-level salaries are down from last year. According to Kayser, the job market had softened rather dramatically for '82 graduates but salaries remained high.

"We see salaries at this point that are lower than what the class of '82 was offered," Kayser reported.

There were 8-14 percent increases at this time last year. Some of those salaries were even higher at the entry level than for employees who had been with the company for one or two years — and you can imagine the trouble that caused.

"This year even the popular engineering and high-tech fields have (salary) increases of only 1-3 percent. The business degree salaries are only up 1-2 percent over last year, which showed increases of 8-9 percent in 1982."

Not only is today's job marketing shifting, but there are indications that the expectations of employers are shifting as well.

"There's the common myth that college graduates will step into middle management right away," said Kay Harkins, coordinator of student employment at Point Loma College. "That's unrealistic and that's what employers want them to realize."

Employers are finding that if a student goes to school for six years to earn a bachelor's and master's degree that he doesn't have a realistic view of the corporate world. A student is used to having all his goals set for him.

"Employers have found

SOUTHERN CROSS
MAY 5 1983

USD, parishes host Unemployment Fair

By Sue Nowak

ALCALA PARK — Lacking the fun and carnival atmosphere of a traditional fair, an "Unemployment Fair" held last weekend under sunny skies at the University of San Diego nonetheless attracted about 500 people. Visitors attended workshops and talked to representatives of some two dozen businesses, corporations and other participating agencies.

A variety of workshops were offered every hour from 10 a.m.-3 p.m., April 30. The fair was organized by USD and several Catholic parishes of the San Diego diocese. Talks on resume writing and interview techniques were standing-room-only affairs, while most other classes were full or almost full.

TOPICS DISCUSSED were changing careers, dressing for success, managing debts and finding vocational training; Msgr. Patrick Fox, pastor of All Hallows Church, La Jolla, spoke on setting up an "employment agency" within a parish or church.

Dr. Debbie Hall, a clinical psychologist in private practice who spoke about "Promoting Family Communication in Times of Stress," focused on coping while unemployed.

Unemployment, and the stress that accompanies it, can be a "positive" experience, Dr. Hall said. Many people who went through the Depression appreciated it because they learned how to be resourceful and survive, she claimed.

"HOW YOU cope with stress and how Please turn to page 8

DAILY TRANSCRIPT
MAY 10 1983

Marshall Brown Wins USD Award

The University of San Diego has awarded Marshall Brown Interior Designer, Inc., a contract for interior design of Olin Hall, USD's new School of Business Administration. The 40,000-square-foot building will carry the early 16th century Spanish style typical of the campus. Construction and furnishings are being financed with a $4.5 million grant from the Olin Foundation of New York. Occupancy is planned for late 1984.

READER

MAY 12 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will remain on view through June 10, Founders Gallery, USD, 291-6480.

A14 Wednesday, May 11, 1983 Sentinel

Dunphy Construction Company has begun construction on the $2.6 million James S. Copley Library on the University of San Diego campus. The two-story, 40,000 square-foot building, scheduled for completion in December, will be connected by corridor to the existing university library.

Construction of new USD library under way

Construction of the $2.6 million James S. Copley Library at the University of San Diego has been launched by Dunphy Construction Company.

The two-story, 40,000 square-foot building will be connected by corridor to the existing campus library. Its exterior will feature precast concrete ornamentation to match the surrounding university buildings.

Jonathan Tibbitts is project manager for Dunphy and Al Boreis is construction supervisor for the university.

Architectural services were provided by Mosher Drew Watson Ferguson, George R. Saunders Associates provided structural engineering services mechanical-electrical design.

and Mitchell-Webb Associates did the mechanical-electrical design.

The Copley Library is scheduled for completion in December, and will open to students in late January, 1984.

Dunphy Construction Company is a longtime San Diego general contractor, developer and construction manager.

SENTINEL

MAY 11 1983

French attache at USD

Cultural Attache Claude Bouheret of the French Consulate General's office of Los Angeles will speak at the University of San Diego on the "1 Opera de Paris" on Saturday, May 14 at 2 p.m. in Salomon Lecture Hall, DeSales Hall.

Members of the French speaking community are invited to attend the lecture sponsored by the Alliance Francaise. Admission for this season's final event is $3 for nonmembers; reservations can be made by calling Dr. Jeanne Rigby at 291-6480 ext. 4441.

In his first official visit to USD since joining the Los Angeles Consulate General, Monsieur Bouheret will present slides and music illustrating architectural, artistic, historic, and contemporary aspects of l'Opera de Paris.

Leisure-2 THE TRIBUNE

San Diego, Tuesday, May 17, 1983

Here's a test, photographers: How well do you see?

A second look while composing your photos can pay off in better pictures. What makes the two pictures on the right better than their counterparts on the left? Take another look, then read below where Tribune Photographer Jerry Windle tells why it doesn't pay to "shoot first and ask questions later."

Subtract clutter to add quality

By Jerry Windle
Tribune Staff Photographer

The viewfinder is an important tool on your camera. Unfortunately, it's often taken for granted resulting in poorly composed pictures.

The reason is simple. We tend to get "sloppy" when taking pictures. We see a subject, aim the camera and snap the shutter. But, did we really take the time to look at the entire viewfinder. If we didn't, we may regret it when the pictures are processed.

One of the more common problems resulting from improper use of the viewfinder is show in the picture of the girl on the University of San Diego campus. You'll notice, in one of the pictures, there is a tree "growing" out of her head.

This is the kind of picture you may come up with when not paying attention. You concentrate so much on the subject, the tree is never seen!

The second picture is more pleasing. The only difference is a slight change in camera position.

Another problem which turns up when not paying attention is shown in the next set of pictures. A white bench in the lower right hand corner is distracting to the viewer. Again, you may never notice something like this until it's too late. A slight change in camera angle eliminates the bench.

So, what's the best way to use the viewfinder? First, select the subject and compose your picture in the viewfinder. Once you have everything you like, have focused the camera, check the ENTIRE viewfinder to see if things like trees or benches may be present. If so, change camera angle or position and repeat the process.

This is a good time to check the depth-of-field as well. Most cameras and some lenses have "preview" buttons which stop the lens down to the f/stop required. At that time, check the background to see if any unwanted items will be in sharp focus. If they are, use a larger f/stop or change position.

The viewfinder is designed to give you an idea of how the final picture is going to appear. Using the finder correctly will not only save film, but will improve your pictures.

EVENING TRIBUNE

MAY 16 1983

Golden Hill mediates its disputes

AN UNUSUAL experiment in solving neighborhood disputes without going to court is under way in one of our central-area communities.

The Golden Hill Mediation Center recently opened its doors. In its first two weeks, about 20 cases have been referred to it.

The idea is to settle minor problems such as a dispute over the neighbors' common fence or complaints about barking dogs and loud stereos. About 16 members of the community have volunteered to be mediators and have undergone training.

The mediation project, part of the University of San Diego Law Center's Dispute Resolution Center, is an excellent means of keeping neighborhood problems from further clogging our overburdened court system.

And by quickly resolving residents' complaints, the center can reduce frustrations and help keep small disputes from erupting into hostility or even violence.

Golden Hill is a good place to start. It is a community in which people of different races, nationalities, religions and economic levels live in close quarters. The mediation center can help smooth out some of the cultural clashes and misunderstandings that inevitably occur in a mixed neighborhood.

We hope the mediation center achieves its goals and becomes a model for similar centers in other San Diego neighborhoods.

Minor neighborhood disputes shouldn't wind up in court. But they are important to the people experiencing the problems and need to be resolved.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAY 13 1983

FOUNDERS' GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park): The ceramics of Metepec, an evolutionary study of the Mexican tree of life, will be on display through June 15. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. weekdays, except Wednesday, when it is open until 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAY 15 1983

Founders Gallery: Arbol de la Vida: "The Ceramics of Metepec." Through June 15, University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

La Prensa San Diego, May 13, 1983

Jorge Vargas To Head USD's Mexico-U.S. Law Institute

Jorge A. Vargas, noted international authority on the law of the sea, has been named director of the Mexico-U.S. Law Institute, University of San Diego School of Law, effective August 1. Vargas describes the Institutes as "the only institute in the country devoted to the analysis of legal issues between the two nations."

Sheldon Krantz, law school dean, in making the announcement, said that Vargas will also serve on the USD faculty as professor of law. "Dr. Vargas' achievements and knowledge are truly impressive," Krantz said. "We are convinced he will do an exciting job of building the Institute."

Presently visiting research fellow with the UCSD Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies, Vargas has served as director of the International Relations Area at the Center for Economic and Social Studies of the Third World, where he was also head of the Law of the Sea Department from 1978 to 1982; as deputy director of the Office of International Fisheries Affairs, Mexico City; legal advisor to the chairman, Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, UNESCO; and as a member of the Mexican delegation to the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea. He is currently coordinating a model program for training human resources in the utilization of marine resources, an OAS-UNESCO program to be launched in Mexico in mid-May and later to be offered in Africa and Asia.

Vargas is the author of eight books and numerous articles on international law, diplomacy, science and technology, and marine affairs. He holds degrees from the National Autonomous University of Mexico and from Yale School of Law, and was an Adlai E. Stevenson Fellow with the U.N. Institute for Training and Research and a postdoctoral fellow with the Ocean Studies Program, Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars.

The Mexico-U.S. Law Institute was established last fall by the USD School of Law to expand knowledge of the legal systems in the two countries, to undertake research and development projects emphasizing the reduction of unnecessary legal barriers to cooperation, to stimulate exchange of faculty and students, to increase the number of Mexican-American law students attending USD, and to focus national attention on important legal issues affecting the two countries. Activities of the Institute in the past several months have included training and legal education programs for lawyers, academicians, students, and corporate executives, with prominent Mexican attorneys and professors of law serving as faculty.

Vargas' plans also include: a comprehensive publication program; the development of a complete legal library, with a data bank on Mexican Law, to be housed at the USD Law Library; and clinical activities, including clerkships in Mexico for USD students.

Scene

Singles/Landers/Bombeck/Classified

★Art

Continued From Page D-1

representing animals, musicians, natural elements associated with air and water, and church officials — were whitewashed with acrylic paint and then painted with dabs of hot pink, yellow and green. They were reportedly rubbed over the patient and passed to those in attendance.

Another art form: sugar skulls, made to commemorate the Days of the Dead and given as offerings on the altars and as playful presents for the living.

These skulls, made of confections, are produced in Toluca, near Metepec, formed by Metepec potters, noted McAllister.

In the 1960s, she said, Metepec artisans made the transition from aniline to acrylic paints for greater color preservation.

As a rule, the brighter the pieces, the more recent they are. But some of the trees emphasize the natural colors of the clay. Some are done in earth tones instead of the gaudy pinks and yellows and purples that mark much of the Metepec art.

"As Californians," said Whitcomb, the USD art director, "we take the Mexican tree of life for granted. We see it around all the time. But this exhibit actually analyzes its origin."

In addition to pieces donated by Metepec artisans, USD obtained examples of this art form from the San Diego Museum of Man, said Whitcomb.

Trees of life

Forests of figurines that germinated in fertile Mexican imaginations assault your eyes with their bold, lurid colors

By Jack Williams

Tribune Staff Writer

WELCOME to the modest farming community of Metepec, Mexico, where art and culture grow on trees of life and forests of figurines sprout from fertile imaginations.

Welcome to bold, lurid colors that assault your eyes like shafts of ultraviolet sunlight and challenge your Western sensibilities.

Welcome to a world of art that is as foreign to U.S. culture as the shrill, lumbering tones of a band of Metepec natives whose music was recorded by American visitors.

Welcome to Founders' Gallery at the University of San Diego, which has borrowed a large part of Metepec and turned it into an exhibit called Arbol de la Vida, the ceramics of Metepec. The exhibit is open from noon to 5 p.m. (9 p.m. Wednesdays) weekdays through June 15.

Complete with a soundtrack from this curious town seven miles southeast of Mexico City, it is an evolutionary study of the Mexican Tree of Life — which, according to exhibit curator Linda McAllister, originated in Metepec in the 1940s.

Today, households the world over display these trees in various forms, oblivious, most of them, to their origin or significance.

The first such trees were made about 1945, according to Monica Soteno, a prize-winning potter who re-created pieces from his great-grandfather's molds specifically for this exhibition.

One of the first versions of the tree of life is a hand-modeled Adam and Eve flanking a tree whose six up-turned branches end in candleholders.

Indeed, biblical themes incorporating Adam and Eve accounted for the birth of this form of clay sculpture, according to McAllister. As acceptance spread, tastes and demands of consumers dictated other forms, and an art form spawned by Metepec's most creative citizens began to evolve.

Decorative ceramics such as black-glazed banks, water jugs, candleholders and figurines molded in the shapes of birds, animals and mythical creatures preceded the tree of life, said McAllister. Many of these also are on display among the 85 pieces assembled by USD art students and Terry Whitcomb, chairman of the university's art department.

Included in the exhibit is a 37-figure cuadrilla used as a Mexican folk custom to cure the ill. The figures —

Please see ART, D-4

Tribune photos by Rick McCarthy

A sampling of art from the Metepec exhibit at Founders' Gallery at USD — clockwise, from upper left, an overall view of the exhibit; a tree of life; figure on a rearing animal; and a ceramic mermaid.

SOUTHERN CROSS

MAY 19 1983

Catholic high schools, USD to graduate 1200

By Sue Nowak

SAN DIEGO — More than 1,200 students will graduate from the five diocesan secondary schools and the University of San Diego in commencement exercises planned this month and next.

University of San Diego High School's 282 seniors will attend a baccalaureate Mass June 15 at 10:30 a.m. at Our Mother of Confidence Church. At 12:30 that afternoon, the seniors and their parents will attend a graduation brunch at Vacation Village.

UNI HI'S COMMENCEMENT exercises in Golden Hall are planned to begin June 15 at 6:30 p.m. Bishop Leo T. Maher will be there, along with Dr. Thomas Payzant, superintendent of the San Diego Unified School District, who will deliver the graduation address.

The Linda Vista-area school will hold an awards night May 24 at 7 p.m. in the gym. Athletic, scholastic and extracurricular achievement will be recognized.

The Academy of Our Lady of Peace will have 118 seniors in its graduation class, with ceremonies scheduled for June 18 at 2 p.m. at the school's north terrace. Bishop Maher will attend. The valedictorian will be Therese Kemme, and salutatorians will be Maria Mazur and Valerie Smetona.

THE BACCALAUREATE Mass will be celebrated June 17 at 9:30 a.m. at the school's north terrace.

A mother-daughter brunch is planned for noon, June 5, at the Academy.

Scholastic awards will be presented in a formal ceremony scheduled for June 16 at 11 a.m. at the north terrace.

The 148 members of Marian High School's senior class will graduate June 10 at 7 p.m. in Golden Hall. Auxiliary Bishop Gilbert E. Chavez will participate in the commencement exercise. A baccalaureate Mass is planned for June 10 at 7 p.m. at nearby St. Charles Church, Imperial Beach.

Please turn to page 8

1200 slated to graduate...

Continued from page 1

KIM RILEY was chosen valedictorian and Madeleine Ferbal was named salutatorian for the Marian High School commencement ceremony.

Seniors and faculty will eat at Tom Hamm's Lighthouse on June 3 at noon for their senior luncheon.

Marian High School's Principal's Award Banquet honoring scholastic achievement begins at 6:30 p.m. on May 23 at the Bahia Hotel.

FORTY-SEVEN students will graduate from Vincent Memorial High School in Calexico on May 28. A baccalaureate Mass will be concelebrated by Bishop Chavez and attending Imperial Valley priests at 5 p.m. in Our Lady of Guadalupe Church. Commencement exercises will follow.

Valedictorian is Roxana Gallego and salutatorian is Letitia Tapia. Diplomas will be handed out by Bishop Chavez and the principal, Blessed Sacrament Sister Ana Aceves.

The Casino de Mexicali will be the site of a graduation dance for parents and graduates on May 29 at 8 p.m. An honors banquet, for those who have won notice for their scholastic abilities, is planned for May 18 at 7 p.m. in the school auditorium.

ST. AUGUSTINE High School for Boys will graduate 126 students June 13 at 8 p.m. at the Civic Theater, Community Concourse. Bishop Maher will preside at the commencement ceremony. Newly-elected Mayor of San Diego, Roger Hedgecock, who is a 1964 graduate of St. Augustine High, will speak at the graduation.

A baccalaureate Mass will be celebrated June 13 at 9 a.m. in the high school gymnasium. The annual Senior Breakfast will follow the Mass; it will be at the Town and Country Hotel on Hotel Circle in Mission Valley.

The University of San Diego plans to award 99 graduate-level diplomas and about 700 bachelor's degrees on May 22 at 3 p.m. in the campus stadium. The university's baccalaureate Mass will be May 21 at 4 p.m. in the stadium. A commencement speaker has not yet been named.

BISHOP MAHER will attend the graduation and the commencement for USD Law School students, slated for May 22 at 10:30 a.m. in the stadium.

MAY 19 1983

USD grads optimistic despite the world's woes

By Sue Nowak

ALCALA PARK — The economic climate and the chilling threat of nuclear war apparently have tempered, but not frozen, the optimism of some University of San Diego students who will graduate May 22.

"Being at USD you see the good side of people. I try to see the good side of things and people. I think it's a waste of time to dwell on negative things because it invades your lifestyle," Mark Chapman, a 21-year-old who majored in history, said.

CHAPMAN IS not alone in his optimism. All the other USD graduates interviewed by Southern Cross voiced varying degrees of hope for their adult lives.

"It's against my nature to be pessimistic, but it is my nature to be realistic," liberal arts major Meg Heidrick, 21, said. She admits to being worried about exchanging the relative freedom of college for the rigors of the working world.

"When you are a student you are the master of your own fate," Heidrick said. To illustrate her point, she said a skipped class only created problems for her. But in her role as student teacher at School of the Madeleine, if she didn't grade papers as expected, she disappointed 70 children.

HEIDRICK, A Catholic who was educated at San Diego public schools including Patrick Henry High, still has "strong emotional ties" to Our Lady of Grace Church in El Cajon, where she was a parishioner until she moved to the USD dorms in the middle of her freshman year.

She learned "a good sample of things" with her liberal arts major, which required study in English, mathematics, art, philosophy, sociology and a host of other subjects. She supplemented her major with courses in education and special education.

In her free time, Heidrick taught CCD for the handicapped at Camp Recreation, where she was a counselor. She worked at a retreat for developmentally disabled adults through the diocesan Office of Special Education. This year she taught CCD to the handicapped at Holy Family parish.

"I THINK my faith is going to be as much a part of my life (after college) as it has in college," she said. Heidrick thinks she'll soon work in an inner-city environment in the Northwest or on the East Coast with an organization such as the Jesuit Volunteer Corps. JVC personnel are paid a small stipend for social service work.

"I'm curious to see how I'll deal with a situation of poverty," she said, noting she was raised in the suburbs. "Yet I have this feeling that I have to see what the rest of the world is like — the good, the bad and the ugly."

Heidrick hopes a few years of work will point her in a vocational direction. Right now, she can imagine being a teacher or going to graduate school to study special religious education.

CHAPMAN IS almost positive that his post-USD move will lead him to graduate

Photo by Sue Nowak

USD GRADS — Michael Fowlkes, Mary Kovac, Meg Heidrick and Mark Chapman (from left) face their future with optimism despite the economy and the nuclear threat.

USD grads optimistic despite the world's woes

Continued from page 3

degree in international management.

WHATEVER ROUTE he takes, he'll proceed with optimism, he said. His attitude extends to his outlook on the economy, international affairs and his personal future.

"I believe the economy is getting better and there are more jobs to be had. I also have confidence in myself and in what I have learned here," he said.

He's gained a combination of the tangible and intangible skills, Chapman said. Oral and written skills came along with his history and basic education studies, while he learned about group dynamics and interpersonal relations by "going down and getting my hands dirty in activities."

HE WAS a leader on retreats, was president of the history honor society and was a coordinator for the Student Alumni Association's Career Day.

Even the reality of nuclear stockpiling doesn't worry Chapman. "The threat is there," he said, but "I don't think that man has reached the point where he is destined to kill off his own species....I may be naive, but so be it. I don't find people, in general, are bad."

Mary Kovac, 21, came to USD via the Catholic schools of Orange County. She says she's matured in her faith during her four college years.

"WHEN I came here it was my parents' faith and I thank them for that," she said, but in college she found a faith of her own. "Religion is spoken about so freely here. I wouldn't feel weird about talking about it in Lorna's (a USD eatery). There are not many universities where you can do that," Kovac added.

She plans to move to Chicago this fall school. Chapman, who plays centerfield for USD's baseball team, is a product of San Francisco Bay Area parochial schools. He had strong faith when he came to USD, he said, but it developed in his four years here. "It was nice because there was a lot of access to Mass...just having the whole attitude that the Catholic faith has on campus and the feelings that emanate from it."

His history major and French minor may not sound particularly marketable, but he has already been offered a job with Foremost-McKesson in San Francisco.

He may decline the offer in favor of going to graduate school to earn a masters

Please turn to page 8

READER

MAY 19 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will remain on view through June 10, Founders Gallery, USD, 291-6480.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

MAY 19 1983

USD Unemployment Fair a success

Editor:

Thanks to the generous outreach by the media, the Unemployment Fair, held at the University of San Diego on April 30, was tremendously successful.

Seven hundred people came seeking new knowledge from the workshops, contact with potential employers and some hope for the future. One hundred volunteers gave untiringly of their time and talents.

It is interesting to note that more than half of the unemployed who registered were skilled. Many, particularly women in their late 30s or early 40s, were seeking career changes. As one reporter wrote, "It was a fair without a carnival atmosphere." Everyone expressed thanks as they were leaving and noted that it was a very positive experience.

You brought them here from many walks of life and all parts of the county. We thank you for this contribution.

Sara Finn

Director of Public Relations

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAY 22 1983

Founders Gallery: Arbol De La Vida: "The Ceramics of Metepec." Through June 15, University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAY 20 1983

FOUNDERS' GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcala Park): The ceramics of Metepec, an evolutionary study of the Mexican tree of life, will be on display through June 15. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. weekdays, except Wednesday, when it is open until 9 p.m.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

MAY 20 1983

U.S. Secretary of Education Terrell H. Bell will be commencement speaker Sunday at the University of San Diego when a record 595 undergraduates and 165 graduate students will be awarded degrees. Bell will receive an honorary doctor of humane letters degree in the 3 p.m. ceremonies in campus stadium.

SD BUSINESS NEWS

MAY 23 1983

The University of San Diego has awarded Marshall Brown, Interior Designer, Inc. the contract to do Olin Hall, their new School of Business Administration.

SD BUSINESS JOURNAL

MAY 23 1983

EDUCATION

Jorge Vargas has been named director of USD School of Law's Mexico-U.S. Law Institute.

EVENING TRIBUNE

MAY 21 1983

Schlesinger, Bell to speak at graduations

Two prominent national figures, historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr. and U.S. Secretary of Education Terrell Bell, will be commencement speakers at San Diego universities tomorrow.

Schlesinger will speak at San Diego State University's graduation, scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. in Aztec Bowl.

Bell will give the address at the University of San Diego's commencement in the USD Sports Center at 3 p.m.

At SDSU's ceremony, a plaque will be dedicated, commemorating the 20th anniversary of President John F. Kennedy's commencement address at the university.

Schlesinger, a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian and a close friend of Kennedy, will take part in the dedication.

Degrees will be awarded to 7,300 graduates, including 5,900 undergraduate degrees and 1,400 master's degrees.

USD will present degrees to 595 undergraduate students and 165 graduate students. Honorary doctorates will be given to Craig Noel, artistic director of the Old Globe Theatre, and Sister Francis Danz, USD board of trustees member and former president of San Diego College for Women.

Barbara Allen Babcock, a professor at Stanford University's School of Law, will speak at USD's School of Law graduation tomorrow at 10 a.m. in the USD Sports Center. Law degrees will be given to 310 graduates.

The Paper

VOLUME 1, NO. 21

Golden Hill

MAY 20, 1983

Open House successful

by Jerry Bryant

"Since the Open House last Thursday, and all the publicity leading up to it, we have experienced a definite increase in cases. Word of mouth throughout the community is growing!" Center Director Dick Boss, basking in the afterglow of 150 interested, curious, and supportive visitors who swarmed over every corner of the Mediation Center during the opening ceremonies, obviously was pleased.

The open house began with greetings from Carol Hallstrom, technical advisor to the Center, who also presented certificates to the planning board members who worked to get the Center off the ground. Hallstrom, an attorney herself, also recognized the 16 community residents who completed the 20 hours of high intensity mediator training. It is these trained volunteers who will work with the disputants who come to this unique program — first of its kind in the county — for help in resolving disagreements they may have with neighbors or other residents.

Councilmembers William

Matt Liedle, Community Case Coordinator for the Golden Hill Mediation Center, who along with Director Dick Boss welcomed more than 150 folks to the recent Open House.

Jones and Uvaldo Martinez along with City Attorney John Witt were also on hand to add their support to the program.

Keynote speaker, Judge Robert O'Neill, compared the mediators to shoe salespersons who, "fit the shoes of one disputant on the feet of the other." The point of Judge O'Neill's analogy was that the vital role of each mediator is to help both of the disputing parties understand each other, and in doing so, bring about a good climate for resolution.

O'Neill concluded his remarks by noting that the Justice System is not getting the job done very well, and because this is true, neighborhood programs such as the one in Golden Hill are "so very valuable."

The Center, at 24th and Broadway, above Towne Realtors in the Fox Building, is open Monday thru Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., although mediation sessions are scheduled according to the needs of the disputing parties. Call 238-1022 for more details.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAY 20 1983

College Graduations Begin This Weekend

Thousands of San Diego college students will take part in the annual commencement ceremonies beginning this weekend with politicians, educators, legal experts, writers and an astronaut tapped as graduation speakers.

The giant San Diego State University ceremony will be Sunday at 10 a.m. in Aztec Bowl with Dr. Arthur Schlesinger, Pulitzer prize-winning author and historian, as the guest speaker.

A spokesman said the university will award approximately 6,900 bachelor's degrees and 1,500 master's and doctoral degrees; however, it was not known how many would take part in the ceremony.

Preceding the Sunday event, at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow, a ceremony will be held for the first full graduating class of the new graduate school of public health at SDSU. Dr. William Foege, director of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, will speak at the program in the campus Aztec Center.

Sunday will also be graduation day for the undergraduate, graduate and law school students at the University of San Diego.

The law school graduation will be at 10:30 a.m. in the campus sports center stadium with Barbara Allen Babcock, professor of law at Stanford Law School as the graduation speaker.

The undergraduate and graduate ceremonies will be in the sports center at 3 p.m. with Dr. Terrell H. Bell, U.S. secretary of education, as the speaker.

Honorary doctoral degrees also will be conferred on Craig Noel, artistic director of the Old Globe Theatre, and Sister Francis Danz, a member of the USD board of trustees and a former president of the San Diego College for Women.

MAY 2 1 1983

Metro

Religion/Editorials/Classified

TOP SCHOLAR
Beth Goodman is summa cum laude graduate of USD

Tribune photo by Rick McCarthy

It took 40 years, but Beth Goodman reached her goal — a college degree

By Joseph Thesken
Tribune Education Writer

Beth Goodman has reached her lifetime goal of a university degree, and she has done it in impressive style. When she graduates tomorrow with a bachelor's degree in political science at the University of San Diego, her name will be listed in the program under "summa cum laude," with greatest academic distinction.

Goodman, in her early 60s, has finished her formal education, after an interval of 40 years, with a 3.85 grade-point average out of a possible 4.0.

She will be among 760 students receiving degrees in ceremonies at which U.S. Education Secretary Terrel Bell will be commencement speaker.

"I've been getting bits and pieces of education all my life, and I just wanted to put them all together so they mean something," she said in an interview at USD.

"Really, the goal of a university degree for me is to know more. Before, it was like having tunnel vision. I knew only narrow areas of knowledge, but after the classes I've had at USD in philosophy, history, religion and economy, everything that I'd experienced before meant something."

Goodman enrolled at Palomar College in 1976, got an associate of arts degree in the paralegal program, then stayed on another two years and got an AA degree in criminal justice.

Her overall grade-point average at Palomar was 3.9, just a shade below perfect.

"I think I got a B in statistics," she said. Goodman said higher education was denied her after she graduated from high school in Massachusetts. It was during the Depression, and getting a job took top priority. She entered a business school, learned secretarial skills and did get a job, but always wanted more education.

She married and moved around the country for the next 30 years as a Navy wife, working as a secretary at the military installations to which her husband, Harold, was assigned.

When her husband retired in 1971, they settled in a home in the North County.

Five years later, Goodman made her final — and successful — attempt to get a university degree: four years at Palomar, followed by three years at USD.

"I feel it's all been worthwhile," she said. "People say to me, 'Well, now you have a degree. What are you going to do with it?'"

"My answer is: I don't have to do anything with it. Having a degree is its own reward. I accomplished something I set out to do long ago."

MAY 2 3 1983

Bell criticizes public schooling in USD commencement address

SAN DIEGO (AP) — State legislatures and local school boards "haven't been doing their duty" in looking after the nation's public schools, says Terrel Bell, U.S. secretary of education.

"If you look at the condition we are in now, you would have to conclude they have done a terrible job of it," Bell said Sunday while in San Diego as a commencement speaker at the University of San Diego.

Bell, speaking to reporters prior to addressing some 700 graduates at the Catholic liberal arts institution, said that schools in the United States were losing ground to their counterparts in Japan and other industrialized countries because of a failure to maintain academic standards.

"When 35 out of 50 states are requiring one year of math and one year of science for graduating from high school... we are not getting our money's worth — that our standards are too low," Bell said.

The 61-year-old Bell, saying that education "isn't the federal government's responsibility," reiterated his recommendations for overhauling the structure of the nation's public schools.

"Education is to state governments what national security is to the federal government," said Bell, who received the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters during his appearance at USD.

Bell called for changes in the way teachers are hired and was critical of the current practice of paying public school teachers according to their years of experience and the number of college credits earned, with no other opportunities for advancement.

With that system, he said, "the terrain is so flat as far as a challenging opportunity to be recognized or rewarded for your efforts."

He also recommended that a "master teacher" classification be established for those who excel in their jobs. Such teachers would be paid more in recognition of their superior accomplishments, he said.

Making frequent references to last month's blue-ribbon commission report that said there was a "rising tide of mediocrity" in America's public schools, Bell suggested that the school year be lengthened and about 1½ hours of instruction be added to the school day.

MAY 2 3 1983

Bell disavows federal blame for woes in education

By Joseph Thesken

Tribune Education Writer

U.S. Secretary of Education Terrel Bell has placed the blame for the sorry state of the nation's educational systems at the feet of the state governments and local school boards.

Bell, in a news conference before his commencement address at the University of San Diego yesterday, said it is not the federal government's role to take a leading hand in strengthening the system.

Referring to the recent report of the National Commission on Excellence in Education, which charged America's education "is being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity," Bell said:

"Education is the first responsibility of the state. You have to conclude (after reading the commission report) that the state is doing a terrible job of it. It isn't the federal government's job to intercede in this matter."

At San Diego State University's commencement yesterday, Pulitzer

TERREL BELL
States do "terrible job"

Prize-winning historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr. warned the university's 7,400 graduates that their futures are threatened by a nuclear arms race that could spell the end of civilization.

Please see EDUCATION, A-10

READER

MAY 2 6 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will remain on view through June 10, Founders Gallery, USD. 291-6480.

MAY 2 5 1983

Bell Pushes Education Reform Plan

Issues Warning, Accepts Honorary Doctorate At USD

By JIM OKERBLOM
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

U.S. Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell brought his crusade for dramatic changes in the nation's public educational system to San Diego yesterday, warning that the United States is rapidly losing ground to Japan and other industrialized countries because of failure of our schools to maintain academic standards.

Echoing comments Saturday by President Reagan, Bell said, "I agree that when 35 out of 50 states are requiring one year of math and one year of science for graduating from high school, that we are not getting our money's worth — that our standards are too low."

Noting that education "isn't the federal government's responsibility," Bell had harsh words for state legislatures and local school boards, saying they "haven't been doing their duty" in watching after the nation's schools. "If you look at the condition we are in now... you would have to conclude they have done a terrible job of it," he said.

Here for a commencement speech and to receive an honorary doctorate from the University of San Diego, an independent Catholic liberal arts institution, Bell, 61, met with reporters for nearly an hour before the ceremonies. He elaborated on recent recommendations he has made for overhauling the nation's public schools, calling for changes in the way teachers are hired and paid, a longer school day and year, stricter graduation requirements for both students and teachers-to-be, and more "creativity" by state governments in implementing reforms.

(Continued on A-6, Col. 1)

Monday, May 23, 1983

Education Secretary Bell Pushes Reform Plan

(Continued from A-1)

Bell was particularly critical of the current practice of paying public schoolteachers according to their years of experience and the number of college credits earned, with no other chance for advancement. With that system, he said, "the terrain is so flat as far as a challenging opportunity... to be recognized or rewarded for your efforts."

He repeated his recommendation that a "master teacher" classification be established for those who excel on the job. Such a teacher would be paid more than others in recognition of superior ability, Bell said.

Some educators have questioned the "master teacher" concept, however. Arguing that teachers have vastly different styles and approaches to their job, they question what criteria would be used to select a "master teacher" and ask who would do the selecting.

Bell said some critics "make a great big deal" out of the difficulty of judging what precisely makes a good teacher, but he dismissed the criticism as unfounded. "We're making those decisions every day," he said. "We know who the best teachers are, just as we know who the best principals are."

Bell recommended that a "peer review" process be set up at the elementary and high school level, similar to that used by colleges and universities to award full professorships. With such a plan, a panel composed of school administrators and teachers would review the qualifications and accomplishments of "master teacher" candidates, he said, and then make recommendations to the school board. The panel, he said, also could interview applicants for teaching jobs.

In order to encourage school districts to adopt such a concept, Bell said states should set aside funds that by law could be used only for "master teacher" programs. "There's nothing wrong with the state legislatures being more creative," he added.

Frequently referring to a report issued last month by a blue-ribbon commission on education that noted a "rising tide of mediocrity" in the nation's public schools, Bell said the school year should be lengthened and about 1½ hours should be added to the typical school day. He called for parents to pressure local school boards to raise graduation requirements. "They (school boards) can set those requirements at the next board meeting — if they will," he said.

Bell, who was appointed by Mr. Reagan in 1981, agreed with the President's comments in a speech Saturday that no more federal tax dollars should be spent on schools, but acknowledged that the states will have to spend more.

"Anyone who says you can implement all of the recommendations of the (blue-ribbon) commission without more money simply hasn't thought it through," he said. "It comes out of the taxpayer's pocket. Don't think if we leveled it on the federal level, it's going to be painless."

He added, "We ought to get the reforms and the changes that are necessary before we put more money (into schools)."

Bell, whose 12-year-old son attends a public elementary school in Arlington, Va., acknowledged that he has frequently been criticized by public school educators for his support of federal tuition tax credits for private schools.

"They think (my support) is just because I'm in the Reagan administration," he said.

Critics say tax credits would harm public education by encouraging parents to enroll their children in private schools, leaving the public schools to handle students who are less motivated, are from low-income families or are discipline problems. Bell disagreed, pointing out that the credits proposed would be small: $100 for the first year, $200 for the second year and $300 thereafter.

"I don't think it (tax credits) is going to harm the public schools," he said. "I think the public schools can be competitive."

While Mr. Reagan in several speeches about school reform has mentioned allowing voluntary school prayer, Bell distanced himself from those remarks.

"It's a different issue," he said. "It doesn't relate to what we're talking about here — excellence in education."

"The President," he added, "feels the schools ought to have the same rights as are offered in other public places."

Our Town

Nice People There's something special about scholarship winner

By Jean Henshaw
The Times-Advocate

The chairman of the scholarship committee calls her a "rare individual."

Her mother thanks "God every minute."

But Martha Aldana — who is this year's recipient of the Escondido chapter of the American Legion's Caralun-Nuelle Memorial Scholarship award — couldn't come up with an answer to "Why do you think you won?"

She hemmed. She hawed. She truly thought about it. She finally sighed and giggled, "Oh, I don't know."

But A.P. Sarno, chairman of the Escondido's American Legion J.B. Clark Post 149's scholarship committee, knows.

Of the 17 applicants for the lodge's annual $500 scholarship, Martha scored the highest number of points. Sarno says Martha was scored on such items as her grade point average (4.0 out of a possible 4.0), teacher evaluation, her financial need, her reason for applying for the scholarship, the number of her outside activities, her industry and initiative, the number of children in her family, her college choice — whether it be public or private.

"There's lots to be said for this young lady," says Sarno. "A lot of young people her age tend to run with the crowd, like sheep. Martha doesn't run with the crowd. She has gone her own route. Her grades show it — you can't get any better. She didn't let peer pressure get to her. She can go anywhere she wants to."

Martha, 17, plans to attend the University of San Diego in the fall and major in Special Education.

"I'm pretty sure that's what I want to do," she says.

Her father, Jesus, was a bus driver for special education students for many years, she says. She watched those students, learned from them. Decided this was for her. So now she's tutoring a blind student in an advanced placement history class at Orange Glen High School.

Martha Aldana stands out from the crowd.

"I took the course last year. And then I found out that a blind student wanted to take the same course this year. So I help him. I take notes during class and help him with the homework," she says. "He's doing real well, too. He's getting A's."

"I've learned how easy we have it at times," she continues. "They (handicapped individuals) have to do so much more work. They have so much more perseverance."

Martha's mother, Maria Louisa, says her husband has always told their children "You have to try your best."

She says all four of her children (of whom Martha is the oldest) are doing well in school.

"Between my four children, they've received 12 awards for outstanding student or for scholarship," Mrs. Aldana says. "And all four of them got Rotary Club awards" at some time in the past few years.

"I thank God every minute," she continues.

Mrs. Aldana is happy with her daughter's choice of college and major.

"I really love it," she says of USD. "And I agree 100 percent" with Martha's choice to study special education.

"Martha knows there's not money to make there. But Martha says, 'I know I won't make money, but I want to be happy.'"

Bell Critical of Nation's High Schools

Graduates at USD Hear Address by Education Secretary

By DAVID FREED,
Times Staff Writer

Echoing sentiments expressed by President Reagan the day before, U.S. Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell chastised the nation's high schools Sunday, criticizing educators who "aren't expecting enough" from students.

Speaking with reporters before a commencement address at the University of San Diego, Bell also laid blame for America's educational woes with state legislators and school board members who, he said, have let the nation's intellectual resources wane.

Bell, upon whom USD administrators conferred an honorary doctorate degree in part for his "adherence to value-centered convictions," advocated expanding the academic year and stretching each school day an additional 1½ hours.

"When 35 of the 50 states require only one year of high school math to graduate, I'd say we've got problems," Bell observed. "We're not getting our tax dollar's worth."

Reagan asserted just that Saturday during a commencement address at Seton Hall University in New Jersey, where the president called for a grass roots campaign that would unite parents, teachers and concerned citizens in restoring quality to education.

In April, a special commission appointed by the Reagan Administration issued a controversial report suggesting American academics are "being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a national and people."

However, Bell said Sunday he doesn't believe the salvation of education can be found with the federal government.

"The federal government does have a responsibility, yes, but it is to supplement, not supplant," said Bell, who has argued without success that the Department of Education be abolished and replaced with a less formal foundation.

"Education is to state government what the federal government is to national defense," he said. "If there's a new computer program in a Georgia high school, schools in San Diego should know about it, but that doesn't mean the federal government should necessarily become involved."

Speaking later under cloudless skies to a warmly receptive audience of 760 graduates and about 3,500 of their friends and family members, Bell singled out California's state government and academic community as having problems dealing with education. He said California's academic institutions are regarded as among the nation's best, but "have been slipping a bit" of late.

He noted that under Reagan's policies, economic recovery is occurring as USD's class of 1983 enters the job market in search of work. Bell urged USD's graduates to seek teaching jobs, pointing out that a growing number of the nation's brightest degree holders are shunning academia in search of better paying employment.

Bell's words of advice apparently were not lost across town in graduation ceremonies at San Diego State.

Please see SPEAKER, Page 3

Los Angeles Times

SPEAKER: Schlesinger Assails Reagan

Continued from First Page

University, where officials announced that the 1983 class valedictorian, Patricia Sue Iler, plans to become an elementary school teacher. Iler was among more than 7,300 students who graduated Sunday from SDSU.

While Bell defended Reagan's policies to USD graduates, SDSU's graduating class heard historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr. accuse the administration of mismanagement, wars with the Soviet Union. Schlesinger said Reagan officials have failed in their efforts to embrace the "art of diplomacy."

Schlesinger said, "When I hear Reagan officials trying to sound like the late British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, I am reminded of Mark Twain's response after his wife tried to cure him of swearing by issuing a string of oaths herself: 'You got the words right, but you don't know the tune.'"

Addressing a crowd of about 20,000 in the Aztec Bowl football stadium, Schlesinger said Reagan's recent description of the Soviet Union as an "evil empire" warns of a holy war, presenting the Kremlin "with an unequalled and undeserved opportunity to appear reasonable and prudent."

"In particular, the American dash into ideology promotes a major Soviet objective, the turning away of Western Europe from the alliance with the United States and the isolation of our country in a world that is losing confidence in the judgment and sobriety of our leaders," Schlesinger said.

During SDSU's graduation ceremonies, Schlesinger helped dedicate statues commemorating the first honorary doctorate awarded by the California State College system. The degree was given by SDSU to President John F. Kennedy in 1961.

Schlesinger is a professor at City University of New York since 1966. He has written books on John and Robert Kennedy, the biography on the president, "A Life in the White House," and the White House edition of Schlesinger's Pulitzer Prize in 1966.

Brock Alan Arstiff, top left, couldn't hide his joy at graduating and had a Teddy Bear atop his mortarboard as he listened to Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell, top right, give the commencement address at the University of San Diego. A crowd of 3,500 heard Bell talk to the 760 graduates. Among those in the audience were, at right, Sister Sally Furay, vice president and provost of the school, and R. Craig Noel, executive producer of the Old Globe Theatre, who received an honorary doctor's degree.

Photos by BARBARA MARTIN
Los Angeles Times

*Education

Continued From Page 1

"Mankind has no choice but to find ways to crawl back from the edge of the abyss and to move toward the extinction of the arms race," he declared.

Bell sharply attacked what he described as major weaknesses in the nation's education system.

"Our standards are too low," he said. "Students should be pushed to their educational limits, rather than allow them to lag in classroom performance."

"We need to change many things. The local school boards should increase high school requirements, for one. They could increase the school day and the school year."

"I hear some people say we (federal government) are not paying enough on education. I don't think we should spend more money until we change a few things, like the single salary schedule for teachers."

"Everywhere in the United States, teacher salaries are fixed on their years of experience and number of credits earned. This isn't right. There is no incentive (of the teachers) to perform well."

Bell advocated instead a system incorporating a "master teacher" pay scale that would reward teachers for their excellence in the classrooms, rather than for the years in the profession.

He acknowledged that teachers' pay is too low and should be raised.

"We don't have the teaching talent we need," he said.

"We're not drawing from the pool of bright and talented students. They're going to better-paying jobs."

Both Bell and Schlesinger proved popular with the graduates, as they sprinkled good-humored comments throughout their speeches.

But Schlesinger struck a serious theme in his remarks, as he related what the late President John F. Kennedy said in 1961, "Mankind must put an end to war, or war will put an end to mankind."

Schlesinger, a close friend of and special adviser to Kennedy, rapped the Reagan administration for its handling of relations with the Soviet Union and what he termed its unwillingness to negotiate a nuclear arms treaty.

"So our national leadership today, inflamed by ideology, portrays the world conflict as a holy war," he said. "The Soviet Union, our president proclaimed at Orlando, is an 'evil empire, the focus of evil in the modern world.'"

"Accommodation is presumably out. Compromise with evil surely risks the loss of our immortal souls."

He continued: "Under the hypnosis of ideology, some in Washington plainly see an unlimited nuclear arms race, not as an appalling threat to the survival of humanity, but simply as a fine way to do the Russians in."

"Either they will try to keep up with us, which will wreck their economy, or they will fail to keep up, which will give us the decisive military advantage."

"To have an arms control agreement, these ideologues believe, would be to renounce 'our most potent weapon against the empire of evil,' he said.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

MAY 26 1983

Robert D. Kirstein

A memorial mass for Robert D. Kirstein will be said at 2 p.m., Monday, May 30, at All Hallows Catholic Church.

Kirstein, the brother of La Jolla resident Sara Finn, died May 21 in Los Angeles. He was a frequent visitor to La Jolla.

He is also survived by his wife, Eve Kirstein; his mother, Freda Sheils; and a brother, Michael Sheils.

Donations may be made in Kirstein's name to the Father Carrier Scholarship Fund at the University of San Diego.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAY 27 1983

FOUNDERS' GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park): The ceramics of Metepec, an evolutionary study of the Mexican tree of life, will be on display through June 15. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. weekdays, except Wednesday, when it is open until 9 p.m.

Bishop Maher, Sec'y Bell address USD grads

ALCALA PARK — "Without an historical perspective one is, in a way, a prisoner of his time," Bishop Leo T. Maher said in afternoon commencement exercises May 22 at the University of San Diego Stadium. Earlier in the day he addressed the law school graduates at a separate ceremony.

A record 595 undergraduates and 165 graduates were eligible for degrees at the afternoon ceremony, at which Dr. Terrell H. Bell, the secretary of education, also spoke.

THE SCHOOL of Law commencement address was delivered by Barbara Allen Babcock, professor of law at Stanford and a former assistant U.S. attorney general.

In his afternoon address, Bishop Maher warned that "historical ignorance tends to breed bigotry and intolerance." He concluded his talk on an upbeat note: "But to master one's intellectual and one's ritual traditions is to acquire a certain intellectual strength which can only produce moral dividends."

"Such dividends give self-knowledge which may be regarded in this divided world as the first step toward self-preservation. This university has given our graduates such knowledge," he concluded.

USD GRADUATION — Bishop Leo T. Maher was busy last Sunday handing out diplomas at the University of San Diego Stadium as more than 650 students received their degrees.

IN HIS Law School address he said the cliché that morality cannot be legislated is a "half-truth." He admitted "one cannot create moral conviction by law, but one can promote and support it by law."

As an example, he pointed toward the pastoral on war and peace just adopted by the U.S. bishops. "In simple terms, we are saying that good ends cannot justify immoral means...We proclaim peace-making is not an optional commitment. It is a requirement of faith."

Those who claim that morality cannot be legislated would protest if that idea were applied to the area of justice, he theorized. "Justice is a moral value," he said, but few would argue that things like social legislation and civil rights laws "represent an undue intrusion of government legislating morality."

THE BISHOP warned that citizens who cannot agree about what is right and wrong and who have lost all sense of personal moral responsibility "are well on the way to being ungovernable."

"It should be remembered that law is not something purely negative which is constantly forbidding, restraining and prohibiting. Properly understood and properly used, law should be a source of guidance and inspiration."

S.D. Colleges Tackle Student Drinking Problem

Programs Aimed at Awareness Rather Than Abstinence

By LANIE JONES,
Times Staff Writer

It was the campus police chief remembers with some pain, "one of those things where kids set out to get drunk."

A year ago last April, students at UC San Diego held what they called their second annual "FogCutter Party."

In the event, authorized by the student government, about 500 students gathered one Saturday afternoon on an outdoor patio.

There, on a woody campus that is better known for serious scholarship than wild parties, the students danced to a rock 'n' roll band, drank countless gallons of a potent alcoholic brew (the legendary FogCutter) and held contests to see who could drink the most.

The result of this springtime exuberance was that, soon after midnight, three campus police officers—the only ones on duty at the time—had their hands full ferrying drunk, sick students back to their dorms.

"We had students passing out all over campus," Hugh French, campus police chief, remembered with disgust, noting that one student threw up in one of his patrol cars.

Still, French was philosophical as he discussed the event. It could have been worse, he said, at colleges where similar events have been held, students have died of alcohol poisoning. But campus administrators—Chief French included—did not dismiss the FogCutter incident as a case of college hijinks.

Instead, Joseph Watson, UCSD's vice chancellor of undergraduate affairs, directed a campus Committee on Alcohol and Substance Abuse Education to investigate exactly what had occurred and why.

The committee's finding: The university had a drinking problem.

The problem was clearly serious, Watson said—although probably no more so than that on most American campuses.

Still its indications—occasional vandalism, students drinking heavily in public or holed up alone in their dorms with several six packs—pointed to a need for action.

Nobody had really looked at the issue until the FogCutter party, said Warren O'Meara, the doctoral intern in psychology who headed Watson's committee.

While UCSD's academic stature had grown rapidly during its 19-year existence, its approach to campus social problems had not kept pace, O'Meara and other campus officials said. With the FogCutter incident, educators suddenly realized, "Well, whoa. Wait a minute. What else do we need to do?" O'Meara said.

Following the example of more than 150 colleges and universities around the country, UCSD has spent this year taking a hard look at its campus alcohol problems and how best to handle them.

Its strategies so far have included new alcohol counseling programs for students and an "Awareness Week" in April for the entire campus that featured lectures to medical students and sobriety tests in the campus pub.

Locally, San Diego State University and the University of San Diego also have alcohol education programs.

SDSU's effort has lacked campus-wide coordination for about a year—ever since a previous health services director, the program's prime mover—left the university, several campus officials said.

Efforts Continue

But the university, which has a reputation as "the party school" in San Diego, still offers infrequent seminars to fraternities, sororities and dorm residents. It also runs therapy sessions for the children of alcoholics.

The most extensive program in San Diego appears to be the 3-year-old effort at the private University of San Diego.

In addition to an assortment of workshops, a counseling program and a staff member assigned to coordinate alcohol education efforts, USD students have an active

Please see DRINKING, Page 3

DRINKING: Dramatic Incidents Spurred Action on Campuses

Continued from First Page

BACCHUS club, a local chapter of the national alcohol education organization run by and for students.

The concern about campus drinking indicates a sharp shift in attitudes toward alcohol, on campus and off. Several campus administrators agreed that 20 years ago, or even 10, occasional excessive student drinking was considered part of the college tradition, disruptive at times but generally best ignored.

But by the late '60s and early '70s, as drugs replaced alcohol on campus, public perceptions began to shift, said Thomas Cosgrove, associate dean of student affairs at the University of San Diego.

Drug Problem

"The drug problem focused public attention on drugs as a problem," he said; the public reaction then was, "Well, everybody drinks. But, Good Lord! Drugs!"

As drug use began to decline in the mid-'70s, there came a new realization. "It may be, in retrospect, that that's about the time all these various studies of alcohol on campus began to be generated," Cosgrove said. "People began to face the fact that alcohol, too, is a drug."

And not just any drug, educators said, but "the drug of choice" among students and the general population. Dramatic incidents like the FogCutter party also mobilized university administrators. At SDSU, for instance, the first alcohol workshops and educational films were offered soon after a 1979 incident in which an 18-year-old freshman nearly died of alcohol poisoning.

The youth won a fraternity's Mexican Night tequila "shooter" contest by consuming 24 shots of tequila before passing out, said Douglas Case, SDSU's adviser to fraternities. The next day, when the still-comatose student had his stomach pumped at a local hospital, his alcohol content was found to be .37%, Case said, adding that a rating of .4% to .5% is usually lethal.

Recent studies also have shown that student drinking has different characteristics from that in previous decades. For one thing, said USD's Cosgrove, students appear to be drinking at an earlier age and often are entering college with experiences in drinking. One of the first jobs of most campus alcohol education programs has been to find out just how much experience.

At the University of San Diego, for instance, a 1981 survey of 700 students showed that 95%—freshmen through seniors—drank.

Of those, 8% to 10% indicated they were "problem drinkers," that they consumed excessive amounts of alcohol, had had blackouts related to alcohol use, or that they had been arrested for driving while intoxicated, according to Gae Soroka, a USD special projects coordinator who runs the college's alcohol program. She said the USD survey findings were consistent with those at other colleges.

UCSD Survey

At UCSD, O'Meara ran his own survey in November, 1982. The results from the 283 Warren College students who responded:

—When students drank—usually on Friday or Saturday night in their dorms or apartments—they consumed an average of 3.29 alcoholic drinks;

—Twenty-eight percent said they mixed alcohol with other drugs, most often marijuana or cocaine;

—Thirty percent said they had driven a car after heavy drinking;

—Thirty percent knew of a fellow student who had problems drinking;

—Sixty percent said they believed college life and pressures cause today's college students to drink.

O'Meara also said his results were similar to national data. And they shocked some university officials just as the FogCutter party had. Still, noted Vice Chancellor Watson, the incident and the evidence together led the alcohol abuse committee to focus on campus alcohol use in a new way.

For the first time at UCSD, a campus committee addressed concerns about alcohol use and abuse with an explicit philosophy, and with a concept of involving the entire campus—students, faculty and staff—in solutions, Watson said.

At the outset, the committee's goal was not to ban alcohol use from campus but to promote educated use.

"We are not teetotalers," O'Meara stressed. "We are not trying to encourage abstinence. That's ridiculous. But we want people to know if you have a problem, here's where you can get help. If you don't know much about it, here's where you can get information."

For a first-year program, the committee's efforts were ambitious. It studied campus alcohol—use programs around the country through a scholarly search of literature, and by contacting other campuses with model programs.

In the university's counseling services, a therapy group was created for students who were children of alcoholics and thus considered high risks to become alcoholics themselves. The university also began its first student chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Week of Activities

And, almost exactly one year after the FogCutter party, O'Meara's committee sponsored a week of activities.

While the program was poorly publicized, from 60 to 90 people a night took breath and field sobriety tests administered in the campus pub by a UCSD police officer, O'Meara said. Several dozen professors, doctors and staff members also attended lectures on alcohol use and abuse.

And, at the end of the week, more than 500 people danced to rock music and drank soft drinks at a "dry" TGIP party that replaced UCSD's regular beer-and-band party in the main gym.

The point was to educate, not proselytize, O'Meara said. Other campuses take the same view.

USD bars alcohol from its campus but assumes its students will drink elsewhere anyway. "Students don't spend their entire time on campus," Cosgrove said. So, as an educational institution "it behooves us to provide them with information about alcohol." The guideline or "buzzword" about its use, he said, is "responsible drinking."

At SDSU, fraternity adviser Case consciously soft-pedals his alcohol educational program. He offers films, talks and a true-false questionnaire on alcohol use (which students usually flunk) only if fraternities ask for them.

"I think it's better received when they don't see it pushed down their throat," Case said. "The whole design of the program is non-judgmental." His focus is also on responsible drinking or drinking problems, Case said. The word alcoholism is rarely used "because people think of skid row bums and so forth."

On a campus of 30,000 students, Case's effort is not large-scale. He took his program to only three fraternities this school year.

But, "I look at it this way," Case explained. "If we're successful in getting one individual from getting behind the wheel of a car when he's drunk, if we get people to stop and think, if we get someone who may have a drinking problem to seek assistance . . . it's worth it."

No Hard Data

The impact of campus alcohol-education efforts is extremely difficult to measure. Again and again college administrators said they could talk of impressions but not hard data.

At both USD and UCSD, officials spoke of "a growing awareness" about drinking. "We have noticed students have the right jargon down," said USD's Soroka.

"Students know what 'responsible use' is. And if a party is on campus (students may receive special permission to have alcohol on campus), they know how much they should have per student—no more than two drinks an hour and two to three drinks per person . . . And they know to cut off the drinking at a certain time."

Please see DRINKING, Page 5

DRINKING: USD Program Extensive

Continued from Third Page

But, Soroka continued, "Whether we have impacted student drinking is questionable . . . Most research shows there's really not a whole lot of impact because these are things beyond the university's control. The drinking age and society's attitude toward drinking are beyond the scope of the university's control."

Programs to Continue

Campus officials said they find even their sparse results encouraging enough to warrant continuing and expanding the programs. Officials from all three San Diego schools said they would like to plan stronger programs for faculty and staff as well as students.

However, for budgetary reasons—and perhaps, what UCSD's O'Meara termed "resistance" from faculty and staff—those officials were not optimistic about prospects for broadening their programs.

At SDSU, for instance, a fledgling campuswide education effort reportedly lost momentum a year after it began. The reason was that its instigator, Dr. David Bearman, student health services director, resigned in 1982 for another job.

After a period without a full-time director, Bearman's replacement arrived this winter only to face threats of major budget cuts and layoffs in his division.

"We were in sort of a beginning phase (in campuswide alcohol education)," said Melodee Arnold, a counselor and registered nurse who runs counseling programs for children of alcoholics at the student health services center. "Then the health services had all the financial cuts. It looks like (the broad-based effort) is going down the tubes."

Question of Time

At USD, administrators believe their student education effort is strong. But "in terms of a specific program for faculty we haven't gotten there yet . . . I suppose it's just a question of time," Cosgrove said.

At UCSD, administrators are enthusiastic about their first year of a major alcohol education effort. But its scope for next year is unclear at the moment.

O'Meara's alcohol and substance abuse committee was temporarily disbanded in late April, after it sent UCSD Chancellor Richard Atkinson a series of recommendations for a permanent program.

Among campus needs listed in the report were a thorough study of UCSD's policies toward alcohol, a confidential alcohol assistance program for all university employees (located away from UCSD's personnel office where a related program is now housed) and a counselor hired to coordinate and run programs for faculty, students and staff.

Future Uncertain

Atkinson this week still had not acted on the recommendations. Meanwhile O'Meara's doctoral internship has run out, and it is not clear whether he will be hired at UCSD as an alcohol abuse consultant.

"I haven't heard one word about what they're going to do," O'Meara said this week, sounding discouraged. Still, he added in a more cheerful tone, he believes the student program and the alcohol awareness week will continue.

"I feel you have to start somewhere and I've started. I'm still very enthused . . . You just get into a thing called money."

Vice Chancellor Watson agreed that budgetary limits probably will decide whether UCSD runs a campuswide alcohol education program next year, or whether the program will be confined to students.

Also, he said, UCSD has a tradition of educating students in non-academic subjects such as alcohol use. But "with faculty and staff there has to be a mutual sort of willingness. These things have to be done jointly and not so arbitrarily."

Still, Watson asserted, there is no doubt that the university plans to continue alcohol education programs, for students in the dorms, in private counseling and with an alcohol-education committee reassembled in the fall. He and other campus administrators said this year's program has significantly reshaped student awareness about alcohol.

"We're very enthusiastic about it. We got something good started," Watson said, and UCSD plans to keep it going.

SD Bishop Addresses Recent Graduates

Bishop Leo T. Maher of San Diego, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the University of San Diego, gave the following address at commencement exercises May 22.

"I join with your parents, relatives and friends in congratulating you on your college graduation."

"During these years at USD, you learned that the present is necessarily shaped by the past, attitudes toward the future vary, and these attitudes in turn govern our behavior."

"Respect for ancestry, heritage or tradition determines concretely the emphasis placed on the study of history, languages, art and on the observance of religious and civic ritual."

"Tradition plays the same role for people that habit does for individuals. One does not remake oneself every day; but lives by habit."

"The self is a product of previous choices and, assuming normalcy, choices, mostly well-made. Present and future acts are determined by these early choices."

"Clearly, reflecting on qualifications for leadership in the commonwealth, made a knowledge of and respect for tradition, a prime requisite for office."

"Such knowledge is required for those who would assume positions of leadership, for without it they would have no framework from which to judge. For to judge is to measure, to compare, to assess. Judging requires a standard against which a measure is taken."

"What chiefly makes the study of history wholesome and profitable is this: That in history you have a record of the infinite variety of human experience, plainly set out for all to see, and in that record, you find for yourself and your country both examples and warnings."

"Historical ignorance tends to breed bigotry and intolerance; one can be provincial in time as well as in place. Without a historical perspective, one is, in a way, a prisoner of his time."

SPORTS

Mullen not your everyday player

By Dave Hatz
of The Daily Californian

Question: What's rarer than discovering the grocery clerk gave you too much change, having someone return your lost purse with all valuables still in it, or being helped by the first motorist you see after your own vehicle goes on the disabled list?

Answer: A graduate student with eligibility left and still participating in collegiate athletics.

Athletes who return to school to earn their undergraduate degree after their playing days are over — much less doing so in four years — are hardly commonplace.

This is a story about an exception to the rule — John Mullen. He's the one in a million... if that many.

The former Valhalla High School star is currently completing his fourth year with the University of San Diego baseball team. He received his bachelor's degree in philosophy last year and now is a graduate student working toward a master's degree in business administration at the Alcalá Park campus.

He's the first graduate student-player ever for the Toreros and that's saying something. USD is probably better known for its academic standards than its athletic accomplishments.

It is not surprising that Mullen is the one who attained the milestone. He's always been a worker by habit. To him free time is wasted time.

He was a three-sport star at Valhalla, lettering in football, basketball and baseball. In his senior year Mullen was voted the Norsemen's athlete of the year. His .382 batting average in 1977 is still a school record.

In between he found enough time to hit the books and compile a 3.45 grade-point average. He carried a 3.5 at USD while earning his bachelor's degree and developing into first a starter and then a star for the Toreros.

"It wasn't that tough," Mullen said of earning that degree and maintaining his baseball prowess. "Some people find philosophy hard but I think it's because they find it boring. I always found it interesting and that made it easier."

Being a graduate student hasn't changed things that much either.

"It's not that much more difficult," he said, "although it would be if I had to carry a full load."

Graduate students only have to carry nine units to be considered full time thus allowing them to play athletics.

"That's how many I've got," he said. "I'd probably be in trouble if I had any more classes."

He said his grades are fine and the statistics prove his baseball hasn't suffered with the extra time he's spent with school.

Mullen entered this, the final week of the Southern California Baseball Association season, as the conference's leading hitter with a phenomenal .449 average (40 for 89) with one home run, four doubles and 19 RBIs.

He's batting .378 overall (56 for 148) and has been the shining star in a disappointing season for the Toreros.

The team is in sixth place in the eight-team SCBA with a 7-17-1 mark and is only 14-25-1 overall.

"We've had a tough year but John's been the one guy who's done it," said Torero coach John Cunningham. "He's batted in the third spot all season long and has done everything we've asked of him."

"He's our best all-around player and certainly our most experienced. And he's earned it. He made it happen. Nobody plays the game harder or works at it harder than

□Mullen 16A

John Mullen of the University of San Diego

16A The Daily Californian □ East San Diego County, California □ Wednesday, May 11, 1983

MULLEN From 12A

John.
It was Mullen's goal to reach his unusual position. "After redshirting my freshman year I had it in my mind that I still wanted to graduate in four years," said the Toreros' full-time right fielder and occasional first baseman.

"But I also wanted to use all my eligibility so it depended on the rules concerning graduate students playing as to whether I'd finish (undergraduate work) in four years."

"I couldn't be happier with the way things worked out. I originally selected USD because I wanted to stay in San Diego and attend a school with good academics as well as a good baseball program. I also wanted the small-school atmosphere, and this was the perfect place."

It didn't appear to be in the beginning. He redshirted his freshman year because "he came up a little short in all the categories," according to Cunningham.

"He came here as a walk-on and we needed pitching at that time. I told him if he was going to make the team he'd have to do it as a pitcher. He didn't so I cut him."

"He came back a couple of weeks later and asked me what he'd have to do to make the team the following year. I told him and he was back the next season."

"He started out that year as our starting first baseman. He was really playing well and he came to me about getting on scholarship. I told him the things he needed to do, like making the big plays when we needed them."

"I don't know if he felt the pressure or what, but he really slipped about the last 15 games of the season so we didn't put him on scholarship."

"His third year we moved him to the outfield and he really started coming around. Last year John was our most consistent hitter."

Not coincidentally Mullen finally received a scholarship in 1982. He still has it.

"He earned it," Cunningham said. "He works at doing the things you want him to do and he gets them done whether it's hitting a fly ball, hitting behind the runner, bunting or whatever."

"This year's been the same way. He's our most consistent player. I don't know where we'd be without him."

Because of the success he's enjoyed it's not surprising Mullen will greet the end of the season with mixed emotions. He also hopes Saturday's final game won't be his last day in a baseball uniform.

"My major goal is to be drafted," he said, "but no scouts have talked to me yet. It's not something you can count on."

"That's why I kept pushing myself in my education. It will give me something to fall back on."

"But whatever happens I'm going to miss it here. I'll miss the guys on the team, the whole atmosphere because this has been a very good experience for me."

The feeling is probably mutual. People like John Mullen don't come around very often. And don't think you've heard the last of him. The records indicate he'll be a success regardless of what he does.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAY 11 1983

USD Triumphs Behind Fazekas

Right-hander Mike Fazekas pitched 4 1/2 innings of hitless relief as USD rallied for a 7-5 victory over Loyola Marymount yesterday at the Toreros' baseball field.

Eric Bennett hit a solo homer with two out to ignite a 4-run rally in the fifth inning that tied the game 5-5. The Toreros scored single runs in the seventh and eighth to win it and boost their record to 15-25-1 overall.

EVENING TRIBUNE

MAY 14 1983

USD LOSES — University of San Diego's baseball team dropped a 9-4 decision to Pepperdine yesterday in Malibu. The Waves took advantage of four USD errors. Three runs scored on a two-out, bases-loaded pop fly that was dropped.

The two teams come back this afternoon at Alcalá Park in a double-header, the first game to start at 2. This closes out the Torero baseball season.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAY 14 1983

Waves Pound On Erring Toreros 9-4

Pepperdine took advantage of four University of San Diego errors to beat the Toreros 9-4 in Southern California Baseball Association action yesterday in Malibu.

The Waves took a 2-0 lead in the third inning when they received a three-run gift in the form of a two-out, bases loaded pop fly that was dropped. USD came back to score three in the fourth on a two-run triple by Andre Jacas and an RBI double by Laci Nagypal.

Pepperdine put the game out of reach as the Toreros booted two double-play balls and Mike Lee hit a solo shot in the seventh.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAY 16 1983

San Diego Falls to Fullerton in Finale

By MIKE D'GIOVANNA, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—What seemed an almost impossible task three weeks ago was accomplished by the Cal State Fullerton baseball team here Sunday. The Titans defeated the University of San Diego, 6-3, on the Toreros' field to claim a share of their seventh straight Southern California Baseball Assn. championship.

Fullerton had trailed first-place UC Santa Barbara by four games on April 26 after it lost to Pepperdine, 7-5, to prolong a four-game losing streak. But that was the last time the Titans lost. They won their last 13 games, 12 of them in the SCBA, to catch the Gauchos to tie for the title.

Fullerton completes the regular season with a 22-6-1 conference record (47-17-2 overall) and will play 22-6-1 Santa Barbara at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at Cal State Long Beach to determine which team receives an automatic berth to the NCAA regional tournament. Tim Thompson (11-3) will be the Titans' starting pitcher.

Titans Coach Augie Garrido can't remember having to work harder for an SCBA championship.

"This has been our most difficult one," he said. "It hasn't necessarily been my most gratifying championship because they all have their own individual uniqueness and memories."

As usual, pitching was the reason for the Titans' success. Fullerton right-hander Todd Simmons threw a complete game, four-hitter with seven strikeouts to improve his record to 9-3. He allowed a home run to Steve Sciacca in the second inning and a triple to Bruce Tomlinson, who later scored on a ground out, in the fifth.

The Toreros scored their final run in the eighth when Dave Campagna and Eric Bennett each singled and advanced on an error. John Slaughter, who pinch-ran for Campagna, scored on a grounder. Simmons appeared to be in complete control with the exception of two mistakes (the homer and triple), but he said it wasn't that easy.

San Diego starter Russ Applegate would have matched Simmons' performance had it not been for a disastrous second inning, in which he allowed seven of Fullerton's 11 hits and five runs. He retired 14 straight batters from the third through the seventh innings before being touched up for another run in the eighth.

Designated hitter Rick Campo started the second inning with a single and Rich Slominski was hit by a pitch. Ray Roman singled to load the bases and Bright followed with his two-run single to center field. Roman scored on the play when Toreros shortstop Paul Van Stone dropped a relay through attempting to throw out down Bright at second.

Vic Espinosa's hit-and-run single to right field put runners on first and third, and Thomas scored Bright with a bunt single. John Fishel lined an RBI single to left field to complete the scoring, but the Titans remained silent until Thomas singled in the seventh.

Sunday, May 15, 1983

THE SAN DIEGO UNION H-9

USD Sweeps Pepperdine

Mike Fazekas stopped a ninth inning Pepperdine rally to save the first game and then threw a complete five-hit victory as the University of San Diego swept visiting Pepperdine 9-8 and 2-1 yesterday.

In the first game, USD (17-26-1) scored six fifth-inning runs, highlighted by Paul Van Stone's two-run double, to give the Toreros a 9-2 lead. Pepperdine scored five ninth-inning runs to make the score 9-8. Fazekas then came in to get the Waves' Larry Lee to hit into a bases-loaded double play.

JUNE 1983

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

JUN 1983

Artifacts

Metepec: The Tree of Life—Exhibit at University of San Diego Founders Gallery features ceramics from the Mexican town of Metepec, centering on the "arboles de la vida" (tree of life) motif in Mexican art. Pieces on display, from museum and private collections, represent the entire life of the town, including utilitarian and ritual ceramics. Thru June 10. Weekdays noon-5, Wed. til 9. University of San Diego, Alcalá Park. 291-6480.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JUN 1 1983

SENIOR SCHOOL/ The University of San Diego is registering senior citizens for its summer University of the Third Age. The five-week program includes both lecture and physical fitness classes for people over 54 years old. Possible topics include politics, depression, medical care, patient's rights, tax planning, and law enforcement. The cost is $50. Call 293-4585 to register.

CENTER: Mediation

Continued from First Page
three more without mediation. Boss said that once the community is fully aware of the service, it could handle up to one mediation a day.

The program is funded for one year through part of a $125,000 grant to the San Diego Law Center from the Weingart Foundation, a private organization that funds legal research. After the first year, the center must generate community or governmental money to continue.

Ideally, its backers hope the concept of keeping community problems out of the courts will spread to other communities, and the process has begun already.

Hallstrom and the Law Center have been awarded a $70,000 grant from the county to set up another community-based mediation center this summer, although its location has not yet been chosen.

RANCHO BERNARDO

JOURNAL

JUN 2 1983

Estate planning seminar slated

"Estate Planning for the 1980s" is the title of a seminar scheduled for 9 a.m. to noon June 13 at the Rancho Bernardo Inn.

Topics to be discussed include death tax planning, living trusts, statutory wills, estate planning for the single individual, analysis of inurance needs, and methods of charitable giving.

The seminar is free. It will be hosted by the Rancho Bernardo Inn and sponsored by the University of San Diego. Make reservations by calling Shirley Taylor or Gilbert Brown, University of San Diego, 293-4523.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

JUN 2 1983

Founders Gallery

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will remain on view through June 10, USD.

POWAY

NEWS-CHIEFTAIN

JUN 2 1983

Estate planning seminar slated

"Estate Planning for the 1980s" is the title of a seminar scheduled for 9 a.m. to noon June 13 at the Rancho Bernardo Inn.

Topics to be discussed include death tax planning, living trusts, statutory wills, estate planning for the single individual, analysis of inurance needs, and methods of charitable giving.

The seminar is free. It will be hosted by the Rancho Bernardo Inn and sponsored by the University of San Diego. Make reservations by calling Shirley Taylor or Gilbert Brown, University of San Diego, 293-4523.

PENASQUITOS NEWS

JUN 2 1983

Estate planning seminar slated

"Estate Planning for the 1980s" is the title of a seminar scheduled for 9 a.m. to noon June 13 at the Rancho Bernardo Inn.

Topics to be discussed include death tax planning, living trusts, statutory wills, estate planning for the single individual, analysis of inurance needs, and methods of charitable giving.

The seminar is free. It will be hosted by the Rancho Bernardo Inn and sponsored by the University of San Diego. Make reservations by calling Shirley Taylor or Gilbert Brown, University of San Diego, 293-4523.

READER

JUN 2 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will remain on view through June 10, Founders Gallery, USD, 291-6480.

VIEW

Ideas

'Neighborly' Disputes Steered Away From Court

Golden Hill Center
Tries to Turn Combat
Into Compromise

By WAYNESWANSON

SAN DIEGO—Who do you turn to when the landlord refuses to give back your security deposit, Fido from down the block keeps digging up your rose bushes, or the kid next door blasts Van Halen at all hours of the night?

These are the "People's Court" types of disputes that aggravate people every day, and the conventional wisdom is to follow the advice dispensed on that popular television show: "Remember, when you're involved in a dispute with another party and you can't seem to work it out, don't take the law into your own hands. Take 'em to court!"

But there may be a better way. An experimental, month-old program in Golden Hill, the first of its kind in San Diego, is attempting to replace legal combat with compromise. The Golden Hill Mediation Center hopes to prove that many neighborhood disputes can be solved without litigation.

When someone goes to the center with a dispute, case coordinator Matt Liedle determines whether it might be settled there or should go to the courts or a social service agency. If the case can be mediated, and both parties agree to participate, it goes to one of 16 mediators from the community—none of them judges or lawyers—who have undergone 20-hour training programs.

Free Service

The mediator's job is to guide the participants to a settlement, not to judge who is right or wrong. The service is free, the results confidential.

So far, a landlord-tenant quarrel over unpaid rent and repairs has been settled, a falling out between two longtime friends was mended after charges that one continually blocked an alley with his car, and two neighbors who hadn't spoken to each other in five years have gotten together to discuss a disagreement without maintenance of a common fence and retaining wall.

"You might define these disputes as minor, but they are still aggravating, and they can escalate," said Carol Hallstrom, who organized the program.

Hallstrom is a staff member of the San Diego Law Center, a joint project of the University of San Diego Law School and the San Diego County Bar Assn. that is aimed at developing alternatives to litigation.

"We have very much a knee-jerk reaction in this country about going to court," Hallstrom said. "Even my 12-year-old son says, 'I'm going to sue you,' when he doesn't get his way."

Sometimes it's appropriate to go to court, but it is faster, cheaper, more convenient, and in many cases more successful . . . to settle disputes in the community through a system that encourages compromise and practical results.

That's the way they were han-

Director Richard Boss, left, and case coordinator Matt Liedle in front of their offices in Golden Hill.

died in the old days, when the village elders, the church or the family could be counted on to work out such differences. But now the first reaction is to sue, and the result has been an overburdened judicial system.

"I don't think the courts any longer respond well to the types of complaints the Golden Hill center handles," said Juvenile Court Judge Robert O'Neill, who serves on the center's advisory board. "Other than small claims court, nobody wants to be bothered."

And Hallstrom added, "Even if you go to small claims court and win, you still have to try to collect, which may not be easy."

The Golden Hill center does not have the last word. The participants still have the option of taking their case to court. But supporters of the center hope that in most instances court will be avoided.

"It seems to me a settlement is more acceptable and lasts longer if the parties can be convinced to make peace," O'Neill said. "Simply having a judge decide who is right or wrong isn't going to solve an ongoing problem. Usually it isn't a matter of one person being right or wrong anyway, so you decide who is right or wrong. You solve the lawsuit, but the problem still exists." The challenge facing the center's staff is to sell people on the idea of making peace, not war.

"The first reaction is often, 'Why the hell should I? It's a pain in the butt to sit down with someone I don't like,'" Liedle said.

"One guy slammed the door in my face three times, but I finally got our brochure to him," he said. That man never did agree to meet face-to-face with his foe, but Liedle was able to settle the dispute by writing down the points of difference and taking the list back and forth between both parties.

Liedle, 27, has a background in community organizing work as a former staff member of the San Diego Organizing project. If nothing else, he said, the mediation center can succeed in opening up communication between people in conflict. But in some instances there is no chance for mediation.

"There's such a big chip on some shoulders that they just won't listen," he said. "There are some people who want conflict in their lives."

You might define these disputes as minor, but they are still aggravating.

The other challenge facing the center is to convince people that it is not just a local branch of the Municipal Court where someone will pass judgment.

Center Director Richard Boss, 39, is the former director of a San Jose project for diverting young adults in trouble to community programs rather than the municipal courts. Neither he nor Liedle are lawyers (although Liedle is in law school at the Western State College of Law), and Boss wants the center perceived as a community program, not a legal program.

"We've intentionally kept away from a heavy legal link," he said. "The drift is to keep lawyers out of this."

Los Angeles Times

San Diego County

Wednesday, June 1, 1983/Part V

BOB CHIESER Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES TIMES

16 Part VI/Friday, June 3, 1983 J

what's doing
IN SAN DIEGO

Continued from Eighth Page

FOUNDERS' GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park): The ceramics of Metepec, an evolutionary study of the Mexican tree of life, will be on display through June 15. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. weekdays, except Wednesday, when it is open until 9 p.m.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

JUN 2 1983

Vargas named director of law institute

La Jolla Jorge A. Vargas, international authority on the law of the sea, has been named director of the Mexico-U.S. Law Institute.

University of San Diego School of Law, effective August 1.

Sheldon Krantz, law school dean, in making the announcement, said that Vargas also will serve on the USD faculty as professor of law.

Vargas has served as director of the International Relations Area at the Center for Economic and Social Studies of the Third World, where he was also head of the Law of the Sea Department from 1978 to 1982.

His positions also have included deputy director of the Office of International Fisheries Affairs, Mexico City; legal adviser to the chairman, Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, UNESCO; and member of the Mexican delegation to the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea.

He is currently coordinating a model program for training human resources in the utilization of marine resources, an OAS-UNESCO program to be launched in Mexico this month and later to be offered in Africa and Asia.

Vargas is the author of eight books and numerous articles on international law, diplomacy, science and technology, and marine affairs. He holds degrees from the National Autonomous University of Mexico and from Yale School of Law, and was an Adlai E. Stevenson Fellow with the U.N. Institute.

JUN 3 1983

Coronado Journal

page 3

Law school graduate

Robert S. Lawrence received his law degree from the University of San Diego School of Law during graduation ceremonies Sunday.

Lawrence will be joining the law firm of Seltzer, Caplan Wilkins & McMahon.

A native San Diegan, he is married to the former Laurie Black and is the son of M. Larry Lawrence, chairman of the board, Hotel del Coronado.

JUN 2 1983

NEIGHBORHOOD JUSTICE/ The new Neighborhood Justice program will be explained at Friday's monthly meeting of the La Mesa Senior Forum. The session begins at 9 a.m. at the La Mesa Adult Center at 8450 La Mesa Blvd. Carol Hallstrom, coordinator for the new justice program, will outline its background and benefits. The Neighborhood Justice program is an attempt to solve minor disputes through discussion, rather than taking them to court.

And right here in La Mesa, we'll be having another Senior Forum tomorrow.

The La Mesa Senior Forum will meet at 9 a.m. for its monthly meeting at the La Mesa Adult Center, 8450 La Mesa Blvd. No charge for admission.

But get there early to be sure of a seat.

Speaker for the day will be Carol Hallstrom.

She is coordinator for Neighborhood Justice Programs of San Diego Law Center, University of San Diego School of Law, Alcalá Park.

Carol will speak on the formation of this new program and the beneficial results to taxpayers.

Also, you'll discover that the center always has a full program of activities. Seems there's something of interest every day for those who want to participate.

There's no letting up with the activities planned at Spring Valley Senior Center, 3345 Sweetwater Springs Blvd. These interesting programs continue into June.

JUN 6 1983

The University of San Diego will hold its seniors-only "University of the Third Age" program for the sixth year. The program, which includes both physical fitness and issues sessions, will run from July 12-28. The fee is $45 for the series. For more details, call 293-4585.

JUN 4 1983

San Diego, Saturday

FOCUS ON SPIRITUALITY

USD summer offerings told

The Rev. Michael D. Guinan of the Franciscan School of Theology in Berkeley will teach a course called "Biblical Perspectives in Spirituality" from 9 a.m. to noon June 13-17 in Camino Hall at the University of San Diego.

The course is one of several summer courses being offered at USD this summer on spirituality, rites of initiation and catechesis.

The Rev. Francis Baur, also of the Franciscan School of Theology, will teach a course in "Theological Perspectives in Spirituality" from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., also June 13-17, in Camino Hall.

An advanced institute on the same subject will be conducted June 26-July 1 in Salomon Hall by the Rev. James B. Dunning of Washington, D.C., a member of the North American Forum on the Catechumenate.

The Rev. Robert J. Hater, associate professor of religious studies at the University of Dayton, will conduct a workshop in ministry and catechesis from 9 a.m. to noon July 25-29 in the Camino Hall.

Registration for the courses is being handled by Sister Marleen Brasefield and Mal Rafferty at the USD Office of Continuing Education.

University workshops for youths

SAN DIEGO — "Computer Workshops," a series of three five-day computer workshops for youth aged 10 to 14 years, will be held at the University of San Diego June 13-17, June 20-24, and June 27-July 1.

Enrollment is limited to thirty students per session for the workshop sponsored by USD's Continuing Education. Tuition for each 5-day session is $125 and $100 per person for two or more participants from the same family. For information and registration call 293-4585.

According to Continuing Education Director Malachi Rafferty, "The workshops are designed to introduce the students to the use of microcomputers and prepare them for the revolutionary new use of computers in the classroom." Hands-on computer experience is emphasized in the daily sessions from 9 a.m. until noon. Two hours optional, additional laboratory time is free in USD's computer room.

The computer workshops will be directed by educator Ed Alexander, who holds a master's degree in education and is director of Powerline Reading Clinic, La Jolla, where computers are used to increase reading skills.

Instruction in the "Computer Workshops" includes basic knowledge of how a computer works; introduction to keyboard and how to use it; software design and use; introduction to BASIC; running and writing simple programs, and games, learning, and playing.

Law Students
At USD Tackle
State Agencies

By RIVIAN TAYLOR
Staff Writer, The San Diego

In the late 1960s, consumer activist Ralph Nader unleashed a horde of idealistic college students on some venerable Washington institutions. When the dust had settled, the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and even Congress no longer were sacred cows.

The students — dubbed "Nader's Raiders" — zeroed in on their targets and published their research hoping that the disclosures of the lack of effectiveness would engender outrage and bring change.

History may be repeating itself at the University of San Diego Law School, where a group of students — led by a former Nader's Raider — is taking on the state's regulatory agencies.

Robert Fellmeth, the energetic 37-year-old director of USD's Center for Public Interest Law, said the purpose is twofold: to educate the students and to shed some light on the state's 60 major regulatory agencies, which up to now have avoided public scrutiny.

The law school center has staked out the turf of administrative and regulatory law, said Fellmeth, who enlisted in Nader's crusade while a Harvard Law School student and eventually became Nader's right-hand man and top organizer.

The center publishes the California Regulatory Law Reporter, the first legal journal in the nation to report exclusively on regulatory agencies.

The quarterly publication acts as a watchdog on agencies ranging from the Coastal Commission and Public Utilities Commission to the Board of Fabric Care and the Board of Guide-dogs for the Blind.

Besides monitoring and critiquing each of the major state agencies, the journal, which is edited by Fellmeth, usually contains a sharply worded article or commentary lambasting abuses in a particular agency.

The articles occasionally urge that an agency be abolished as unnecessary or self-serving to the industry it is supposed to regulate. Often, the commentary is written by Fellmeth, who wrote three books for Nader and contributed to six others.

Also writing for the journal are the 40 second- and third-year law students enrolled in the center's academic program and assigned to study and monitor a specific regulatory agency.

(Continued on B-12, Col. 1)

B-12 THE SAN DIEGO UNION

JUN 6 1983

The San Diego Union/Dennis Huls

Robert Fellmeth, a former Nader's Raider, leads scrutiny of the state's regulatory agencies while directing the University of San Diego Center for Public Interest Law.

Law Students
Tackle Agencies

(Continued from B-1)

It's the first time many of the agencies have been noticed, and officials of some were aghast at the thought of a member of the public asking for an agenda or attending an agency meeting, Fellmeth said.

"At first we had problems getting access, but there was too much and too many of us," said Fellmeth, who recently was awarded full tenure as a law professor at USD.

One student's advocacy project directed at San Diego Gas & Electric Co. resulted in the formation of Utility Consumer Action Network (UCAN), a watchdog group.

The Public Utilities Commission recently told SDG&E that the utility had to allow the group to insert material soliciting memberships and donations in the utility's billing envelopes.

It was the first time an outside group had been granted permission to use a California utility's extra billing space — the space left in a billing envelope that will accommodate additional material without raising postage.

Although the proposal came from the Center for Public Interest Law, Fellmeth emphasized that — with the approval of the PUC — the center's involvement will end and UCAN will be run by its own staff, selected by SDG&E ratepayers who join UCAN.

The fast-speaking Fellmeth said it is important "to shed some light on and open up for examination the process" of regulatory agencies, because the vast majority of government decisions affecting everyday life are made by those agencies — not by the executive, legislative or judicial branches.

Yet, for the most part, the regulatory agencies have been hidden from the public and ignored by the legal profession, he said. As a result, "the agencies provide a perfect environment for special interests to prevail," said Fellmeth, who has lost little if any of his zeal from his Nader days.

"It's important for the legal profession to do something other than represent the vested profit state," he said in a recent interview. "It's important for law students to see there are different roles, not just roles where there's a paycheck in the wings."

"If a law school is going to be a viable institution, it has got to be examining the law, changing the law, making new roles for attorneys that didn't exist."

Beyond the academic value, Fellmeth emphasized the effect on the agencies themselves. "The fact they know they are being reported, the fact they know that what they're doing is for the first time going in a publication that will be in libraries and will be talked about and will be visible... all that has an enormous impact," Fellmeth said.

And, if the center or its publication causes some tension among the regulators, or evokes some criticism from them, that's all the better, he added.

"We want people to attack us because that raises questions and it raises issues. It gets people talking and thinking about these things. And nobody has been."

"Any information is better than no information. The fact that they're bitching means they're listening to you and that's great."

Fellmeth has made a career of attacking special-interest groups, first with Nader and then with the San Diego County district attorney's office.

He originally intended to stay with the district attorney for two years to gain some trial experience, but, given the chance to prosecute fraud and antitrust cases, Fellmeth stayed nine.

He established the nation's first antitrust unit in a local prosecutor's office and took on such adversaries as Revlon Corp., Atlantic Richfield and the National Association of Realtors.

In the decade that he has been in San Diego, Fellmeth has managed to make his share of enemies. His critics, largely in the business community, say he is a slave to his political philosophy, and is always looking for causes. They describe him as abrupt, abrasive and unreasonable.

Even some people who admire his work say he is at times overzealous and wish that he would tone down.

Fellmeth says he is unfazed by his critics, who he says don't give him credit for doing his homework. "I don't just give speeches for the purpose of giving speeches," he said. "That's ridiculous. That's not my style."

Fellmeth insists that he is not a flaming liberal. He says he actually is more of a conservative, but will settle for the label "populist."

"My philosophy is, the problem we have in this country is that the organized interests are overrepresented in the political system and the legal system as well," Fellmeth said. "They're overly powerful vis-a-vis the diffused unorganized interests. One way to solve that imbalance is to organize the diffuse interests."

"It's really ninth-grade civics, in essence: getting citizens involved to represent their own interest and correcting the imbalance to make the system work properly."

LEMON GROVE
REVIEW

JUN 9 1983

Spirituality
Class at USD

USD is offering classes from June 13-17. Institute in Spirituality: Life in Abundance' is a class exploring the dynamics of contemporary Christian spirituality.

Led by Fr. Michael Guinan, 'Biblical Perspectives in Spirituality' will be held from 9 a.m. to noon. 'Theological Perspectives in Spirituality' will be led by Fr. Francis Baur from 1 to 4 p.m.

USD offers these courses for $160, or a single course for $100, and students are eligible for 3 units of continuing education credit.

Estate planning

The University of San Diego will sponsor a seminar on "Estate Planning for the 1980s" from 9 a.m. to noon Monday, June 13, at the Rancho Bernardo Inn. Attorneys will discuss death tax planning, living trusts, statutory wills, estate planning, analysis of insurance needs, and methods of charitable giving. There is no charge for the seminar. Reservations should be made with Shirley Taylor or Gilbert Brown, University of San Diego, 293-4523.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

JUN 9 1983

University of San Diego — "Images of Black and White," an exhibition of photographs by James Levett, will be on display at the University of San Diego Founders Gallery from June 21 through Aug. 19. 291-6480.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

JUN 9 1983

Tree-of-Life Display

Through June 15 "The Ceramics of Metepec," a study of the Mexican Tree-of-Life is showing at the Founders Gallery, Founders Hall, of the USD campus. Hours are from noon to 5 p.m. on weekdays with no admission charge.

READER

JUN 9 1983

"Arbol de la Vida: The Ceramics of Metepec," an exhibit of works on the Mexican Tree-of-Life theme, will remain on view through June 10, Founders Gallery, USD. 291-6480.

The La Costa, Week of June 9 through June 15, 1983

Computer workshops for kids

"Computer Workshops," a series of three five-day computer workshops for youth aged 10 to 14 years, will be held at the University of San Diego June 13-17, June 20-24, and June 27-July 1. Enrollment is limited to thirty students per session for the workshop sponsored by USD's Continuing Education. Tuition for each 5-day session is $125 and $100 per person for two or more participants from the same family. For information and registration call 293-4585. According to Continuing Education Director Malachi Rafferty, "The workshops are designed to introduce the students to the use of microcomputers and prepare them for the re-voluntary new use of computers in the classroom." Hands-on computer experience is emphasized in the daily sessions from 9 a.m. until noon. Two hours optional, additional laboratory time is free in USD's computer room.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JUN 10 1983

COMPUTERS/ "How Can My Computer be Used for More Effective Business Decisions?" is the topic of a series of courses offered by the University of San Diego for managers, small business owners or people who use computers for personal use. The six-hour course will be offered four times during June from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., beginning Monday. Tuition is $165. Group rates are available. For information on registration and class times, call 293-4585.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

JUN 10 1983

FOUNDERS' GALLERY (University of San Diego): The ceramics of Metepec, an evolutionary study of the Mexican tree of life, will be on display through Wednesday. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. weekdays, except Wednesday, when it is open until 9 p.m.

BLADE TRIBUNE

JUN 12 1983

University of Third Age set at USD

SAN DIEGO — The University of San Diego's program for senior citizens, the University of the Third Age, will begin its summer session July 12 and continue each Monday through Thursday morning through Aug. 11.

The five-week program especially for folks 55 and over will include a wide range of subjects, including politics, medical care, equality, patient's rights, annuities, tax planning, literature, depression, addiction and stained glass.

In addition to the social and cultural sessions, the program has a physical fitness component that features exercises and activities designed to fit the capabilities of older people. The program aims to stimulate participants mentally, emotionally and physically — to return that zest for living — and it has been remarkably successful in years past.

There is a $50 for the program and students must be able to provide their own transportation to the USD campus in Alcalá Park. For more information, call 293-4585.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JUN 12 1983

EDUCATION: The University of the Third Age, a special program for adults over 55 sponsored by the University of San Diego, will begin its session July 12. The program includes a lecture series and physical fitness sessions that will meet Mondays through Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to noon until Aug. 11. The fee for the educational month is $50. For more information or for reservations call 293-4585, USD's office of Continuing Education.

La Mesa Courier, Thursday, JUNE 9, 1983.

Program May Reduce Court Cases

Mediation Center Discussed At Senior Forum

By John Lamb
Courier Staff Writer

The American people, it would seem, are doing their best to clog up an already backlogged U.S. justice system.

In the United States, there exist, for example, more lawyers who get involved in more lawsuits than in any other country in the world.

So many, in fact, that one out of every 10 people in the United States sues or is sued every year.

Confronted with these figures, Carol Hallstrom thinks she has found a way to lessen the load — and the burden — placed on today's courts.

Hallstrom, an attorney, came to town last Friday to let La Mesa know about the Golden Hill Mediation Center, which opened its doors last month to people who want to settle disputes without becoming another "log" in the court system.

The attorney spoke before a moderate crowd during the June Senior Forum at the Adult Recreation Center in La Mesa.

"In Japan, the people there don't feel they have to go to court to settle everything," explained Hallstrom, who was hired by the San Diego Law Center, which represents the mediation center's sponsors — the University of San Diego School of Law and the San Diego County Bar Association.

"We want to provide an alternative way to settle disputes," she added.

Such problems can run the gamut, from a group of children playing football in a neighbor's flower bed to a too loud stereo in the middle of the night to an equally noisy dog.

The center sets up two opposing neighbors with a neutral third party, who is also a member of the community. The mediation is confidential and free of charge (for now), is scheduled usually within two weeks of referral, and takes place in the neighborhood.

The mediators are trained to listen to both sides — while not determining who is right or wrong — and help the neighbors come to an agreeable settlement. No lawyers, no courts, no muss, no fuss.

The agreement is then put in writing and signed by both parties, a symbol of commitment to the resolution.

And it works, Hallstrom said. "Where it's really helped is when people have lost the ability to talk to one another," she said.

The attorney gave an example of two neighbors who hadn't spoken to one another in nine years, because one parked two cars in their alley and thereby decreased his neighbor's yard space.

"He got angrier and angrier and finally called the police. This angered the other neighbor, and they never talked to each other," Hallstrom said. "But they were willing to talk with a mediator present."

Neither party was allowed to interrupt the other, she said, and they eventually reached a mutually satisfying agreement.

"But think about living next to another person for nine years and never saying a word to him," Hallstrom commented. "We don't know our neighbors like we used to in this country."

One member of the audience asked the attorney who these mediators are. Hallstrom said they are "people just like you."

"We have no lawyers — we certainly have no judges — or social workers," she added. "We decided to take people who could listen and take the time to listen very carefully."

Currently, 16 community volunteers of varying cultural backgrounds are serving as mediators at the Golden Hills center, having undergone 20 hours of training with a mediating pro.

The idea is not new. Hallstrom said there are "well over 100" of these so-called "neighborhood justice programs" scattered throughout the country.

She said, however, that there are some cases the mediation center won't take: those involving serious criminal activity or potentially high money damages, or those involving "people who are not in control of themselves psychologically or because of drug abuse."

"This is not therapy nor a counseling service," Hallstrom explained. "Our challenge is to help people come to understand that there is an alternative for solving conflicts."

The county Board of Supervisors recently granted the San Diego Law Center $70,000 to set up another mediation center in the county. Hallstrom is presently searching for another community, but she says the likelihood of La Mesa being the choice is somewhere between slim and none.

She suggested, though, that because Supervisor Paul Fordem voted in favor of the grant, he would be a logical contact to drum up support for an East County center. Fordem's district includes La Mesa.

Herb Scott, Senior Forum president, took the opportunity to recommend that citizens "send a postcard or call him (Fordem) to tell him we want this program."

Carol Fasching, crime prevention specialist for the La Mesa Police Department, doesn't believe the program would be "too viable" in this community.

"From the people I've talked to, I don't think there are too many disputes in the neighborhoods," she said Monday. "At least I can't think of too many."

She said, in fact, that one of the Neighborhood Watch programs was established in a La Mesa area because of a certain resident who threw loud parties. "These neighbors banded together and even filed a complaint at one point," Fasching said. "They didn't have the problem after that."

The specialist did find merit in the program for other areas, though. "It's a good idea, solving problems in the neighborhood rather than going through civil courts," Fasching said.

"I just haven't seen too much in-house squabbling going on in La Mesa."

SAN DIEGO UNION

JUN 12 1983

Colleges

Founders Gallery: Arbol De La Vida: "The Ceramics of Metepec" Through Wednesday. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JUN 17 1983

Selected images from Camera Work magazine, through July 23 at the Photography Gallery, 7468 Girard Ave. . . "Images of Black and White," photographs by James Levett, opening reception from 7 p.m. June 20 at Founders Gallery. USD.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JUN 19 1983

Founders Gallery: "Images of Black and White," photographs by James Levett. Tuesday through Aug. 19. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JUN 19 1983

The University of the Third Age, a special program for adults over 55 and sponsored by the University of San Diego, will begin its session July 12.

The program includes a lecture series and physical fitness sessions Mondays through Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to noon until Aug. 11. The fee for the educational month is $50. For more information or for reservations call 293-4585, the USD Office of Continuing Education.

SENTINEL

JUN 19 1983

"IMAGES OF BLACK and White," an exhibition of the photographs of James Levett, will be on view at the University of San Diego Founders Gallery from Tuesday through August 19. An opening reception will be held tomorrow from 7 to 9 p.m.

Thirty-five non-figurative photographs of California subjects compose the exhibition, which includes toned and handcolored prints. James Levett is a graduate of USD, where he majored in Fine Arts.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JUN 26 1983

Colleges

Founders Gallery: "Images of Black and White," photographs by James Levett. Tuesday through Aug. 19. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

EVENING TRIBUNE

JUN 21 1983

July 14-17 — A Fitcamp, featuring aerobic dance, slimnastics, calisthenics and jazz exercise, at San Diego State. Subsequent camp to be held Aug. 11-14 at the University of San Diego. For more information, call 560-1415.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JUN 26 1983

The University of the Third Age, a special program for older adults over 55 sponsored by the University of San Diego, will begin its session July 12. The program includes a lecture series and physical fitness sessions which meet Mondays through Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to noon until Aug. 11. The fee for the educational month is $50. For more information or for reservations, call 293-4585, the USD's office of Continuing Education.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JUN 26 1983

TOM BLAIR

I Could Get Real Work

THE SHADOW: Atty. Robert Kronemyer, sentenced to eight years in prison on his conviction in the looting of the estate of an elderly client, is appealing to a higher court. Meanwhile, he's submitted his resignation to the State Bar. The attorney handling Kronemyer's appeal: Anthony Murray, who, as president of the State Bar, is also charged with voting on Kronemyer's resignation. (If the resignation isn't accepted, Kronemyer faces disbarment). . . . Sen. Pete Wilson and his bride, Gayle, will spend the July Fourth weekend at home in San Diego. No public appearances, says an aide. Just a three-day drying out from Washington humidity. . . . Musical note: TV anchorman Michael Tuck, whose $1,500 car stereo was ripped off after culprits smashed through the back window of his Mercedes a few weeks ago, was hit at home this week. This time burglars took his home stereo. . . . Simon & Garfunkel, the pop minstrels of the '60s, come into San Diego Aug. 28 on the last leg of their first U.S. tour in 13 years. And their concert here, at SD Stadium, will be tied into America's Finest City Week. Radio stations KFMB and B-100 will underwrite the show with a slice of the gate going to a local charity.

VIEW FROM THE NORTH: San Francisco may look down its civic nose at San Diego, but SF Examiner travel editor Richard Paoli likes us. Of course he doesn't compare us to San Francisco. "What Los Angeles seems to lack," writes Paoli, "San Diego has. . . . Los Angeles seems vague; San Diego is specific. . . . Naysayers and culture freaks abound, of course, but I say that San Diego is a city with all the best; a city as good a vacation deal for the family as for the single traveler." And La Jolla: "If there is a particular life pattern south of Los Angeles, it is to be found here. About two years ago, observing the beach scene below from a balcony near the Scripps Institution pier, I watched a deeply tanned young man, clad in ragged shorts, use his heel to scrape 'NO FAT CHICKS' in the wet sand. If that is the philosophy, La Jolla's Prospect Street is the reality. . . . It's Rodeo Drive gone preppy."

SAN DIEGO SHUFFLE: For Bill Luttrell, just in from Phoenix as the Salvation Army's SD County coordinator, it's full circle. His SA service started here 24 years ago when he was a 20-year-old corps officer in Chula Vista. . . . Nancy MacHutchin, the former Gaslamp Quarter director who coordinated the half-million-dollar fund-raising drive in Roger Hedgecock's mayoral bid, has joined Tom Shepard & Associates, the La Jolla political consulting firm that ran Hedgecock's campaign. (MacHutchin will be Mayor Hedgecock's nominee to succeed Murray Gallison on the Stadium Authority.) . . . The dozen men sharing a table at Mr. A's the other noon — all wearing El Paso lapel pins — were PSA executives and El Paso politicians (including Mayor Jonathan Rogers). The politicians were trying to woo the airline to its market; PSA, after expanding to three new cities in the past month, has only agreed to a study. . . . Stan Willis has transformed the penthouse of his Park Manor Hotel near Balboa Park into a cocktail lounge/piano bar called Top of the Park, opening Friday night. And for his first piano man, Willis claims a coup: Jan Paderewski, great-great-nephew of the Polish pianist-composer-prime minister.

LANGUAGE BARRIER: Assistant D.A. Dick Huffman is off on a five-week Mexico sojourn, where he'll head up USD's International Law Institute at Guadalajara. Before he left, colleagues threw a little farewell party, replete with decorated cake. The inscription was to have read Hasta la vista y buen viaje (Goodbye and have a good trip). But viaje came out vieja, and those passingly familiar with Mexican slang got an entirely different interpretation (Goodbye and have a good broad).

EVENING TRIBUNE

JUN 26 1983

July 30-31 — A two day tennis workshop for teachers, sponsored by USD's Continuing Education, will be held at the University of San Diego. Class will meet 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The cost is $75 and includes 2 quarter hours of continuing education credit. Call 293-4585 for additional information.

ENTERPRISE

JUN 30 1983

Chris Miller earns First Honors at USD

Christopher Miller, son of Jim and Rita Miller, has been commended by Donald B. Peterson, acting dean of the University of San Diego College of Arts and Sciences for his work in the Spring semester.

Miller has earned the distinction of First Honors for the fourth consecutive semester. He carries a double major, chemistry and biology. Chris graduated from Fallbrook High School in June 1981.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

JUN 2 1983

Velez Signs Scholarship With USD

SAN DIEGO—Five women from San Diego Mesa College have accepted scholarship offers from four-year universities. One, Pacific Coast Conference volleyball Player of the Year Veronica Velez, will attend the University of San Diego.

The others are Annette Murphy, volleyball, Duke University; Carol Fisher, softball, USF; Janine Phillips, basketball, Cal Poly Pomona, and Deadrea Johnson, basketball, Cal State Dominguez Hills. Phillips was co-PCC Most Valuable Player in basketball.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

JUN 1983

USD Sports Camps—University of San Diego sponsors sports camps for kids, with professional coaching staffs. Included are All Sports Camp, Jim Brovelli Boys Basketball Camp, Kathy Marpe Girls Basketball Camp, Brian Fogarty Football Camp, Gary Becker Competitive Swim Camp, Ed Collins Tennis School, John Martin Girls Volleyball Camp, Seanus McFadden Soccer Camp and Kevin McGarry Girls Softball Camp. Day and resident arrangements. For complete brochure and information, call 291-6480.

JULY '83

SAN DIEGO UNION
JUL 7 1983

Colleges' View Varied On Aid-Draft Ruling

By ROBERT P. LAURENCE
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

San Diego colleges took widely varying attitudes yesterday toward the law requiring male students to register for the draft before they receive federal financial aid.

At the University of San Diego, financial aids director Herb Whyte is preparing to send out 1,000 letters advising students of the law.

At UCSD, Thomas Rutter, director of student financial services, took a wait-and-see attitude, refusing to "panic right now."

In most cases, no delays were expected in getting money to students. But those applying for federally guaranteed bank loans could face postponements of up to six to eight weeks if the draft compliance forms are not signed in advance.

USD and UCSD, along with San Diego State University and the San Diego Community College District, were responding to last week's U.S. Supreme Court decision reinstating the law that prohibits male students from receiving federal help for their educations if they have not registered for the draft. The status of the 1982 law had been in doubt since March, when a Minnesota federal court ruled it was unconstitutional because it violated rights against self-incrimination.

The Supreme Court set aside the Minnesota decision, saying it would decide in October whether to hear arguments challenging the constitutionality of the law.

Last week's decision came as colleges around the country were preparing for the fall school year, and after they had already told students they were eligible for federal grants and loans. Aid applications are commonly filed in January for the fall.

Under terms of the law, all students receiving federal help — including women — must sign the form before they can get the funds. Those who are female, under 18 or over 23, need only state they have not registered for those reasons. Anyone else must say he has registered. No proof is required, only a signature.

"What the federal government is saying is, 'If you don't submit the form, you don't get the money,'" said Whyte.

Last Thursday, the U.S. Department of Education gave schools a 30-day grace period, informing them that the law would apply only to funds given out after Aug. 1. But in the case of summer students already awarded grants and loans, the schools are to secure certificates of compliance by July 31.

Locally, the largest number of students receiving federal aid is at UCSD, where 6,000 students are affected to the tune of $13.5 million in grants and loans.

"We processed all next year's material, assuming the Minnesota injunction would be in force," said Rutter. "Our decision was not to send out the draft compliance statements."

Rutter said he believes Congress will quickly enact legislation postponing the effect of the law for a year to give the colleges some breathing space. "That's what I hope will happen."

Meanwhile, he said, the subject will be discussed at next week's annual convention of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators in Anaheim. About 800 schools will be represented, said Rutter, and the guest of honor will be Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., creator of the Pell Grants, one of the federal government's biggest aid programs.

Rutter said his decision on how to comply would be based largely on what he learns at the convention.

Rather than try to contact all 6,000 students affected during the summer, he said, he might wait until they arrive on campus in September and have them sign the forms then. "Otherwise, we have to try to find them all, thousands of people out there living their summer lives. How to find them would be a major problem."

Asked if grants would be delayed for students who wait until September for the forms, Rutter said, "I hope not."

But federally underwritten bank loans, he added, could be delayed as long as eight weeks, because of the additional paperwork they require.

"The best thing to tell people," said Whyte, "is that if the school has not contacted you, you should contact the school and pick up a form before Aug. 1 to guarantee you get the money. If you are contacted by the school, comply immediately."

EVENING TRIBUNE

JUL 5 1983

July 14-17 — A Fitcamp, featuring aerobic dance, gymnastics, calisthenics and jazz exercise, at San Diego State. Subsequent camp to be held Aug. 11-14 at the University of San Diego. For more information, call 560-1415.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

JUL 9 1983

Law Project Gets $10,000 Grant

The recently founded Mexico-U.S. Law Institute of the University of San Diego has received a $10,000 grant from the Signal Companies Inc.'s Charitable Foundation, a Signal official announced Friday.

The grant will enable the university to appoint Jorge A. Vargas, an international authority on law of the sea, as the institute's director. Vargas will assume the post Aug. 1.

Law school Dean Sheldon Krantz said the grant also will be used for program development at the institute.

The institute was started last fall to study the legal systems of the United States and Mexico. In addition, the institute plans to exchange faculty and students between the two countries, increase the number of Mexican-American law students attending USD and focus attention on significant legal issues in both countries.

In its first year, the institute has offered legal education programs for lawyers, corporate executives and students. Prominent Mexican attorneys and law professors have served on its faculty.

Brewster Arms, Signal senior vice president, said he hoped the grant would enable Vargas and Krantz to "perform a significant and unique service not only to the legal profession in the two countries but to our broader relationships as well."

Signal, a diversified company based in La Jolla, already has significant ties with USD.

SAN DIEGO UNION

7-3-83

The University of the Third Age, a special program for older adults over 55 sponsored by the University of San Diego, will begin its session July 12. The program includes a lecture series and physical fitness sessions that meet Mondays through Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to noon until Aug.

11. The fee for the educational month is $50. For more information or for reservations, call 293-4585, USD's Office of Continuing Education.

EVENING TRIBUNE

JUL 5 1983

July 30-31 — A two-day tennis workshop for teachers, sponsored by USD's Continuing Education, will be held at the University of San Diego. Class will meet 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The cost is $75 and includes 2 quarter hours of continuing education credit. Call 293-4585 for additional information.

EVENING TRIBUNE

JUL 7 1983

Universities tested by draft-alert edict

By Joseph Thesken

Tribune Education Writer

San Diego universities have been ordered to send letters to thousands of financial-aid applicants this month to ask them to comply with a federal order that draftable men register with the Selective Service.

University officials said they received a directive yesterday from the U.S. Department of Education instructing them that they have until July 31 to contact students asking for aid.

Under the law, upheld last week by the U.S. Supreme Court, any draft-eligible man 18 to 23 must certify that he has registered with the Selective Service before he can receive financial aid.

"We have been told to send out letters to each of the applicants, regardless of whether they are men or women, to see if they had filled out the statement on draft eligibility," said Tom Rutter, director of financial aid at the University of California at San Diego. "In our case, that would amount to about 5,000 letters."

At the University of San Diego, financial-aid director Herb Whyte estimated that his office will mail inquiries to 2,500 students.

"It means a lot more work added to our normal workload in processing the loans," Whyte said. "If nothing else, the post office will benefit from this."

'It means a lot more work added to our normal workload in processing the loans'

San Diego State University is in a more fortunate position, because many of its aid applicants already had filled out statements regarding their draft status, said aid officer Tom Pearson.

"We provide financial aid each year to upwards of 10,000 students," he said. "Fortunately, most of the students who returned the material we had mailed them originally responded to the question of their draft eligibility, so, in our case, it isn't as bad as it first seemed when the Supreme Court ruling came down."

"Now we're trying to identify those who haven't replied to the query, and we'll send letters to them to ascertain their status." Pearson could not estimate how many letters his office will have to send.

Rutter said he hoped that Congress would delay implementation of the order for at least six months to give schools and students — many of whom are out of town on summer vacation — time to comply.

"I hope they will see the complexity of the situation and give us a grace period," Rutter said. "Actually, this whole issue has changed so many times that we're trying not to overreact."

"First, we were told by the U.S. Department of Education that the students must certify that they have registered. Then, last March, a federal judge in Minnesota ruled the law unconstitutional, and we were instructed not to ask the students if they had registered."

"Then, last week, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the law, and we're back to right where we started."

"Frankly, I don't think this is the last we will hear of this. It may be changed again."

SAN DIEGO UNION

JUL 10 1983

Colleges

Founders Gallery: "Images of Black and White," photographs by James Levett. Tuesday through Aug. 19, University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays to 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JUL 10 1983

The University of the Third Age, a special program for older adults over 55 sponsored by the University of San Diego, will begin its session Tuesday. The program, in its sixth year, includes a lecture series and physical fitness sessions which meet Mondays through Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to noon until Aug. 11. The fee for the educational month is $50. For more information and reservations call 293-4585.

EVENING TRIBUNE

JUL 12 1983

July 30-31 — A two-day tennis workshop for teachers, sponsored by USD's Continuing Education, will be held at the University of San Diego. Class will meet 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The cost is $75 and includes 2 quarter hours of continuing education credit. Call 293-4585 for additional information.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JUL 11 1983

Photographs of James Levett, Founders Gallery, University of San Diego, through Aug. 19.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JUL 11 1983

THIRD AGE/ The University of the Third Age, University of San Diego, begins its summer session at 10 a.m. Tuesday, July 12, with classes from 8:30 a.m. to noon Monday through Thursday, July 13 through Aug. 11. The university offers a variety of lectures and a program of physical exercise classes for persons 55 years or older. The fee is $45. For more information or to enroll, call 293-4585.

SENTINEL

JUL 13 1983

+++
"MINISTRY AND Catechesis in the 80's," a course in the University of San Diego series Pastor-ing to Today's Christian Community, will be held at USD July 25 through July 29, 9 a.m. to noon in Camino Student Lounge.

Tuition for the course is $100 and 1.5 units of continuing education credit are available. Limited campus accommodations have been reserved for participants requiring rooms and board facilities. For information and reservations, call 293-4585.

B-2 THE TRIBUNE (2)

San Diego, Monday, July 11, 1983

University of Third Age set to open

The University of the Third Age, the summer education program of the University of San Diego, opens tomorrow. Students, who must be at least 55, can still sign up for the series, which will continue through Aug. 11. The cost of the lecture curriculum and physical exercise program is $45. The University of the Third Age provides an academic atmosphere without the pressures of exams, papers or grades. For information or to sign up for the classes, call Mal Rafferty at 293-4585.

Senior Living
by MARK MONDAY

JUL 1983

The Scene

THIRD AGE — The University of San Diego's special program for senior citizens, The University of the Third Age, will begin its summer session on July 12 and continue each Monday through Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to noon until August 11. The five-week program for those over 55 will include speakers on politics, tax planning, law enforcement, depression and a wide and interesting variety from practical matters to art appreciation. Evelyn Herrman, Chief of Senior Citizens for the City of San Diego, commented: "This is an opportunity for seniors to expand their horizons that is not available elsewhere." The fee is $50, the contact phone number for U3A is 293-4585. Ask for Marlene Brasefield.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JUL 11 1983

The Mexico-U.S. Law Institute at the University of San Diego's School of Law got a $10,000 grant from Signal Cos. The money will be used, according to law school dean Sheldon Krantz, for program development; one step is the appointment of Dr. Jorge A. Vargas, a specialist on law of the sea, as institute director as of Aug. 1.

Charles P. Lebeau, tax counsel for The Signal Companies; Dr. Jorge A. Vargas, director of the Mexican-U.S. Law Institute; Brewster L. Arms, senior vice president and general counsel for Signal, and Sheldon Krantz, dean of the USD Law School (left to right), after the presentation of Signal's $10,000 support grant to the institute.

Signal makes grant to USD

$10,000 benefits Mexico-U.S. Law Institute

A grant of $10,000 by the Charitable Foundation of The Signal Companies, Inc., of La Jolla, to the University of San Diego School of Law's Mexico-U.S. Law Institute, has been announced by Brewster L. Arms, senior vice president and general counsel for The Signal Companies and member of the School of Law Board of Visitors.

The support grant enabled the University to make the appointment of Dr. Jorge A. Vargas, noted international authority on the law of the sea, as director of the institute, which was established last fall. Vargas assumes the new post Aug. 1.

According to Sheldon Krantz, dean of the school, the Signal Foundation grant will be directed to program development.

The Mexico-U.S. Law Institute was established last fall to expand knowledge and the legal systems in the two countries, to undertake research and development projects emphasizing the reduction of unnecessary legal barriers to cooperation, to stimulate exchange of faculty and students, to increase the number of Mexican-American law students attending USD, and to focus national attention on important legal issues affecting the two countries.

Activities of the institute in the past several months have included training and legal education programs for lawyers, academicians, students, and corporate executives, with prominent Mexican attorneys and professors of law serving as faculty.

"We are pleased to support this important program," Arms said, "and we are convinced that the institute, under the leadership of Professor Vargas and Dean Krantz, will perform a significant and unique service not only to the legal profession in the two countries but to our broader relationships as well."

Signal's involvement with the University of San Diego also includes the presence of Daniel W. Derbes, Signal executive vice president, on the USD Board of Trustees, where he serves as a member of the Academic Affairs Committee, and of Charles P. LeBeau, Signal tax counsel, as adjunct tax professor on the Law School faculty and member of the University's Planned Giving Committee.

USD hosts SAT preparation course

A workshop, "Taming the SAT," will be held at the University of San Diego Monday through Wednesday, July 18-20, from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in Room 106, School of Nursing Auditorium.

Registration is $95 for the workshop co-sponsored by the University of Southern California College of Continuing Education and University of San Diego Continuing Education. Multiple registration and special discount rates are available. Registration includes 12 hours of instruction, an outline of key points, and materials for further study. For information or brochure, call 293-4585.

"Taming the SAT" is designed to improve student performance on the Scholastic Aptitude Test by teaching practical strategies and providing experience with typical test questions using a multimedia format of recorded instruction and overhead projection and includes question periods and a take-home study guide. "Taming the SAT," will also be held at the USD campus Aug. 29 through 31 and Sept. 24 and 25.

SENIOR WORLD

JUL 1983

Third Age program invites participants

The University of the Third Age, a special program for senior citizens sponsored by the University of San Diego (USD), will begin the summer session at 8:30 a.m., Tuesday, July 12, and continue (8:30 a.m. to noon) each Monday through Thursday until August 11.

The five-week program for persons over the age of 55 will be conducted in the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing for the lecture series and at the Sports Center for the physical fitness program. Students must provide their own transportation and be in reasonably good health. Fee for the course is $50.

Topics on the USA program include politics, addiction, depression, medical care, equality, patient's rights, annuities, tax planning, stained glass, law enforcement in San Diego and literature. In addition to USD faculty members, program speakers include Rita King, San Diego County schools; Evelyn Herrmann, chief of senior citizens for the city of San Diego; Dennis Hart, executive director, National Conference of Christians and Jews; David Gorsich, tax consultant; Norm Stemper, special assistant to the San Diego Chief of Police and Celia Ballesteros, attorney.

Information and reservations may be obtained by phoning Sister Marlene Brasefield at USD's Office of Continuing Education, 293-4585.

EVENING TRIBUNE

JUL 14 1983

USD sessions to focus on productivity

About 170 participants from the fields of business, labor, education and government will attend a three-day national conference on productivity to be held at the University of San Diego starting Tuesday.

The conference will address "Government Organization and Operation in the Economy" and is the third of four sessions being held prior to September's White House Conference on Productivity in Washington.

L. William Seidman, co-chairman of the White House conference and dean of the business school at Arizona State University, will open the formal session on Wednesday at the University's Solomon Lecture Hall.

William Norris, chairman and chief executive officer of Control Data Corp., will follow with the keynote speech. Dr. Arthur E. Hughes, president of USD, will also address the attendees and panelists.

William Baxter, assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's antitrust division, will address participants Wednesday evening.

The final preparatory conference will be held in August at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

BLADE TRIBUNE

JUL 15 1983

USD plans course series July 25-29

SAN DIEGO — "Ministry and Catechesis in the 80's," a course in the University of San Diego series, Pastoring to Today's Christian Community, will be held on the USD campus July 25 through July 29.

The course will be held from 9 a.m. to noon in the Camino Student Lounge.

Tuition for the course is $100 and 1.5 units of continuing education credit are available. Limited campus accommodations have been reserved for participants requiring room and board facilities.

"Ministry and Catechesis in the 80's," according to the Rev. Robert J. Hater, course instructor, "invites the Christian community to minister and catechize in the light of a new appreciation of the fundamental dynamism of the kingdom of God. The course will ground ministry/catechesis in the dying and rising of Jesus and in the kingdom insights about the poor, sinners, and need to forgive." Special application will be made to the parish, school and ministry in the marketplace.

Hater, associate professor of religious studies, University of Dayton, specializes in pastoral theology and catechesis. He is author of "Ministry Explosion," "Ministry in the Catholic High School" and several publications through the United States Catholic Conference on Evangelization, catechesis and the role of a diocesan religious education office.

BLADE TRIBUNE

JUL 20 1983

CPA review course set next month

SAN DIEGO — A CPA Review Course, reviewing areas tested on the Certified Public Accountant examination, will be held at the University of San Diego on Saturdays, Aug. 6 through Oct. 29.

Co-sponsored by the University of San Diego division of Continuing Education and San Diego State University College of Extended Studies, the course is offered in three parts: Accounting Theory and Practice, $275; Auditing, $125; and Law, $100.

Participants may enroll in the entire course for a tuition fee of $425. For information, call USD Continuing Education 293-4585. Taught entirely by USD and SDSU faculty, the 11-week course precedes the Nov. 24 CPA examination and is designed for students currently enrolled in or recently graduated from accounting programs.

A non-refundable deposit of $35 reserves space in the course and is credited toward tuition.

EVENING TRIBUNE

San Diego, Monday, July 18, 1983

Concert to spotlight big band era

The Dick Braun Big Band will hold a free concert and program, "Behind the Scenes with the Big Bands," at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the University of San Diego's Camino Theater. The program will emphasize the arrangers of the big band era and spotlight band leaders, vocalists, sidemen and the band styles.

Senior Living
by MARK MONDAY

JUL 20 1983

Los Angeles Times

Review for State CPA Exams Offered at USD

A review course for persons planning to take the state certified public accountant examination in November will begin Aug. 6 at the University of San Diego.

USD and San Diego State University faculty members will teach the 11-week course covering accounting theory and practice, auditing and law. Participants may register for one or more of the three parts or may enroll for the entire course for a fee of $425.

SD BUSINESS JOURNAL

JUL 25 1983

On top of the bottom line

Another business to weather the recession with an intact balance sheet is the University of San Diego (USD). With a record $27.9 million in revenues for the year ended Aug. 31, 1982, USD last year paid off the last of a $1.8 million deficit which had plagued it since 1971.

Even though the institution is about 82 percent tuition dependent, "the recession didn't impact us — we didn't see any drop off in applications or number of students," explained Jack Boyce, vice president of financial affairs.

If anything, USD made out better. Last year, it announced plans to construct three buildings, at a cost of $10.2 million, and Boyce figures USD saved upwards of 25 percent on construction costs because deals were cut with contractors hungry for business.

With a Moody's bond rating of BAA-plus, USD "hasn't used its $2 million line of credit" with a local bank in the past six years, boasted Boyce. USD's major debt is about $12 million worth of tax-exempt California Education Facilitation (CEFA) bonds, which carry interest rates of between 7.5 percent and 10 percent.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

JUL 21 1983

Eleven-week CPA review course slated next month

A CPA Review Course, reviewing areas tested on the Certified Public Accountant examination, will be held at the University of San Diego on Saturdays, Aug. 6 through Oct. 29.

Co-sponsored by the University of San Diego division of Continuing Education and San Diego State University College of Extended Studies, the course is offered in three parts: Accounting Theory and Practice, $275; Auditing, $125; and Law, $100.

Participants may enroll in the entire course for a tuition fee of $425.

For information, call USD Continuing Education 293-4585.

Taught entirely by

USD and SDSU faculty, the 11-week course precedes the Nov. 2 through 4 CPA examination and is designed for students currently enrolled in or recently graduated from accounting programs.

A non-refundable deposit of $35 reserves space in the course and is credited toward tuition.

JUL 1983

CPA REVIEW — On a new streamlined method of preparing for the CPA exam. 8:30am-noon. USD. 293-4585.

SAN DIEGO NEWSLINE

JUL 20 1983

27

Wednesday

Jim Johnson, patient's advocate, USD Law School, will speak on "Patient's Rights and the California Advocacy Program" at San Diego Federal Savings & Loan, 3954 West Point Loma Blvd. at 1:30 p.m. 474-7320.

BLADE TRIBUNE

JUL 22 1983

USD offers dialogue on war and peace

SAN DIEGO — A day of dialogue on the American Catholic Bishops' Pastoral Letter on War and Peace will be held at the University of San Diego Saturday in the Camino Theater.

The Rev. Robert Egan will open the meeting at 12:30 p.m. His topic is "Attitudes and Spirituality —

The Pastoral Letter: the Call to Conversion." Following Egan's talk, 25 group leaders will speak with persons attending the sessions.

Primarily directed to Roman Catholics to introduce them to the spirit and content of the letter, the day is open to persons of all creeds. A liturgy celebrated by Bishop Leo T. Maher at 5:15 p.m. in the Immaculate will close the day. There is no admission charge.

Egan is a Jesuit priest and a native of Chicago where he attended Loyola University and the Jesuit School of Theology.

Aztecs, Toreros unveil basketball schedules

San Diego State's basketball team will open the home portion of the 1983-84 season against the team that ended its 1981-82 campaign.

UC Irvine, which defeated the Aztecs 70-69 in the first round of the 1982 National Invitation Tournament, will be in San Diego Saturday, Dec. 3.

The game against the Anteaters is one of 15 home games the Aztecs will play. SDSU's 27-game schedule, which contains 16 Western Athletic Conference games, two tournaments and seven other non-conference games, was announced Thursday.

An SDSU spokesman said one game still may be added. NCAA Division I teams are allowed to play 28 regular-season games. The Aztecs are negotiating with Nevada-Las Vegas, Marquette and NCAA runner-up Houston.

The Aztecs will open the season Monday, Nov. 28, playing St. Mary's in Moraga. SDSU will host Irvine, Cal-State Long Beach, Arizona, Navy and the University of San Diego in non-conference games. SDSU will visit the Gaels and the University of Texas.

The Aztecs will host the Eighth Annual Cabrillo Classic Thursday and Friday, Dec. 29 and 30. East Tennessee State, Oklahoma State and the University of Washington also are entered. SDSU will join Oklahoma City, Long Island University and the University of Tulsa in the Oil Capital Classic in Tulsa Friday and Saturday, Dec. 9 and 10.

TOURNEY CHANGE/ The NCAA has added a fifth game to the opening round of the 1984 Division I men's basketball tournament. The fifth game will be used to narrow a 53-team field to a 48-team bracket. The added game also will keep a balance of 24 at-large teams and 24 automatic qualifiers in the bracket. A fifth game was required for balance in the bracket because the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference will be eligible for automatic qualification for the first time. The total number of conferences with automatic qualifiers was raised to 29 with that addition.

SDSU opens WAC play on the road, journeying to Texas-El Paso Thursday, Jan. 12, and the University of New Mexico Saturday, Jan. 14. The Aztecs host Utah (Thursday, Jan. 19), Brigham Young (Saturday, Jan. 21), and Hawaii (Saturday, Jan. 28) on their first conference home stand.

The WAC tournament to determine which team receives the automatic berth in the NCAA tournament will be played March 5 through 10 at an undetermined site.

Two members of the 1982-83 team will not return — guard Terry Carr and forward Steve Kopicki, both freshmen a year ago. Their spots on the roster will be given to two of eight newly recruited players. Seven players from a year ago will return, giving SDSU the NCAA-maximum 15 scholarship players.

Carr had been touted as the Aztec point guard of the future but never lived up to the expectations of SDSU coach "Smokey" Gaines. Gaines did not plan to invite Carr back. Kopicki, who played sparingly a year ago, has left SDSU to attend a junior college.

USD also has announced its schedule for next season. The Toreros open play Friday, Nov. 18, hosting the Australian National team. USD will play 16 home games on its 28-game schedule, including six West Coast Athletic Conference games.

The Toreros also host St. Thomas College of St. Paul, Minn., Army, Cal-State Long Beach, Spring Arbor (Mich.) College, UC Irvine, Idaho State, University of Idaho, Western Illinois, and Mount Marty College of Yankton, S.D.

USD plays at Texas Tech, Northern Arizona, UC Santa Barbara and SDSU. The game against the Aztecs is Thursday, Jan. 5. The Toreros will join Nevada-Reno, Florida A&M and UC Davis at the Wolfpack Classic in Reno Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 28 and 29.

USD opens WCAC play Thursday, Jan. 19, hosting Gonzaga.

Orientation Set At USD

SAN DIEGO — A record number of incoming freshmen, transfer students, and their parents is expected to arrive at the University of San Diego for Orientation Week, Aug. 30 through Sept. 6.

Among the events planned for the new students are programs to introduce them to campus life, including areas such as financial aid, college survival skills, club and professional society meetings, and tours of San Diego attractions.

"An equally important part of the week," says Thomas Cosgrove, Associate Dean of Student Affairs, "are the social events designed to help students get to know each other. Our new USD'ers will spend an evening at Sea World, hear a live concert at a Hawaiian luau, compete in the fifth annual USD sand castle contest at Torrey Pines beach, attend a Padres game, and on Labor Day join in our campus Olympics."

The first day of the program will also feature special orientation for freshman parents, who will hear Dean Burke and Dr. Author E. Hughes, USD president, in a welcome to the campus and will be hosted at a reception in Founders patio.

According to President Hughes, enrollment at the University is expected to reach a record high this fall.

A private Catholic institution, the University of San Diego comprises the College of Arts and Science and four professional schools.

EVENING TRIBUNE

AUG 1 1983

A course offering preparation for the Certified Public Accountant examination scheduled for Nov. 2-4 will be taught Saturdays, beginning this week, through October at the University of San Diego. Three parts will be offered: accounting theory and practice, for $275; auditing, $125; and law, $100. The entire course may be taken for $425. For information, call 293-4585.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

AUG 1983

Black and White—An exhibition of recent photographs by USD alumnus James Levett is on view at University of San Diego's Founders Gallery thru Aug. 19. Mon.-Fri. noon-5. Alcala Park. 291-6480.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

AUG 5 1983

Photographs by James Levett, University of San Diego Founders Gallery, through Aug. 19.

SAN DIEGO UNION

AUG 7 1983

Colleges

Founders Gallery: "Images of Black and White," photographs by James Levett. Through Aug. 19. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

BLADE TRIBUNE

AUG 26 1983

USD welcomes parents

SAN DIEGO — More than 1,200 parents of incoming freshmen and transfer students are expected on the University of San Diego campus Monday, Aug. 29 to attend Parents' Orientation Day.

Parents will be welcomed to campus by USD President Author E. Hughes at 2:30 p.m. in Camino Theater. Parents will have the opportunity to meet USD faculty members at a reception on Camino Patio at 3:30 p.m.

SENTINEL

AUG 10 1983

USD building steps forward

Structural steel framing on the $1.6 million Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego has been completed by the M. H. Golden Company.

The two-story, multi-purpose building, scheduled for completion in February 1984, will provide a 230-seat auditorium, four large conference rooms and office space for the university.

Special architectural features will be incorporated into the design of the center, including hand-crafted decorative moldings, arched windows and sculptured panels.

The Golden Company is also serving as general contractor and construction manager for Olin Hall, a $2.7 million facility under construction for USD's School of Business.

The Hall is scheduled for completion in July 1984.

Plans call for the auditorium with its elevated stage to be used as a lecture hall. The conference rooms, intended primarily as instruction areas, will also be available for business groups in the summer months. Architects Tucker, Sadler and Associates have designed the 17,600-square-foot structure to complement the 15th Century Spanish style architecture of the campus.

Aug. 1983

EVENING TRIBUNE

AUG 13 1983

USD TO HOST CHRISTIAN LEADERS

Fuller Seminary to sponsor fourth convocation

Fuller Theological Seminary of Pasadena will sponsor its fourth annual National Convocation of Christian Leaders Monday through Friday at the University of San Diego.

The Rev. Dr. Kenneth Chafin of South Main Baptist Church in Houston will address the opening plenary session at 3 p.m. Monday. The Rev. John Tickle of Immaculate Heart of Mary Cathedral in Las Cruces, N.M., will address the 7:30 p.m. session.

Dr. David A. Hubbard, Fuller president, will conduct worship and Bible study sessions on "Peace and Justice in Old Testament Writings" at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday through Thursday.

"This convocation is a direct challenge to the entire Christian community to seek, find and share more effective ways of expressing the ministry of love and service in a needy world," Hubbard said.

DR. DAVID HUBBARD
Seminary president

REV. BELLAGAMBA
With Catholic mission

Anderson, Ind.; Dr. Ray Stedman of Peninsula Bible Church in Palo Alto; Dr. Paul Cedar of Lake Avenue Congregational Church in Pasadena; and the Rev. Anthony Bellagamba of the U.S. Catholic Mission Association in Washington, D.C.

Also addressing plenary sessions will be Dr. Phil Goble, a playwright-author who wrote and performs "The Rabbi From Tarsus," based on the life of Paul the Apostle; and Dr. Cecilio Arastia of the Presbyterian Church U.S.

Local participants in the convocation are the Long of Youth Specialties, Malachi J. Rafferty, director of continuing education at USD; Maj. Lincoln Upton of the Salvation Army; and Dr. G. Keith Olson, a psychologist.

Long will lead youth programming workshops. Rafferty will conduct a workshop on parish programs for the unemployed. Upton, administrator of the Salvation Army's Adult Rehabilitation Center, will discuss Christian counseling for alcoholics. Olson will speak on stress management in middle life.

The theme of the convocation, which meets annually, is "The Lordship of Jesus Christ and the Local Church."

Next week's conference is being held in cooperation with the American Baptist Churches, Point Loma Nazarene College, the San Diego Roman Catholic Diocese, the San Diego County Ecumenical Conference, San Diego Youth for Christ, the Salvation Army, USD, Young Life and Youth Specialties Inc.

SD BUSINESS NEWS

AUG 15 1983

The $1.6 million Manchester Executive Conference Center, which will contain a 230 seat auditorium at the University of San Diego, has completed the structural steel framing phase. Completion is due July 1984.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

AUG 15 1983

Aug. 26 is enrollment deadline for a College of Advocacy for student lawyers to be conducted by the San Diego Inn or Court Inc. in conjunction with the University of San Diego on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Saturdays from Sept. 20 through Oct. 29.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

AUG 19 1983

SMALL BUSINESS/ "Business, Tax, and Succession Planning for the 1980s," a small business forum, will be held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 23, in the DeSales Hall Board Room at the University of San Diego, Alcala Park. Cost is $20. To register, call 293-4523.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

AUG 23 1983

Olin Hall Under Way

Construction is under way on Olin Hall, a $2.7 million facility for the University of San Diego's School of Business. M.H. Golden is the general contractor and construction manager for the three-story building to be located at the west end of the USD campus. The project is expected to reach completion in July.

SENTINEL

AUG 23 1983

Building at USD gets under way

Construction is under way on Olin Hall, a $2.7 million facility for the University of San Diego's School of Business.

The M.H. Golden Company will serve as general contractor and construction manager for the three-story building, to be located at the west end of the USD campus. The hall is scheduled for completion in July, 1984.

The 45,000-square-foot facility will house 20 classrooms, 48 offices, six seminar rooms, faculty and student lounge space, and centers for student accounting, word processing and computer science instruction.

According to Dr. Author Hughes, president of the university, enrollment in the School of Business has tripled over the past five years, creating an urgent need for increased space.

SENTINEL

AUG 21 1983

USD law school has question for you

Local residents are being invited to participate in a survey of public attitudes about the legal profession in the Legal Services Project of the San Diego Law Center, located at the University of San Diego School of Law.

Selected at random by senior USD law students and interviewed by telephone, residents are asked to respond to some 50 questions which will help determine how well the public is being served by county attorneys.

Tabulation of the results, says USD law professor Robert Simmons, project director, will provide information to lawyers on how they can improve their legal services, and will be used to determine ways of helping county residents, identify and obtain effective legal assistance when it is needed.

Survey activities will continue through the next three weeks. Results will be tabulated by computer housed at the USD Law School and will be released in a report to be issued early in the fall.

According to Simmons, a workshop, to be held in late October or early November, will join lawyers and residents in a "brainfest," with open discussions of legal fees, problems in finding competent attorneys, and other obstacles encountered by persons in need of legal assistance.

Individuals who wish to respond to the survey may do so by calling Professor Simmons at 291-6480 ext. 4378.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

AUG 25 1983

Finn elected

Sara Finn of La Jolla, director of public relations for the University of San Diego, has been elected to the Board of the newly formed Public Relations Association of Southern California Colleges (PRASCC).

Finn also was a panelist at the Preparatory Conference on Government Organization and Operation and the Role of the Government in the Economy, held at USD in July.

SAN DIEGO UNION

AUG 21 1983

M.H. Golden Co. said it completed framing the structural steel at the $1.6 million Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego. The two-story building with a 230-seat auditorium is due for completion in February. Golden also said that completion is scheduled next July on the $2.7 million, 45,000-square-foot Olin Hall classroom building at USD.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

AUG 25 1983

Church to celebrate job program

The Job Program organized by Mary, Starz of the Sea and All Hallows' parishes will continue to operate an office at All Hallows'.

Programs will be held on the last Monday of each month. Volunteers have been staffing the office during the summer, but program officials are seeking funds so that the office may again be staffed by a permanent part secretary. According to Job Program organizers, the need for a program for the re-employment of skilled and professional persons still exists. "We are grateful for past involvement and continued support," said Sara Finn, Job Program coordinator.

SD BUSINESS JOURNAL

AUG 29 1983

... and even briefer

UCAN, the Utility Consumers Action Network formed as a consumer watchdog over SDG&E, believes it can garner at least 16,000 members chipping in $4 each through SDG&E bill inserts mailed this month and next. But UCAN could cause a non-energy stir from its organizational headquarters in the University of San Diego law school's Center for Public Interest Law. Two USD trustees — O. Morris Sievert and Dan Derbes — also serve as SDG&E directors.

SAN DIEGO UNION

AUG 28 1983

Colleges

Founders Gallery: University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

SD BUSINESS JOURNAL

AUG 29 1983

FUNDRAISING

COMBO'S 1983 corporate and individual solicitation drive proved a success, with $507,805 garnered by the arts support organization. That's up 8 percent over last year's total. The Signal Cos. has donated $10,000 to USD's Mexico-U.S. Law Institute.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

AUG 28 1983

Around Town

Orientation day for parents

An orientation day for parents will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday at the University of San Diego campus. Parents will have an opportunity to meet USD faculty members at a reception scheduled at 3:30 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

AUG 25 1983

USD picks two aides

Tony Ricciardulli and Steve Bridges, former Mesa College football players, have been appointed assistant coaches at the University of San Diego, it was announced yesterday.

Ricciardulli, who was the offensive coordinator at Imperial Valley College, will coach the quarterbacks and wide receivers for the Toreros. He was an honorable mention All-American at quarterback and went on to play cornerback at the University of Iowa. Bridges, who was a coach at Madison High, will coach the running backs.

Both were members of the 1978 South Coast Conference championship team at Mesa and Ricciardulli was the SCC and San Diego County Player of the Year.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

AUG 25 1983

The University of San Diego Will Name Assistant Football Coaches

The University of San Diego today will announce that two former San Diego Mesa College players have been named to its football team as assistant coaches. Former quarterback Tony Ricciardulli will coach the quarterbacks and wide receivers, while former wide receiver Steve Bridges will coach the running backs.

Ricciardulli was named the South Coast Conference Player of the Year and the winner of the Joe Roth Memorial Award as San Diego County Community College Player of the Year in 1978. He played cornerback for the University of Iowa during the 1979-80 seasons and served as assistant football coach at Imperial Valley College in Imperial in 1981-82.

Bridges played wide receiver for Mesa in 1978, played two games for San Francisco State in 1979 before getting hurt, and served as assistant football coach at Madison High School.

SAN DIEGO CLIPPING SERVICE

SENTINEL

AUG 29 1982

Toreros open grid workouts

The University of San Diego football team has a tough act to follow as it embarks on the 1982 season.

Coach Bill Williams' Toreros have to try to top last season, which saw them finish 9-1 and reach as high as seventh in the NCAA, Division III poll.

Williams, his staff and 99 athletes opened camp last weekend. Forty players are back from the '81 season, along with 30 freshmen and 29 transfers.

The Toreros open their season Sept. 11 at the University of Redlands. Their first home game is Sept. 18, against Clairemont-Mudd.

"The highlight of camp has to be both our defensive and offensive lines," says Williams. "As far as running shape, they are further ahead than last year's group. Also, we are very pleased to have eight quarterbacks in camp with four of them being freshmen."

USD's first intersquad scrimmage will be today at 2 p.m. at the school's football field. On Saturday at 7 p.m., the Toreros will hold their second and last scrimmage of the year before the season opens.

Sports

AUG 30 1982

Toreros: new coach, new goals

By Rick Davis
Tribune Sportswriter

Although it smacks of cockeyed optimism, Brian Fogarty says an 8-2 record is "a realistic goal" for his University of San Diego football team this fall.

"Actually, anything between 6-4 and 8-2 is our goal," says the 33-year-old coach, who was hired to fill the Torero job last spring after Bill Williams resigned under pressure.

"The biggest key to our season will be how well the team makes the transition to a new program. I do think they have the potential to go 8-2."

Several things must fall into place, though, if the Toreros are to reach their goal. It's not just a matter of reaching their potential.

Although 34 lettermen return, there will be more than 50 newcomers, including about 25 freshmen. It's the culmination of some patchwork recruiting which Fogarty and his staff have scrambled to do since he left St. Francis High in La Canada and came south in March.

Among the recruits, Fogarty sees one blue-chip, offensive lineman Brian Flood, a 6-foot-2, 235-pound junior who transferred from Menlo Junior College.

"Brian should step right into a starting position," judged Fogarty. "He was highly recommended and has a lot of ability. We were lucky to get him. He came to San Diego on a vacation this year and just dropped in the football office to get some information."

"We were able to sell him on the area, the school and the program."

Fogarty, who stressed a run-oriented team in four seasons at St. Francis, intends to modify that by having his new team throw "about 20 times a game."

"That's why quarterback is a big questionmark going into the season," he added. "We'll throw 35 percent of the time and run 65 percent. That's the average college game."

Eric Sweet, the 1982 starter, was graduated, so his successor appears to be Phil Spencer, a pocket-sized (5-7, 165) former defensive back/running back. Spencer threw one option pass last fall.

Returning starters on offense include three-year starter and wide receiver Mike Rish (40 receptions for 637 yards and six touchdowns), tailback Jerome McAlpin (104 rushes for 452 yards), tight end Mitch Greene (nine catches for 122 yards and two TDs) and 6-6, 260-pound tackle John Amarillas. McAlpin, a fifth-year senior, is undecided about returning for his final season.

The center spot also boasts experience with Steve Ast and Gary Holley back after alternating as starters in '82.

"As offensive coordinator, I'm putting in a new offense with a slot I and pro sets," said Fogarty. "Of course, it has to fall into place in a short amount of time this fall. We don't have spring practice here. It would have helped with the new program."

Two players, strong safety Greg Stein and nose guard Marvin Castillo, head the Oklahoma-styled (three down linemen, four linebackers) defense, which also has the benefit of the return of defensive coordinator Kevin McGarry. Stein was the team's defensive player of the year and Castillo has added 10 pounds to scale out at 270 as an imposing force in the middle.

Tackle Lance Stevenson and free safety Chip Jarvis are two other incumbents.

Considering the adjustments required of a new program, the Toreros figure to settle down and improve as the season progresses.

"The fact that our first six opponents are Division III schools, the same as us, helps the situation," enthused Fogarty. "At least that saves the bigger, tougher opponents for the end. We would like to split those last four (games) against Division II teams."

A mismatch of recruiting programs surfaces when Fogarty compares his to Division II schools.

"We have no athletic grants-in-aid, only academic scholarships and scholarships based on need," he explained. "Those are Division III rules, not just this school's."

"It's a disadvantage and an advantage. We don't get some of the talent we would like to get because some kids go somewhere else where they can get free rides."

USD SCHEDULE

Sept. 10	Redlands	7:30 p.m.
Sept. 17	At Claremont-McKenna	1:30 p.m.
Sept. 24	At Pomona-Pitzer	7:30 p.m.
Oct. 1	Occidental	7:30 p.m.
Oct. 8	At Whittier	7:30 p.m.
Oct. 15	LaVerne	1 p.m.
Oct. 22	Cal State Hayward	1:30 p.m.
Oct. 29	At Cal Lutheran	2 p.m.
Nov. 5	Azusa Pacific	1 p.m.
Nov. 12	At St. Mary's	1 p.m.

JEROME McALPIN

JOHN AMARILLAS

MIKE RISH

SAN DIEGO UNION

AUG 30 1983

The Toreros will try a new approach

While tails wag the dogs at universities throughout the land, officials at the University of San Diego long have held that athletics are part of the collegiate experience and not the reason for having a university.

Coaches at Alcalá Park are not going to get rich off their television shows. Players are not seen in fancy cars. You could never get lost in the crowd at one of their football games.

Quietly and slowly, though, the Toreros advance.

And the USD football program will take another forward this season with the addition of 33-year-old Brian Fogarty as head coach.

For the past four years, Fogarty has been head coach at St. Francis High in Pasadena, where his club won three Del Rey League titles, made it to the playoffs all four seasons and twice got as far as the semifinals.

Fogarty was a graduate of St. Francis High and coached at his alma mater as an assistant for nine years before becoming the head coach. He has a solid understanding of the sports program at a Catholic school.

"We were surprised by the caliber of applicants when we began our search for a new coach," says USD athletic director Rev. Patrick Cahill. "We had a number of choices. Brian was everything we were looking for, a proven winner with a background in our type of program."

USD's type of program is pretty simple. The school offers no scholarships in football. There are no easy classes. There is no national acclaim, since USD competes on the Division III ladder of the NCAA.

Still, the Toreros have had surprising success. They finished 9-1 in 1981 — and Fogarty has 15 starters returning from a team that was 4-5 a year ago.

Fogarty, who replaced Bill Williams when the latter was asked to resign last winter, will install a new offense this season. The Toreros will attack from the slot I, but they will retain their 5-2 Oklahoma defense and Fogarty suspects they will retain their winning attitudes.

"I have a gut feeling we'll go somewhere between 6-4 and 8-2," he said.

USD has weapons. About the only thing Fogarty must replace offensively is quarterback Eric Sweet and he has an able candidate in Phil Spencer (5-foot-7, 160 pounds).

Spencer played running back and defensive back last year, but Fogarty sees him as being perfect as the slot I quarterback. "Our pass offense will be mostly from the sprint out and play action," says Fogarty.

Most of USD's offense, however, will be on the ground. Fogarty will employ a wingback to complement the head-on thrusts of the I backs.

The top tailback is Jerome McAlpin (5-9, 185), who was one of the two starting split backs in Williams' pro set system. A senior, McAlpin gained 424 yards at 4.1 yards a carry last year. He will be backed by sophomore Cleveland Eastman.

Spencer will be capable target in senior split end Mike Rish (40 catches, 637 yards last year) and tandeming tight ends Mitch Green (6-0, 200) and Bill Jolley (6-1, 200). Three of Fogarty's top linemen — returnees Steve Ast (6-1, 215) and Gary Holley (6-3, 230) and junior college transfer Brian Flood — are centers, meaning there will likely be some juggling.

John Amarillas (6-6, 260), who was the center last year, is also a candidate.

The bulk of USD's 15 returning starters are on defense.

Strong safety Greg Stein (5-11, 185) was the Toreros' defensive player of the year. Also back is running mate Chip Jarvis (5-10, 170) at free safety and cornerbacks Craig Carlyle (5-10, 175), Tony Johnson (6-0, 180) and Jerry Schmit (5-9, 180). The forward wall is anchored by nose tackle Marvin Castillo (6-1, 260), who is flanked by Lance Stevenson (6-2, 225) and Randy Anguiano (6-0, 200).

From the list of George Hawley (6-0, 195), Brian Long (5-10, 190), John Noonan (6-0, 205), Joe Monohan (6-1, 185) and Jeff Vetnar (5-10, 210), Fogarty must find two inside and two outside linebackers.

"We feel we have the makings of a fine defense," said Fogarty. USD also has the makings of a tough schedule at its level. Division III schools are few and far between along the West Coast. USD's last four games will be against Division II schools, which are allowed to award scholarships.

— Bill Center

SENTINEL

AUG 31 1983

USD has new coach and veteran lineup

History is on Mesa College's side this year.

Since Len Smorin took over as head coach in 1976, he has fielded four teams with sophomore quarterbacks. Three of them led the Olympians to South Coast Conference championships.

This fall, with sophomore Trent Annicharico calling signals, Smorin will try for his fourth conference crown. The Olympians finished fourth in the SCC last year.

"Anytime we have had a veteran quarterback we have been a very good football team. We hope that remains true," says Smorin, who carries a 50-22 record as Mesa's coach.

The Olympians, who open their season Sept. 17 at perennially tough Phoenix College, plan to celebrate their school's 20th anniversary with another pass-happy attack.

Annicharico threw for 2,229 yards and 21 touchdowns last year, and has a chance to break many of the school records set by former Olympian great Steve Fairchild.

Overall last year, Mesa ranked sixth in nation in passing yardage among community colleges, and first in the county schools in the same category.

But, as any coach will swear on a stack of playbooks, it is defense that wins football games. Defense was often a problem last year, when Mesa recorded a 7-3 record, 3-3 in SCC play. Smorin hopes he has solved some of those problems this year.

The solution lies in a blend of new and returning players. The two key newcomers are

Madison High graduate Brad Clark (6-foot-5, 240), a lineman who redshirted last year at Arizona State, and Kearny grad Tom Tatum (6-foot-5, 225), who previously played center at San Diego State but will be Mesa's middle linebacker.

Four players return in the secondary — Richard Frye (who prepped at Claremont), Jim Kennedy (Mission Bay) and D.D. Lewis and Troy Spencer (Madison).

"We'll be much improved on defense," says Smorin. "In the past, we would wait and react to the play, but no longer. We are going to play a much more attacking, aggressive style. If we can force our opponents into making mistakes, instead of just waiting for them, we can again be successful."

Still, the hallmark of this Mesa team will again be offense. Annicharico will be throwing the ball to new people, since four receivers were lost to graduation. Freshman Rocky Gailord (Point Loma) is expected to see a lot of action, as is returnee Kenny Carroll.

Kicker Andy Hastings (Point Loma), who averaged 39.2 yards per punt and made 75 percent of his field goals last year, returns.

"We feel that we could become a very good football team," says Smorin. "We should have a bearing on the conference race, if we can stay away from any injury problems."

After traveling to Phoenix Sept. 17, the Olympians open their home schedule Sept. 24 against their oldest rival, City.

USD defensive backs Greg Wilson, left, and Pete McMahon vie for a pass in practice.

AUG 30 1982

Toreros: new coach, new goals

By Rick Davis
Tribune Sportswriter

Although it smacks of cockeyed optimism, Brian Fogarty says an 8-2 record is "a realistic goal" for his University of San Diego football team this fall.

"Actually, anything between 6-4 and 8-2 is our goal," says the 33-year-old coach, who was hired to fill the Torero job last spring after Bill Williams resigned under pressure.

"The biggest key to our season will be how well the team makes the transition to a new program. I do think they have the potential to go 8-2."

Several things must fall into place, though, if the Toreros are to reach their goal. It's not just a matter of reaching their potential.

Although 34 lettermen return, there will be more than 50 newcomers, including about 25 freshmen. It's the culmination of some patchwork recruiting which Fogarty and his staff have scrambled to do since he left St. Francis High in La Canada and came south in March.

Among the recruits, Fogarty sees one blue-chip, offensive lineman Brian Flood, a 6-foot-2, 235-pound junior who transferred from Menlo Junior College.

"Brian should step right into a starting position," judged Fogarty. "He was highly recommended and has a lot of ability. We were lucky to get him. He came to San Diego on a vacation this year and just dropped in the football office to get some information."

"We were able to sell him on the area, the school and the program."

Fogarty, who stressed a run-oriented team in four seasons at St. Francis, intends to modify that by having his new team throw "about 20 times a game."

"That's why quarterback is a big questionmark going into the season," he added. "We'll throw 35 percent of the time and run 65 percent. That's the average college game."

Eric Sweet, the 1982 starter, was graduated, so his successor appears to be Phil Spencer, a pocket-sized (5-7, 165) former defensive back/running back. Spencer threw one option pass last fall.

Returning starters on offense include three-year starter and wide receiver Mike Rish (40 receptions for 637 yards and six touchdowns), tailback Jerome McAlpin (104 rushes for 452 yards), tight end Mitch Greene (nine catches for 122 yards and two TDs) and 6-6, 260-pound tackle John Amarillas. McAlpin, a fifth-year senior, is undecided about returning for his final season.

The center spot also boasts experience with Steve Ast and Gary Holley back after alternating as starters in '82. "As offensive coordinator, I'm putting in a new offense with a slot I and pro sets," said Fogarty. "Of course, it has to fall into place in a short amount of time this fall. We don't have spring practice here. It would have helped with the new program."

Two players, strong safety Greg Stein and nose guard Marvin Castillo, head the Oklahoma-style (three down linemen, four linebackers) defense, which also has the benefit of the return of defensive coordinator Kevin McGarry. Stein was the team's defensive player of the year and Castillo has added 10 pounds to scale out at 270 as an imposing force in the middle.

Tackle Lance Stevenson and free safety Chip Jarvis are two other incumbents.

Considering the adjustments required of a new program, the Toreros figure to settle down and improve as the season progresses.

"The fact that our first six opponents are Division III schools, the same as us, helps the situation," enthused Fogarty. "At least that saves the bigger, tougher opponents for the end. We would like to split those last four (games) against Division II teams."

A mismatch of recruiting programs surfaces when Fogarty compares his to Division II schools. "We have no athletic grants-in-aid, only academic scholarships and scholarships based on need," he explained. "Those are Division III rules, not just this school's."

"It's a disadvantage and an advantage. We don't get some of the talent we would like to get because some kids go somewhere else where they can get free rides."

USD SCHEDULE

Sept. 10	Redlands	7:30 p.m.
Sept. 17	At Claremont-McKenna	1:30 p.m.
Sept. 24	At Pomona-Pitzer	7:30 p.m.
Oct. 1	Occidental	7:30 p.m.
Oct. 8	At Whittier	7:30 p.m.
Oct. 15	LaVerne	7:30 p.m.
Oct. 22	Cal State Hayward	1 p.m.
Oct. 29	At Cal Lutheran	1:30 p.m.
Nov. 5	Azusa Pacific	2 p.m.
Nov. 12	At St. Mary's	1 p.m.

JEROME McALPIN

JOHN AMARILLAS

MIKE RISH

SAN DIEGO UNION

AUG 30 1983

The Toreros will try a new approach

While tails wag the dogs at universities throughout the land, officials at the University of San Diego long have held that athletics are part of the collegiate experience and not the reason for having a university.

Coaches at Alcalá Park are not going to get rich off their television shows. Players are not seen in fancy cars. You could never get lost in the crowd at one of their football games.

Quietly and slowly, though, the Toreros advance.

And the USD football program will take another forward this season with the addition of 33-year-old Brian Fogarty as head coach.

For the past four years, Fogarty has been head coach at St. Francis High in Pasadena, where his club won three Del Rey League titles, made it to the playoffs all four seasons and twice got as far as the semifinals.

Fogarty was a graduate of St. Francis High and coached at his alma mater as an assistant for nine years before becoming the head coach. He has a solid understanding of the sports program at a Catholic school.

"We were surprised by the caliber of applicants when we began our search for a new coach," says USD athletic director Rev. Patrick Cahill. "We had a number of choices. Brian was everything we were looking for, a proven winner with a background in our type of program."

USD's type of program is pretty simple. The school offers no scholarships in football. There are no easy classes. There is no national acclaim, since USD competes on the Division III ladder of the NCAA.

Still, the Toreros have had surprising success — they finished 9-1 in 1981 — and Fogarty has 15 starters returning from a team that was 4-5 a year ago.

Fogarty, who replaced Bill Williams when the latter was asked to resign last winter, will install a new offense this season. The Toreros will attack from the slot I, but they will retain their 5-2 Oklahoma defense and Fogarty suspects they will retain their winning attitudes.

"I have a gut feeling we'll go somewhere between 6-4 and 8-2," he said.

USD has weapons. About the only thing Fogarty must replace offensively is quarterback Eric Sweet and he has an able candidate in Phil Spencer (5-foot-7, 160 pounds).

Spencer played running back and defensive back last year, but Fogarty sees him as being perfect as the slot I quarterback. "Our pass offense will be mostly from the sprint out and play action," says Fogarty.

Most of USD's offense, however, will be on the ground. Fogarty will employ a wingback to complement the head-on thrusts of the I backs.

The top tailback is Jerome McAlpin (5-9, 185), who was one of the two starting split backs in Williams' pro set system. A senior, McAlpin gained 424 yards at 4.1 yards a carry last year. He will be backed by sophomore Cleveland Eaton.

Spencer will be capable target in senior split end Mike Rish (40 catches, 637 yards last year) and tandem tight ends Mitch Green (6-0, 200) and Bill Jolley (6-1, 200). Three of Fogarty's top linemen — returnees Steve Ast (6-1, 215) and Gary Holley (6-3, 230) and junior college transfer Brian Flood — are centers, meaning there will likely be some juggling.

John Amarillas (6-6, 260), who was the center last year, is also a candidate.

The bulk of USD's 15 returning starters are on defense.

Strong safety Greg Stein (5-11, 185) was the Toreros' defensive player of the year. Also back is running mate Chip Jarvis (5-10, 170) at free safety and cornerbacks Craig Carlyle (5-10, 175), Tony Johnson (6-0, 180) and Jerry Schmit (5-9, 180). The forward wall is anchored by nose tackle Marvin Castillo (6-1, 260), who is flanked by Lance Stevenson (6-2, 225) and Randy Anguiano (6-0, 200).

From the list of George Hawley (6-0, 195), Brian Long (5-10, 190), John Noonan (6-0, 205), Joe Monohan (6-1, 185) and Jeff Vetrar (5-10, 210), Fogarty must find two inside and two outside linebackers.

"We feel we have the makings of a fine defense," said Fogarty. USD also has the makings of a tough schedule at its level. Division III schools are few and far between along the West Coast. USD's last four games will be against Division II schools, which are allowed to award scholarships.

— Bill Center

AUG 31 1983

USD has new coach and veteran lineup

History is on Mesa College's side this year.

Since Len Smorin took over as head coach in 1976, he has fielded four teams with sophomore quarterbacks. Three of them led the Olympians to South Coast Conference championships.

This fall, with sophomore Trent Annicharico calling signals, Smorin will try for his fourth conference crown. The Olympians finished fourth in the SCC last year.

"Anytime we have had a veteran quarterback we have been a very good football team. We hope that remains true," says Smorin, who carries a 50-22 record as Mesa's coach.

The Olympians, who open their season Sept. 17 at perennially tough Phoenix College, plan to celebrate their school's 20th anniversary with another pass-happy attack.

Annicharico threw for 2,229 yards and 21 touchdowns last year, and has a chance to break many of the school records set by former Olympian great Steve Fairchild.

Overall last year, Mesa ranked sixth in nation in passing yardage among community colleges, and first in the county schools in the same category.

But, as any coach will swear on a stack of playbooks, it is defense that wins football games. Defense was often a problem last year, when Mesa recorded a 7-3 record, 3-3 in SCC play. Smorin hopes he has solved some of those problems this year.

The solution lies in a blend of new and returning players. The two key newcomers are

Madison High graduate Brad Clark (6-foot-5, 240), a lineman who redshirted last year at Arizona State, and Kearny grad Tom Tatum (6-foot-5, 225), who previously played center at San Diego State but will be Mesa's middle linebacker.

Four players return in the secondary — Richard Frye (who prepped at Claremont), Jim Kennedy (Mission Bay) and D.D. Lewis and Troy Spencer (Madison).

"We'll be much improved on defense," says Smorin. "In the past, we would wait and react to the play, but no longer. We are going to play a much more attacking, aggressive style. If we can force our opponents into making mistakes, instead of just waiting for them, we can again be successful."

Still, the hallmark of this Mesa team will again be offense. Annicharico will be throwing the ball to new people, since four receivers were lost to graduation. Freshman Rocky Gailord (Point Loma) is expected to see a lot of action, as is returnee Kenny Carroll.

Kicker Andy Hastings (Point Loma), who averaged 39.2 yards per punt and made 75 percent of his field goals last year, returns.

"We feel that we could become a very good football team," says Smorin. "We should have a bearing on the conference race, if we can stay away from any injury problems."

After traveling to Phoenix Sept. 17, the Olympians open their home schedule Sept. 24 against their oldest rival, City.

USD defensive backs Greg Wilson, left, and Pete McMahon vie for a pass in practice.

Photo by Dennis C. Lhotz

September 1983

Thursday, September 1, 1983

The San Diego Union B-3

New center aims to resolve disputes outside of court

By Rivian Taylor
Staff Writer

Emphasizing mediation and boasting a distinguished panel of retired judges, a new center designed to resolve commercial and other disputes outside of the courthouse will begin operating today.

Alternatives to Litigation, a project of the San Diego Law Center, will offer a full-scale program of services aimed at reducing the expense and time involved in civil lawsuits, said retired Superior Court Judge Louis Welsh, director of the program located in Columbia Centre.

"It should result in a more economical, cost-effective and timely resolution of disputes rather than have them drag on for months and years at great costs to the parties," Welsh said. He added that the program will also benefit others and the courts because it will help clear crowded court dockets.

Through the voluntary program, disputes can be mediated or adjudicated in "mini-trials" officiated by a panel of retired judges and senior attorneys. The program also will assist in "litigation management," which Welsh said will enable lawyers to acquire enough information to evaluate cases for early settlement.

"One of the things we're trying to do is change the attitudes of lawyers," said Welsh, who has worked with the Law Center since January, laying the groundwork and organizing the program. Welsh retired from the bench in January after 11 years.

"Traditionally, the law has had one cure for everything: a lawsuit. We're trying to bring about a new attitude on the part of lawyers ... to realize that instead of the first thing you do is file a lawsuit, maybe that's the last thing you should do."

"Eventually, we would like to work ourselves out of business."

In addition to Welsh, the initial panel of mediators and adjudicators includes retired Court of Appeal Justice Richard Ault, retired Superior Court Judges James Focht, Charles Froehlich, Joseph Kilgarif, Robert Conyers, William Sommer and Stevens Fargo. Additionally, attorneys Alec Cory, Dewitt Higgs, Marshall Ross, William Schall and Louis Tepper will be on the panel.

The program will charge both parties $200 for the first hour and $150 for subsequent hours of settlement conferences. For "mini-trials" in which cases are arbitrated, the fee is $500 for a half-day session; $800 for a full day.

Welsh said the program will handle some "hardship cases" for reduced or no fees if the cases involve subjects that lend themselves to research or education projects.

Welsh also said any profit the program makes will go to the University of San Diego for research and education.

The program is co-sponsored by USD's Law School and the San Diego County Bar Association and funded in part by a grant from the Weingart Foundation.

Welsh said the program will serve as an experimental laboratory for research in the relative values of different mediation techniques and for clinical education at the law school.

He said that he expects that judges who perceive certain cases as appropriate for non-litigation mediation will refer them to the program. "But the largest number, we expect, will come through lawyers who want to do a cost-effective job for their clients," he added.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

SEP 1 1983

More than 600 San Diego County residents, selected at random by senior USD law students, are being interviewed by phone in a survey to determine public attitudes about the legal profession.

Professor Robert Simmons, project director, said each resident is being asked to answer 50 questions to help determine how well the public is being served by attorneys. Computer-tabulated results, he said, will provide information to lawyers on how they can improve their services and can be used to determine ways residents can be helped to identify and obtain effective legal assistance when it is needed.

Legal advisors for the project are Craig D. Higgs, president-elect of the San Diego County Bar Assn., and Justice Howard Wiener of the Fourth District Court of Appeal.

READER

SEP 1 1983

"Creating an Equitable Society by Restructuring Society," a series of monthly brown-bag lunch forums will be conducted by public affairs specialist Robert Sessions, beginning Tuesday, September 6, noon, USD Law School Courtroom, Linda Vista Road, Linda Vista, 582-1364.

EVENING TRIBUNE

SEP 2 1983

A five-phase master plan to include classrooms, chapel, administration building and athletic facilities will be prepared for the University of San Diego High School by Hendrick & Mock Architects.

Construction of the initial phase is expected to begin after a fund-raising drive is completed in 1984.

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 4 1983

ALANA CORDY-COLLINS — The University of San Diego professor of anthropology and curator of the Latin American collection at the San Diego Museum of Art will lecture on "A Comparison of Precolumbian Gold from Costa Rica and Peru," in conjunction with the current exhibit, at 4 p.m. Thursday in the Copley Auditorium, SDMA, Balboa Park, for the P.M. Art Lecture Series.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

SEP 4 1983

University building—Rendering shows $1.6-million Manchester Executive Conference Center, being built by M. H. Golden Co. on campus of University of San Diego for completion in February, 1984. Designed by Tucker, Sadler & Associates, the two-story, 17,600-square-foot center will contain a 230-seat auditorium/lecture hall, four conference rooms to be used for instruction and by business groups and office space for the university.

EVENING TRIBUNE

SEP 5 1983

USD expects record enrollment

The University of San Diego is expecting a record enrollment when the fall semester begins tomorrow.

Thomas Burke, vice president for student affairs, said total enrollment, including USD's School of Law, is 5,250, the highest in the university's 34-year history.

The previous high was 5,003, recorded last year, Burke said.

This year there are 726 incoming freshmen and 402 transfer students, who took part in Orientation Week events on campus last week.

The San Diego Union

Sunday, September 4, 1983

Tom Blair

TYPING POOL'S LOSS: Leonard Pennario, the great piano virtuoso, has been a summer regular in La Jolla for 30 years, doing his best to bend his international concert schedule around bridge tournaments and the Del Mar racing season. (He'll be in his usual Turf Club box tomorrow, then fly off to the Toronto Mozart Festival. He comes back to close out the racing season, then heads for the Hollywood Bowl as soloist in a pair of concerts Sept. 16 and 17.) Pennario, a child prodigy in the 1930s, confesses a certain affinity for those of us who pound typewriters for a living. He recalls being backstage once after a concert in Santa Barbara when a little matron wrapped in mink rushed up with her idea of the ultimate praise. "Oh, Mr. Pennario," she blurted, "you just must be a wonderful typist." In fact, he is. Or was. Pennario, who played Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody at the age of eight, enrolled in typing class at LA High and was an instant star, typing 85 words a minute with no mistakes. One day after class, his teacher came to him to inform Pennario he'd be representing the school in a citywide typing competition. No, Pennario informed her, he'd be concertizing that weekend. "Well then," the teacher buffed, "there's obviously nothing more I can do for you." And she kicked him out of the class.

ENTRE NEWS: NBC's Dick Enberg, in to broadcast the Chargers-Jets game this afternoon with Merlin Olsen, has made his last commute from Los Angeles to San Diego. He joins fellow NBC sportscaster Charlie Jones as a San Diego County resident this week. Enberg and his bride, Barbara, have closed escrow on a home in Rancho Santa Fe and plan to move in tomorrow. ... John Hazard, the Columbia professor who was quoted widely in wire reports on Russia's downing of the Korean Air Lines 747 ("I would be surprised if the Soviets apologize on their knees; I'm sure they will try to justify it"), will be a visiting professor at USD this year, teaching two courses on Soviet law. ... Ranger Ed Malone, a founder of Harvest Savings & Loan Assn., is still suffering fallout from the brouhaha over his brush on SD Bay last February with Queen Elizabeth's yacht Britannia. Malone, who'd been proposed as chairman of the board of Harvest S&L, reportedly withdrew his name from consideration, citing fears of adverse publicity.

DR. AUTHOR E. HUGHES, PRESIDENT of the University of San Diego, and Mrs. Hughes gave a reception at their home, Casa de Alcalá, Tuesday to welcome Capt. and Mrs. Render Crayton to the community. Capt. Crayton is the professor of naval science and director of the new NROTC unit at USD and San Diego State University based at USD.

Cmdr. and Mrs. Theodore G. Stier were among the guests. Cmdr. Stier is an alumnus of USD and executive officer of the new unit. Other guests included USD trustees, officers from Naval Training Command Pacific, and retired military officers.

Heading the active-duty group was Rear Adm. Warren Aut, commander, NTC Pacific, and retired officers included Rear Adm. Justin Langille III, with Mrs. Langille, and Rear Adm. James R. Davis, with Mrs. Davis.

Others included Dr. and Mrs. Manuel Barba, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Boyce, Dr. and Mrs. William Erickson, Helen K. Copley, Mr. and Mrs. Josiah L. Neeper, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Derbes, Capt. and Mmes. James Taylor, George Thompson and C.T. Vaught and Lt. Col. and Mrs. Michael Kaul.

Goodbye to America the sue-able

SUE THE -----!

Vexatious litigant is a legal term for people who sue for no reasonable cause, just to cause trouble. If you hang around the courts long enough, you begin to think America is becoming a nation of vexatious litigants.

We dare not recount the outrageous suits of 1981, for fear of having them surpassed next year. Perhaps some self-righteous reader will sue the estate of George Orwell for having libeled the year 1984.

Anything is possible in America the sue-able. But in this corner of the litigious states, perilously close to the land of palimony, a courageous judge is trying to provide an alternative to law suits. Mud wrestling?

No, the Center for Alternatives to Litigation, directed by Judge Louis M. Welsh, retired from the San Diego Superior Court, will offer mediation services to parties who'd rather settle their differences than sue in court. Settlement conferences, mini-trials and litigation management, which allows lawyers to find out if early settlement is feasible, are some of the services available.

The center, co-sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Law and the county Bar Association, will study experimental settlement techniques. It uses retired judges and lawyers to settle business disputes. The law school and county bar also sponsor a neighborhood dispute resolution center in Golden Hill that trains neighborhood volunteers to resolve local disputes.

You don't have to be rich or even a resident of San Diego County to take your business dispute to Alternatives to Litigation. You just have to be reasonable.

Tell your friends — and your enemies — about the center. It's located in Columbia Centre, downtown, and the phone number is 236-1848. But please, please don't tell the nationally prominent law firm of Sexism, Palimony and Libel.

It might sue the center for putting vexatious litigators out of business.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

SEP 8 1983

Auxiliary to meet

A membership tea is planned by the University of San Diego Auxiliary.

The event is Thursday, Sept. 15, at the President's home from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

SAN DIEGO CLIPPING SERVICE

SD BUSINESS NEWS
SEP 6 1982

USD Training Program

Personnel/Employment Relations sponsored by the Merchants and Manufacturers Association in cooperation with USD's Continuing Education. Two concurrent 14-week programs beginning September 14, held on consecutive Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., Serra Hall. For information call 293-4585.

USD Schedules Business Seminar Series

The ninth series of Update brief fast seminars sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Business Administration and Continuing Education, will present eight consecutive Friday morning seminars beginning October 1.

Update is presented two times each year to give business persons an opportunity to interact with each other and with USD business faculty members. For more information telephone 293-4585.

Patty Edwards

Fundraiser for USD is on tap

Patty Edwards, chairperson of last year's University of San Diego Auxiliary fashion show, has again been named to chair this year's event, set for Oct. 31 at the San Diego Hilton. The 27th annual fundraiser will help USD's financial aid program.

Tickets for the show are $25 and table reservations of 10 per table are available.

The event gets under way at 11 a.m. with a social hour, followed by a noon luncheon. Fall fashions from daywear to sophisticated holiday attire will be modeled.

Call 291-6480 Ext. 4271 for details.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

SEP 8 1983

Edwards leads Masquerade

Patty Edwards, who chaired last year's fashion show and luncheon for the University of San Diego Auxiliary, will again assume chairmanship duties for this year's 27th annual show, scheduled Oct. 31.

The Halloween show is themed "Masquerade" and it will take place at the San Diego Hilton Hotel. Proceeds will assist the student financial aid program.

Among La Jollans involved on planning committees are Jane Sexton, co-chairing; Pat Keating, reservations; Tina Jacobson, treasurer; Linda Alessio, program; and Jay Ghio and Mary Jo White, hostesses.

A social hour is scheduled at 11 a.m., followed by luncheon and the fashion show, from Robinsons.

SAN DIEGO CLIPPING SERVICE

LA JOLLA LIGHT
SEP 2 1982

Patty Edwards

Fashions to be viewed

Five La Jollans are serving on the University of San Diego Auxiliary Fashion Show committee, helping to organize the 26th annual event. Themed "High Society," this year's fashion show will be held on Sept. 30 at the San Diego Hilton.

A social hour begins at 11 a.m., followed by luncheon and Robinson's fashion presentations for fall 1982.

This year's chairman, Patty Edwards, appointed to the committee La Jollans Anne Brown, co-chairman; Tina Jacobson, treasurer; Mary Jo White, program; Jane Sexton, publicity; and Pat Keating, reservations/seating.

Also serving on the committee are Erma O'Connor, mailing; Alison Tibbitts, decorations; Marilyn Regaldo, files; Ruth Mulvaney, donations; Eileen Waters, hostesses; and Helen March, drawing.

Proceeds from this annual event will assist the expansive financial aid program for USD students. Individual tickets are priced at $25 and table reservations of 10 persons per table, are now available. For more information, contact the University of San Diego at 291-6480, ext. 4271.

Chairman Edwards was elected to the University of San Diego Auxiliary's board of directors in 1981 and re-elected this year. She became a member of the USD Auxiliary in 1980 and was active in the docent program. She said reservations will be limited to 730 persons in order to provide ample room for the display fashions.

Photos by Stan Honda

Building a castle(?) in the sand

No, it's not some sort of special ritual, but rather a way for new students at the University of San Diego to get to know each other during Orientation Week at the university. San Diego is known for its beaches, and for newcomers what better way to spend a day than building a sandcastle — or sandpuppy, as the case may be. At upper left, participants in the Seventh Annual Sandcastle Building Contest at Torrey Pines Beach last Friday begin by building up the sand in preparation for molding a big Snoopy (lower left). Krissy Long, immediate left, puts some final touches on the creation. Good grief, Charlie Brown!

SD BUSINESS NEWS

SEP 12 1983

The Helen K. and James S. Copley Library at the University of San Diego has been fitted with an oversized, precast ornamental window frame as construction reached the half way mark. The $2.6 million, two story building will be connected by corridor to the existing library. Dunphy Construction is the contractor with architectural services provided by Mosher Drew Watson.

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 11 1983

Colleges

Founders Gallery: University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 11 1983

Appointments of new faculty to the School of Business Administration at the University of San Diego, for the 1983-84 academic year have been announced by Dean James Burns:

SD BUSINESS NEWS

SEP 12 1983

"Barefoot in the Park," a Neil Simon comedy, will be presented at USD's Camino Theatre, Oct. 6, 7, 8. Call 291-6480, ext. 4712, for tix ($4).

Union Fri. Sept 9, 1983

Watchdog group grows

By Steve LaRue, Staff Writer

About 10,000 county residents have pitched in nearly $50,000 to launch a new utility watchdog group here.

Robert C. Fellmeth, interim director of the Utility Consumer Action Network, said the numbers could double by early October, when almost all county residents will have paid their San Diego Gas & Electric Co. bills.

UCAN began soliciting memberships in mid-August in fliers mailed inside SDG&E billing envelopes. The first-of-its-kind experiment in California was approved by the state Public Utilities Commission.

"It looks like a go," Fellmeth said of the returns. "I hope to be able to hit 15,000 to 16,000 responses and 20,000 memberships," he said. Many responses have included an extra $4 to cover dues for a second member, he said. So far, 8,000 of the small red envelopes have been returned, representing about 10,000 memberships. Fellmeth said the average contribution so far has been about $6.50 per member.

A beginning membership of 20,000 would enable the organization to find permanent offices, begin to hire staff members and start to prepare for an election of board members in January, he said.

Utility bills containing the UCAN appeals will continue to be mailed to local residents for another week. Fellmeth said he expects memberships and checks to continue to pour into the group's temporary offices for two weeks after that because people do not usually pay their utility bills immediately.

Final proceeds from the first mailing will have been received by the first week in October, and UCAN plans another appeal in December, also mailed check-to-check with SDG&E bills in company envelopes.

If 30,000 memberships are attracted by the two mailings, the group can hire a small beginning staff — perhaps two attorneys, an economist and a clerical worker — and begin to represent local electricity customers in regulatory proceedings regarding SDG&E.

Memberships have been spurred by a recent finding by the PUC that SDG&E has the second highest electrical rates in the nation, Fellmeth said.

Though the state PUC will not consider another SDG&E general rate increase request for two years, the new UCAN staff could immediately busy itself with trying to limit electrical rate increases related to the San Onofre nuclear power plant, Fellmeth said. He added that the staff also could examine the utility's handling of independently owned alternate energy projects, its Southwest Powerlink transmission line and future power needs.

"It has a good chance of becoming the largest utility watchdog group in the country," he said.

BLADE TRIBUNE

SEP 13 1983

USD Auxiliary plans tea

SAN DIEGO — The University of San Diego Auxiliary will hold a membership tea Thursday, Sept. 15 from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

The tea will be held at the president's home of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Hughes in Alcala Park. For information, call Marty Rower at 560-1596.

S.D. BUSINESS JOURNAL

SEP 12 1983

EDUCATION

At the University of San Diego School of Business, Thomas Black has been appointed associate professor of accounting, James Caltrider has been named assistant professor of management, Gregory Gazda has been named associate professor of marketing, Timothy Kelley has been named assistant professor of accounting, Xavier Aguilar Milanes is a visiting associate professor of accounting, Daniel Rivetti has joined the faculty as assistant professor of finance, Dennis Zocco has been named assistant professor of finance, and Denise Dimon has been named assistant professor of economics.

EVENING TRIBUNE

SEP 15 1983

Mediators sought

An orientation session for East County residents who would like to become mediators in a new Santee Dispute Resolution Project will be held at 7 p.m. today in Room 204 of Santana High School at 9915 Magnolia Ave.

The project, which is being partly funded by the city of Santee, will offer a mediation service for resolving disputes, said project manager Lois Leviton.

Potential mediators should have some experience in problem solving and be willing to devote at least six hours a month to mediation and training sessions. Officials said matters that could be solved in the project include landlord-tenant problems, small claim issues and domestic problems.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

SEP 15 1983

New Faculty Join USD

The new academic year at USD includes 15 new permanent faculty and 9 visiting members to bring full time faculty to a record 191, according to Sister Sally Furay, provost and vice president for academic affairs.

The College of Arts and Sciences welcomes Joseph Colombo, Ph.D., Lu-Pei Liao, Ph.D., Sandra Robertson, Ph.D., Paul Carmona, M.A., Ann Cone Bucklin, Ph.D., Jarney H.A. Fields, Ph.D., Thomas Kinnersley, Ph.D., and Aloysius Patrick Martinich, Ph.D. Colombo and Martinich will be on campus during the spring semester only.

The School of Business Administration faculty new members are Thomas G. Black, Ph.D., James M. Caltrider, Ph.D. (and), Denise M. Dimon, Ph.D., Gregory M. Gazda, D.B.A., Timothy P. Kelley, Ph.D., Daniel A. Rivetti, D.B.A., and Dennis P. Zocco, Ph.D. The BA school also welcomes visiting associate professor Dr. Xavier Aguilar Milanes.

Joining the faculty of the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing are Perri J. Bomar, Ph.D., and Santa Carol Hougard, B.S.N.

The School of Law welcomes 2 full-time professors, Lester Snyder, LL.M. and Jorge Vargas, LL.M., and 7 visiting professors, Thomas Bowers, J.D., Paul C. Haskell, LL.B., John Hazard, LL.D., Vance N. Kirby, LL.B., Ved P. Nanda, LL.M., Paula Rhodes, J.D., and Victor L. Streib, J.D.

Also new to the USD faculty are adjunct professors Michael T. Andrew, J.D., Judge Michael Greer, J.D., Alex L. Landon, J.D., Nancy Spieczny, J.D., Susan Melton, J.D., Douglas Keegan, J.D., and Susan Jaworowski, J.D.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1983 SAN DIEGO UNION B-3 S.D. lawyer cited for volunteer work

A San Diego lawyer has been honored by the state bar for her contributions of time and effort in providing free legal services to the poor.

Maria Arroyo-Tabin was one of nine lawyers from throughout the state who received the state bar president's Pro Bono Publico Service Award at the bar's annual convention in Anaheim last week. The award was created by the bar in May to publicize the volunteer legal services that California lawyers provide for the poor.

Arroyo-Tabin was instrumental in organizing and recruiting 25 attorneys from the U.S. attorney's office for the San Diego Volunteer Lawyer

Program, which began operating in March. She assisted in forming the Family Law Panel of the program, and continues to donate time as a member of the panel and of the Legal Aid Society of San Diego.

She is a graduate of the University of San Diego School of Law.

San Diego, Friday, September 16, 1983

(2)

THE TRIBUNE B-3

10,000 join ranks of utility watchdog group

By Michael Richmond
Tribune Staff Writer

A new utility-watchdog group, the Utility Consumer Action Network, says it has been successful in its first campaign to raise money and enroll members. The drive is being conducted through inserts in San Diego Gas & Electric Co. bills.

About 10,000 people have sent in $4 membership fees since the drive began Aug. 18, a spokeswoman for the group, which calls itself UCAN, said yesterday.

One of the organizers of the network, Robert Fellmeth, director of the Center for Public Interest Law at the University of San Diego, said when the membership drive began that he would be "very disappointed" if the first mailing did not attract a response from at least 2 percent, or about 16,000, customers.

The printed red and white inserts went to 825,000 SDG&E ratepayers.

But yesterday, Gayle Takahashi, a spokeswoman for the group, said the response was considered good.

"We're very pleased; we think it's been very successful so far," she said, adding that the group hopes to receive an additional 5,000 to 10,000 contributions by the end of the month.

"I'm sure we will be getting additional money in, since many people don't pay their bills until the last of the month anyway," Takahashi said.

The state Public Utilities Commission paved the way for formation of the network in April, allowing organizers to solicit members through use of SDG&E's monthly billing envelopes.

Four mailings per year are permitted.

Takahashi said the $40,000 raised so far will pay printing costs of the first mailing and help finance a second insert in December and an election of a permanent board of directors in January.

The group hopes to raise enough money to hire a staff, including attorneys and rate and engineering experts, to represent consumers' interests in SDG&E rate cases handled by the commission.

The network is considering contracting with the county Registrar of Voters' office to conduct the January board election through a mail ballot. The network would have to pay the estimated $20,000 cost of an election, Takahashi said.

An interim nine-member board, headed by Mayor Hedgecock, is directing the group's organizational efforts.

The enclosures ask ratepayers to band together to oppose higher rates.

On one side of the leaflet, a red headline asked, "Why do you think this bill is so high?" The answer inside: "Because SDG&E has many lawyers, rate experts and accountants to influence the Public Utilities Commission and you do not."

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

SEP 16 1983

New Faculty At USD Law School

By HERBERT LOCKWOOD
SAN DIEGO DAILY TRANSCRIPT Staff Writer

Dean Sheldon Krantz has announced appointments of new faculty to the University of San Diego School of Law.

Prof. Lester Snyder has joined the faculty as director of the graduate tax program and will also teach in the area of taxation. Professor of law at the University of Connecticut since 1967, Snyder received his J.D. from Boston University and his LL. M. from Columbia University School of Law.

Dr. Jorge Vargas became director of the Mexico-U.S. Law Institute on Aug. 1 and will teach law of the sea and a course in the Mexican legal system. A graduate of Yale University School of Law, Vargas was an Adlai E. Stevenson Fellow at the United Nations Institute for Training and Research. He was professor of law at National Autonomous University of Mexico.

The school will welcome seven visiting professors; Thomas Bowers, professor of business law in the Graduate School of Business at Indiana University; he will teach "corporations." Paul G. Haskell, who is on the faculty of the University of North Carolina Law School, will teach property; and John Hazard, an authority on the subjects of comparative and Soviet law and Nash Professor Emeritus at Columbia University School of Law, will teach spring courses in Soviet foreign trade laws and Soviet legal institutions.

Also, Vance N. Kirby, professor emeritus from Northwestern University, who will teach Tax II during the spring semester; Ved P. Nanda, director of the International Legal Studies program at the University of Denver College of Law, will teach an introduction to American law for foreign students; Paula Rhodes, of Howard University, who will teach contracts, human rights, and international business transactions; and Victor L. Streib, of Cleveland State University, Cleveland-Marshall College of Law, who will teach criminal law, criminal procedure, and children and the law.

Also new to the USD faculty are adjunct professors Michael T. Andrew, Luce Forward, Hamilton & Scripps; Superior Court Judge Michael Greer; Alex Landon, executive director of Defenders of San Diego; Nancy Spieczny, Olin, Foerster & Siegal; and Susan Melton, Douglas Keegan, and Susan Jaworowski, who will serve as legal writing instructors.

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 18 1983

Colleges

Founders Gallery: University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

SEP 16 1983

STAINED GLASS/ A class in modern techniques of stained-glass will be taught by Bill Hall from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Thursdays for six weeks beginning Thursday, Sept. 22, at the University of San Diego, Camino Hall, room 139. Registration is $35. For more information and reservations, call 293-4585.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

SEP 16 1983

Invitation workshop Monday

A one-day workshop to address 3,500 invitations to the University of San Diego Auxiliary's 27th annual fashion luncheon is scheduled at 9:30 a.m. Monday in the board room on campus. The fashion luncheon, themed "Masquerade," will be held Oct. 31 at the Hilton Inn. For more information, call 295-2349.

EVENING TRIBUNE

SEP 16 1983

Completion date set for USD center

Construction of the $1.6 million Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego will be completed in February 1984, according to M.H. Golden Co., the contractor.

The two-story, multipurpose building will house a 230-seat auditorium, four large conference rooms and office space.

Plans call for the auditorium, with an elevated stage, to be used as a lecture hall. The conference rooms, intended primarily as instruction areas, will also be available for business groups in the summer months to generate funds for the university.

Architects Tucker, Sadler and Associates have designed the 17,600-square-foot structure to complement the 15th-century Spanish style architecture of the campus.

Project architect Charles Jackson said special architectural features will be incorporated into the design of the center, including hand-crafted decorative moldings, arched windows and sculptured panels.

The Golden Co. also is serving as general contractor and construction manager for Olin Hall, a $2.7 million building under construction for the university's School of Business.

The hall is scheduled for completion in July 1984.

SEP 19 1983

Center in the middle sows neighborliness on the Hill

By R.H. Growald
Staff Writer

For decades the two women of Golden Hill had met each morning for coffee. But no more.

One accused the other of snubbing her. Both accused each other of having their dogs leaving naughty souvenirs on each others' doorstep.

The two no longer spoke. The neighborly warmth had now become a relationship akin to Adolf Hitler and Josef Stalin, of Coca-Cola and Pepsi Cola, of the Chargers vs. the Raiders.

In other, perhaps higher matters, this might have been a case for Superman or the United Nations, City Hall or the courts. However, the feuding of the two women of Golden Hill — not a world war but a dustup of attrition and propaganda infecting their neighbors — now became a case for the Golden Hill Mediation Center.

The center sits on 24th Street, atop a realty firm in one of those aging beam and dark-wood houses built most of a century ago to adorn the bit of San Diego which, to eyes aboard ship, seemed at sunset to be the Golden Hill. It is one of 200 such centers being tried out across America.

"The center is where members of the community can look to themselves to help solve problems, without having to call in the police, the courts, the lawyers," said Arlene Kirsch, a marriage, family and child therapist now helping operate the center.

"Here we mediate minor criminal or civil disputes," said Matthew Liedle, center director and a second-year law student. "This is the court of first resort for a case of the barking dog, a case of is-your-fence-on-my-property, a case of your-brat-undid-my-rose-bed."

The Weingart Foundation of Los Angeles provided the $58,000 grant for the center, which opened April 5 co-sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Law and the San Diego County Bar Association. Bar association President James Granby said his group favors developing ways of settling disputes in a less expensive way "as long as it is fair and people's rights are protected."

Anyone can come knocking as long as the person "has a Golden Hill connection, working, sleeping, visiting or recreating in the area," said the director.

And it is voluntary. No summons. No demands. Both parties must agree to try to settle and abide. And so it works in almost all cases, said Liedle.

"We almost always have a happy ending," he said. The director's wide eyes and wider eyeglasses and buttoned-down collar make him appear to be the smart older brother or the kid next door who read all those books and can still correctly diagnose the mysterious noises your car makes.

The case of the two women was one of the first.

Woman No. 1 thought she was being snubbed by her old friend, Woman No. 2, when Woman No. 2 said she could no longer have the morning kaffeeklatsches.

The whole neighborhood was a-boil over the rift, taking sides, tut-tutting. There was talk of calling in the police, the courts, the Marines. Word came that the center will help mediate.

The women agreed. "They were so unfriendly when they walked into the session that both were crying. Neither would look at the other," said Liedle.

The center had provided a mediator, specially trained to undo the Gordian knots of neighborhood over-the-fence feuding. Such happenstances may be minor, said Liedle, but they fester and roots dig deep and a feud or worse is born.

Both women were heard. The mediator pointed verbal fingers at misunderstanding. One woman was not snubbing the other. A dog, possibly passing over Golden Hill, may have done the awful deed.

"The women realized. The tears dried. Understanding brought smiles," Liedle said. "By mediation's end, the two women were sharing a cigarette."

The Golden Hill kaffeeklatsch is again alive and well.

Another day, at 11 a.m., a policeman on his Golden Hill beat found a teen-ager running from home, with suitcase and tears. He escorted the girl home. Thirty minutes later, said Liedle, a weeping mother called the Mediation Center.

Her daughter, she said, had run off three times. Family and youth counseling did not work. The mother said daughter was staying out too late with those awful friends. And mother saw daughter drinking beer.

Mother and daughter agreed to come. They said yes, they would abide by mediation. They sat at a table, like the two sides at the North-South Korean truce site at Panmunjom.

"They had come into the room with no noise," said Liedle. "I had expected yelling. Dramatics. I was wrong. They came in ready to mediate."

Mother recited her woes, as knotted as a twisted handkerchief.

Daughter said mother asked too many questions. Daughter did not want mother to yea or nay friends. The mediator found a common denominator: love. He poked out from that fortress.

As in Korea, a written document evolved. A peace treaty between mother and daughter.

Daughter would drink no beer. Mother would not ask where daughter was going at night. Daughter promised to be home by 11 p.m. each night. Mother agreed daughter could — should — bring home friends to be met by mother.

Daughter said yes, she would spend 10 to 15 minutes a day telling mother about her activities that day.

Kirsch said, "For a day we bit our lips. Would the paper work?" A week passed. Three weeks.

"It's still holding," Kirsch said. "And holding so good that daughter called and said she's coming back here to work out study hours with her mother."

Then there was the singular case of the two men and the alley.

Man No. 1, said Liedle, told of trouble getting his car into his garage because Man No. 2 kept the alley blocked with autos.

Man No. 2 said he had to feed his family and the only way he could was fixing cars and he had to park the cars somewhere. But, said Man No. 1, I must be able to use my garage.

It was suggested to Man No. 1 that perhaps mediation would help. Man No. 1 said it was beyond words. Talk to Man No. 2? Argie bargie gargie!

There was talk of calling the police and oh yeah! and well, maybe, let's try mediation.

The two had not discussed their problems. Man No. 1 listened with interest to Man No. 2 reciting the troubles of life, of getting money to feed the family, of trying to park cars out of the way. And Man No. 2 said certainly, Man No. 1 had a right to his garage and yes he would help.

Said Liedle, they exchanged telephone numbers and how about a drink, and now the neighbors are friends. When Man No. 1 finds the alley blocked, he goes not to his temper but to his friend and Man No. 2 moves the blocking car and peace is beautiful.

Liedle and Kirsch march on, like Mideast peace negotiators. They hold classes to give mediators the needed 30 hours of training.

The talk can be in English or Spanish. Kirsch said the coming of Cambodians to Golden Hill means the Center is recruiting mediators of that tongue.

Center in the middle sows neighborliness on the Hill

By R.H. Growald
Staff Writer

For decades the two women of Golden Hill had met each morning for coffee. But no more.

One accused the other of snubbing her. Both accused each other of having their dogs leaving naughty souvenirs on each others' doorstep.

The two no longer spoke. The neighborly warmth had now become a relationship akin to Adolf Hitler and Josef Stalin, of Coca-Cola and Pepsi Cola, of the Chargers vs. the Raiders.

In other, perhaps higher matters, this might have been a case for Superman or the United Nations, City Hall or the courts. However, the feuding of the two women of Golden Hill — not a world war but a dustup of attrition and propaganda infecting their neighbors — now became a case for the Golden Hill Mediation Center.

The center sits on 24th Street, atop a realty firm in one of those aging beam and dark-wood houses built most of a century ago to adorn the bit of San Diego which, to eyes aboard ship, seemed at sunset to be the Golden Hill. It is one of 200 such centers being tried out across America.

"The center is where members of the community can look to themselves to help solve problems, without having to call in the police, the courts, the lawyers," said Arlene Kirsch, a marriage, family and child therapist now helping operate the center.

"Here we mediate minor criminal or civil disputes," said Matthew Liedle, center director and a second-year law student. "This is the court of first resort for a case of the barking dog, a case of is-your-fence-on-my-property, a case of your-brat-undid-my-rose-bed."

The Weingart Foundation of Los Angeles provided the $58,000 grant for the center, which opened April 5 co-sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Law and the San Diego County Bar Association. Bar association President James Granby said his group favors developing ways of settling disputes in a less expensive way "as long as it is fair and people's rights are protected."

Anyone can come knocking as long as the person "has a Golden Hill connection, working, sleeping, visiting or recreating in the area," said the director.

And it is voluntary. No summons. No demands. Both parties must agree to try to settle and abide. And so it works in almost all cases, said Liedle.

"We almost always have a happy ending," he said. The director's wide eyes and wider eyeglasses and buttoned-down collar make him appear to be the smart older brother or the kid next door who read all those books and can still correctly diagnose the mysterious noises your car makes.

The case of the two women was one of the first.

Woman No. 1 thought she was being snubbed by her old friend, Woman No. 2, when Woman No. 2 said she could no longer have the morning kaffeeklatsches.

The whole neighborhood was a-boil over the rift, taking sides, tut-tutting. There was talk of calling in the police, the courts, the Marines. Word came that the center will help mediate.

The women agreed. "They were so unfriendly when they walked into the session that both were crying. Neither would look at the other," said Liedle.

The center had provided a mediator, specially trained to undo the Gordian knots of neighborhood over-the-fence feuding. Such happenstances may be minor, said Liedle, but they fester and roots dig deep and a feud or worse is born.

Both women were heard. The mediator pointed verbal fingers at misunderstanding. One woman was not snubbing the other. A dog, possibly passing over Golden Hill, may have done the awful deed.

"The women realized. The tears dried. Understanding brought smiles," Liedle said. "By mediation's end, the two women were sharing a cigarette."

The Golden Hill kaffeeklatsch is again alive and well.

Another day, at 11 a.m., a policeman on his Golden Hill beat found a teen-ager running from home, with suitcase and tears. He escorted the girl home. Thirty minutes later, said Liedle, a weeping mother called the Mediation Center.

Her daughter, she said, had run off three times. Family and youth counseling did not work. The mother said daughter was staying out too late with those awful friends. And mother saw daughter drinking beer.

Mother and daughter agreed to come. They said yes, they would abide by mediation. They sat at a table, like the two sides at the North-South Korean truce site at Panmunjom.

"They had come into the room with no noise," said Liedle. "I had expected yelling. Dramatics. I was wrong. They came in ready to mediate."

Mother recited her woes, as knotted as a twisted handkerchief.

Daughter said mother asked too many questions. Daughter did not want mother to yea or nay friends. The mediator found a common denominator: love. He poked out from that fortress.

As in Korea, a written document evolved. A peace treaty between mother and daughter.

Daughter would drink no beer. Mother would not ask where daughter was going at night. Daughter promised to be home by 11 p.m. each night. Mother agreed daughter could — should — bring home friends to be met by mother.

Daughter said yes, she would spend 10 to 15 minutes a day telling mother about her activities that day.

Kirsch said, "For a day we bit our lips. Would the paper work?" A week passed. Three weeks.

"It's still holding," Kirsch said. "And holding so good that daughter called and said she's coming back here to work out study hours with her mother."

Then there was the singular case of the two men and the alley.

Man No. 1, said Liedle, told of trouble getting his car into his garage because Man No. 2 kept the alley blocked with autos.

Man No. 2 said he had to feed his family and the only way he could was fixing cars and he had to park the cars somewhere. But, said Man No. 1, I must be able to use my garage.

It was suggested to Man No. 1 that perhaps mediation would help. Man No. 1 said it was beyond words. Talk to Man No. 2? Argie bargie gargie!

There was talk of calling the police and oh yeah! and well, maybe, let's try mediation.

The two had not discussed their problems. Man No. 1 listened with interest to Man No. 2 reciting the troubles of life, of getting money to feed the family, of trying to park cars out of the way. And Man No. 2 said certainly, Man No. 1 had a right to his garage and yes he would help.

Said Liedle, they exchanged telephone numbers and how about a drink, and now the neighbors are friends. When Man No. 1 finds the alley blocked, he goes not to his temper but to his friend and Man No. 2 moves the blocking car and peace is beautiful.

Liedle and Kirsch march on, like Mideast peace negotiators. They hold classes to give mediators the needed 30 hours of training.

The talk can be in English or Spanish. Kirsch said the coming of Cambodians to Golden Hill means the Center is recruiting mediators of that tongue.

SENTINEL

SEP 21 1983

This experiment may solve your legal problems

Have you ever had a dispute with someone that just won't go away? Ever wondered what, short of going to court, you could do about it? Perhaps it was a problem with a neighbor about a barking dog, or a fence built over the property line? A dispute with a store over merchandise or service? A continuing conflict with family members? A problem with teenage vandals? A complaint about a landlord or tenant?

Mira Mesa has just been selected by the San Diego Law Center as the second area in San Diego to acquire a demonstration community mediation program, funded by a grant from the County of San Diego. Co-sponsored by the Law Center and the Mira Mesa Community Council, the Mira Mesa Mediation Center is expected to open in January and will give people an alternative to the courts for resolving such disputes.

A similar demonstration project has been operating for four months now in Golden Hill. It also is sponsored by the San Diego Law Center, which itself is a joint project of the San Diego County Bar Association and the University of San Diego School of Law, located on campus at the University of San Diego.

The way the Golden Hill Mediation Center works is to involve both parties in a voluntary process where they meet with a trained neutral third party, the mediator. The mediator does not decide who is right or wrong, but assists the parties in reaching their own agreement.

The center also acts as a facilitator in contacting the "other party" to a dispute and encouraging him/her to participate in mediation. In addition, the center will follow-up on any agreement reached and offer further assistance if necessary. But the entire process is non-judicial, voluntary, confidential and free of charge.

In choosing Mira Mesa as the site, Carol Hallstrom of the San Diego Law Center met several times last summer with the Mira Mesa Community Council Task Force studying the project. Many of the same community activists are expected to take part in forming the planning board for the Mira Mesa center.

Mainly Mira Mesa

PAM STEVENS

"The Law Center is excited about the level of interest in Mira Mesa in this unique program," said Hallstrom. She added that this interest raises hopes that the program will not only succeed in its demonstration phase and beyond, but also serve effectively as a model for such programs in other communities.

For more information, call Nina Nelson, Mira Mesa Community Council, at 695-1084; or Carol Hallstrom, San Diego Law Center, 293-4815.

MISSION VALLEY NEWS

SEP 20 1983

Auxiliary show chairman announced

Mrs. William Edwards, Jr. has again accepted the general chairmanship of the University of San Diego Auxiliary's 27th fashion show. Themed "Masquerade," this year's event is scheduled for Halloween, October 31 at the San Diego Hilton. Proceeds will assist the expensive student financial aid program.

A social hour at 11 a.m. will be followed by luncheon at noon. Robinson's promises another spectacular affair with fashions for fall from daywear to sophisticated and holiday attire.

Individual tickets are priced at $25 and table reservations of 10 persons per table will be available. For more information, contact the University of San Diego at 291-6480, extension 4271.

THE TRIBUNE

Wednesday, September 21, 1983

D-7

TV/Radio

Gus Stevens

Sister Antonia Brenner, whose work among the prisoners of La Mesa Penitentiary in Tijuana has been acclaimed, will be the subject of NBC's "First Camera" Sunday at 7 p.m. on Channel 39.

Sister Antonia began her ministry to the prisoners in Mexico seven years ago. After a prison riot five years ago, which killed eight people, she received permission to move inside the walls to reduce tension. She was given a cell in the women's section and successfully carries on her work.

Her upbringing did not prepare Sister Antonia for such

The "First Camera" segment was filmed in the La Mesa Penitentiary, at the border crossing, Hotel Del Coronado and at the University of San Diego. Lloyd Dobyns is the program anchor.

Eerie goings-on at USD in another area. Professors Dennis Rohatyn and Bart Thurber report they "have taped two one-hour shows on the history of science fiction, from 'Frankenstein' (the 1931 film) to the present." The series, "Science Fiction Then and Now," will air on Cox Cable public access channel 24 Tuesday and Oct. 4 at 8 p.m.

NBC will telecast next month's baseball's league championship series using its four top baseball play-by-play and color men: Vin Scully, Joe Garagiola, Bob Costas and Tony Kubek.

EVENING TRIBUNE

SEP 21 1983

NEIL MORGAN

THE NAMES: University of San Diego is off to its biggest autumn start ever: 5,200 students. Says Dr. William Pickett: "Five thousand is really our maximum."

Burl Stiff

Tina Cutri, Linda Alessio and Jay Ghio split the role of chairwoman at a membership tea given the other afternoon by the University of San Diego Auxiliary in the home of Marge and USD President Arthur Hughes.

(President Hughes was out of town, but Dr. Bill Pickett came to tea as his stand-in.)

The tea sandwiches, cakes, and such were made by auxiliary members.

Newcomers welcomed by Auxiliary President Alison Tibbitts included Gail Arnheim, Fern Murphy, Margaret Buckley, Diane Canterbury and Margaret Raya.

Others who signed up at the tea were Mary O'Rourke, Marty Rower, Joyce Funtall, Eleanor Ascherfeld, J. S. Byford and Claire McNamara.

Patty Edwards, who's serving her second term as chairwoman of the auxiliary's annual fund-raising fashion show, was there to remind everybody that the 1983 benefit luncheon will be on Halloween at the San Diego Hilton. Robinson's will again give it a razzle-dazzle production. (Last year's extravaganza netted $17,000 for the USD Scholarship Fund.)

Mary-Em Howard and her mother, Teresa Hardie, were among the 80 guests at the Hughes home.

Teresa, who never misses a meeting, told friends she's looking forward to Oct. 28. It's her birthday, and she'll be 99.

SEP 23 1983

Don Freeman

New talk show on Channel 51 beginning Oct. 2 — "Today's Parent," with Judy Leitner as producer-host. First program focuses on sports injuries... Dennis Rohatyn, professor of philosophy at USD, has joined forces with Bart Thurber to produce two hour-long programs on the history of science fiction from "Frankenstein" to the present. The first hour is scheduled this Tuesday night at 8 on Cox Cable, Public Access Channel 24, the second to follow on Oct. 4...

SEP 25 1983

Founders Gallery: "Beasts," animals in various art forms, through Nov. 11. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

SEP 25 1983

"DAY ON THE BAY" — The jazz festival will feature the Bruce Cameron and Hollis Gentry Ensemble and the Killer Bee Trio with vocalist Kevin Lettau from 1 to 4:30 p.m. next Sunday in Humphrey's, 2241 Shelter Island Drive, as a benefit for the famine relief agency Oxfam America and the Mission Valley Y.M.C.A., sponsored by the USD Associated Students and Sigma Pi fraternity.

SEP 23 1983

HAZEL TOW

TRIBUNE SOCIETY EDITOR

Members of the University of San Diego Auxiliary prepared 3,500 invitations to a benefit luncheon and fashion show this week. The annual event is planned for Oct. 31 at the San Diego Hilton on Mission Bay. Mrs. William Edwards Jr. is the chairman and Mrs. Robert Sexton, co-chairman.

Proceeds from the party will assist the expansion of the USD student financial aid program.

SEP 25 1983

Will dispute center head off future calamities?

By JAN RAK

Sentinel Staff

A next-door neighbor routinely parks in front of your house, blocking the driveway. Newcomers to your block hold late-night parties, disrupting your sleep. Your teenage son confides that he is frightened by the malicious acts of a landlord, who seems intent on driving him out of his apartment.

For many Mira Mesa or Scripps Ranch residents, these or similar problems may never have to be faced. But people being people, troubles do erupt. In an attempt to stem what could become a violent resolution to a problem, a neighborhood dispute resolution program (or mediation center) is being started for Mira Mesa and Scripps Ranch residents.

A joint project of the Mira Mesa Community Council and the San Diego Law Center, the mediation center will begin in January. A county grant of approximately $70,000 will allow for the startup and first year of operation for this demonstration program, according to Carol Hallstrom, program coordinator at the law center.

Mediation involves a voluntary process in which the conflicting parties agree to meet with a mediator, who listens to both sides. The mediator — usually a specially trained volunteer from the community — does not take sides; rather he or she helps the parties reach their own agreement.

Such a procedure not only can put an end to a headache that could culminate in violence, but save money and time in what could result in a lengthy court process, explains Hallstrom.

Shirley Rathmann, who currently handles complaints which range from barking dogs to sky-high antennas for some 6,000 Pardee homeowners, said she thinks there is a need for such a mediation center.

"We've got so many different ethnic groups. A lot of people have come here recently from different countries and their mores are different," said the community service representative. "Lots of differences arise. What seems good to some is not good to someone else."

Recently, a special committee was formed in Mira Mesa to draw up a planning board. The board will determine the direction of the mediation center. If modeled after the four-month old Golden Hills Mediation Center, for example, it could resolve disputes involving neighbors, friends, family members, youths, landlord and tenants, merchants and consumers and employees and employers.

The idea of a neighborhood mediation center is a brainchild of Harmonium, a youth and family social service agency based in Mira Mesa. For the past four or five years the agency has been interested in such a project.

SEP 26 1983

Neil Morgan

LASTING HONOR: The late attorney Lowell Davies, who presided over the rebirth of the Globe, loved chairs. Antique dealers knew it, and his home held 68 chairs. In his latter years, he'd sit in an antique shop chair, pretending to test it, and enjoy a little nap. In those same years he was a counselor to the USD college of arts and sciences. Now comes an honor due him: establishment of the Lowell Davies Chair at USD. "But this chair is different," Dean C. Joseph Pusateri explains. "It's not a position, it's a chair. Every spring we'll choose the most deserving professor and order another chair and another plaque, and it'll be his to keep."

THE NAMES: Sheldon Campbell, president of the Zoo, is off for the Scottish Highlands. He'll tell the California condor story to delegates to the World Wilderness Congress at Nairn... Architect Roy Drew, trying to match ornate window moldings in the addition to the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library at University of San Diego, had a problem. He discovered the Santee firm called Naos, one of six in the U.S. that specializes in copying classic forms. Artist Louis Martin duplicated the moulding in plaster and clay. Then epoxy laminates were used to make concrete forms. (Pres. Mike Marshall has a staff of 11 at Naos, which derives from the Latin word for the inner chamber of a church or temple)... Dermatologist Dan Marnell had a punster under local anesthesia. When he told the patient he was about to put in stitches, he heard back: "Suture self."

Sentinel

Wednesday, September 28, 1983

Will dispute center head off calamities?

By JAN RAK

Sentinel Staff

A next-door neighbor routinely parks in front of your house, blocking the driveway. Newcomers to your block hold late-night parties, disrupting your sleep. Your teenage son confides that he is frightened by the malicious acts of a landlord, who seems intent on driving him out of his apartment.

For many Mira Mesa or Scripps Ranch residents, these or similar problems may never have to be faced. But people being people, troubles do erupt. In an attempt to stem what could become a violent resolution to a problem, a neighborhood dispute resolution program (or mediation center) is being started for Mira Mesa and Scripps Ranch residents.

A joint project of the Mira Mesa Community Council and the San Diego Law Center, the mediation center will begin in January. A county grant of approximately $70,000 will allow for the startup and first year of operation for this demonstration program, according to Carol Hallstrom, program coordinator at the law center.

Mediation involves a voluntary process in which the conflicting parties agree to meet with a mediator, who listens to both sides. The mediator — usually a specially trained volunteer from the community — does not take sides; rather he or she helps the parties reach their own agreement.

Such a procedure not only can put an end to a headache that could culminate in violence, but save money and time in what could result in a lengthy court process, explains Hallstrom.

Shirley Rathmann, who currently handles complaints which range from barking dogs to sky-high antennas for some 6,000 Pardee homeowners, said she thinks there is a need for such a mediation center.

"We've got so many different ethnic groups. A lot of people have come here recently from different countries and their mores are different," said the community service representative. "Lots of differences arise. What seems good to some is not good to someone else."

Recently, a special committee was formed in Mira Mesa to draw up a planning board. The board will determine the direction of the mediation center. If modeled after the four-month old Golden Hills Mediation Center, for example, it could resolve disputes involving neighbors, friends, family members, youths, landlord and tenants, merchants and consumers and employees and employers.

USD workshops focus on computers

Computer Resources for Educators," a series of one-day courses to train educators and administrators in the use of microcomputers begins its fall program at the University of San Diego Saturday, Oct. 1.

Tuition fees are $65 per course, with an additional $25 for courses involving hands-on computer work. All courses in the series sponsored by USD's School of Education and Continuing Education may be taken individually or as a part of the Graduate Certification Program. For more information and registration call 293-4585.

All classes in the series are from 9 a.m.

to 6 p.m. On Oct. 1, "Introduction to the Use of Microcomputers in Education Settings" provides the person with no previous microcomputer experience the opportunity to discuss advantages and disadvantages of microcomputer use, learn to operate a microcomputer and to write a simple program in the BASIC language.

"Introduction to Visicalc" is scheduled for Oct. 8. This course is designed as an introduction to the use of financial modeling techniques in business and education settings.

Students will be given the opportunity to design their own applications.

On Oct. 22, "Introduction to the Use of LOGO" provides an introduction to the use of APPLE LOGO with hands-on experience with turtle graphics and list processing.

SEP 28 1983

USD breakfast seminars coming soon

The University of San Diego School of Business faculty opens its eleventh series of "UPDATE" breakfast seminars on Friday, Oct. 7 with two topics spotlighting business communication skills.

"Personal decision styles and managerial effectiveness" will be discussed at the University Club, 1333 7th Ave., in a session hosted by Phillip L. Hunsaker, professor of management. Dr. Hunsaker will explore the strengths and weaknesses of the predominant personal decision styles and offer advice on building productivity through various styles.

At the La Jolla Village Inn, Interstate 5 at La Jolla Village Drive, Dr. Cynthia Pavett, associate professor of organizational behavior, will deliver a lecture on "Positive Feedback and Enhanced Productivity." Included in the presentation will be various strategies for effectively using performance-related feedback to obtain meaningful results.

Both seminars run from 7:30-9 a.m. Single session admission is $20. Admission for the full eight-week series is $140. Advanced registration is encouraged due to limited space availability. For more information call 293-4585.

The richest of the rich

His wife is Sacred Heart Alum.
Gordon Getty tops list with his $2.2 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifteen Americans are in the money — BIG money. But the richest of the richest — Gordon Peter Getty — says he'd "rather be on the music pages" than at the top of Forbes magazine's Rich List.

And another of the nation's wealthiest few says modestly, "We're not as smart as other people, so we need every advantage."

Forbes magazine is at it again, ranking the 400 richest Americans in its issue due out next week. At the summit are 15 billionaires, 13 men and two women, six of them living in Texas.

Getty, 49, of San Francisco, son of oilman John Paul Getty, has a minimum net worth of $2.2 billion, according to Forbes. An amateur composer, pianist and patron of the arts, he is married and has four sons.

At No. 2, weighing in at $2.15 billion, is Sam M. Walton, 65, who lives in Bentonville, Ark., and drives a pickup truck. His family owns 41 percent of Wal-Mart Stores stock. "It's unbelievable," he told Forbes.

Daniel Keith Ludwig, 86, of New York City, whose shipping and real estate fortune topped the Forbes list last year, dropped to No. 3 because of huge losses from an Amazon jungle pulp venture. Still, his net worth is believed to be more than $2 billion, Forbes said.

Two billionaire sons and two billionaire daughters of oilman H.L. Hunt, all now living in Dallas, are scattered from sixth to 14th on the list. Nelson Bunker Hunt, 57, is worth $1.4 billion; Caroline Hunt Schoellkopf, 60, $1.3 billion; Margaret Hunt Hill, 68, $1 billion, and William Herbert Hunt, 54, $1 billion, the magazine said.

Says Nelson Bunker Hunt: "We're not as smart as other people, so we need every advantage." Adds sister Caroline: "All my life I thought I'd end up penniless. Well, I've finally gotten over it."

David Packard, 71, of Los Altos Hills, Calif., and Hewlett-Packard Co., is No. 4; his worth is listed at $1.85 billion, and An Wang, 63, of Wang Laboratories Inc., in Lincoln, Mass., is next with $1.6 billion.

H. Ross Perot, 53, of Electronic Data Systems in Dallas, is eighth, worth more than $1 billion. George P. Mitchell, 64, of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., in Houston, is 10th, worth at least $1 billion, according to Forbes.

At No. 12 is David Rockefeller, 68, of New York City, grandson of Standard Oil mogul John Davison Rockefeller and current patriarch of the clan, worth more than $1 billion.

Two self-made oilmen in Denver are worth $1 billion each, Forbes said: They are Philip F. Anschutz, 44, at No. 13 on the list, and Marvin Davis, 57, who also owns half of 20th Century Fox, at No. 15.

Lawrence joins San Diego list

M. LARRY LAWRENCE

While the rich may be getting richer, hotel operator M. Larry Lawrence is gaining.

Lawrence, 57, joined Forbes magazine's Rich List this year for the first time, raising to six the number of San Diego residents among the nation's 400 wealthiest individuals.

Termed a "very prudent financial specialist," Lawrence has climbed from summer contracting jobs in Chicago to chairman of the Hotel del Coronado and real estate investor. He has an estimated net worth of $136 million. The magazine reports, however, that figure may be undervalued.

Five other San Diegians made return appearances on the Rich List. They are:

- Ray Kroc, the high school dropout who now sells $2.7 billion in McDonald's hamburgers each year, has a net worth of $450 million, according to the magazine. The 80-year-old Kroc was still small time at 52, the magazine says, but in the past year alone his net worth has risen about $130 million. Kroc divides his time between homes in La Jolla and Chicago.
- Helen K. Copley, publisher of The Tribune and The San Diego Union and chairman of The Copley Press, was listed by Forbes as having an estimated net worth of $200 million.

● Robert Staples Howard, 58, bounced from newspaper to newspaper early in his career before taking over the Casper (Wyo.) Star-Tribune in 1951. The Rancho Santa Fe resident now owns 18 daily newspapers, is bullish on cable television and has increased his net worth from $125 million to $175 million over the past year, according to Forbes.

● Ernest W. Hahn, 64, has developed 34 million square feet of shopping centers during his career and today has an estimated net worth of $150 million. The Rancho Santa Fe resident currently is developing Horton Plaza in downtown San Diego.

● Margaret Cargill, 63, of La Jolla, is little known, but her estimated net worth is $138 million. She and her brother James, a Minnesota resident, are believed to have evenly split the $275 million in stock from the grain company founded by their grandfather.

—Michael Kinsman

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

SEP 29 1983

Jazz concert benefits hunger relief

A jazz concert sponsored by the USD Associated Students and Sigma Pi fraternity will benefit Oxfam America, a famine relief agency, and the Mission Valley YMCA.

It will be held from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday at Humphrey's Half Moon Inn, Shelter Island. Tickets are $3 for general admission and $2 for students.

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 29 1983

Two Special Wine Seminars With Dan Berger, will be held at the University of San Diego. "Vintner's Breakdown" will be presented on four consecutive Tuesday evenings, Oct. 4 through Oct. 25. "Super Premium Wines" will be held Wednesday evenings, Nov. 2 through Nov. 23. Registration for each full series is $60 or $20 per session. The seminars are held at 6:30 p.m. in the DeSales Hall Board Room and are sponsored by USD Continuing Education. For information and reservations, call 293-4585.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

SEP 30 1983

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Founders Hall) "Beasts," an exhibition of animals in art form, including sculpture, paintings and etchings. Gallery hours are from noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

SEP 30 1983

PARENTS DAY/ The University of San Diego will host parents at the annual "Parents Day" beginning at 9:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 1. Parents will meet in Camino Theater to hear a welcome speech by USD President Arthur E. Hughes. A series of parent workshops will follow. For more information, call the university at 291-6480, Ext. 4271.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

SEP 30 1983

EDUCATION/ "The Media's Role in Education" is the title of a seminar to be held from 4:15 to 6 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 6, in the Camino Lounge at the University of San Diego, Alcalá Park. Panelists will include: Lanie Jones, education editor for the San Diego edition of the Los Angeles Times; Lena Nozizwe of KFMB Radio; and Michael Scott-Blair, education editor of the San Diego Union. Fee is $10. For registration information, call 293-4586.

SAN DIEGO CLIPPING SERVICE

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 26 1982

HOLLIS GENTRY QUINTET — The quintet will perform with the Dr. Spanis Big Band at 2:30 and 5:30 p.m. next Sunday in Humphrey's at the Half Moon Inn, 2303 Shelter Island Drive, for the "Day on the Bay Jazz Festival" co-sponsored by the USD Cultural Arts Association and the Sigma Pi fraternity at USD.

Sports

EVENING TRIBUNE

SEP 9 1983

San Diego, Friday, September 9

Toreros to play question game

By T.R. Reinman

Tribune Staff Writer

A lot of teams begin their seasons with questions to be answered, but the first one the University of San Diego's rookie coach, Bill Fogarty, has to answer is a crucial one.

Can Phil Spencer, who has played cornerback for the last three years at Saddleback Junior College and USD, play quarterback this season?

"It's a tough place to have question marks," Fogarty said, "but Phil's the kind of a guy who makes things happen." Pressing Spencer are transfer Steve Bardilos and former Poway High quarterback Roger Meyer, although Spencer will start at 7:30 tomorrow night when the Toreros open their season at home against the University of Redlands.

"They're all inexperienced," said Fogarty of his quarterbacks, "but we think they're doing a good job. And there's nothing like competition to get them playing well."

Fogarty's scheme calls for a basic 50 defense, and a Slot-I offense, which is a slight change from last year, when the Toreros were more pass-oriented. This year, Fogarty says, USD would like to get 1,000 yards from its tailbacks. Jerome McAlpin, a 5-foot-9, 180-pound senior who rushed for 424 yards last season, is the starter. But Fogarty is still trying out backups, with the inside track going to Chris Bertrand.

Also back on offense is receiver Mike Rish, who caught 40 balls for 637 yards and six touchdowns last fall, and tackles John Amarillas (6-6, 265) and Gary Holley (6-3, 240).

Defensively, the Toreros are solid at defensive back and linebacker. Last year's defensive player of the year was strong safety Greg Stein, and he's back with free safety Chip Jarvis and four other experienced veterans. Five more linebackers with a lot of playing time will be vying for starting spots.

BILL FOGARTY

PHIL SPENCER

"We don't know too much about Redlands (4-6 in '82)," said Fogarty, who inherited a 4-5 club from coach Bill Williams, who was fired last December and has taken a coaching job at University of the Pacific.

"We're more or less concerned with ironing out our problems right now and we'll see where that takes us in the opener."

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 10 1983

USD meets Redlands

By Bill Finley

Staff Writer

Phil Spencer was not stamped from the mold that normally produces college quarterbacks.

In short, he is, uh, short.

He is only 5-foot-7, but University of San Diego coach Brian Fogarty announced yesterday that Spencer will be the starting quarterback when the Toreros open their football season here tonight at 7:30 against Redlands.

"In our last scrimmage, Phil did some things we really liked," Fogarty explained. "He scored."

Since the day practice began, USD has been searching for someone to replace Eric Sweet, the Torero quarterback the last two years. The contestants have been Spencer, who played cornerback last season; freshman Roger Meyers from Poway High, and University of Hartford transfer Steve Bardilos.

"Phil's the kind of guy who makes things happen," Fogarty said of the decision to start Spencer, a senior who last played quarterback at Mater Dei High in Santa Ana. "He's a real good scrambler if things break down. The thing that set him apart, finally, was his experience. He hasn't played quarterback at this level, but he's played, and that's going to help him tomorrow night."

It will also be Fogarty's first game at this level. Fogarty, who last season directed St. Francis High in Pasadena, was hired to replace Bill Williams last winter, and he is optimistic.

"I feel we should be able to compete with all six of the Division III teams on our schedule, and we're hoping to break even with the four bigger schools," he said. "It's not unrealistic to think we could finish 8-2. If I had to guess, I'd say we'll go somewhere between the 6-4 and 8-2 range."

Fogarty has installed an I-formation offense, and the chief beneficiary will be tailback Jerome McAlpin. McAlpin, a senior from Los Angeles, gained 424 yards last season. This year, said Fogarty, he should gain 1,000.

"In this offense, your tailback position should account for at least 1,000 yards if you are going to be any good at all," the coach said.

The team's top receiving threat will be Michael Rish, a starter the last two seasons. Rish, who runs the 40 in 4.65 seconds, already holds most of USD's career receiving records with 78 catches, 1,305 yards and 13 touchdowns.

The USD defense will feature strong safety Greg Stein, free safety Chip Jarvis and 6-1, 265-pound tackle Marvin Castillo. Stein was the team's defensive player of the year last season. Jarvis, said Fogarty, "hits as hard as anyone I've ever seen in football."

USD finished 4-5 last season, but the Toreros were seldom overmatched. The team's losses were by 2, 6, 6, 14 and 21 points.

Among the victories was a 31-0 triumph over Redlands at Redlands. The Bulldogs, who finished 4-6, will also be opening their season tonight.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

SEP 29 1983

Law Center Offers Ways To Settle Out of Court

Alternatives to Litigation, San Diego's first full-scale service providing cost-effective methods for resolving commercial and other disputes outside the courts, began operations Sept. 1, said Hon. Louis M. Welsh, director of the program.

According to Welsh, the major services to be offered by the center will be mediation, either as simple settlement conferences or in "more sophisticated mini-trials;" litigation management, a process enabling counsel to acquire enough information to evaluate cases for early settlement; and adjudication, which involves arbitration and references from the court.

The multi-faceted program entails education and research as well as dispute resolution, Welsh says. The ALC will serve the UCSD School of Law as an experimental laboratory for research in the relative values of different techniques and as a forum for clinical education, and in the coming months will begin a training program for persons interested in developing mediation skills.

"This kind of effort results in savings for the clients; increased ability of competent attorneys to take on additional cases and better serve the public; and improved calendar management for the courts. We believe the Center may become a model for similar programs in other communities," said Welsh.

A project of the San Diego Law Center, co-sponsored by the U. of S.D. School of Law and the San Diego County Bar Assn. and funded in part by a grant from the Weingart Foundation, the Center will be located in Columbia Center, 401 W. A St., in space donated by Douglas F. Manchester, president of Torrey Enterprises, Inc., owner of the building. Manchester is a member of the University's Board of Trustees.

For services and fees contact Alternatives to Litigation Center, 290-1848.

Toreros Try to Rebound From Off Year

National TV Exposure May Have Been the Team's Undoing

By STEVE DOLAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego experienced a first last year when its football team appeared on national television during the NFL strike.

It may have been the team's undoing, however. The Toreros lost for the first time in four games, 34-20, and dropped for the next five.

"After the Occidental game, a couple of assistant coaches made the comment that there always was next year," said Mike Rish, who holds three school receiving records. "When that got back to the players, there was a 'who cares' atmosphere. After that, we had a lot of dead weight on the team."

But the loss to Occidental was only the beginning of hard times. Following the season, the Toreros were put on one-year NCAA probation that makes them ineligible for the playoffs or television this season. They did not figure to get either, however.

The probation was imposed because Bill Williams, who was head coach for seven years, gave small loans to three players. Williams subsequently resigned under pressure following last season.

Brian Fogarty, 33, replaced Williams. And like Williams, he will not be able to offer player scholarships because USD is a Division III school.

The players thus feel less pressure than ones at major colleges because they are not competing to keep scholarships. The situation is such that there are times when a player will miss practice to attend class.

"In this day and age of everyone not graduating, this is the way it was meant to be," Fogarty said. "We have guys going to school and playing football, not playing football and going to school."

When Fogarty came to the school on March 1, he was far behind in recruiting.

Despite the disadvantage, there were still factors in USD's favor. Since there is no spring practice for Division III schools, the Toreros were not behind in on-the-field activities. Also, because Division III players are not committed to schools by scholarships, they may transfer from institutions until the last minute.

"Recruiting did hurt us a little bit," Fogarty said. "I thought we did well, but we do have some senior-loaded areas that will need to be recruited next year."

When Williams resigned last December, USD needed to recruit a coach in a hurry.

Even before that, Fogarty was available. He already had decided to move on after leading St. Francis High of La Canada to four straight playoff berths.

"I already had applied at several major colleges for a part-time job," he said. "Then, the NCAA had legislation that eliminated part-time jobs. I knew that going from high school to a full-time major college job would be difficult. Plus, I always thought it would be nice to coach at a smaller college."

And so, his task is to turn around a USD team that went 4-5 last year despite high expectations.

The previous season, the Toreros had been 9-1 and narrowly missed the Division III playoffs. Last year, they appeared playoff-bound after beating their first three opponents by a 102-13 combined score.

But then, everything changed with the Occidental game, and ultimately, the probation.

"Actually, the probation has had less effect than I thought it would," Fogarty said. "When you have a football program that does not have spring practice, football is not in the limelight in the offseason. Maybe it all had died down when I got here."

Rish said of the probation: "We have never even been to the playoffs. Some of the new people on the team may not even know (the playoffs) are there."

The coaching staff is new except for three assistants. The staff wasn't complete until Tony Ricciardulli was named an assistant four days before practice began.

But through all the changes, the constant that has been is the school administration's attitude toward football.

"The administration doesn't put any pressure on you to win," Fogarty said. "They want a good program to represent the school. Of course, the coaching staff and players are competitive and want to win. But the coaches won't get fired if we don't win."

Fogarty says the Toreros should have a winning record.

"Normally, a first-year coach won't go 10-0," he said. "We'd sure like to do that. Right now, we realistically think we should finish between 6-4 and 8-2."

Quarterback Eric Sweet graduated after last season, leaving a big void. Among the candidates to replace him is Phil Spencer, who was a defensive back last season. Spencer was a quarterback in high school.

"Anytime you go to battle with an inexperienced quarterback, it is difficult," Fogarty said. "Our offense is new to everyone. We will run the tight slot I, similar to what Nebraska runs. We plan to run 65% of the time and pass 35% of the time."

Fogarty plans to let the tailback carry the ball 20 to 30 times a game. Jerome McAlpin, who was second on the team in rushing with 424 yards last year, returns at tailback. Rich Butler is the fullback.

Rish will be joined at wide receiver by returnee Thad Porlas. Bill Jolley and Mitch Green will alternate at tight end for the second straight year.

John Amarillas (6-6, 265) is a fourth-year starter at offensive tackle. He will be joined on the line by tackle Bryan Flood (6-3, 225), guards Allen Long (5-11, 200) and Steve Ast (6-1, 228) and center Gary Holley (6-3, 240).

Greg Stein, the team's defensive player of the year in 1982, returns at strong safety. Chip Jarvis will again play free safety. Jerry Schmit, who started six games last year, will start at one cornerback. The other position is up for grabs.

Up front, the Toreros will be aligned in a 5-2 formation. They suffered a blow when two starters from last year's defensive line decided not to return.

Marvin Castillo (6-1, 265) is called "the heart of the defensive line," by Fogarty. But after Castillo, the other starters are uncertain.

Castillo is unique to the team in that he actually began his collegiate career as a scholarship player at UCLA. He was on the Bruins roster one year, transferred to a junior college one year and is playing his second season for USD.

"When people ask me why, I tell them that I am happy here," Castillo said. "We all have one main reason to be here—school. Getting to play football, too, is a blast."

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 18 1983

USD has a Stag party, 34-14

Special to The Union

CLAREMONT — Quarterback Phil Spencer rushed for three touchdowns and the University of San Diego scored 17 fourth-quarter points to break open the game as the Toreros remained unbeaten with a 34-14 victory yesterday over Claremont-McKenna Colleges.

USD marched 60 yards in 11 plays to take a 7-0 first quarter lead, with Spencer capping the drive on a 10-yard keeper. With the score 7-7 in the last minute of the second period, the Toreros' Vince Beltrami returned an interception 19 yards to the 'Stag seven-yard line, and Spencer ran in from there for a 14-7 USD halftime advantage.

Bob Lozzi kicked the first of his two field goals for USD in the third quarter, hitting from 37 yards out, but Claremont-McKenna's Rich Milke hauled in his second touchdown pass from Chris Vicino to pull the Stags within 17-14.

The USD defense then held Claremont to a single first down in the fourth quarter while Spencer scored from 30 yards out, Lozzi hit a 29-yard field goal and Steve Vardilos scored on a six-yard run to give the Toreros their second win of the season.

Spencer completed eight of 17 passes for 97 yards and carried 10 times for an additional 61 yards.

Jerome McAlpin also rushed for 61 yards for USD, which gained 151 yards on the ground. Claremont-McKenna led in total offense with 122 yards rushing and 190 yards through the air, with Vicino connecting on 15 of 25 passes for 150 yards. Milke had eight receptions for 100 yards.

The Toreros next visit Pomona-Pitzer for a 7:30 p.m. game Saturday.

SEP 11 1983

Los Angeles Times

A Watered-Down Victory for USD, Redlands Beaten

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego football team cooled the University of Redlands off just in time Saturday night.

The Toreros turned on the sprinklers, presumably by accident, at the start of the fourth quarter. It seemed to cool down the Redlands' defense long enough to allow San Diego to score, and come away with a 14-13 victory. It was the first win for new Coach Brian Fogarty, who replaced Bill Williams at USD.

When the sprinklers went on during the Division III contest, USD had the ball at the Redlands' 37. Six plays later the Toreros' Jerome McAlpin went into the end zone on a four-yard run. The successful kick by Robert Lozzi gave the Toreros the game-winning point.

"It's real important to win this first one," Fogarty, the former St. Francis (of La Canada) High School coach. "I used to gear my teams to league games, but we don't play in a league, so all our games are important, especially against Division III opponents."

USD also plays Division II teams.

Redlands had taken the lead in the third quarter by grabbing the second half kickoff and marching 78 yards in 19 plays. The score was a 5-yard run by the Bulldogs' Martin Hubbard.

But it was a missed extra point kick by Redlands in the first half that eventually cost them the game.

In the first half, each team managed one successful offensive drive and at halftime it was USD ahead, 7-6.

The USD offense was inconsistent in the first half as the defense that set up the score.

With about two minutes remaining in the first quarter, USD defensive back Chip Jarvis picked off Redlands quarterback David Ruiz's cross-field pass.

But Jarvis didn't stop there, he managed a 21-yard run to give the Toreros a first down on the Redlands 27.

An offside penalty forced the USD drive to start at the 32. Five plays later USD quarterback Phil Spencer hit Michael Rish on a 16-yard touchdown pass.

Lozzi's successful extra point try by Robert Lozzi gave San Diego its last point of the half.

USD had six other possessions in the first half but couldn't capitalize, even when Redlands fumbled the Toreros' first punt and USD recovered, giving it a first down on the Red Lions' 38.

The Red Lions' first half score came at the end of an impressive 84-yard, 13-play drive, which was promoted by a 22-yard pass play from quarterback Ruiz to wide receiver Mike Acevedo. The touchdown came on a 4-yard run by Hubbard.

The extra point kick attempt by Anthony Schumann was wide to the left.

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 11 1983

Torreros edge past Redlands

By John Dougherty
Special to The Union

Running back Jerome McAlpin scored from three yards out early in the fourth period and Robert Lozzi added the extra point to give the University of San Diego a 14-13 victory over visiting Redlands.

The win was the first for Brian Fogarty as Toreros head coach.

The Toreros were trailing 13-7 early in the final period when Tete McMahon intercepted a David Ruiz pass at the USD 37 to set up McAlpin's tying run and Lozzi's winning kick.

McAlpin finished with 127 yards on 26 carries.

The Bulldogs got the ball back two more times, but couldn't move the ball after dominating the game earlier.

The Toreros struck first, with 1:04 remaining of the turnover-plagued first period.

Redlands dominated the second quarter and scored at 2:03 when Martin Hubbard capped a 14-play, 85-yard drive with a 2-yard run. Greg Hughes' extra point attempt was wide.

Hubbard, who finished the game with 108 yards on 22 carries, scored again in the third quarter on a five-yard run, but injured his left shoulder and sat out the rest of the game.

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 14 1983

USIU kicks USD

Lee Jacobson scored two goals in the first half to lead USIU to a 6-0 soccer victory over the University of San Diego yesterday. The Gulls, ranked No. 14 in the nation, broke the match open as Said Elouadi, Gary Vandermolen and Jeff Ward scored goals before the 5:37 mark of the second half. USD fell to 0-2, while USIU improved its mark to 5-0-1.

EVENING TRIBUNE

SEP 16 1983

TORERO TALE—A win is a win and the University of San Diego football team will take it. The Toreros also figure they must improve on last week's opening performance. That's the goal tomorrow when they play a road game at 1:30 p.m. at Claremont-McKenna College.

"We were pleased to get the victory," noted USD coach Brian Fogarty, "but, on the other hand, we need better ball control." His club had the ball 20 fewer plays (74-54) than Redlands Saturday, but rallied for a third-quarter touchdown and extra point to win 14-13.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

SEP 17 1983

USD Football Team to Meet Claremont-McKenna Today

The University of San Diego football team plays its second game of the season today at Claremont-McKenna College at 1:30 p.m. Last weekend, USD beat the University of Redlands, 14-13, in San Diego. USD running back Jerome McAlpin had 127 yards on 26 carries in the opener.

It will be the first game of the season for Claremont-McKenna, which, like USD, plays football in Division III. USD is under the supervision of first-year coach Brian Fogarty.

SAN DIEGO UNION

SEP 25 1983

USD's season remains unblemished

Special to The Union

POMONA — Running back Jerome McAlpin scored three touchdowns to propel the undefeated University of San Diego Toreros to a 34-10 victory over Pomona-Pitzer last night.

USD took the opening kickoff and marched 77 yards to the Pomona-Pitzer 3-yard line, where McAlpin scored to give the Toreros a 7-0 lead.

McAlpin, who rushed for 128 yards on 21 carries, increased the USD lead to 14-0 when he scored on a 34-yard pass from quarterback Phil Spencer. Spencer completed six of 17 passes for 132 yards.

John Gilbert kicked a 47-yard field goal to put Pomona-Pitzer (0-2) on the scoreboard just before halftime, 14-3.

Mike Rish led the Torero receivers with three catches for 78 yards.

EVENING TRIBUNE

SEP 26 1983

San Diego Notepad

Torreros end travels, risk unbeaten record at home

The University of San Diego's football Toreros, still unbeaten after two weeks on the road, will come home Saturday to risk their 3-0 record against Occidental College.

The Toreros added Pomona-Pitzer to their list of victims Saturday night with a 34-10 victory, which featured three touchdowns and 128 yards rushing in 21 carries by Jerome McAlpin.

F-6 THE TRIBUNE

(2)

San Diego, Friday, September 23, 1983

San Diego Notepad

Torreros' record only thing that isn't shaky

For a team that didn't have a backup tailback three days before its first game, and is going with a quarter-back who has played defensive back for the last three years, the University of San Diego is doing all right for itself.

The Toreros have trailed their two opponents to date in just about every statistical category except interceptions made and scoring. USD's record is 2-0 under rookie coach Brian Fogarty, and tomorrow the Toreros hit the highway to meet the Pomona-Pitzer Sagehens (0-1).

USD will be looking for another big game from quarterback Phil Spencer, who rushed 10 times for 61 yards and three touchdowns and completed 8 of 17 passes for 97 yards last week, while tailback Jerome McAlpin rushed for another 61.

One thing that might hurt the Toreros this week is the loss of center Gary Holley, who will miss three to four weeks with a fractured ankle.

C-8 THE TRIBUNE

San Diego, Friday, September 30, 1983

San Diego Notepad

USD risks perfect mark tomorrow

The University of San Diego takes a perfect, 3-0 record into tomorrow night's game against Occidental College at 7:30 at USD.

The Toreros were embarrassed by the Tigers last season 34-20, but new coach Brian Fogarty's squad seems to be getting stronger week by week. The Toreros are coming off a 34-10 victory over Pomona-Pitzer last week.

The Toreros are led by quarterback Phil Spencer, who has completed 19 of 45 passes for 304 yards, and running back Jerome McAlpin, who is averaging more than 100 yards rushing per game.

SEP 27 1983

JEROME McALPIN
107 yards/game

MARVIN CASTILLO
'It's got to be fun'

3-0 Toreros determined to avoid 'Occidental falls'

By T.R. Reinman

Tribune Sportswriter

"Frankly, a year ago at this time I didn't know a thing about this place," Brian Fogarty was saying yesterday after football practice at the University of San Diego. "So I really don't know what happened, except they got embarrassed on national television when they lost to Occidental. I do know they don't intend to let that happen again."

Not the TV part, just the embarrassment.

'Here in Division III, there's no money involved and there's a lot less pressure to win. But it's still fun to strap it up every Saturday'

— Marvin Castillo

Fogarty, the rookie head coach at USD, has a team that, like last year's, is 3-0 going into this weekend's game against Occidental College. From that point last season, USD went 1-5 (including a 34-20 loss to Occidental) to finish 4-5. And coach Bill Williams was fired for NCAA rules infractions.

But that was last year. Nowadays, with a new offense featuring tailback Jerome McAlpin — who is rushing for an average of 107 yards per game — the Toreros are born again. A 1-5 finish seems unlikely.

Fogarty has switched from last year's "more multiple" offense. With 452 yards in 1982, McAlpin was just 17 yards short of leading rusher Jimmy Smith. Eric Sweet passed for 1,804 yards, just 101 fewer than a dozen different runners gained. This season, McAlpin has 321 yards in three games, and quarterback Phil Spencer has completed 19 of 45 passes for 304 yards.

"To be a good team year in and year out," Fogarty said, "you have to be able to run the football. Not that you don't have to throw it, or can't throw it, but you have to be able to run."

"Two years ago, when we were 9-1," McAlpin said, further explaining the changes, "if the game was close, we knew we were going to win. Last year, after that loss on TV, it seemed like we were always close but we'd run out of time. This year we seem to have good fourth quarters. All of that says something about the character of a team."

This says something more: The Toreros have outscored their three opponents 31-0 in fourth quarters this year.

"It seems like we're a lot more organized this year," said defensive tackle Marvin Castillo. "The new coaching staff has instilled a new discipline. We lost some key people, but we have a lot of guys playing now who had a lot of experience last year."

"I didn't know what to expect," said Fogarty, who came to USD after 13 years of coaching at St. Francis High in La Canada. "I thought we could be pretty good, but you just never know what's going to happen in a transition year. The group we have is good, but it's not deep."

The thing that I had hoped to be true has proven out — non-scholarship kids are out here because they want to be. That's what has made it really enjoyable for me. We're not coaching any prima donnas looking for pro contracts because we don't have them out here."

CBS' unblinking eye won't be there this week as it was a year ago at Occidental. Dick Stockton and Hank Stram won't be delivering the play-by-play to a football-starved nation, as they were during last season's National Football League strike. The Tigers will show up at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and, if form holds in "The Pit," where USD has been an inhospitable host over the years, the Toreros will win in front of 3,300 people.

"No matter what level you're playing on, it's got to be fun," said Castillo, who started his college career at UCLA, then went to College of Marin before transferring to USD for last season. "Here in Division III, there's no money involved and there's a lot less pressure to win. But it's still fun to strap it up every Saturday."

And, it seems, it's more fun these Saturdays than last year's. But the three wins so far have been "against teams we really should have beaten" according to Fogarty. "This game will tell us a lot about ourselves."

The thought is that they will like what they hear after this Occidental game much more than they did a year ago.

"We were embarrassed on national TV," Castillo said. "Now everybody's attitude is pretty much 'beat the Tigers.' They say revenge is sweet. We'll see."

October 1983

2 The Daily Californian □ ACCENT □ Saturday, October 1, 1983

BEST BETS

Exhibits

Animal art — "Beasts," an exhibition of animals in art form, will be on display from noon to 5 p.m. weekdays through Friday, Oct. 11, in the Founders Gallery, Founders Hall, at the University of San Diego, Alcala. Admission is free. For more information, call 291-6480.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

OCT 1 1983

Jazz festival — The second annual "Day on the Bay" jazz festival sponsored by the University of San Diego (USD) will be held from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday at Humphrey's Half Moon Inn on Shelter Island. The Bruce Camaron and Hollis Gentry Ensemble will perform along with the Killer Bee Trio, featuring vocalist Keyvne Lattau. Admission is $3, $2 for students. Tickets may be purchased at the USD bookstore, Mission Valley YMCA or at the door. Proceeds will benefit the World Hunger Organization and the Mission Valley YMCA. For more information, call 291-6480.

DOWNTOWN

OCT 3 1983

• "Personal decision styles and managerial effectiveness" will be the topic of an Update breakfast seminar sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Business faculty at the University Club, 1333 Seventh Ave., 7:30 to 9 a.m. A $20 fee includes breakfast, seminar and materials. Advance registration is encouraged. For further information, phone 293-4585.

RANCH COAST

OCT 1983

USD - University of San Diego Founders' Gallery presents "Beasts," an exhibition of animals in various art forms through Nov. 11. 266 DeSales Hall, Alcala Park, San Diego. 291-6480.

RANCH COAST

OCT 1983

USD "UPDATE" BUSINESS SEMINAR SERIES - Oct. 7, "Personal Decision Styles"; Oct. 14, "Positive Feedback and Enhanced Productivity"; Oct. 21, "Developing Successful Managers"; Oct. 28, "Constructive Discipline"; Nov. 4, "Preparing Today for Tomorrow - A Look at Megatrends" 291-6480, ext. 4296

SENTINEL

OCT 5 1983

French consul gives talk at USD

Francois Mouton, Consul General of France at Los Angeles, will address the San Diego Chapter of the Alliance Francaise Saturday, Oct. 15 at 2 p.m. at the Hahn School of Nursing, University of San Diego.

Mouton will lecture on "The Continuing Dialogue between France and the United States."

This program represents Mouton's first official contact with the San Diego French-speaking community since his appointment as Consul General. His lecture will be delivered in French.

Alliance Francaise is a non-profit organization dedicated to the promotion of French language and culture. Annual membership is $15 per person. Admission to lectures is free for members, $3.50 for non-members, $2 for students.

SAN DIEGO UNION

OCT 6 1983

"Two Special Wine Seminars With Dan Berger" will be held at the University of San Diego. "Varietal Breakdown" will be presented on consecutive Tuesday evenings, through Oct. 25. "Super Premium Wines" will be held Wednesday evenings, Nov. 2 through Nov. 23. Registration for each full series is $60 or $20 per session. The seminars are held at 6:30 p.m. in the DeSales Hall Board Room and are sponsored by USD Continuing Education. For information and reservations, call 293-4585.

READER

OCT 6 1983

"Airline Deregulation at Work," Dan McKinnon, chairman of the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board, will discuss recent airline bankruptcies and the effect on union contracts, Monday, October 10, 12:30 p.m., Grace Courtroom, USD Law School, Alcala Gardens, Linda Vista Road, Linda Vista. Free. 291-6480.

SENTINEL

OCT 5 1983

McKinnon discusses airline strike at USD

Continental Airlines' recent decision to file a bankruptcy notice in an effort to dissolve its employees' union contracts raises questions about the impact of deregulation on the airline industry.

On Oct. 10, Dan McKinnon, chairman of the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board, will address the Continental situation in a lecture at the University of San Diego School of Law. The lecture, "Airline Deregulation at Work," will be held inside Grace Courtroom, third level, at 12:30 p.m. and is free to the public.

McKinnon, a native San Diegan and owner of radio station KSON AM-FM, was appointed to his government post by President Reagan.

For more information, call Bill Becker at 291-6480.

MISSION VALLEY

NEWS

OCT 4 1983

USD play

"Barefoot in the Park"

The University of San Diego's Theatre Arts Program presents Neil Simon's "Barefoot in the Park," October 6th through the 9th.

Performances of Simon's classic comedy will be at 8 p.m., with a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday the 9th, in the Camino Theatre.

General admission for "Barefoot in the Park" is $4; students and seniors, $3; children, $2. Tickets may be purchased at the Box Office prior to each performance.

The cast of USD students and alumni includes: Adrienne O'Hara as Corie; Don Cavanagh as The Telephone Repair Man; Andrew Shriver as The Delivery Man; Bill Mitchell as Paul;

Gloria Blanco as Mrs. Banks; and Jimmy Anklesaria as Victor Velasco. The production is under the direction of Pamela Connolly, assisted by Marilyn Green.

For more information, call 291-6480, ext. 4712.

E-2 THE TRIBUNE

San Diego

OCT 5 1983

HAZEL TOW

TRIBUNE SOCIETY EDITOR

Reservations have reached the halfway mark for the University of San Diego Auxiliary's 27th annual fashion show and luncheon Oct. 31 at the San Diego Hilton. Attendance will be limited to 600, according to reservations chairman Mrs. Edward T. Keating.

Tickets are being issued to individuals and table patrons and proceeds will go to the USD student financial aid program.

Mrs. William Edwards Jr. is chairman of the event which has "Masquerade" as its theme in honor of the Halloween date.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

OCT 6 1983

Breakfast seminars at USD

Developing communicative skills to enhance business provides the focus for two lectures Friday in the second week of UPDATE breakfast seminars sponsored by the University of San Diego.

Dr. Cynthia Pavett, associate professor of Organizational Behavior, will present "Positive Feedback and Enhanced Productivity" at the University Club, 1333 7th Ave. The lecture will provide strategies for using performance-related feedback to obtain meaningful results.

At the La Jolla Village Inn, Interstate 5 at La Jolla Village Drive, Phillip L. Hunsaker, professor of management, will explain the relationship between "Personal Decision Styles and Managerial Effectiveness."

Both seminars run from 7:30 to 9 a.m. Single session admission is $20; series admission is $120. Advanced registration may be obtained by contacting Penny Navarro at 293-4585.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

OCT 4 1983

College Notes

Annicharico right on record passing pace

By Larry Weinbaum

The Times-Advocate

Sophomore quarterback Trent Annicharico, the former Ramona High School standout, and currently playing at San Diego Mesa Junior College, is the hottest JC gunslinger in the state.

In running Mesa's record to 3-0 this season with last Saturday's 35-20 win over Grossmont, Annicharico stayed on a pace which projected over the entire season would shatter both the state single-season and career yardage records set last year by El Camino's Tim Green, currently the second-string QB at USC.

Green, who backs up former Orange Glen star Sean Salisbury at USC, broke the records of Mesa's first All-America quarterback Steve Fairchild in 1977.

Fairchild is now Mesa's QB coach.

Against Grossmont, Annicharico completed 17 passes of 40 passes for 297 yards and three touchdowns. He suffered two interceptions.

On the season, the slender, soft-spoken right-hander has thrown for 1,019 yards on 63-of-114 passing (55.3 percent), 10 TDs and just 3 interceptions.

The 35-20 win was easy for Mesa. The Olympians led 35-7 before surrendering a pair of TDs to the Grifins.

In the state pass-receiving department, Palomar College's Lafo Malaululu and Mesa's Ronald Rowe continue to run first and second in the rankings.

Malaululu, who nabbed eight balls worth 90 yards in last Saturday's 20-10 Comets loss at Hancock, now leads California JCs with 28 receptions for 333 yards and 2 TDs.

Rowe also caught 8 passes last weekend, worth 140 yards. On the season, Rowe now totals 23 catches for 418 yards and 6 TDs.

The official California Community Top 10 Football ratings just released by the JC Athletic Bureau in San Mateo shows Taft (3-0) as the No. 1 team. Nos. 2 through 10 include: Fullerton (3-0), De Anza (3-0), CC San Francisco (3-0), Saddleback (3-0), San Diego Mesa (3-0), El Camino (3-0), Santa Barbara (3-0), Pasadena CC (2-1), and Sacramento CC (2-1).

Southwestern College (3-0) is rated 12th.

San Diego State's basketball team has added a Dec. 27 Sports Arena home game to its 1983-84 schedule. Oral Roberts University is the new opponent, making a total of 16 home dates for SDSU this season.

ORU Coach Dick Acres has two starters and four lettermen returning from last year's 14-14 club led by star Mark Acres.

San Diego State baseball player Kent Torve earned top honors at the local Olympic baseball tryouts held Sept. 24.

Torve graded the highest overall and will join the top players from 66 other district tryouts at the final selection trials to determine the members of the 1984 U.S. Olympic team. That final tryout camp is in Louisville on Oct. 22 and 23.

Torve, a junior, who played both third and first base for the Aztecs the past two seasons, has appeared in 122 games, and holds a two-year career .315 batting average.

In addition to Torve, the Nos. 2 through 4 rated players will be kept in a pool, and may be called to join the team at a later date.

Those three other rated players in order: pitcher Tom Seyler from USD; catcher John Carlson from SDSU and Mesa outfielder Frank Klopp, formerly of Ramona High School.

On the women's side on Montezuma Mesa, the SDSU volleyball team improved to 18-4 overall and 3-1 in WCAA play with a pair of wins last week at Arizona State and Arizona.

The Aztecs, coached by Rudy Suwara and captained by former San Pasqual three-sport letterman Sue Hegerle, defeated the Sun Devils in Tempe, 9-15, 15-12, 15-7 and 15-12 on Sept. 29.

SDSU then beat the Wildcats in Tucson the following night by scores of 5-15, 15-11, 15-7, 9-15 and 15-11.

The victories improved the Aztecs, the defending WCAA champs, to No. 10 in the NCAA Poll and No. 7 in the Tachikara Coaches Poll.

The University of Hawaii women's volleyball team is currently No. 1 in both polls.

When the NBA Clippers meet the Utah Jazz in an exhibition game Sunday at the USD Sports Center, all proceeds from ticket sales will go into the USD Athletic Dept.

Tickets are $4 and may be obtained through the USD box office by contacting Betty Murphy at 293-4551 or Ted Gosen in the Sports Information Dept. at 291-6480, ext. 4272.

OCT 6 1983

Law School At UCSD Gets A Going Over

Debate Is Rich; USD Wants Study, Of Santa Barbara?

By HERBERT LOCKWOOD
SAN DIEGO DAILY TRANSCRIPT Staff Writer

At a state Senate Committee on Finance hearing yesterday on a proposed wedding between Cal Western School of Law and UCSD, Chairman Alfred E. Alquist, D-San Jose, admitted there was an imbalance of public law schools.

"There are three UC schools in Northern California and only one in Southern California at UCLA. I propose we eliminate either Davis or Hastings, then install a school at UCSD instead," the state senator said.

Sen. Milton Marks turned white and muttered, "I hope he's kidding." Marks is a Hastings School of Law graduate and represents San Francisco.

In the past, Alquist has indicated that there are far too many attorneys, that some form of birth control should be applied to those smitten with the urge to practice law.

Several months ago, he suggested the state close down all four UC law schools, thereby saving the system $30 million a year. There would be no loss, he said, since there were far too many lawyers in California anyway.

The hearing at the SDG&E auditorium on the proposed incorporation of Cal Western Law School with UCSD was kicked off by Sen. Waddeh, D-Chula Vista, who pointed out that the transfer would result in less rather than more attorneys. Enrollment is now 750, will be 500 if and when the school becomes part of UCSD.

Deddeh has sponsored a senate resolution calling for a study of the proposed merger.

"We're the seventh largest community in the country, but we don't have a public law school," Deddeh stated.

He added that 13% of all U.S. lawyers are California practitioners. The state bar says it has 79,882 members; there are 5,580 lawyers in San Diego County, and 612,593 in the country.

Superior Court Judge Franklin B. Orfield, who is chairman of the board of trustees of the law school, said the establishment has more

(Continued on Page 4A)

SAN DIEGO UNION

OCT 7 1983

Business seminars begin

The first weekly breakfast business-update seminar sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Business Administration begins today at the University Club and La Jolla Village Inn. The series continues every Friday thereafter. The cost is $140 for the full series of eight seminars.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

OCT 14 1983

William S. McConner, president of the Union 76 division and senior vice president of Union Oil Co., is to discuss the U.S. petroleum outlook on Oct. 19 at the University of San Diego. McConner, who will be guest speaker at USD Corporate Associates' second donor recognition luncheon, says the supply and demand dynamics of the petroleum industry are largely misunderstood, even by corporate America.

Proposed Law School

(Continued from Page 1A)

than 2,400 graduates, a distinguished faculty, and a 130,000-volume law library worth millions.

"Our assets are more than $12 million, our cash flow is excellent and we have a debt of $350,000, which we can pay off anytime. We have no axes to grind," the judge told committee members.

The idea is to sell the valuable land and building at 350 Cedar St. and apply the money to a law school building on the UCSD campus.

Harold Geoghe, principal education analyst of the legislative analyst's office, said the state now has 48 law schools. Of these, 16 are American Bar Association-approved, 17 are California accredited, three are preliminarily state accredited, and the balance is unaccredited.

The analyst said the amount realized by the sale of the law school facility would come closer to $7 million than $12 million, that a school with 500 students would cost $4 million a year to run. UC Davis has 500 law school students, is the size proposed for the local facility.

He added that the local school is ABA-approved, but UC students have twice the bar exam pass rate of Cal Western. "The average charge for a Cal Western student is $6,400 a year, while the UC figure is $1,400. Who's going to make up the difference?"

When he stepped down Sen. Alquist commented, "California is probably the most litigious state in the nation, and has more lawyers than any state; doesn't this tell us something?"

Another legislator added, "And the two most litigious counties in the country are San Diego and Dade (Miami) Counties."

A study committee has strongly supported the idea of the merger, said UCSD Chancellor Richard C. Atkinson. "We felt that a school, in time, could not only be in the top 20% of all schools but would be one of the top 20 law schools in the nation," he said.

The chancellor pointed out that his school was by no means as dependent on the state as generally thought.

"Of a budget of $420 million a year, only $100 million comes from the state of California," he said.

The school has attracted huge amounts of federal and private grants.

Asked if there was space for a law school, Atkinson said, "We have 2,200 acres; we're land rich, but our first priority is developing a building for an engineering school."

Gary Plantz, special assistant to David Chigos, National University president, said his school, which also has a law school, supports the proposed merger.

Rather than use tax money for the support of law students, he advocated deferring tuition payments until three years after graduation, when the average attorney is making $33,000 a year. The plan has been tried in Minnesota and has proved to be successful, he said.

University of San Diego Prof. Bert Lazerow said his school would like the results of a thorough study made on the merger before USD will take a position on the subject.

"And why UCSD? Riverside, Irvine, and Santa Barbara all want law schools," he said.

Steve Arditti, UC legislative representative, said a UC study should be completed in the spring of 1984. "If you started a law library from scratch it would cost you $40 a volume to buy, catalogue, and file," said Cal Western School of Law Dean Ernest C. Friesen. "To replace our 130,000 volumes would cost close to $5 million."

"And, since we parted from USIU seven years ago, the library has grown from 48,000 to 130,000 volumes," President Robert Castetter said.

Sen. John Seymour asked Dean Friesen why Cal Western pass rates on the bar exam were so low.

"Half of our students are from out of state and don't intend to practice in California. They took the exam, but not seriously," the dean explained.

The following are members of a group supporting the merger: Dr. Albert L. Anderson, Stanley E. Foster, U.S. District Judge Earl B. Gilliam, Dewitt A. Higgs, Judge Larry Kapiloff, R. Barry McComic, William E. Nelson, Dr. Ralph R. Ocampo, Paul A. Peterson, John S. Rhodes, William B. Rick, Forrest N. Shumway, Fred C. Stalder, and former Judge William A. Yale.

A University of California regent for 16 years, Atty. Dewitt Higgs, a founder of the San Diego law firm of Higgs, Fletcher & Mack, said the proposed merger "will be good for the community, for the legal profession, for the University of California, and for Cal Western."

He added that "we may turn out too many lawyers, but we're not turning out too many good ones. We are looking for talented lawyers."

Chairman Alquist said, "One lawyer in a small town will starve to death; two will get rich. Why should law students be subsidized to the tune of $5,000 a year?"

"This would be a legitimate state expenditure," said Higgs.

"Why are we turning out lawyers we don't need instead of engineers we do need?" the senator asked the attorney.

"I remember when UC was accused of turning out too many engineers," Higgs said. "Maybe too many legislators are being turned out."

Judge Earl Gilliam said he supported the merger, that UC schools produce quality education at low cost to the student.

Atty. Paul Peterson said he was grateful for the low cost education he received, added that UC law schools were highly selective.

"More than 11,000 students applied to the four UC law schools, and 900 were admitted. The state has not responded to a need."

"How many applied because of their egos? There are too many lawyers now," the chairman commented.

"I don't share your view," Peterson said. "There aren't enough good ones."

"Are you creating more work for the courts by encouraging the filing of frivolous lawsuits?"

"There are people who want a legal education, and the opportunity is not being provided," Peterson said. "I don't think lawyers are bad; I feel good about being a lawyer."

Sen. Marks said, "Frivolous lawsuits are few in number and are initiated by litigants, not by attorneys. To sue, a lawyer must have a client."

"I see a growing movement to abolish bar exams. This would be a terrible mistake," the committee chairman said.

"No respectable lawyers says that; most say, make exams tougher," Peterson replied.

After the hearing, Sen. Alquist was asked what sort of a reaction he had received to his proposal to close down all UC law schools.

"There were expressions of rage from UC and the bar. I just wanted them to know that someone was looking over their shoulder."

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

OCT 11 1983

Mediating In Golden Hill Is Imitated

By BILL BURRIS
SAN DIEGO DAILY TRANSCRIPT Staff Writer

Bolstered by a "success rate" of about 90% in a pilot program in the Golden Hill area, the San Diego Law Center of the University of San Diego School of Law has joined forces with the Mira Mesa Community Council in establishing a Mira Mesa Mediation Center to assist in resolving minor disputes between community residents.

A judge, two attorneys, a police officer, a probation officer, a minister, a high school vice principal, a student and business community and minority representatives are among 17 members of the planning board for the center.

The board is to hold its first meeting at 6 p.m. today in the social hall at Mira Mesa Presbyterian Church.

Carol Hallstrom, an attorney and coordinator of program development for the Law Center, said goal of the program is development of an effective alternate to the court system for resolution of minor disputes.

"The Law Center will provide a small staff to coordinate the development and implementation of the program, but the policies and procedures will be determined primarily by the people who live and work in Mira Mesa," she said.

"Basically, the neighborhood program will be an opportunity for the community to exercise greater responsibility for troublesome behaviors occurring within its borders."

"It will be a community-based program for which the center will provide technical assistance, but its success will depend on the active involvement of a broad cross-section of the community."

(Continued on Page 6A)

Mira Mesa Mediation

(Continued from Page 1A)

Serving on the planning board are to be Nancy Ajemian, director of the Harmonium family counseling program; Sgt. James Baker of the San Diego Police Department; Herb Barnum, a senior citizen resident; Gene Batalla, a clinical social worker with the Douglas Young Clinic; Sandy Boyle of the San Diego County Probation Department; Danis Elliott of Harmonium and Jack Dean, a businessman.

Also Judge Ronald Domnitz of municipal court; Otis Funches, vice principal of Mira Mesa High School; Carol Hallstrom of the Law Center; Hector Molina, a community resident; Shirlee Rathmann of Pardee Construction; Rosemary Ricks, a resident; Rev. Douglas Riddle, a Methodist minister; Atty. Gary Sanders and Joan Scimeca; and Len Wheeland, a Mira Mesa High student.

Ms. Hallstrom said the mediation center process will be a voluntary one in which a mediator listens to both sides of a dispute and, although he or she does not decide who is right or wrong, assists the parties to reach their own agreement.

Funding for the Law Center's work in developing the alternative dispute resolution program is being provided by the County of San Diego.

Members of the planning board in this evening's meeting are to observe a simulated mediation presentation by a mediator from the Golden Hill Mediation Center.

Ms. Hallstrom said the Golden Hill center since the end of April has received 225 calls for service, about 80% referrals from social service and other governmental and community agencies and about 20% from individuals involved a dispute.

About half the calls, she said, were about matters that could not be mediated. In many of those cases, the callers were referred to other social services, governmental agencies or private attorneys for assistance.

Of those cases in which mediation appeared possible, Ms. Hallstrom said agreement was received for participation by both the initiator and respondent about 60 to 70% of the time.

Agreement has been reached between the two parties involved in more than 90% of the cases in which assistance of a mediator was arranged.

Most of the disputes resolved to date in the Golden Hill area have involved claims for money. Ms. Hallstrom said, including landlord-tenant, employer-employee and contractor work disputes.

In one of the domestic cases, involving a runaway teenager, the mother and daughter worked out a contract between themselves establishing such things as curfew hours and visits to the home by friends of the daughter.

Ms. Hallstrom said the mediation program in Golden Hill has not only saved attorney fees and possible court time for participants but that mediation sessions have been arranged at convenient times so participants have not had to miss work.

In one case involving a dispute over a fence, a mediator went to the site because the complainant was a handicapped woman who objected to a neighbor family hanging clothes to dry over a fence between her home and theirs.

In that case, the dispute was resolved with the neighbor family agreeing to hang their clothing along their own side of the fence in a fashion so that it could not be seen and considered an eyesore from the opposite side.

"We have been encouraged by what has been developing in Golden Hill," Ms. Hallstrom said.

In some cases, she said, problems have been resolved simply by the staff talking by phone with each of the parties involved and providing direction where there had been a breakdown in information between the two sides.

The board for the mediation program in Golden Hill is chaired by Judge Robert O'Neill of superior court. Paul Wohlmut, a professor at the USD law school, helped plan the Golden Hill project and serves on its board.

DOWNTOWN

OCT 10 1983

OCT 9 1983

Colleges

Founders Gallery: "Beasts," animals in various art forms, through Nov. 11. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

Dr. Cynthia Pavett, associate professor of organizational behavior, will present "Positive Feedback and Enhanced Productivity" as part of the Update breakfast seminars sponsored by the University of San Diego. The lecture will be held from 7:30 to 9 a.m. at the University Club, 1333 Seventh Ave. Admission is $20. Advance registration is encouraged and may be obtained by phoning Penny Navarro at 293-4585.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

OCT 7 1983

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Founders Hall): "Beasts," an exhibition of animals in art form, including sculpture, paintings and etchings. Gallery hours are from noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

SENTINEL

OCT 9 1983

USD fundraiser is on

Tickets are still available for the 27th annual fashion luncheon to benefit the University of San Diego's student aid program.

The event, sponsored by the USD Auxiliary, will begin at 11 a.m. Monday, Oct. 31 at the San Diego Hilton. Tickets are $25 per person. Call 291-6480 ext. 4271 for details.

SENTINEL

OCT 12 1983

Church continues job plan

The All Hallows/Mary Star of the Sea Job Program for skilled and professional persons seeking re-employment will continue its office hours from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Fridays and Sundays during the 9 a.m., 10:30 a.m. and noon masses at All Hallows Catholic Church, 6602 La Jolla Scenic Drive South.

Managers are asked to call in job openings during those hours at 459-2975.

The next free evening program is

Oct. 24 at 7:30 p.m., at All Hallows Parish Center. "Working Through Resistance to Change" will be presented by Janet M. Sims, clinical psychologist and director of the Eating Disorders Clinic from the University of San Diego; and Debbie Hall, clinical psychologist of the Biofeedback Institute of San Diego.

Families, adult children and friends of the unemployed are invited to attend.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

OCT 14 1983

FASHION SHOW/Reservations are being accepted for the annual University of San Diego Auxiliary Fashion Show and Luncheon at 11 a.m. Monday, Oct. 31, at the Hilton Hotel on Mission Bay. Cost is $25 per person or $250 for each patron table. Call 291-6480.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

OCT 14 1983

French consul general to speak

Francois Mouton, consul general for France in Los Angeles, will speak at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Hahn School of Nursing, University of San Diego. He will address the San Diego chapter of the Alliance Francaise on "The Continuing Dialogue Between France and the United States." For more information call 279-5158.

BLADE TRIBUNE

OCT 13 1983

Nuclear film festival to be held

SAN DIEGO — The First Annual Nuclear Film Festival will be held at the University of San Diego, Oct. 16.

Twelve films concerning the nuclear arms race, including "War Without Winners," "The Last Epidemic," and "No Frames, No Boundaries," will be shown without breaks. Professor Robert L. Simmons of the School of Law said.

The film festival, which takes place at the Camino Theatre, begins at 1 p.m. and ends at 8 p.m. The film festival may become an annual event that will call attention to the hazards of an intentional or accidental nuclear war.

Festival sponsors include the Peace Resource Center, CEAN, the Peace and Justice Commission of the Catholic Diocese, Pacific SANE and SAND. SAND is a student organization at the University of San Diego supporting nuclear disarmament.

Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for students and seniors. The price of admission entitles ticketholders to see all or part of the seven-hour presentation.

Call USD, 265-0730 for information and mail-order tickets.

OCT 14 1983

Second mediation center planned for Mira Mesa

By Vicki Torres
Tribune Staff Writer

Mira Mesa residents who battle neighbors over blocked driveways, barking dogs or run-down fences will be able to seek help through a neighborhood mediation service scheduled to begin in January.

The service will be patterned after one already working in Golden Hill, said Carol Hallstrom, an attorney with the San Diego Law Center.

"Mira Mesa is experiencing the kind of conflicts appropriate to mediation," Hallstrom said of the move into the North City neighborhood.

She said the area has large numbers of juveniles, a large residential area with houses close together, and a growing Filipino population mixing with small black and Hispanic groups, among whom cultural differences can sometimes spark conflicts.

The city's first neighborhood mediation center began operation in April in Golden Hill at 24th Street and Broadway. Funded by a $50,000 grant from the Weingart Foundation, the center is sponsored by the San Diego County Bar Association and the University of San Diego Law School.

Hallstrom said two full-time staff members help screen requests for services and spread word in the community about the center.

"Mediation is not yet a household word," Hallstrom said, adding that such centers have only recently sprung up in San Francisco, New Haven, Conn., and Boulder, Colo.

The purposes of the center are to resolve community disputes by introducing a third person — usually a community volunteer trained in mediation techniques — to help the sides reach agreement and compromise.

Hallstrom said mediation centers enable disputes to be settled quickly, within a few weeks, instead of through costly and time-consuming court procedures.

In Golden Hill, 15 mediators are used, including three bilingual Spanish-speaking volunteers.

"The success rate is well over 90 percent," Hallstrom said of disputes submitted to mediation, "and the stability of the agreements is very high."

The county Board of Supervisors took notice of the work done in Golden Hill and allocated $50,000 for a second center.

SAN DIEGO UNION

OCT 16 1983

Founders Gallery: "Beasts," animals in various art forms, through Nov. 11. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

OCT 17 1983

Special celebrations: The University of San Diego Women's Club and Fashion Valley mall will launch programs for Women's Opportunity Week at 2 p.m. today at the mall tower with a series of discussions on topics ranging from job search strategies to health care and consumer rights. The series will continue through 3:30 p.m. Saturday as part of the university's contributions to the community and the advancement of women.

Fashionable Consumer

Also celebrating the week will be a talk by Dr. Carol Jean-Murat on "Women and Power" at 5:30 p.m. Thursday at the new Bullock's store at Grossmont Center. Her talk will be followed by a fashion show of women's clothes for investment dressing, says Connie Foote, the store's fashion coordinator, and is open to the public without charge. Refreshments will be served.

Four women involved in the world of fashion will take part in a seminar on careers in fashion set for 6 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at Fashion Careers of California. Designer Billie Watkins, store owner Leslie Bercoff, image consultant Sandra Sherman and fashion stylist Meleah Nelson will discuss "A Career in Fashion — Is It in Your Future?" A slide show of women working in fashion careers, plus school study trips to Los Angeles and New York will be presented along with a fashion show of accessories designed by members of the school's fashion show production class.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

OCT 17 1983

At The Galleries

SDSU Gallery — Exhibit of recent work by 37 SDSU department of art alumni from the past 20 years. Through Nov. 5.

Mandeville Art Gallery, UCSD — "Young American Artists II: Paintings and Painted Wall Reliefs," through Oct. 30.

University of San Diego Gallery — "Beasts," representations of animals in art forms. Through Nov. 11.

BLADE TRIBUNE

OCT 19 1983

Business seminars set

SAN DIEGO — "The Development of Successful Managers" and "Constructive Discipline" are the topics on tap Friday, Oct. 21, 1983, as the University of San Diego School of Business continues its series of UPDATE Breakfast Seminars.

Dr. Dennis Briscoe, associate professor of management and personnel, will deliver a talk centering on how managers learn skills to succeed in today's organizations and how progressive organizations purposely develop their managers.

Dr. Briscoe will make the presentation at the University Club, 1333 7th Avenue, San Diego.

Dr. Robert F. O'Neil, associate professor of economics, is slated to discuss "Constructive Discipline" at the La Jolla Village, Interstate 5 at La Jolla Village Drive.

The topic investigates disciplinary techniques useful to managers in dealing with employees.

Both seminars begin at 7:30 a.m. and end at 9:00 a.m. Single session admission is $20; series admission for the eight-week program is $120. Advanced reservation is encouraged and may be obtained by calling Penny Navarro at 923-4585. A continental breakfast is included in the registration fee.

DOWNTOWN

OCT 17 1983

"The Development of Successful Managers," an Update breakfast seminar presented by the University of San Diego school of business, will take place at the University Club, 1333 Seventh Ave., 7:30 to 9 a.m. The $20 fee includes the presentation, materials and a continental breakfast. For reservations, phone 293-4585.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

OCT 19 1983

University of San Diego Auxiliary

The University of San Diego Auxiliary's 27th annual fashion luncheon is scheduled at 11 a.m. Monday, Oct. 31, at the San Diego Hilton. Proceeds will go toward the student aid program. Reservations are limited to 600. Call 291-6480 for more information.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

OCT 20 1983

Peruvian banquet set to benefit tour project

La Jolla's Delwin Schneider, professor of religious studies at USD, has announced a Peruvian banquet and special display of Peruvian arts and crafts at 7 p.m. on Wednesday at La Jolla's El Chalan Restaurant.

Area residents can join in the festivities, which will include an authentic Peruvian dinner with complete selection from the restaurant menu and a program hosted by KFMB's Mark Larson.

The event is to help support the People-to-People program, an activity of USD's Religious Studies Club. Under its auspices, small teams of students accompanied by a faculty member visit remote areas of other countries. Proceeds from the Peruvian banquet will support future visits to Peru, India and Jamaica.

Tickets are available for $15 each and entitle the guest to participate in a drawing for the evening's auction. Reservations can be made by calling 291-6480.

Energy: Yes And No

(Continued from Page 1A)

out and fewer new ones take their place.

"The fact is that America remains an energy importer and will again become more dependent on foreign sources in the 1990s," he said.

McConnor said new production from the Santa Maria basin off California will not be enough to reverse the decline in older onshore fields.

"Alaskan production will hold fairly constant during the decade, but the balance of the U.S. producing areas will experience a steady decline," he said. "An increase in crude imports will, therefore, be required to make up for falling production."

Growth in the oil supply from non-OPEC countries is expected to be very gradual, less than 1% per year, and McConnor sees reliance on OPEC oil increasing by 10 million barrels per day during the next 10 years.

As the gap between OPEC production and capacity begins to narrow after 1985, McConnor says oil prices will increase in world markets.

"And as the call for oil from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates increases, those gulf state producers will once more be in control of the increasingly necessary supplies of world oil," he said. "They will again be in a position to 'manage' the price of oil upward."

McConnor sees America's demand for liquid fuels remaining relatively flat during the next 10 years.

"America's economy can now achieve a unit of real growth by using less than half as much energy as was required a decade ago," he said. "The marketplace has accomplished what government rhetoric and regulation failed to do."

Although several refineries have been closed or "mothballed," McConnor said the U.S. still has a surplus of refining capacity of 5 million barrels a day.

"The object now is to sell more product so that refineries can operate at more efficient levels," he said. "Couple this desire with a diminishing market and the result is intensified competition."

While the short term outlook is for plentiful supply, decreased demand and weak prices for gasoline, McConnor's long-term forecast calls for greater reliance on imported crude oil and rising prices.

"Today's so called oil glut is a temporary phenomenon," he said. "So what is America to do?"

"The U.S. must intensify its search for new domestic crude oil reserves, onshore and offshore," McConnor said. "And we must develop alternative energy resources. Both activities will help reduce our dependence on foreign resources."

He expects no significant change in policies as the result of William P. Clark being appointed to replace James Watt as secretary of the interior. And he sees the U.S. "falling behind almost every other country in the world" in development of nuclear energy.

McConnor, who serves as president of the Union 76 division as well as senior vice president and a member of the executive committee of Union Oil Co., said Union Oil, after 20 years of work, is the world's leading producer of geothermal energy.

He also appeared pleased to announce that preliminary testing is complete and that Union within the next few days will begin commercial production of oil from shale at its Parachute Creek, Colo., facility. It is designed to produce 10,000 barrels of high-quality crude oil per day.

"While the United States is still years away from having fully developed shale oil resources, the potential is there," he said. "Recoverable oil shale reserves in the western United States are about 20 times current U.S. crude oil reserves."

Improvements expected to be developed at Parachute Creek will be shared with other firms, McConnor said, to provide additional benefits for the country and consumer.

"The message here is not that pioneering projects need be massive," he said. "Rather, it is that any company, large or small, has the potential to survive and prosper in the marketplace of the future if it places its bets on innovation, efficiency and vision."

McConnor believes oil companies should have the opportunity to drill for oil off San Diego — or anywhere else it is found.

"We have produced oil offshore for a number of years and technological developments within the industry enable us to handle it without danger to the environment," he said.

"After all, we live along the coastline (he's a resident of Century City) and don't want to see it damaged in any way either."

He said he thinks the offshore drilling sites in the Santa Barbara channel, especially at night when they are lighted, may be "an improvement to the environment."

McConnor said one of the most popular misconceptions of the 1970s was that U.S. oil companies had a free rein to operate as they liked.

"The fact is," he said, "that in the 10 years since the October 1973 Arab oil embargo, the U.S. oil industry was subjected to numerous political actions and restraints that led to distortion of the energy market."

Price controls, allocation controls, fuel use prohibitions, entitlement programs and other regulations placed a greater weight on politics than on economics, he said.

"Our job became more complicated as we sought regulatory solutions, rather than economic efficiency."

Prices dropped, he pointed out, after "deregulation" of the industry. "The free market system works," he said. "The nation is recovering from its deepest economic recession without new controls on energy."

McConnor noted that: — The current rate of inflation in the U.S. is 4%, the lowest since 1972 and down drastically from the 13.5% high in 1979.

— U.S. productivity rose 3% last year, the most since 1978, and is expected to do the same this year.

— Prime interest rates have dropped from 21% in 1980 to 11% now. "We may feel they are still too high, but they have moved a long way in the right direction," he commented.

— Unemployment is at 9.3%, down from 10.8% in 1982.

— Housing starts and industrial production are up and inventories are down.

"The recovering U.S. economy is leading the world economy out of recession," McConnor said. "As America bounces back ahead of the rest of the world, our private sector is demanding more foreign-made goods. The strong U.S. dollar is encouraging imports, and the U.S. market for these foreign goods is helping to speed our trading partners' recovery."

McConnor said price cuts made by OPEC for crude oil this summer "introduced a greater degree of economic reason into the world energy market" and has helped in the economic recovery.

The U.S. oil industry, according to McConnor, is doing what it can with the profits it is permitted to keep in development of new oil sources and alternate energy.

He also says the American public "has become much more sophisticated in recent years" and now is much less likely to call for government controls and regulations and is "more interested in the full facts and real costs."

"Confidence in business, while far from peak levels, is at least higher than it has been in recent years," he said.

The USD Corporate Associates addressed by McConnor represent firms contributing to the University of San Diego's funds for scholarships, faculty enrichment and new programs.

D-4 The San Diego Union

Sunday, October 23, 1983

A busy weekend is in the offing

By Janet Sutter
Staff Writer

It looks like a busy weekend, Nov. 4 and 5, with the Fine Arts Ball on Friday, and the big COMBO gala on Saturday. Both have lots new and pizzazz to offer.

For one thing, there will be impressive arms and armor for guests at the San Diego Museum of Art Fine Arts Ball to see. If there were ever a black-tie event that gentlemen guests should greatly anticipate, this should be it. "The Art of Chivalry" will be the theme for the event as well as the theme of the show with 120 examples of armor and weaponry. The catalogue portrays a splendid suit of German armor made circa 1525 (there are eight full suits of armor in the show); many elegant examples of Italian armor; one helmet made about 1500 (either English or Burgundian), which looks like it might have served as inspiration for Darth Vader. There's much more — all sorts of gauntlets, helmets, shields, swords, daggers, halberds, wheel lock and flintlock pistols and guns.

Actually, the Fine Arts Ball will be out in the "jousting" tent (the front courtyard — and parking area — of the museum will be tented). Ann Jones, wife of NBC sportscaster Charlie Jones, is chairing the event. She's a docent at the museum and all proceeds will benefit educational programs there. Her committee has thought of many special touches, including hand-delivering the invitations — all posters of a knight in armor. Cocktails will begin at 6:30 p.m., dinner at 8, catered by The French Gourmet. Keith Williams Big Band will provide music for dancing. The ball will be limited to 350, at $175 per person. Otherwise the public may view "The Art of Chivalry" exhibit from noon, Nov. 5 through Jan. 29, 1984.

Virginia Monday is fielding a big Grand Hunt committee to organize the COMBO gala at Fairbanks Ranch Nov. 5. This one may be sold out shortly, so $200 for the Gala Gallery. This will be one of the largest events in town, spread over three tennis courts. The tablecloths will be hunters' green over black and the brass french horn napkin rings will also serve as souvenirs. A silent auction and cocktails will be held at 6 p.m., then dinner, dancing and a live auction at 7:30 p.m. Audrey Geisel selected the menu from French Gourmet (it's a big weekend for the caterer, too); vegetable pate to begin, English pot pie, followed by English trifle. Of course, the auction items are big attractions. Among them: a platinum diamond and sapphire bracelet, valued at $31,000; a quilt, created by the Old Globe Theater's costume shop, with sashes from costumes from various productions, complete with documentation; trips to lots of places, London and New Zealand to name two; a sarong rug for $17,500; front row seats to the November Frank Sinatra concert; dinner for six with Mayor and Mrs. Hedgecock. Dress for the COMBO evening: choose between black-tie or formal riding attire.

Spindrifft

parents, faculty and friends. It begins with a cocktail hour at 11 a.m. at Sheraton Harbor Island's Champagne Ballroom, followed by luncheon, the musical and fashion show by Saks Fifth Avenue, with Lilo Miller commenting. All this and Gene Hartwell's orchestra, too. Tickets are $35, and someone will go home with a springtime theater trip for two to New York City. Kathy Glick is chairwoman, co-chairwomen are Linda Smith and Lyn Heller.

Two times lucky

Last year's University of San Diego Auxiliary fashion luncheon was such a success that Patty Edwards is chairing this year's event again, and Robinson's is providing the fashions once more. This year it's to be at the San Diego Hilton on Oct. 31 — yes, that's Halloween — and is called "Masquerade." But don't send in your check, if you haven't already done so, because the show is sold out at 700 people. However, you might, of course, still help out the beneficiary, the student financial aid program at the university, which in turn helps many students.

E-2 THE TRIBUNE

San Die

OCT 18 1983

HAZEL TOW

Mrs. William H. Edwards Jr., chairman of the University of San Diego Auxiliary's annual fashion luncheon Oct. 31, reports the event is sold out at the capacity of 700. The event to benefit the student financial aid program is planned for the San Diego Hilton Hotel.

SAN DIEGO UNION

OCT 23 1983

Founders Gallery: "Beasts," animals in various art forms, through Nov. 11. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

SD BUSINESS NEWS

OCT 24 1983

The Development of Successful Managers will focus on how managers learn successful personal skills and how progressive organizations purposely develop their managers. USD, Oct. 28, 7:30-9:00 a.m., fee: $20. Info: 293-4585. Constructive Discipline offers approaches to disciplining employees in an organization environment. USD, Oct. 28, 7:30-9:00 a.m., fee: $20. Info: 293-4585.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

OCT 25 1983

Masquerade fashion show

University of San Diego Auxiliary will have its annual "Masquerade" fashion show at 11 a.m. Monday, Oct. 31, at the San Diego Hilton. Individual tickets are $25 and table reservations of 10 persons a table will be available. For more information, call 291-6480.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

OCT 1983

SPECIAL EVENTS

USD Auxiliary Luncheon & Fashion Show—USD Auxiliary and Robinson's department stores co-sponsor "Masquerade," 27th annual fundraising fashion show and luncheon. Proceeds to benefit USD Scholarship Fund. Mon., Oct. 31, at the San Diego Hilton, 1775 E. Mission Bay Dr. Info: 291-6480 ext. 4271.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

OCT 28 1983

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Founders Hall), "Beasts," an exhibition of animals in art form, including sculpture, paintings and etchings. Gallery hours are from noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

OCT 27 1983

USD sponsors breakfast seminar

Two University of San Diego School of Business faculty will examine issues designed to draw attention to developing theories in the business world at lectures that are part of a series of UP-DATE Breakfast Seminars sponsored by USD.

"Preparing for Tomorrow—A Look at Megatrends" is the featured topic Nov. 4 at 1333 7th Ave. Dr. Johanna S. Hunsaker, assistant professor of management and education, will identify and discuss 10 megatrends currently changing the future of American business.

The same day, Dr. Robert R. Johnson, associate professor of economics, will explore the importance of "Managing for Quality Improvement." How long can your department or division survive its own internal defects? Do you wonder if such defects are controllable? Can you test for their causes? Dr. Johnson will address these and other questions at the La Jolla Village Inn, Interstate 5 at La Jolla Village Drive.

The sessions begin at 7:30 a.m. and conclude at 9 a.m. Admission is $20 and includes a continental breakfast. Advanced registration is encouraged and may be obtained by contacting Penny Navarro at 293-4585.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

OCT 29 1983

Animal art — "Beasts," an exhibit of animals in art form, will be on view from noon to 5 p.m. weekdays beginning Tuesday, Nov. 1, through Wednesday, Nov. 30, at the Founders Gallery, Founders Hall at the University of San Diego. Admission is free.

SAN DIEGO UNION

OCT 30 1983

Founders Gallery: "Beasts," animals in various art forms, through Nov. 11. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

OCT 30 1983

USD ORCHESTRA — The University of San Diego Orchestra, conducted by Henry Kolar, will perform works by Bach, Strauss and Brahms, with violinists Kolar and James Zagami, at 4 p.m. next Sunday in the Camino Theater, University of San Diego.

Sports

Los Angeles Times

J Sunday, October 2, 1983/Part III 19

Seeking Revenge, Toreros Instead Give Away Ball and Ballgame

By Tim GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—First-year University of San Diego football Coach Brian Fogarty threw his head-set up in the air in disgust after watching one of his players lose a fumble for the sixth time Saturday evening in the Toreros' 28-7 loss to Occidental College.

The Toreros also had two balls intercepted for a total of eight turnovers. The final fumble with 13:10 left snuffed a USD drive that had started at its own 29 and ruined any chance the Toreros had of staging a comeback.

Ten minutes later, the visitors scored the last of their four touchdowns on a 4-yard run by quarterback Dan Osborn.

"The thing that bothered me," Fogarty said, "was that most of the fumbles were execution problems, not forced turnovers. Maybe we were trying too hard."

The third quarter was fatal to USD. Tied, 7-7 at halftime, the Tigers took the third-quarter kickoff and went 80 yards in six plays to take the lead for good. The score came on a 4-yard run by Jeff Goldstein.

The visitors made it 21-7 with 3:59 left in the third quarter when Jon Finstuen scored on a 13-yard pass play from Osborn.

The one bright spot of the evening for the Toreros was the running of back Jerome McAlpin, who finished with 140 yards on 23 carries.

"He's a good runner," Fogarty said. "But we had three turnovers at his position and I'm not sure why. Some may have been bad exchanges."

The Toreros mounted a nine-play, 48-yard drive just before halftime to score and tie the game.

With about four minutes remaining in the first half, Occidental punted deep in its own territory and the ball went out of bounds at its own 48.

For the first time in the half, Fogarty used McAlpin on seven of the drives' plays and he delivered. McAlpin's final run of the first half, a 5-yarder, gave the home team first-and-goal at the Occidental five.

One the next play, USD quarterback Phil Spencer rolled right but kept the ball and reached the corner of the end zone. The successful PAT by Robert Lozzi tied the score.

Occidental's first touchdown came after Parris Devine recovered a bad USD snap at the USD 31. The visitors lost three yards on their next three plays, but the fourth was a touchdown pass from substitute quarterback Jeff Monteroso to end Norm Stalsberg.

That was followed by a successful kick by John Yohannes.

Last year's 34-20 loss to Occidental in a televised game was simply devastating to USD. In that game, like this one, the Toreros entered with 3-0 record. The loss, rocked USD and it went on to lose four of its last five games.

The pain of that loss in front of thousands of television viewers is well remembered by the Torero players.

"They (the players) wanted to get them back," Fogarty said.

SAN DIEGO UNION

OCT 2 1983

Oxy upends USD

Special to the Union

A nervous University of San Diego team gave up the ball six times by fumbles and twice by interceptions to allow Occidental College to grind out a 28-7 victory last night at Torero Stadium.

"We had to control the ball to win the game, and we obviously did not do it," said Torero head coach Brian Fogarty. "You just can't spit up the ball that many times and expect to be in there."

USD (3-1) trailed 21-7 with 11 minutes to play but saw its final chance evaporate when Torero Michael Rish fumbled on the Tiger 24 following a 28-yard pass reception from quarterback Phil Spencer.

Occidental (3-1) then drove 76 yards in 5:26 to put the game away on a 2-yard touchdown run by quarterback Dan Osborn.

On USD's first play of the game, Jerome McAlpin fumbled the exchange with Spencer to set up Occidental on the USD 26-yard line.

McAlpin gained 167 yards for the Toreros on 27 carries but had two more fumbles, his second after Occidental had just scored to lead 14-7, and his third on the first play of the fourth quarter.

"We were just too nervous and kept making mistakes," said McAlpin. "The coaches emphasized this game more than the others, and I think we were just too excited."

Occidental's Tim Kennedy gained 135 yards on 18 carries and Jeff Goldstein added 109 on 26 carries and scored a touchdown.

The Tigers used two quarterbacks, with Osborn completing eight of 18 for 82 yards and two touchdowns. Jeff Monteroso completed two of three for 33 yards and a touchdown.

Penalties also hurt the Toreros, the most crucial coming with 3:59 to go in the third quarter and Occidental facing fourth and two from the Torero four-yard line. The Tigers brought on the field goal unit but managed to pull the USD defense offside to set up a first and goal.

Two plays later, Osborn double-pumped and fired a bullet to Jon Finstuen to put the Tigers up 13-7. John Yohannes added the extra point.

USD was able to up its first-quarter shut-out streak to four games, but two plays into the second quarter, the defense broke down and allowed Occidental to score on a fourth-and-13 from the USD 33. Monteroso, who had just come in to quarterback and was sacked on the previous play, rolled left and hit Norm Stalsberg in the middle of the end zone to put Occidental on the board first.

EVENING TRIBUNE

OCT 3 1983

TOREROS TOPPLE — It is back on the road this week for USD's football Toreros, whose perfect, 3-0 record was shattered by Occidental 28-7 Saturday at Torero Stadium in USD's first home appearance in three weeks. The Toreros will be at Whittier Saturday.

Torero tailback Jerome McAlpin, who gained 167 yards in 27 carries against Oxy, fumbled three times, his first coming on the game's initial play and setting up Oxy for a touchdown and a lead that it never relinquished.

SAN DIEGO UNION

OCT 3 1983

Scores

USD SUMMARY

Occidental 28-7 USD (LATE SATURDAY)
O — Stalsberg 34 pass from Monteroso (Yohannes kick)
SD — Spencer 2 run (Lozzi kick)
O — Goldstein 4 run (Yohannes kick)
O — Finstuen 12 pass from Osborn (Yohannes kick)
O Osborn 4 run (Yohannes kick)

INDIVIDUAL STATISTICS
RUSHING—USD, McAlpin 27-167; Occidental—Kennedy 18-132; Goldstein 20-14.
PASSING—USD, Spencer 7-16-249; Occidental, Osborn 3-13-10.
RECEIVING—USD, Rish 4-64; Occidental, Stalsberg 6-78.

E-6 THE TRIBUNE

San Diego, Friday, October 7, 1983

San Diego Notepad

Toreros try to rebound at Whittier

The University of San Diego Toreros will try to rebound from a 28-7 loss a week ago to Occidental College when they travel to Whittier to face the undefeated (2-0) Whittier Poets tomorrow night at 7:30.

USD (3-1) lost to Whittier 20-18 last year. The Toreros are led by senior tailback Jerome McAlpin, who has rushed for 483 yards and three touchdowns. Defensively, Greg Stein is leading the team with 31 tackles.

The Toreros return home next Saturday to entertain University of La Verne.

JEROME MCPALPIN
Leading rusher

GREG STEIN
Leading tackler

SENTINEL

OCT 5 1983

Clippers play at USD

The San Diego Clippers, attempting to establish themselves as one of the NBA's better teams, will play their opening exhibition game of the 1983-84 season this weekend in Linda Vista.

The Clippers will host the Utah Jazz Sunday night at 7 at the USD Sports Center.

The game is a benefit for the USD athletic department. The Clippers are also holding daily pre-season workouts at USD that are open to the public.

Oxy jinx holds for Toreros

By JIM EVANS
Sentinel Correspondent

You could scarcely blame at USD football players if, the next time they have an unbeaten streak on the line, they opt not to expose in against Occidental College.

Last year, for instance, the Toreros risked their 3-0 record against the Oxy Tigers on a national television broadcast (prompted by the NFL players' strike). Heavily favored, USD lost badly.

Last weekend, with revenge on their minds, the Toreros took a season-opening three-game winning streak into a rematch with the Tigers at Aleala Park.

Unfortunately for USD fans, the result was the same.

Buoyed by an opportunistic defense and a well-balanced offensive attack, Occidental eventually wore down the Toreros en route to a 28-7 victory Saturday night.

Although Occidental was certainly sound enough to win without any help from the opposition, the Tigers were greatly aided by a rash of USD mistakes. To their chagrin and frustration, the Toreros found the pigskin to be a very elusive item all evening long.

The jittery home team coughed up the football on eight occasions, including six fumbles. The constant stream of giveaways proved to be the undoing of coach Brian Fogarty's crew.

"The game was closer than the score indicated," said Fogarty, who lost for the first time as head coach at USD. "But with eight turnovers you really can't expect to win. I'm genuinely disappointed in that aspect of how we played."

Fogarty was somewhat baffled by the innumerable miscues committed by his charges.

"Maybe the kids were a little too emotional," he said, in reference to the Toreros' hopes of avenging last year's loss. But, from an overall perspective, Fogarty said he is basically satisfied with the improvements the players are making.

"We took a step back this week," said the coach, "but other than that I'm really happy with the progress we've made both offensively and defensively."

The tenor of Saturday's game was established at the outset, when running back Jerome McAlpin bobbled a handoff from quarterback Phil Spencer on USD's initial play from scrimmage. The Tigers recovered the ball on the

(Continued on page B-2)

USD loses win streak

(Continued from page B-1)

Torero 26, but failed to convert the turnover into a score.

Oxy broke the scoreless deadlock early in the second quarter. Faced with a fourth-and-13 situation on the USD 34, the Tigers went for the first down.

Quarterback Jeff Monteroso rolled left, then a tight spiral across his body to tight end Norm Stalsberg, who made a leaping grab in the middle of the endzone to give his side a 7-0 lead with 14:13 left in the half.

The Toreros responded later in the period with a ground-oriented nine-play, 52-yard scoring drive. To no one's surprise, McAlpin, who topped the 100-yard mark for the third time this season with 167 yards on the ground, was the workhorse on the drive.

The 5-foot-9, 180-pound senior toted the ball seven times for 36 yards on the possession, which ended when Spencer sprinted three yards into the endzone. When Bob Lozzi tackled on the extra point, the score was knotted at seven with 37 seconds left in the first half.

But the tie was destined to be shortlived, because the Tigers wasted little time in tallying the go-ahead touchdown. Starting from its own 21-yard line after the second half kickoff, Oxy needed just 91 seconds to drive 79 yards in six plays.

The big play in the drive was a 47-yard romp by Tim Kennedy on an off-tackle play. Fullback Jeff Goldstein got the score on a four-yard burst up the middle.

After Occidental extended its margin to 21-7 later in the third quarter, the Toreros mounted one last drive. However, with 11 minutes left in the game, wide receiver Michael Rish caught a 28-yard pass from Spencer but then coughed up the ball after being hit. The Tigers recovered on their own 24, killing USD's last drive.

EVENING TRIBUNE
OCT 15 1982

BASKETBALL PRACTICE UNDER WAY — San Diego State basketball coach Smokey Gaines opened pre-season practice this morning with his biggest team ever, while at the other end of Mission Valley USD coach Jim Brovelli opened the 1983-84 season with his tallest team. And both coaches are heading through roughly five weeks of practice looking for point guards.

At State, heir-apparent Anthony Watson is among the missing, enrolled at Mesa College for the fall semester and not eligible to play until mid-December. By then transfer Jeff Konek, sophomore Bobby Owens or even walk-on Norm Brown may have the inside track to the spot. Brown was an all-CIF player at San Diego High two years ago and has returned after spending a year at a Missouri junior college.

The Aztec frontcourt, built around All-American candidate Michael Cage, could be one of the best in the nation if 6-foot-9 transfers Michael Kennedy and Andre Ross perform up to their advance billing. One national scouting service last year listed them as the Nos. 1 and 4 junior college big men in the country, respectively.

This is the first season Gaines has had a full complement of 14 scholarship players, including five returners, five freshmen and four junior college transfers. Along with Baker, Al Attles, son of the former Golden State coach, looks like a strong candidate to make the club as a walk-on. The Aztecs open Nov. 28 at St. Mary's in Moraga.

The Toreros, meanwhile, open camp with 15 players on the roster, five taller than 6-8, including outstanding freshman recruit Scott Thompson, 6-11.

"This is the first year we've broken through in recruiting high school players who were heavily recruited by some top schools," Brovelli said.

Point guard Rich Davis graduated, leaving the job to senior John Prunty, although 6-4 Chris Carr and 6-2 Al Foscatel, both transfers, could also figure in there by the time the season starts Nov. 18 against the Australian national team.

SAN DIEGO UNION
OCT 19 1983

• LOCAL NOTES — The second round of the Frontier Pro Shop-San Diego All-College Tennis Tournament will get under way today at 1 p.m. at the University of San Diego. The tournament includes players from all area four- and two-year schools. The top seed is Tye Ferdinandsen of USD, Mike Kerr of USIU is No. 2, Graham Espley-Jones of San Diego State is seeded third and Jim McNamee of USD is fourth. Veteran distance running standouts Mark Neno, Tim Varley and Rich Musgrove have entered the Leukemia-Coronado Bridge national championship 10-kilometer run Oct. 30.

SAN DIEGO UNION
OCT 9 1983

Toreros nip Whittier 23-19

Special to The Union

WHITTIER — Rebounding after a fumble on their first play from scrimmage set up an easy Whittier touchdown, the University of San Diego Toreros scored 23 straight points, then held off the Poets for a 23-19 victory here last night.

The Toreros, winning their fourth against one loss, quickly tied the score at 7 on a five-play 54-yard drive capped by an 8-yard touchdown pass to Michael Rish from quarterback Phil Spencer, who keyed the drive with a 35-yard run.

Bob Lozzi put USD ahead to stay early in the second quarter with the first of his three field goals, this from 30 yards out, and Roger Cloutier's fumble recovery near midfield soon set up the Toreros for their second touchdown.

Three plays after the recovery, Jerome McAlpin, USD's leading rusher with 95 yards on 23 carries, broke loose for a 43-yard touchdown gallop, which, with Lozzi's extra point made it 17-7.

Lozzi added a 20-yard field goal just before halftime and booted a 38-yarder in the third quarter to make it 23-7 before the Poets (2-1), held to 59 total yards in the first half, began their futile rally.

Whittier's Mike Frazette, who came off the bench for the second half and hit on 13 of 29 passes for 178 yards, hit Mike Franco for a 6-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter.

The Poets missed on the conversion kick, however, and when Joey Jordan, who scored Whittier's first-quarter touchdown on a 12-yard scamper, plunged in from a yard out for the last touchdown with less than two minutes remaining, the Poets were forced to try for a two-point.

Frazette's pass fell incomplete, however, and the Toreros were able to grind out the 1:55 remaining on the clock, which ran out on the Poets as they fielded a USD punt.

USD finished with 173 yards rushing and 252 total yards. The Toreros gave up 213 passing yards, but they intercepted three passes, with Judah Mitchell, Pete McMahon and Jerry Schmidt each picking off one. The Toreros play host to LaVerne next Saturday.

EVENING TRIBUNE
OCT 10 1983

TOREROS WIN — Somebody said the University of San Diego Toreros didn't have a rhyme or a reason after the Whittier Poets scored a quick touchdown, following a fumble by USD on the first play from scrimmage Saturday night. But the Toreros came storming back to topple the Poets 23-19 in Whittier for their fourth win against a single defeat.

Seemingly, it was not a case of poetic justice, as the host club came up empty on a two-point try late in the contest that would have brought it within two points. USD had 173 yards rushing but gave up 213 passing yards. Three interceptions — one each by Judah Mitchell, Pete McMahon and Jerry Schmidt — stopped Whittier drives.

Sentinel Wednesday, October 12, 1983 B3

Toreros edge Poets; Mesa blasted

One local football overcame an early deficit to score a victory, while another was demolished by a powerful rushing attack in games held Saturday.

USD spotted its host, Whittier, an early touchdown before scoring 23 straight points and recording a 23-19 win. The Toreros thus bounced back successfully from a loss to Occidental and moved their record to 4-1.

Mesa, meanwhile, now stands at 3-1 after seeing its three-game win streak snapped at Bakersfield College. The Olympians, ranked second in the nation among JC teams last week, were played under by Bakersfield, 52-13.

USD's Toreros, after playing giveaway against Occidental, fumbled on their first play from scrimmage at Whittier. The Poets converted the turnover into an easy touchdown.

But the Toreros rallied on their next possession, tying the score at seven apiece when quarterback Phil Spencer connected with Michael Rish for an eight-yard touchdown.

Bob Lozzi then put USD ahead to stay with a 30-yard field goal early in the second quarter. Lozzi wound up with three field goals in the game.

Down 10-7, the Poets fumbled. Running back Jerome McAlpin, once again USD's leading rusher, took full advantage of the miscue by running 43 yards for a score. McAlpin picked up 95 yards in the contest. Whittier was down 23-7 in the third quarter before starting a rally that fell just short.

In Bakersfield, Mesa struck first but then fell before its hosts' onslaught of 500 yards total offense. Some 392 of those yards came on the ground.

SAN DIEGO UNION
OCT 15 1982

USD defense faces a test

The University of San Diego football team will try to improve on its 4-1 record tonight when the Toreros battle La Verne (2-2) in a 7:30 game at USD.

USD rebounded from an Oct. 1 loss to Occidental by stopping Whittier College 23-19 last week. The defense recorded three interceptions, two fumble recoveries and three quarterback sacks. That defense will be tested by La Verne, which employs three quarterbacks and a top receiver in Maurice Harper (21 catches for 370 yards and four touchdowns).

The Torero offense is led by running back Jerome McAlpin, who has rushed for 593 yards and four TDs in 119 carries this season — a 4.9-yard average. Quarterback Phil Spencer has completed just 40 percent of his passes (34 of 86, 482 yards, three TDs) but has run for 301 yards and four other scores in 58 rushes.

EVENING TRIBUNE
OCT 17 1983

TOREROS SHOOT FOR NO. 6 — The University of San Diego football team will go after its sixth victory of the season when the Toreros host Hayward State Saturday afternoon at 1:30.

USD improved its record to 5-1 with a rallying, 28-14 home victory over LaVerne College Saturday night. The go-ahead touchdown, one of three Torero TDs in the fourth period, came when quarterback Phil Spencer scrambled to find an open receiver, before spotting Michael Rish in the corner of the end zone.

Penalties Can't Stop Cal State Hayward From Beating USD, 40-21

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — Visiting Cal State Hayward overcame 120 yards in penalties to beat the University of San Diego, 40-21, Saturday afternoon at USD Stadium Saturday afternoon.

The visiting Pioneers took a 14-0 halftime lead but the outcome was in doubt until Ed Burton intercepted a pass by USD reserve quarterback Roger Meyers and ran 35 yards into the end zone for the final score with less than two minutes left in the game.

USD defensive back Greg Stein intercepted a Hayward pass and ran it in from 37 yards out to cut the lead to 12 points, 33-21, with 2:04 remaining. USD got the ball back in its territory and was moving until Burton picked off the sideline pass to preserve the victory.

"We had an opportunity to come back," first-year USD Coach Brian Fogarty said. "Our freshman quarterback (Meyers) is an outstanding thrower and he runs the two-minute offense better than (regular quarterback) Phil (Spencer). That interception is just one of those things."

USD had too many of "those things" all afternoon. Hayward, a Division 2 team that is 5-1. USD is a Division 3 independent and is Hayward's only smaller school opponent.

USD had three passes intercepted, two fumbles, 40 yards of penalties, a couple of organizational snafus when less than 11 men were on the field and even got burned on an inside kick following Hayward's first touchdown.

That touchdown was set up by a bad punt and good return. Hayward got the ball — its first possession — at the USD 35. Four plays later Donrick Sanderson ran three yards for a touchdown. John Waldera's extra-point kick made it 7-0.

Waldera then kicked off across the field into the arms of his own player who had gone beyond the 50. Hayward has used that play in every game this season.

"The kids know they are supposed to fair catch in that situation," Fogarty said. "The kid over there is a freshman and he just didn't do it."

Although Hayward didn't score on that possession, it did contribute to poor USD field position until the Pioneers scored again on a 56-yard run by Mike Matthews with 35 seconds left in the first period.

"There were a couple times when they broke the long one and it just kind of broke our back," Fogarty said. "They have two outstanding running backs."

Sanderson finished with 144 yards on 19 carries and Matthews had 72 yards on six carries.

USD came to life in the second half, scoring on a 26-yard touchdown pass from Spencer to Michael Rish. Jack Kratochvil's extra-point kick cut the lead to seven with 10:41 left in the third period.

But Hayward scored next on another big play, a 52-yard pass from quarterback Kendall Gomez to Vernon Porter with four minutes left in the third. The extra-point kick made the margin 14 points and another touchdown on the first play of the fourth quarter made it 27-7. That was a one-yard sneak by Gomez, capping a six-play 53-yard drive that started after a recovered fumble.

USD's second touchdown came shortly thereafter on a 21-yard pass play from Spencer to Rish. Rish fumbled in the end zone and teammate Ed McCoy covered the ball.

A Spencer interception gave Hayward the ball at the Toreros' 35 midway through the final period. Nine plays later a Gomez to Bert Graham pass made it 33-14.

Hayward held USD running back Jerome McAlpin to 50 yards on 15 carries, well below his five yards per carry average coming into the game.

Spencer completed 10 of 18 passes for 137 yards and two interceptions.

Hayward Coach Tim Tierney said the 15 penalties "really fired us up," Tierney said.

USD is 5-2 and finishes with three Division 2 opponents starting with California Lutheran College on Saturday.

Brian Fogarty, new football coach, settles into USD job

Brian Fogarty, USD's new head football coach, pleads his case with an official from the sidelines Saturday.

'I like dealing with kids who are out here because they want to play football, not because they're going to be famous.'

By MARK STADLER
Sentinel Staff

When Brian Fogarty arrived at USD last March, his biggest concern was how he would relate to college athletes. This was understandable, since he had spent his entire professional career as a coach and teacher of high school students.

He needn't have worried. Things have worked out well. "Dealing with adults has been a nice change," says USD's new head football coach with a grin.

Fogarty has also adjusted quickly to coaching football on the NCAA, Division III level after 13 years at St. Francis High in La Canada. Taking over a team that finished 4-6 last year, Fogarty has already exceeded 1982's win total.

Entering this weekend's game against Hayward State at Alcala Park, the Toreros stand at 5-1. Their most recent win came by a 28-14 score over LaVerne Saturday.

Not surprisingly, Fogarty has had a good time so far this season.

"It's been a good change," Fogarty said the other day in his office, while rain drizzled to the ground outside on the football field.

"I'm having a lot of fun. I'm enjoying the players. Maybe that's because they're closer to my own age."

Even though the black-haired Fogarty has many years of coaching experience under his belt, he is just 32 years old. He served as an assistant at St. Francis, a Catholic school for boys, for nine years before being named head coach in 1979. In four seasons, his teams compiled a 28-18-2 record and qualified for the playoffs every year.

At USD, like St. Francis a Catholic school, Fogarty came into what could have been a difficult situation. The previous head coach, Bill Williams, resigned under pressure after admitting to minor violations of NCAA rules.

But, Fogarty said, last year's incidents have been left in the past.

"I found during my job interviews that the school wasn't overly upset about it, that it wasn't that big a deal," he said.

What could have presented a problem was the attitudes of the 38 lettermen who returned this fall.

"I didn't know how many

(Continued on page C-10)

Comeback nets Toreros a win

By VICTOR BUCKEL
Sentinel Correspondent

One of the objectives of the USD football team this year was to erase the memory of last season's 4-6 record.

Thus far into the 1983 campaign the Toreros have done their best at this task as they have raced to a 5-1 record. Their fifth win came at home Saturday night when they beat the University of LaVerne 28-14.

The star of the night for the Toreros was tailback Jerome McAlpin. The senior from Los Angeles gained 106 yards on 22 carries.

McAlpin was also one of the players on last season's team and he says one of the reasons for the 4-6 record was USD's rare television appearance at midseason, during the 1982 NFL players' strike. After winning their first three games, the Toreros went to Occidental and played before the TV cameras. They lost 34-20 and were never quite the same, dropping four of their last five games.

"Somehow that game on television hurt last year," said McAlpin. "We didn't play very well that day and it hurt us the rest of the year."

So far this year not much has bothered the Toreros. Their only loss came against Occidental two weeks ago.

"This team seems to have a lot more character than last year," said the 5-foot-9, 180-pounder who has gained 684 yards this season.

"Everyone seemed to have gotten down on each other last year after the TV game. I just hope we don't have to play on television this year."

Saturday night the USD offense took some time getting into gear. Quarterback Phil Spencer finished off an 11-play drive with a one-yard plunge late in the first quarter for the first points of the game. The Toreros were aided by a pass interference penalty in the endzone on the play before Spencer's dive.

Unfortunately for the Toreros that would be the last time they would see the endzone until the fourth quarter.

"We've been known to be a better second half team," said McAlpin. "We just had to hope the defense was going to be able to keep us in the game."

McAlpin and the Toreros got their wish, even though they fell behind. Maurice Harper caught an eight-yard scoring pass from LaVerne quarterback Mark Van Allen with 3:39 left in the first half to tie the score.

Then, with 1:51 left in the third quarter, the Leopards took the lead at 14-7 on a 20-yard run by Clarence Thomas.

(Continued on page C-5)

USD tailback Jerome McAlpin breaks for daylight against LaVerne Saturday.

Toreros triumph

(Continued from page C-11)

Even trailing going into the fourth quarter McAlpin was positive the Toreros could come back. "We knew it was just a matter of getting the offense going," he said.

The offense finally got its act together on the first possession of the final quarter. McAlpin finished off the six-play, 65-yard drive with a 19-yard run around the end.

After the defense held on the next series the Toreros went right back to work. Starting on his own 49, Spencer drove the Toreros down to the Leopard 22. On third-and-four, Spencer found wide receiver Michael Rish in the endzone for the touchdown that finally put the Toreros ahead for good.

USD added its final touchdown in the game's last minute, when Spencer scored from five yards out.

McAlpin said he feels that new head coach Brian Fogarty has brought in a positive attitude for the team. "He's kept the whole team really up this year," said McAlpin. "We just have to stay positive the rest of the way."

The Toreros, who play on the NCAA, Division III level, now close their season against four Division II teams. The first of these is a 1 p.m. game against Cal State Hayward Saturday at USD.

they're here to be students first."

These student-athletes have done well on the gridiron. They struggled to win their opener against Redlands, trying to adjust to a new head coach and a new "Slot I" offense. After winning their first three, the Toreros stumbled and lost 28-7 to Occidental.

USD then faced a crucial point in its season. Last year, the Toreros started out 3-0, then lost to Occidental on national television and skidded to a 4-6 finish. This year, they went from the Oxy loss to a game at Whittier.

The Toreros fumbled on their first play from scrimmage and quickly faced a 7-0 deficit. But they rebounded to score a 23-19 victory.

"That was an important win, especially coming after last year," Fogarty said. "Whittier was rated 13th in the nation among Division III teams at the time."

The Toreros have been a run-oriented team, passing the ball about 30 percent of the time. This is probably because the quarterback, Phil Spencer, is a converted defensive back who runs better than he throws.

"I've always been a running coach," says Fogarty. "People accuse me of not wanting to throw the ball. But my feeling is that if I have a quarterback who can throw well I would pass more."

Leading the Torero rushing attack is tailback Jerome McAlpin, who has gained 684 yards in six games, with a 4.8-yard average. Spencer has completed 40 of 99 passes for 579 yards, but he is also the team's second-leading rusher with 329 yards on 73 carries.

Defensively, the Toreros have remained in a 5-2 front, although Fogarty and defensive coordinator Kevin McGarry have worked to add more options to that setup.

USD now enters the crucial part of its season. It has already played the other six Division III schools in Southern California; what remains on the schedule are four Division II teams, starting with Hayward State.

"The major difference in playing Division II schools is depth," Fogarty said. "We have one or two big guys, but they have several."

"We will definitely have to play our best game to beat Hayward. We can't stand and play with them defensively, so we'll have to try some things. And we can't just run at them offensively like we have done so far. We have to throw more. But we still have to control the line of scrimmage with the run to win."

The USD defense, led by lineman Joe Kinnally (No. 64) makes a gang tackle.

Toreros' practices underway

The USD men's basketball team, coming off its top finish since joining the NCAA's Division I ranks, recently started workouts for the 1983-84 season.

The Toreros, under the direction of head coach Jim Brovelli, return six lettermen from the squad that finished 12-14 overall and 5-7 in the West Coast Athletic conference.

Brovelli, who has compiled a 142-120 overall record in nine years at USD, also has several players from what has been termed his best recruiting season ever.

The top returnee is 6-foot-7 senior forward Mike Whitmarsh, a first-team WCAC selection last year. Whitmarsh averaged 15.3 points and 5.3 rebounds per game in '82-83. He closed the season with a flourish, scoring at a 26.8 clip in the last six games.

"Mike is one of the best small forwards on the west coast," says Brovelli. "He is one of the most consistent players we have had here in all phases of the game."

The top recruit is Scott Thompson, a 6-foot-11, 235-pound freshman from Mesa Verde High in Citrus Heights.

Brovelli says he is expecting a well-balanced year in the WCAC, with Pepperdine and Santa Clara as early favorites.

"Overall, the conference is up for grabs," he says. "Again, there will be a lot of close games and whoever is fortunate enough to win the close games will come out on top."

University of San Diego to Host Division 2 Cal State Hayward

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego, a Division 3 independent team, opens the Division 2 portion of its football schedule at 1 p.m. today by hosting Cal State Hayward.

The Toreros are 5-1 following last weekend's 28-14 come-from-behind win over the University of LaVerne. Under first-year coach Brian Fogarty USD has already improved upon last year's 4-5 record.

Torero tailback Jerome McAlpin is among the NCAA top ten in Division III with 684 yards and five touchdowns on 141 carries.

Cal State Hayward, 4-1, had last weekend off having beaten San Francisco State, 13-7, two weeks ago. Cal State Hayward has wins over Sonoma State, Cal State Northridge and Santa Clara. The team's loss was, 12-7, against St. Mary's College.

Toreros host 4-1 Hayward

Having completed their Division III schedule with a 5-1 record, the University of San Diego Toreros step up in class to tackle the Pioneers of Cal State Hayward at 1 p.m. today at the USD stadium.

The Division II Pioneers are 4-1 and are coming off an open date after beating San Francisco State two weeks ago.

"This game will be our toughest test this season by far," said USD head coach Brian Fogarty. "They are a big and physical team. Offensively, they are a lot like us, using the run first to set up the pass."

Tailback Donrick Sanderson has paced Hayward with 443 yards on 92 carries.

The San Diego Union/Peter Koeleman

Movin': Hayward's Donrick Sanderson gets a first down. Hayward whacked the leaves USD's Joe Kinnally in his wake and Toreros 40-21. Story on Page H-5.

Inside Sports

FOOTBALL

- Texas nips SMU — H-7
- Michigan edges Iowa — H-6
- Penn State upsets WVU — H-8
- Irish rip Trojans — H-2
- UCLA holds off Cal — H-3

IRONMAN

Dave Scott swam, biked and ran his way to a second consecutive victory in the grueling Ironman Triathlon World Championship. San Diegans Scott Tinley and Mark Allen were second and third, respectively. Story on Page H-10.

The San Diego Union/Peter Koeleman

Torero quarterback Phil Spencer is sacked by Hayward defenders.

Toreros step up in class, but flunk the big test

By Chris Jenkins, Staff Writer

As of yesterday, the University of San Diego is walking on hot coals, its month-long course a veritable gauntlet of football games against Division II opponents.

That first step, though, was a doozie. Having run out of fellow Division III teams to beat, the Toreros challenged powerful Cal State Hayward yesterday at USD and were blistered 40-21. Prior to yesterday's setback, the Toreros were 5-1 against schools more comparable in size.

"We have to be realistic about this," said Brian Fogarty, USD's first-year head coach. "That wasn't just a Division II team. That was a good Division II team."

Clearly, literally, the Toreros were out of their league. They'll stay there for the rest of the season, too. USD completes its 1983 schedule with three more Division II opponents in the next three weeks. The last of those games is at St. Mary's, which handed Hayward its only defeat of the season.

Hayward's Pioneers were infinitely bigger, noticeably faster and more than 19 points better than the Toreros. The score was kept respectable, however, by the fact that Hayward was penalized 15 times for 120 yards, USD just three times for 40 yards.

"It bothered me, but I'm not about to say the officials called a bad game," Hayward coach Tim Tierney said. "Let's just say I didn't have a real good rapport with them."

Added running back Donrick Sanderson: "We did whatever we wanted to do, then the penalties just pushed us back, so we'd just go to something else."

Usually Sanderson. He went 144 yards on 19 carries, including a 3-yard dive that opened the game's scoring. Another running back, freshman Mike Matthews, took off for a 56-yard TD soon after to make it 14-0. In all, the Pioneers rushed for 229 yards.

"This is all a new experience to me anyway, but we haven't faced a pair of running backs like that all year," said Fogarty. "Maybe there are some Division III teams back East that have those kind of backs, but not out here."

The irony here is that while USD was so outsize, Sanderson and Matthews were among the dinkiest guys on the field, both standing under 5-foot-10. Moreover, Hayward quarterback Kendall Gomez is only 5-8, and he threw touchdown passes of 52 yards to Vernon Porter in the third quarter (21-7) and 11 yards to Bert Graham in the fourth (33-14). Gomez also accounted for a 27-7 score with a fourth-quarter quarterback sneak.

USD didn't score until the third quarter, but the Toreros also allowed only those 14 first-half points and were back in the game on quarterback Phil Spencer's 26-yard TD pass to wide receiver Michael Rish less than five minutes into the third quarter. Whereupon Hayward scored two straight touchdowns.

Trailing 27-14, the Toreros quickly got the ball back and Spencer immediately went deep. His pass was intercepted by Ed Burton. End of rally. End of game.

Recognizing that, both coaches inserted freshman quarterbacks. The first pass of the season thrown by Hayward's Bill Neal was picked off by Greg Stein and returned down the sideline for a 37-yard TD. The first pass completed by USD's Roger Meyers was caught by Hayward's Burton, who, yes, returned it down the sideline for a 35-yard TD.

USD never was able to spring its top running back, Jerome McAlpin, who broke into the nation's top 10 Division III rushers last week.

And the gauntlet had just begun.

Sunday, October 23, 1983

The San Diego Union H-5

San Diego, Monday, October 24, 1983

San Diego Notepad

USD loses to Hayward State

The University of San Diego football team moved up in class Saturday and suffered a 40-21 loss at the hands of Hayward State.

The Toreros, who play in the NCAA's Division III were taking on a Division II team in Hayward. "That wasn't just a Division II team," said USD coach Brian Fogarty, "That was a good Division II team."

The Pioneers rushed for 229 yards, including 144 yards on 19 carries by Donrick Sanderson. Hayward's Mike Matthews chipped in with a 56-yard touchdown run.

San Diego, Friday, October 28, 1983

Toreros are small, but they play big

By Rick Davis

Tribune Staff Writer

On occasion this fall, Jerome McAlpin has glanced around the University of San Diego backfield and realized that, at 5-foot-9, he is the tallest member out there. That may tell you more about the 1983 USD football team than it does about McAlpin.

"I suppose I might have trouble seeing over my own linemen and spotting receivers downfield," admitted 5-8, 160-pound quarterback Phil Spencer, "except that we use a half-rollout/half-pocket type drop. It helps me get a better view."

The other member of this trio of mighty mites is — depending on who gets the call on a given down — either 5-7, 170-pound Len Savallo or 5-9, 180-pound Tom Woodward. McAlpin's backup is another pocket-sized entry — 5-4, 165-pound Mark Covarrubias.

Don't feel sorry for these sawed-off Toreros, though. They will take a 5-2 record into tomorrow's 1:30 p.m. homecoming game against Cal Lutheran (3-4).

"Anything between 6-4 and 8-2 certainly is a possibility," says Brian Fogarty, USD's first-year coach. "I'd be very disappointed if we lost the last three games."

That is a possibility though, because the rest of the schedule aligns them against NCAA Division II opponents, a notch above their own classification — Division III. And the first Division II confrontation last weekend resulted in a 40-21 loss to Hayward State.

"Some of us were intimidated when the game started because they were bigger than us. Hayward's offensive line averaged 235 pounds, to 210 for USD's defensive front and this was Division II," noted Torero wide receiver

JEROME McALPIN

PHIL SPENCER

er Michael Rish, whose 18 receptions for 328 yards rank him among the top 10 of NCAA Division III receivers. "But that's the best team we'll play, so we plan to win some of these last ones."

Such hopes depend largely on the mighty mites — the heart of the offense. Spencer, who was switched from defensive back to his old high-school position of quarterback this fall. He's coming off his best game (11 completions in 19 attempts for 147 yards) and shows season statistics of 51 of 118 for 726 yards and five touchdowns.

"I went to Saddleback Junior College after high school (Mater Dei of Santa Ana) and they already had a good quarterback, plus a new position seemed obvious with my size," remembered Spencer.

"Now I'm happy to be back at quarterback. I've always liked offense better, so it's good to go out at the position I grew up with."

Spencer, Rish and defensive back Jerry Schmidt were teammates at Verbum Dei in 1978, although the Spencer-Rish hookup wasn't prolific. "We didn't throw the ball that much, but I remember Michael was the team's leading receiver," added Spencer. "He went to USD as a freshman, but I wanted a JC because I figured it would be easier to walk on and start there. My whole thing was to get a chance to play."

McAlpin certainly hasn't complained about a lack of chances. His 158 rushing attempts (for 734 yards) average out to 22 attempts per game. "He's built solid enough (183 pounds) that he's handled the load," said Fogarty. "Of course, these Division II teams are bigger. I don't think we can run right at them."

... Not even with the "tallest" guy in the backfield.

OCT 27 1983

Better height, speed, balance hike Toreros' basketball hopes

By Bill Center, Staff Writer

Late last season, after the hopes of a winning campaign slipped away and his cast had thinned out, University of San Diego basketball coach Jim Brovelli temporarily shelved his "team" concept and turned the ball over to forward Mike Whitmarsh.

Over the final six games, the 6-foot-7 Whitmarsh averaged 26.8 points, and missed only one shot from the floor in scoring a USD-record 37 points against Loyola-Marymount. He became the first USD underclassman ever to earn first-team All-West Coast Athletic Conference honors and helped USD to its best-ever finish of fourth in the WCAC.

USD won four of its last six games with Whitmarsh shooting at will. Perhaps the best indication of the Toreros' improvement since then is that neither Brovelli nor his star player feels any undue pressure is being placed on the senior forward to repeat his stretch run of a season ago.

The Toreros are both bigger and faster than they were a year ago. Certainly they should be able to shoot better than last season's 11-15 club, whose marks of 46.8 percent from the floor and 67 percent from the foul line were 10-year lows for USD under Brovelli.

Brovelli has bolstered his Whitmarsh-led nucleus with the best class of recruits ever assembled at Alcalá Park. For the first time in his tenure, Brovelli can publish a two-deep.

"This is a much improved team over last season," said Whitmarsh. "I think we're at least five games better. We've got better players and we just get along better. If I want to do one thing I didn't do last year, it's take a leadership role."

One thing he isn't planning on doing is averaging 25 points a game.

"I just don't think one player is going to have to carry the load on this team," said Whitmarsh.

Whitmarsh is the only regular returning who was in the starting lineup when the 1982-83 campaign opened.

Position-by-position, here's a breakdown on the 1983-84 USD basketball team:

• CENTER — Mario Coronado (6-9, 215, Soph.) and Scott Thompson (6-11, 245, Fr.). Whitmarsh got hot last year after Coronado was inserted into the starting lineup. "Having the big man in the middle opened things up," said both Brovelli and Whitmarsh. Coronado is rugged and a battler. He may be pushed quickly by Thompson, an all-

Northern California player from the same league that produced Bill Cartwright, now of the New York Knicks. Thompson averaged 29.5 points and 16.2 rebounds as a prep. He also shot 72 percent from the foul line. Thompson was recruited by California, Washington State and Santa Clara. But Coronado can rumble.

• STRONG FORWARD — Dave McIver (6-8, 200, Sr.), Anthony Reuss (6-7, 197, Jr.), Nils Madden (6-7, 205, Fr.), Steve Krallman (6-8, 200, Fr.), Joe Fish (6-10, 210, Fr.). McIver and Reuss both averaged 4.5 points a game while splitting time toward the end of last season. McIver is tough and defense-minded and is also the No. 3 center. Reuss has progressed steadily after playing in a lesser high school league at Christian High in El Cajon. Madden, a strong rebounder, was runner-up Sonoma County player of the year and an all-NorCal pick as a prep (17.8 points, 11.0 rebounds, 82 percent free throw percentage). Krallman averaged 18.5 points and 12.6 rebounds at powerful Servite High in Anaheim.

• SMALL FORWARD — Whitmarsh (6-7, 200, Sr.) and Mark Bostic (6-5, 175, Jr.). A product of disciplined programs at Monte Vista High and Grossmont College, Whitmarsh steadily got better as his first Torero season progressed. He finished with a 15.3 average and had 5.3 rebounds a game. He also paced all frontcourt men in assists and developed as a top defensive player. Bostic averaged 18.5 points and 6.0 rebounds a game at Central Arizona College last year, where he was an all-state junior college selection.

• BIG GUARD — Bostic, Chris Carr (6-4, 165, Jr.), Al Moscatel (6-2, 185, Soph.), Penfold (6-5, 178, Sr.) and Randy Brickley (6-5, 175, Sr.). The front-runners are Bostic and Carr. But Bostic can also play small forward and Carr can play point guard. At Santa Monica City College, Carr last year averaged 11.8 points a game and shot 48.4 percent from the floor. He was also voted the best defensive player in the Metro Conference. Brovelli appreciates defense. Bostic and Carr both have good speed. Brovelli calls Moscatel "a zone breaker." Moscatel was a shooter at Mesa College last year where he averaged 14.2 points and 5.6 assists a game and was the Pacific Coast Conference's MVP.

• POINT GUARD — John Prunty (6-0, 170, Sr.), Carr, Moscatel and Eric Musselman (5-10, 165, Fr.). Prunty is a smart player who had an off-year shooting last season. Moscatel also lacks foot speed. Musselman is the son of former pro coach Bill Musselman and averaged 23 points and eight assists a game in the Cleveland area.

Pro tour no lure for ex-USD tennis star

Tye Ferdinandsen, who won the All-College Tennis Tournament at the University of San Diego over the weekend, still hasn't made up his mind whether or not he wants to try the pro tour when he graduates from USD.

He is an accounting major and may decide to use his degree with a CPA firm either in San Francisco or San Jose, his home town.

"I had some negative experiences when I went on the satellite tour in Europe last summer," Ferdinandsen said. "So I'm leaning toward not trying the pro tour, but things could change over a year's time."

Ferdinandsen still has a year of college left but no more eligibility on the Torero tennis team. Instead, he is helping Ed Collins coach the men's team.

Ferdinandsen defeated another USD player, Scott Patridge in the finals of the All-College event Sunday 6-3, 6-4.

"I was eligible to play in this particular event because I am still in college," he said, "and I was happy to win it."

But whether he wants to make tennis a career is still not fixed in his mind.

"When I went on the satellite tour in Europe last summer, it was so disorganized that I didn't get into tournaments I was supposed to be in, but I guess that's characteristic of the way they run things over there," he said. "It was a bit disappointing, however."

Meanwhile, Collins and his USD team, along with coach Skip Redondo and the San Diego State University team, are attempting to qualify as many players as possible in the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches of America tournament at UCLA this week.

As of this writing, USD still had four players in the running for the main draw, which starts tomorrow. They are David Desilits, who lost to Ferdinandsen in the semis of the USD tournament, Alejandro Ramos, Maris Leuters and Patridge.

San Diego State has Graham Espley-Jones already in the main draw and there were high hopes for a couple more.

This UCLA tournament serves to establish preseason rankings, according to Redondo, and acts as a sort of a warming-up period for the collegiate players, who don't get started in earnest until the middle of January.

Elson Irwin
TENNIS
NOTEPAD

Redondo figures his Aztec team will be in a four-way tangle with Brigham Young, Utah and New Mexico for the Western Athletic Conference title. (The WAC Championships will be held in Honolulu April 27-May 6.)

"Utah lost four of its six top players by graduation," Redondo said. "They were the WAC champions last year. We feel the title will be up for grabs this year and we're one of the teams who hope to do some grabbing."

Collins' USD team also is preparing for a gruelling season, but he figures to have a solid top six in Desilits, Patridge, Ramos, Leuters, Jim McNamee and Kevin Young. He's got some top-notch young talent, too, in Doug Bradley, John Foster, Attila Betyar, Armando Yanez and Robert Houssels.

Redondo's Aztec team this season had to do some regrouping but it has a nucleus of a few solid upper classmen (Jones and junior Nicky Getz), plus some up and comers such as Brent Zimmerman from Colorado, Jim Kellogg, a Fullerton JC transfer, Glenn Stephens from Germany, and redshirt Dave LaFranchi.

THE WOMEN'S GAME — Scott McCarthy, who coaches the women's team at USD is not bemoaning the loss of his star player, Dianne Farrell, to graduation. He has what amounts to a solid team in Mari Carmen-Casta, Judy Neumann, Nami Kozu, Carolyn Reed, Lisa Blitz and Pam Williams.

"We have a solid team as far as the singles are concerned," McCarthy said, "we may be hurting a bit in doubles, but we are looking forward to the coming season. Reed defeated Kozu last week in the challenge matches and she just might be the solid No. 3 (or even higher) to help carry the team through a very tough Division I schedule this season."

The USD women (14-10 last season) will engage in further challenge matches through the end of this year, preparing for the real thing which starts in February. After an opening match with U.S. International University, the Torero women must face USC and UCLA in successive matches.

Meanwhile, at the Tanner-ITCA at UC-Irvine over the weekend, San Diego State's team of Cynthia McGregor and Linda Howell knocked off UCLA's Lynn Lewis and Lisa Minter 6-2, 4-6, 7-5 to win the doubles championship. All the top collegiate tennis teams were entered, so this was an impressive win for Carol Plunkett's team. In the singles, Cheryl Jones of UCLA squeaked by Katherine Berry of SDSU. Lewis, of course, is a San Diegoan. Berry is the Aztec freshman recruited from England.

Lewis lost her bid to gain the singles title when she was beaten by teammate Minter 6-1, 6-2 in the quarterfinals. McGregor also lost out in the quarters to Pat Hy of UCLA.

TEAM TENNIS MATCH — USD and SDSU will stage a team-tennis-type event on Nov. 4 with the best of the men's and women's teams going against each other on the women's courts at 7:30 p.m. It's mainly to raise money for the tennis programs at both schools, but it's an opportunity for the fans to see many of these collegiate players in action in an entertaining "mixed" situation.

READER

NOV 3 1983

Orchestral Concert, the USD Orchestra will perform Strauss' Gypsy Baron, Brahms' Serenade in D Major, and Bach's Concerto for Two Violins and Strings. Henry Kolar and James Zagami, soloists, Sunday, November 6, 4 p.m., Camino Theatre, USD, Alcala Park, Linda Vista Road, Linda Vista. Free. 291-6480 x4427.

ED COLLINS
Torero coach

THE TRIBUNE

OCT 31 1983

TOREROS IN TOUGH — The University of San Diego sustained its second straight loss, 46-22 to Cal Lutheran in Thousand Oaks Saturday, and the football road doesn't get any smoother for the Toreros, who will entertain Azusa Pacific next Saturday before closing the season at St. Mary's Nov. 12.

SENTINEL

OCT 26 1983

Toreros meet their match, and more

By ERIC JOHNSON

Sentinel Correspondent

USD head football coach Brian Fogarty was impressed with Hayward State after his team was thrashed at home by the Pioneers 40-21 Saturday afternoon.

"That wasn't just an average Division II team," he said after the Toreros' record dropped to 5-2 on the season. "That was a good Division II team."

The Toreros, a member of the NCAA's Division III, were simply mismatched in their game against Hayward.

This was the first time this season USD tackled a school from the Division II. The last three Torero games are all against teams of the same Division II league. The season finale is against St. Mary's, which defeated Hayward 12-7 earlier in the season.

It seems that USD has run out of Division III teams in its geographic location to play against. Thus, the Toreros have to play other, usually larger, schools to complete their schedule.

That fact doesn't seem to bother Fogarty. "I enjoy playing good teams," he said. "The kids seem to rise to the occasion."

Against Hayward, the first-year USD coach said, he "knew we were going to be in trouble."

Indeed they were, as Pioneer running backs Donrick Sanderson and Mike Matthews led the way in the victory to boost their team's record to 5-1.

Hayward took a lead of 14-0 by halftime on first-quarter touchdown runs by Sanderson and Matthews. On the Pioneers' first possession, Sanderson, who carried the ball 19 times for 144 yards, scored from three yards out. Matthews scored later in the quarter on a 56-yard romp.

The Toreros moved to within a touchdown after they took their first possession in the second half 53 yards for a score. The six-play drive ended on Phil Spencer's 26-yard pass to Michael Rish.

Rish had a busy day, catching five of Spencer's ten completions for 86 yards.

Hayward then went back to work. After the Toreros' third-down sack of Kendall Gomez was negated by off-setting penalties, Gomez hit Vernon Porter for a 52-yard score.

USD promptly turned the ball over, and the Pioneers marched 53 yards on six plays for another six points. Gomez did the honors on a one-yard plunge to up the lead to 27-7.

The Toreros scored twice in the fourth quarter in an desperate for a comeback, but to no avail.

A 20-yard Spencer pass to Rish was fumbled by Rish as he was hit at the Pioneer one. An alert Ed McCoy pounced on the loose ball in the endzone for a USD touchdown.

With only a couple of minutes left in the game, Gomez made his only mistake of the day by throwing an interception to Torero Greg Stein. Stein flew down the sideline 37 yards for his first touchdown of the year.

USD senior tailback Jerome McAlpin, who has been a major factor so far this season, was limited in the game to only 55 yards on 15 carries. Before the game, McAlpin was among the top 10 NCAA Division III rushers with averages of 114 yards per game and 4.9 per rush.

Quarterback Spencer was the team's leading rusher with 75 yards on 16 carries.

Despite the loss, Fogarty was still optimistic for the rest of the season.

"A split of the four Division II games is still a definite possibility," said the coach, whose squad travels to California Lutheran College this Saturday.

SENTINEL

NOV 2 1983

Music

THE UNIVERSITY OF SAN DIEGO Symphony Orchestra will perform Strauss' "Gypsy Baron," Bach's "Concerto for Two Violins and Strings" and Brahms' "Serenade in D Major, Opus 11 Sunday at 4 p.m. in Camino Theatre.

Orchestra director Dr. Henry Kolar and Concert Master James Zagami will be featured soloists. This marks the first performance at USD of the Bach piece, which is considered a "staple" in violin literature. Admission is free.

CORONADO JOURNAL

NOV 3 1983

Invisible university meets here

USD dean Sheldon Krantz will answer the question "What is the matter with the legal profession?" at a meeting of the Coronado "Invisible University" at 7:15 p.m. tonight at the library.

OCT 30 1983

Cal Lutheran mauls USD

THOUSAND OAKS — After posting a 5-1 record against Division III opponents, the University of San Diego has found the going rough against Division II foes.

Yesterday, the Toreros lost 46-22 to Cal Lutheran, their second straight loss against a Division II school.

The highlight of the game for USD came in the third quarter, when Emmitt Dood returned a kickoff 100 yards for a touchdown, a school record. The old mark of 97 yards was set by Earl Robinson in 1977.

However, the Kingsmen dominated the rest of the game, racking up 479 yards in total offense while holding the Toreros to just 162 total yards.

Cal Lutheran opened the scoring early in the first quarter when Rich Sanchez capped a nine-play, 41-yard drive with a one-yard run.

The Toreros tied the game after stopping a Cal Lutheran fake punt attempt. Quarterback Phil Spencer hit Michael Rish with a 27-yard pass and three plays later scored on an 18-yard keeper.

That was about as close as the Toreros got — the Kingsmen scored twice more before the half for a 19-7 lead.

In the second quarter, Chuck Walker ran in from the one to complete a 68-yard, 16-play drive, and quarterback Greg DeGennaro also ran in from the one.

DeGennaro opened the second half with a 47-yard touchdown pass to Walker.

On the ensuing kickoff, Dodd had his record-breaking run to bring the Toreros within 26-14. However, the Kingsmen eliminated any comeback attempt by scoring two touchdowns and a field goal before USD could get back on the board.

Sanchez ran in again from the one, Joe Haynoski kicked a 53-yard field goal and Troy Kurelich grabbed an 80-yard bomb from Mike Jones to give the Kingsmen a 36-14 lead.

Spencer hit Rish on a 15-yard pass play for the Toreros' last score of the game. Spencer then ran in for the two-point conversion.

Haynoski added a 40-yard field goal for the Kingsmen to close out the scoring.

Spencer completed six of 20 passes for 81 yards, but he was intercepted three times. Jerome McAlpin led USD rushers with 66 yards on 16 carries.

DeGennaro completed 14 of 20 passes for 192 yards. His favorite receiver was Walker, who had seven catches for 99 yards. Sanchez rushed 21 times for 109 yards and two touchdowns.

The Toreros dropped to 5-3 while Cal Lutheran evened its record at 4-4. USD will host another Division II team when they take on Azusa-Pacific in a 1:30 p.m. Homecoming game next Saturday.

SD BUSINESS ACTION

NOV 1983

USD law lectures

The University of San Diego School of Law is sponsoring a lecture series open to the public featuring leaders in government who will speak on issues of national importance and current interest.

January 10 William Wilson
Tuesday U.S. Ambassador to the Vatican
February 15 Kenneth J. Thygeson
Wednesday President and Chief Executive Officer, Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation

Call 291-6480 ext. 4373 for information and reservations.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

NOV 1983

Update Business Seminars — The eleventh series of breakfast lectures for business persons, sponsored by the University of San Diego School of Business Administration and Continuing Education, is presented at locations downtown and in La Jolla. At the University Club, 1333 Seventh Ave.: Nov. 4, "Preparing Today for Tomorrow — A Look at Megatrends," with Johanna Hunsaker; Nov. 11, "Managing for Quality Improvement," with Robert Johnson; Nov. 18, "Effective Negotiation," with Gary Whitney; and Nov. 25, "Beyond Current Reagan Expansion," with Charles Holt. At La Jolla Village Inn, Interstate 5 at La Jolla Village Dr.: Nov. 4, "Managing for Quality Improvement," Nov. 11, "Preparing for Tomorrow," Nov. 18, "Beyond Current Reagan Expansion," and Nov. 25, "Effective Negotiation." Info: 293-4585.

SAN DIEGO MAGAZINE

NOV 1983

Beasts — University of San Diego Founders Gallery features depictions of animals in various art forms, from contemporary watercolors to primitive sculpture. Included are a 6-by-10-foot point embroidery Nativity scene portraying oxen and lambs, a bronze reindeer sculpture by 19th-century Austrian secessionist E. Arthur Berger and a 17th-century Aubusson tapestry. Thru Nov. 11. Mon.-Fri. noon to 5. 291-6480.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 4 1983

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Founders Hall): "Beasts," an exhibition of animals in art form, including sculpture, paintings and etchings. Gallery hours are from noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

NOV 5 1983

Symphony — The University of San Diego Symphony Orchestra will perform Strauss' "Gypsy Baron" and Bach's "Concerto for Two Violins and Strings" at 4 p.m. Sunday in Camino Theatre, University of San Diego, Alcala Park. Admission is free. Call 291-6480.

NOVEMBER
1983

Scene Around Town ...

San Diego, Tuesday, November 1, 1983

THE TRIBUNE D-3

Judy Smith, left, and Mr. and Mrs. James Hennessey at the "Celebrate the Holidays" party.

Ann Paul Barca, right, shows Mary Bowell quail she created and donated to DU-AUX chapter.

A PREVIEW PARTY HONORING the participants of the upcoming second annual "Celebrate the Holidays" benefit for the Museum of San Diego History building fund; a luncheon and fall fashion show by DU-AUX, a new auxiliary chapter of Ducks Unlimited, and a University of San Diego Auxiliary fashion show, "Masquerade," were among the week's social events.

The "Celebrate the Holidays" preview was held at the James Hennessey home in La Jolla. A champagne reception for the "Celebrate the Holidays" event — displays and exhibits of holiday designs — is planned Nov. 28 at Casa de Balboa in Balboa Park, home of the Museum of San Diego History. The event will be open to the public Nov. 29 through Dec. 11 and proceeds will benefit the museum.

The DU-AUX luncheon and fashion show marked the first fund-raiser for this new Ducks Unlimited auxiliary, the first of its kind in the state. Ducks Unlimited is an international waterfowl and wildlife conservation group. The local chapter, one of the most successful in the country, is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year.

A social hour and luncheon kicked off the University of San Diego Auxiliary fashion show yesterday at the San Diego Hilton. Fashions for fall from daywear to the sophisticated and holiday attire from Robinson's were featured in the show. Patty Edwards was chairman.

Tribune photos by Tony Doubek and George Smith

Counting silent auction bids at DU-AUX luncheon are Ginger Byrum, left, and Judy Keeler.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 1 8 1983

THOMAS SCHUMACKER (Camino Theatre, University of San Diego). The acclaimed pianist will perform at 8 p.m. Monday.

Model takes to the ramp at University of San Diego Auxiliary's fashion show yesterday.

Larry Mabey draws door prize tickets as Mary Bowell lends a hand at the DU-AUX luncheon.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 6 1983

Spindriff

Two-time winner

The Hilton was packed — 730 plus people — for the University of San Diego Auxiliary fashion show last Monday. Robinson's fashion show got right to the hot trend — the pulled-together Japanese looks (or pulled-apart, if you prefer). Then they moved on to European and American sportswear, then evening dresses (sequins and beads), furs, and wound up with an Olympic tribute, complete with doves flying across the room. (It is very difficult to top a Robinson's fashion show.) The tasty menu started with sorbet and wound up with apple strudel with brandy sauce. Patty Edwards, who was chairwoman for the second successful year, thinks the amount raised for the USD financial aid program will be around $13,500.

Who won the $1,000 gift certificate from Robinson's? Author Hughes, USD president.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

NOV 4 1983

Mira Mesa gives neighborhood justice a try

By David Hart

The Times Advocate

MIRA MESA — Frustration with the legal system's numerous delays and high cost has led the University of San Diego School of Law to concoct a simple antidote for simple disputes.

It's called neighborhood justice. Community volunteers train to mediate minor disputes — a neighbor's dog barks at all hours of the night, a mother's daughter stays out too late, a landlord won't return a security deposit to a tenant. Appointments can be arranged in a day. Hopefully, both sides agree to the solution, one that each can live with.

The community of Golden Hills, which abuts Balboa Park, is the location of the pilot project started a year ago. Minor disputes are referred to the mediation center by the San Diego Police Department, the San Diego city attorney's office and local attorneys.

And now Mira Mesa, a melting pot of ethnic groups, is the site for another project. The county has funded the Mira Mesa mediation center with $70,000. By January the center will be in full swing.

Carol Hallstrom, the project director, believes communities need a sense of control over their own problems. Disputes are more easily settled within the community itself, she says, than through the court system.

"This is an attempt to retain within the community some responsibility and control over minor conflicts which may not be viewed as all that serious but are aggravating in everyday life," she said.

In earlier days, communities could depend on the church or the family structure to hammer out compromises to minor disputes, Ms. Hallstrom said. But the divorce rate is soaring and society is no longer strictly governed by the dictates of the church.

"We serve as a preventative forum. We provide a place where people can air their grievances and hopefully forestall both violence or going to court," she said.

Keeping people from filing a small claims court action or a full-fledged lawsuit is one of the main objectives of the project. The overcrowded courthouse is an acute problem since the passage of Proposition 8, the so-called Victims' Bill of Rights. The net effect of Prop. 8 was to cause more criminal trials and lengthen the amount of time it takes for a civil case to reach trial.

Whether the neighborhood justice program will diffuse that impulse to litigate is questionable. At the time the Board of Supervisors voted to fund the program, the supervisors focused on just that point.

The funding was marshaled through by then-Supervisor Roger Hedgecock. The rest of the board questioned whether the neighborhood justice project would help only the people who wouldn't have filed a lawsuit in the first place, said Carla Jane Mann, who analyzed the project for the county. In other words, the project may be serving a new group of people instead of those who would file lawsuits.

Please see Justice, page B2

Justice

Continued from page B1

Whether the court's caseload will be reduced by the project is a question that remains unanswered. The success of the project will eventually be measured by the social science research program at San Diego State University.

But to the people who are involved in the project, the solutions that are reached have a positive effect on the community. Marti Arnold, a social worker and resident of Golden Hills, was the mediator of an unusual dispute between a mother and her runaway daughter. The mother wanted to meet her daughter's friends, but the young girl said the house wasn't presentable. The mother said her daughter stayed out too late.

The case was referred to the mediation center by the police. Mediation resulted in a contract between the mother and daughter. A curfew was set and a promise to complete homework was made, and the mother agreed to be more flexible.

According to Ms. Arnold, both mother and daughter walked away pleased with the agreement. "I'm a social worker, and this was a situation that I work with many times," she said. "And I find mediation to be far more effective than traditional counseling."

Mira Mesa is a tightly knit community of 40,000 — although it is an ethnic melting pot of Asians, blacks and Hispanics — that has already responded to perceived problems within its boundaries.

Mira Mesa Community Council Director Nina Nelson sees the mediation program as another step in that direction. "It is a vehicle to bring this community even closer together," she said. "We think that this is a better way to get at the problems of the different ethnic groups."

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 6 1983

USD ORCHESTRA — The University of San Diego Orchestra, conducted by Henry Kolar, will perform works by Bach, Strauss and Brahms, with violinists Kolar and James Zagami, at 4 p.m. today in the Camino Theater, University of San Diego.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 6 1983

Founders Gallery: "Beasts," animals in various art forms, through Nov. 11. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.; Wednesdays, noon to 9 p.m.

SD BUSINESS NEWS

NOV 7 1983

Computer Resources for Educators is a series of one-day courses designed to train educators and administrators in the use of microcomputers. USD offers individual courses or 10 courses toward a Graduate Certificate. All courses, 9:00 a.m. — 6:00 p.m., fee, $65 (add $25 for lab courses). Info.: 293-4585.

SENTINEL

NOV 9 1983

GOT SOME CHORES which need to be done? University of San Diego students offer free chore assistance such as cleaning windows, ovens, moving furniture, etc. on Nov. 19 and 20. If you need some help around the house, call Evelyn Hermann's office at 236-5765.

SAN DIEGO NEWSLINE

NOV 9 1983

Ernest Tannen, world federalist and 20th century abolitionist, will speak at a number of local forums on the "Abolition of War in the 20th Century." Mr. Tannen will speak at University of San Diego from 12:15-1 p.m. Call 293-4583 for details. He will be interviewed from 2-2:20 p.m. on KPBS-FM 89, and will appear at the following locations: Vital Issues Forum, SDSU at 3 p.m. (265-6805); Abraxas School, Hornblum and Gresham, PB at 7 p.m.; and on Thursday, Nov. 17 at the 1st Unitarian Church, 4190 Front St. at a brownbag luncheon. 450-3211 (World Federalists Assn.).

Among planners and guests at 'Masquerade' fashion show were Marilyn Roe and Beverly Mohrardt (from top left, clockwise), co-chair Jane Sexton, Mary Jo White, Josephine Ghio, Pat Keating with Debra Champion and Kara Keating, and Linda Alessio.

Photos by Philip Davies

'Masquerade' a fashion parade

By DAVID NELSON

You never know what to expect when you attend a party on Halloween. There could be ghosts and goblins in costumes sufficiently ghastly to make the hair on the back of one's neck prickle in a most unpleasant fashion. There could be parking valets bothered nearly to distraction by the question of what to do with all those broomsticks. And, worst of all, there could be pumpkin pie prepared by a sorcerer's apprentice of a cook who prefers playing tricks to giving treats.

But none of that happened at Monday's "Masquerade," the annual fundraising luncheon and fashion show given at the San Diego Hilton by the University of San Diego Auxiliary for the benefit of the student scholarship program. High fashion was the day's keynote, and only a few daring souls ventured out in holiday-spirited garb. (One was Rosemary Taylor, who topped her demure daytime outfit with a delightfully rakish witch's hat.)

Chairman (for the second year in a row) Patty Edwards, co-chair Jane Sexton and a lengthy list of committee members that included Marilyn Regalado, Carol Alessio, Mary Jo White, Pat Keating, Betty Barrett and Sister Virginia McMonagle, spent a great deal of toil and trouble brewing up this special event. In return for their labors they were rewarded by more requests for tickets than they could possibly honor. Over 700 guests attended, and more than 100 requests for additional tickets had to be turned away.

The witching hour struck early, with cocktails at 11 on the Hilton terrace, under a bright, Halloween-defying sun. The group later moved in to the pumpkin-toned ballroom, which had been made seasonally festive by centerpieces of autumn-colored silk flowers decorated with gold-toned masks.

Msgr. I. Brent Eagen offered the pre-luncheon grace, in which he requested "A double blessing on Patty Edwards and her hard-working committee, and a special blessing on our Chargers as they take the field tonight," which provoked an expectably enthusiastic reaction.

The luncheon's first course provoked the comment, "It's good enough to be the entree," from one taste-tinged guest; this was an exotic sorbet of lemon flavored with apple brandy and laced with bits of fresh apple. This unusual treat, which floated on a pool of champagne, had been one of the courses served in a dinner held by La Chaîne des Rotisseurs at the Hilton the previous Wednesday.

High Society

day. The meal continued with roast beef in hunter's sauce and a fruit strudel doused with a zesty custard sauce.

The fashion show, presented again this year by Robinson's, commenced with an eerie display of Japanese kabuki dancing in which the participants twirled with red streamers while strobe lights dissected them into a thousand parts; this was followed immediately by models sporting the new "Japanstyle" fashions designed by such makers as Issey Miyake and Willi Wear.

Highlights in the show included smashing hand-tooled suedes by Valentino and a series of '20s fashions for today from Jessica McClintock. Also represented in the various revues and dance routines that made up the Robinson's show were such designers as Gloria Sachs, Krizia, Giannina Versace, Anne Klein and Perry Ellis. Just before the grand finale, a company of trumpeters in U.S. Marine Corps dress blues announced the entrance

Patty Edwards (left) chaired fashion show for second year and Coleen Donovan and Helen Robinsons.

Photos by Philip Davies

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 1 1 1983

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Founders Hall): "Beasts," an exhibition of animals in art form, including sculpture, paintings and etchings. Gallery hours are from noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 1 3 1983

"THE ELIXIR OF LOVE" — Donizetti's comic opera, sung in English, will be presented by the University of San Diego Opera Workshop, with staging and musical direction by Robert Austin, at 8 p.m. Thursday and Saturday and at 2:30 p.m. next Sunday in the Camino Theater, USD.

MISSION VALLEY

NEWS

NOV 1 5 1983

Opera workshop at USD

The University of San Diego Opera Workshop will present "Elixir of Love" by Donizetti on Thursday, Nov. 17; Saturday, Nov. 19, both at 8 p.m., and Sunday, Nov. 20 at 2:30 in Camino Theater.

General Admission is $4; seniors and students, $3. Tickets may be purchased at the door, or call 291-6480 for information.

The Italian comic opera-buffa, sung in English, with staging and musical direction by Robert Austin, combines the talent and efforts of USD faculty and students.

The cast includes: Joseph Carson, Deborah Aramendia, David Walling, Paul Horton and Anne Swanke.

Mission Valley News - Nov. 15 - Dec. 6, 1983

USD fashion show fills to capacity

By Kim M. Minke

University of San Diego Auxiliary and Robinson's presented their 27th annual fashion show and luncheon at the San Diego Hilton Beach and Tennis Resort.

Masquerade was the theme and all proceeds benefit USD student financial aid program.

The fashion presentation was unique and exhilarating. It was a dramatic, theatrical show, typical of Robinson's. Oriental dancers, 1920's charlestoners, and a tribute to the 1984 Olympics, all helped create a very different show.

Designs and designers for 1984 were featured—Claude Montana, Perry Ellis, Jessica McClintock, Anne Klein, Krizia, etc. ... Layers of rich color and textures were seen from all the designers, proving that mixing and layering is the way to dress for this year. Layering will be popular in San Diego, the only difference is that we will be wearing lightweight layers instead of the heavy ones they wear and need in the colder climates.

The Masquerade, University of San Diego's only fund raiser, was sold out for over one month and over 800 people attended. If you missed this exciting event this year, there is always next year!

Celebrating the holidays early of models in Olympic costumes, two of whom carried out a crate of doves and released them to fly around the Hilton ballroom. (Olympics mania is spreading fast, and USD announced that day that the Irish National Olympic Team will do their pre-Games training in special quarters on the university's campus prior to moving into the Olympic Village in Los Angeles.)

After the show, USD president Author Hughes conducted the special drawing for prizes; included as the grandest prize of all was a trip for two to London.

Among those attending were Gloria Chamberlain, Jane Murphy, Fran Steber, Lynn Kinder, Lee Maturo, Mary Berglund, Annice Sherman, Betty Bass, Helen Casey, Helen Pickard, Reba Brophy, Rae Cabral, Ingrid Hibben, Cooley Carley, Dian Peet, Betsy Manchester, Gloria Melville, Marilyn Roe, Happy Redfearn, Belle Wiegler and Fran Weir, Patty Edwards' special guest and old family friend from Omaha.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

NOV 1 7 1983

Thursday, Nov. 17, 1983 North County Magazine

The Arts

Opera for adults, another for kids

By William E. Fark
Special to The Times-Advocate

Opera comes in two sizes this week: one for adults and another for children. Grown-ups may enjoy sunny, rural romance while youngsters can thrill and chill to a retelling of an old fairy tale.

The University of San Diego opera workshop presents Gaetano Donizetti's comic opera, "The Elixir of Love," sung in English. Although the composer is known best for the tragic "Lucia di Lammermoor," his "Don Pasquale" and this work show a different side to his nature. They are fun.

"The Elixir of Love," first performed in 1832, takes place on a farm owned by a young, beautiful, unmarried woman — Adina. The peasants' primary labors seem to be singing and cavorting, and in the case of Nemorino, pining for the love of his mistress. They eventually get together, through the efforts of an inept medical quack who peddles magic love potions and the interference of a young soldier who woos Adina. Hardly earth shaking, but fast-paced and melodic.

Tenor Joseph Carson sings Nemorino at USD, with sopranos Deborah Aramendia and Anne Swanke as Adina and Ganetta, the women in his life. Baritone David Walling sings Belcore, sergeant of the village garrison and Nemorino's rival, with bass Paul Horton as Dulcamara as the phony doctor. Staging and musical direction are by Robert Austin.

"The Elixir of Love" plays in Camino Theatre on the USD campus in Alcalá Park. Performances are at 8 p.m., Nov. 17 and 19 and at 2:30 p.m., Nov. 20. Tickets available at the door before performances.

SENTINEL

NOV 1 6 1983

THE UNIVERSITY OF SAN DIEGO Opera Workshop will present "Elixir of Love" by Donizetti tomorrow and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30 in Camino Theater.

The Italian comic opera-buffa, sung in English with staging and musical direction by Robert Austin, features USD faculty and students. The cast includes Joseph Carson, Deborah Aramendia, David Walling, Paul Horton and Anne Swanke.

USD: Campus blossoms and takes enviable posture

Continued from B-1
sity and student center also are under way.

"This isn't expansion to meet projected growth. This is to serve the students we already have," said Hughes.

"By 1985, we will have reached the point we projected for ourselves a decade ago. In 1975 (three years after Hughes came to USD) growth was our number one priority. We had to grow in order to achieve the fiscal stability needed to create our academic stability.

"We have done that. Growth is no longer a priority for us. We can consider our future alternatives from the position of growth, slow growth or no growth, whichever we feel best serves our other goals," Hughes said.

Those goals are "as broad as our campus and surrounding community's perceptions," said Hughes.

"We will take the time to consider the ideas of everyone who wants to talk to us and gradually refine those ideas until we establish our new goals," he said.

The only fixed desire on Hughes' agenda is expanding the enrollment of minorities, especially Hispanics.

He recognizes that the campus is generally perceived today as being made up of students from upper middle-class white families, but he seeks to change that as the university adjusts to better reflect the area's heavy Hispanic heritage.

Over 70 percent of this year's entering class came from California with half of them from the San Diego area. But only 7.8 percent of the student body is Hispanic, and though this makes up the largest single element of the 12.8 percent total minority enrollment, Hughes said he would like to see it grow.

Hughes has no doubts as to where USD's moral commitment stands today.

The university's philosophy is based on an unquestioned belief in God and, while it is open to students of all faiths and creeds, it is rooted firmly in Roman Catholic theology, which Hughes sees as another strong reason for attracting more Hispanic students.

Though strong in undergraduate liberal arts programs and the social sciences, Hughes stressed that the academic program transcends the liberal arts into four professional areas — law, education, business and nursing — and 40 percent of the student body is at the postgraduate level.

"Now we face some fascinating alternatives," said Hughes.

"The years of fiscal and physical growth were challenging and exciting," he said, "but now new and more subtle challenges and goals face the campus. Now we can put all our attention to qualitative change without having to keep one eye on quantitative change."

USD can strive to enhance its position as a good, medium-sized, comprehensive university among other universities of similar standing, or seek new directions.

"To my mind, we are not seeking some abstract academic goal. We are seeking to continue the development of this university as an institution that reflects our city and locality, its proximity to the international border and role in the greater Pacific basin," he said.

"Some people may like to see us do that within the confines of our present programs in a form of steady state," said Hughes.

Others may like to expand the current academic areas into higher academic levels, or move into hard research in the social sciences. Still another alternative is to move more heavily into the hard sciences, such as engineering, computer science and telecommunications, while some people may prefer a completely new direction that would return the predominant campus emphasis to undergraduate studies with the professional studies a separate university entity, similar to Harvard and UCLA, he said.

"There are fine models for all these and other alternatives around the nation," said Hughes.

"This is an exciting position to be in — to be able to plan from a stable base," said Hughes, who quietly declines the credit that most people give him for developing that stability.

It is an excitement that is shared by Bishop Leo T. Maher, chairman of the university's Board of Trustees.

"USD is not successful because it has grown; it has grown because it is successful," he says in the campus annual report to be published later this week.

The university has "never lost sight of our central purpose; to provide an environment in which human potential can, in a spiritual context, discover and unfold its unique meaning," the bishop said.

A 16-year faculty member, Dr. Iris M. W. Engstrand, chairman of the history department, agrees.

"Personal relationships are at the core of this place. There's an unspoken rule among the faculty that you spend as much time on campus as possible, available to students. That, I think, is the real strength of USD, and that's why it has grown," she said.

As Dr. Barton Thurber, chairman of the English department, joins others of the campus community in looking to the future, he remains confident of one thing:

"I will make a prediction," he said. "Within the next five to 10 years, USD is going to explode into national awareness as a place known for the excellence of its teaching."

USD campus blossoms, takes enviable posture

By Michael Scott-Blair
Staff Writer

It sits on the hill overlooking Mission Bay and Valley, stately, beautiful, well-manicured and suddenly, very mature.

For years it was a cloistered academic center with relatively narrow interests, but in 10 short years, the University of San Diego has blossomed into a major city campus that is looking toward the future with a posture that is the envy of most universities.

While other campus leaders sit grim-faced as they survey the future, USD's President Author E. Hughes could not help smiling as he reviewed 10 enormously successful years of skillfully planned growth, and let his mind contemplate alternatives for the future that his faculty, students, and administration will be considering for the next 12 months.

He ticked off the decade's progress: The student body has doubled from 2,500 to more than 5,000. The faculty has grown from 109 to 191, with more than 90 percent of them having Ph.D. degrees. The number of degrees awarded to students has increased from 460 to almost 1,100. Resident students have tripled to nearly 1,400. Private gift support to the campus has skyrocketed from well under $100,000 in 1972 to $3.75 million this year.

Outside his office, the fruits of those gifts were taking shape in a building program that would satisfy universities three times its size.

Simultaneously, millions of dollars are being poured into the new School of Business Administration funded by the Olin Foundation, the new Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center and the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library.

Plans for a comprehensive univer-

See USD on Page B-5

SENTINEL
NOV 16 1983

USD kicks off expansion

USD President Author E. Hughes has announced plans for development of a $9 million University Center complex. The undertaking will cap a building campaign that includes the completion of a new business school building, a conference center and a library in February and July, 1984.

The multi-purpose University Center will occupy roughly 70,000 square feet on property east of DeSales Hall.

"While the academic facilities of the campus are effectively meeting the educational requirements of USD's students, the University Center is needed for their spiritual, psychological, cultural and social development," Hughes said.

The three-level structure, as it is currently envisioned, will consist of a central lounge, student and faculty dining areas, a grille, a deli, student affairs offices, a game room, student publications offices, a programming area and various students activity areas.

The architecture will conform to the campus' 16th Century Spanish Renaissance motif.

Vice President for Student Affairs Tom Burke said the University Center is needed to accommodate an unan-anticipated surge of enrollment in recent years. Current facilities, spread about campus, can service about 200 students at a time. Undergraduate enrollment stands at 3,000 students, with an additional 2,000 graduate and law students.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

NOV 16 1983

The University of San Diego Opera Workshop will present "Elixir of Love" by Donizetti at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday in Camino Theatre. The Italian comic opera-buffa will also be shown at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. The presentation combines the talents and efforts of the USD faculty and students. General admission is $4; students and seniors, $3.

Are high school teachers at back of class?

THE TRIBUNE 11/17/83

By Vicki Torres
Tribune Staff Writer

The quality of American education has declined in the past 20 years, partly due to a corresponding decline in the quality of high school teachers, three of San Diego's top educators agreed last night.

"Very few college students look to education as a career," said Richard Atkinson, chancellor of the University of California at San Diego. "Society puts little value on high school teachers."

Atkinson said increasing teacher-training standards as well as salaries would help improve education, but the biggest aid would be to elevate the status of teachers.

"The people of this nation, the parents of this nation, need to value these individuals," Atkinson said.

Atkinson, along with Presidents Thomas Day of San Diego State University and Author Hughes of the University of San Diego, spoke to 120 people attending a Parent Association meeting last night at University of San Diego High School.

The three addressed various topics on education during their hourlong talk and answered questions from the audience.

Atkinson said high school teachers no longer enjoy the status of doctors or lawyers, as they had in the past. As a result, those entering the profession typically are not the brightest students, but those who score lowest on college tests.

Day said another part of the problem has been the teacher-education methods used in California for 20 years.

Please see TEACHERS, A-12

THOMAS DAY
SDSU president

AUTHOR HUGHES
USD president

RICHARD ATKINSON
UCSD chancellor

READER

NOV 17 1983

"Art and the Law," entertainment, copyright, and trademark law will be discussed by USD law professor Peter Karlen, Thursday, November 17, 7 p.m., Boehm Gallery, Palomar College, 1140 West Mission Road, San Marcos. Free. 744-1150.

Continued From Page 1

Under California's system, future high-school teachers must study another field extensively before declaring themselves education majors, and those who do well often are lured to continue in that field rather than enter education. Thus, Day said, good math students may get a job in mathematics instead of becoming math teachers.

Hughes said teachers also face a productivity problem in a public mind that perceives teachers as getting a three-month vacation each year. In addition, he said, class time spent with students has been reduced over the years.

"Is it an eight-hour work day?" Hughes asked. "I don't think we can address the matter of salaries without addressing productivity as well."

As for the quality of students entering college, Hughes said that although many are more worldly and experienced than their predecessors, with "fairly hefty" vocabularies as a result of exposure to television, they still lack basic study skills.

"A considerable effort" is spent at USD, Hughes said, on remedial work to give students the ability to do college-level work.

Atkinson said UCSD has had students from two cultures, those with a "spectacular" education who have done much advanced work in high school and those who gleaned little from their high school years.

The University of California system is partly to blame for this two-culture system, Atkinson said, because of its emphasis on grade-point average as a criterion for admittance.

"If you look at La Jolla high school seniors, they're not taking tough courses; they're just collecting their As," he said.

The university is attempting to remedy the situation, he said, by giving special consideration to high school students who take advanced courses and by increasing the number of required courses, such as three years of math.

S.D. BUSINESS
JOURNAL

NOV 21 1983

Private lessons

Describing, in corporate terms, his institution as a "growth company," University of San Diego (USD) president Author E. Hughes last week reported that the university generated nearly $32.9 million in revenues for the year ended Aug. 31, 1983, up 17.7 percent.

But the boost in revenues — which are still nearly 74 percent dependent on student tuition and fees — was overshadowed by a 24 percent jump in USD's excess of revenues over expenditures. The $2.6 million surplus enabled USD to help fund its own growth in fiscal 1983: Construction on three new buildings was begun, at a cost of $10.6 million. And, last week, Hughes kicked off his latest expansion plan: A $9 million, three-story, 70,000-square-foot University Center complex.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

NOV 24 1983

Spanish film festival

A Spanish film festival featuring the works of Luis Berlanga has been announced by the University of San Diego's Spanish Department in collaboration with "Casa de Espana." The film series begins Nov. 29 and will run through Dec. 10. All films are in Spanish with English subtitles, and will be shown in Salomon Lecture Hall, DeSales Hall. Admission is free and the public is invited.

The Festival offers "That Happy Couple" on Nov. 29, "Placido" on Dec. 1, "The National Shotgun" on Dec. 2, "Calabuch" on Dec. 3, "National Heritage" Dec. 6, "National III," Dec. 8, "Welcome, Mr. Marshall" Dec. 9, and "The Executioner" Dec. 10. All shows begin at 7 p.m. Many of the films took honors at the Cannes and other festivals.

Berlanga, until recently the president of the National Film Library of Spain, was awarded the National Prize for Cinematography in 1981.

2B The Daily Californian □ East San Diego County, California □ Saturday, November 19, 1983

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

TOREROS WIN/ Monte Vista High and Grossmont College graduate Mike Whitmarsh scored 27 points, grabbed six rebounds and was credited with five assists Friday night, leading the University of San Diego to a 68-58 exhibition basketball victory over the Australian National team. The game was USD's first of the season. Mark Bostic added 19 points for the Toreros in the first outing of the season. Christian High graduate Anthony Reuss had 13 points and a game-high 14 rebounds for San Diego. Danny Morsey and Mark Dalton led the Australians with 13 points each. Philip Smyth added 12 points for the losers, who fell to 2-6 on a tour of North America. The Aussies complete the tour at Santa Clara Saturday night. The teams were tied 30-all at halftime. San Diego went ahead to stay midway through the second half and pulled away in the final 10 minutes.

READER

NOV 17 1983

Piano Recital, Thomas Schumacher will include works by Fauré, Haydn, Albeniz, and others in his program, Monday, November 21, 8 p.m., Camino Theater, USD, Alcalá Park. 286-3536 or 281-9783.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 20 1983

"THE ELIXIR OF LOVE" — Donizetti's comic opera, sung in English, will be presented by the University of San Diego Opera Workshop, with staging and musical direction by Robert Austin, at 2:30 p.m. today in the Camino Theater, USD.

Rendering of the planned University Center at the University of San Diego

La Jollans play role in USD expansion

Manchesters, Copley Foundation help establish new facilities

La Jollans have figured prominently in the planned addition of three new buildings at the University of San Diego.

The undertaking will cap a building campaign that includes the completion of a new business school building, a conference center, and a library to be finished in February and July 1984, respectively.

The multi-purpose University Center will occupy roughly 70,000 square feet on property east of DeSales Hall.

According to USD President Author E. Hughes, "the University Center is needed for their (the students') spiritual, psychological, cultural, and social development."

The Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center, and the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library are two parts of the planned additions, which Hughes called, "a milestone in the university's continuing commitment to improved higher education."

A $500,000 gift made last December by Douglas and Betsy Manchester of La Jolla made the conference center possible.

Douglas Manchester, chairman and chief executive officer of Torrey Enterprises, has been a USD trustee since 1978. Betsy Manchester is a member of the USD Auxiliary and an alumna of the Sacred Heart, the religious society that founded the San Diego College for Women, now USD.

Current facilities, spread about campus, can service about 200 students at a time. Undergraduate enrollment stands at 3,000 students, with an additional 2,000 graduate and law students.

"USD, in its vision of the University Center, returns to the earliest traditions of 'the Commons' — the union as a place where students, faculty, and administration can meet on common ground, a place which affords an atmosphere of free discussion, a student development center, a building dedicated to the promotion of the art of living," Burke said.

Olin Hall, the school of business building, will provide much needed faculty office space, conference rooms, computer and classrooms for the expanding school of business.

The Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center will create a forum for scholarly thought. The Helen K. and James S. Copley Library will provide additional space needed for the present enrollment of 5,000.

The buildings are located on the west end of campus. Olin Hall and the Manchester Conference Center are situated next to each other on the south side of Marian Way, the avenue bisecting campus.

The Helen K. and James S. Copley Library adjoins Camino Hall (the existing library) on the north side of the street.

Precast concrete ornamental panels and molding decorate the traditional stucco exteriors. Plaster running molds and column also have been used.

Each building will have a major distinguishing feature: a pedestrian bridge connects Marian Way to the business school's main entrance; the conference center will have its lobby illuminated by a massive pyramid-grid skylight; and the library's four-corner towers will distinguish it from Camino Hall, which will be connected to it by a two-level, enclosed walkway.

Tucker, Sadler and Associates are the architects of record, and M.H. Golden Company is the general contractor for the business school and conference center buildings. A large patio will divide the structures.

The $2.4 million conference center's multi-purpose use has been designed to accommodate lectures and board meetings.

The two-level, 15,658-square-foot building will contain five seminar rooms, classrooms, a board of trustees conference room, and a 226-seat auditorium to be used primarily as a lecture hall. Four conference rooms will be made available in the summer months to business groups.

The buildings will provide additional office space for faculty and administration, but their primary function will be to serve students with instruction, lecture, and research settings.

Vice President for Student Affairs Tom Burke said the University Center is needed to accommodate an anticipated surge of enrollment in recent years.

The conference center is slated for dedication on Feb. 26.

A $1.5 million grant from the James S. Copley Foundation of La Jolla led contributions for the $3.7 million Copley Library.

The new 46,120-square-foot building will have 26 rooms. The Dunphy Company, general contractor; and Roy Drew of Mosher, Drew, Watson, and Ferguson, architect; have employed wrought iron bars on the windows. The interior, designed by John Thiele of Ross, Thiele and Son, La Jolla, will include a quarry tile entryway. The walls will be soft-surface carpet for quiet acoustics.

At a combined cost of $10.6 million, the new buildings will conform to the university's hallmark architecture reflecting a 16th Century Spanish Renaissance style known as Plateresque.

With their rooftop urns, arched windows and doorways, and stucco facades, they remain true to the style adopted in 1952 with the first buildings erected on the Alcalá Park site.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT
NOV 17 1983

University of San Diego President Author W. Hughes announced plans for the development of a $9 million, 70,000-square-foot University Center yesterday. The three-level structure, designed by Mosher/Drew/Watson/Ferguson, will be east of DeSales Hall. Story at right.

USD To Add Student Center To Project List

$9 Million Building To Be Living Room For Students, Faculty

By ROB SCHUPP

SAN DIEGO DAILY TRANSCRIPT Staff Writer

With $10.52 million worth of projects already in various stages of construction on the University of San Diego campus, the university is seeking contributions for a $9 million, 70,000-square-foot University Center.

"While the academic facilities of the campus are effectively meeting the educational requirements of USD's students, the University Center is needed for their spiritual, psychological, cultural and social development," said USD president Author E. Hughes at a press conference yesterday.

"We have already received contributions of about $2.3 million," he said of the effort to raise cash for a building described as the living room for the campus students.

No groundbreaking date has been announced. The university must receive at least $6 million in contributions before construction will begin. A January, 1985 date has been targeted for a construction start.

The building will contain a central lounge, student and faculty dining areas, a grill, a deli, student affairs offices, a game room, student publications offices, a student organization center, conference and meeting rooms, a programming area and various student activity areas.

The architecture, designed by Mosher/Drew/Watson/Ferguson, will conform to the campus' 16th Century Spanish Renaissance motif.

Tom Burke, vice president of student affairs, said the campus has such facilities, but that they are spread out through the entire campus. The university has two dining rooms and three snack bars. The new center will replace one dining room and two of the snack bars.

It will also displace about 400 parking spaces as it is being built on one of the parking fields. Hughes said the university is looking into several alternatives, including a parking structure, as a solution to any parking shortage. He added several of the parking lots are underutilized.

Ernie Hahn is heading up the contribution campaign, which is described by Hughes as a "mini-campaign."

"I laugh a little at using mini-campaign because five years ago this would have been considered a major undertaking," he said.

The University Center was originally included in a $15 million capital improvement expenditure program initiated by the university five years ago. The money has gone only as far as to fund the construction of three buildings — Olin Hall School of Business Administration, The Helen K. and James S. Copley Library and the Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center — that are scheduled for completion next year.

Olin Hall is a $4.5 million, 45,497-square-foot, three-level building to house 20 classrooms, 48 offices and six seminar rooms. It is scheduled for occupancy in July of next year.

The Helen K. Copley Library, a $3.72 million, 46,120-square-foot, two-level structure, will more than double the university's library space. It is scheduled for occupancy in February, 1984.

The Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center is a $2.4 million, 15,658-square-foot, two-level building to house a 226-seat auditorium, two classrooms, three seminar rooms and the Board of Trustees room. It is scheduled for completion in February, 1984.

The additions are being made to meet the growing enrollment at USD. There are currently 5,129 students, both undergraduate and graduate.

Hughes says the university is in a "hold pattern" for enrollment. We just don't have the space to grow any more."

The San Diego Union/James Burnett

Map depicts buildings and improvements recently completed at the University of San Diego campus and those scheduled for completion — including a new $9 million student center complex.

SAN DIEGO UNION
NOV 17 1983

USD to construct $9 million complex

By Cina Lubrano, Staff Writer

Author E. Hughes, president of the University of San Diego, yesterday announced plans to construct a $9 million University Center complex that an administrator said will be "the living room of the campus."

Hughes said at a news conference that $3.25 million already has been donated for the project.

Preliminary plans call for a three-level structure that will include a lounge, student and faculty dining areas, a grill, a deli, student affairs offices, a game room, student publications offices, a student organization center, conference and meeting rooms, a programming area and other student activity areas.

The 70,000-square-foot structure will be constructed east of DeSales Hall, on land currently occupied by a 400-space parking field. Arrangements will be made for parking in another area, university officials said. The design of the building will conform to the 16th-century Spanish Renaissance motif of the campus.

Tom Burke, vice president for student affairs, who called the proposed complex "the living room of the campus," said the building would place "student life in one physical area."

Hughes said the center would "physically and socially

See USD on Page B-7

USD: $9 million student complex to be constructed

Continued from B-1

unify the entire university community."

Hughes said an additional $3 million must be raised before construction can begin, probably in 1985. A tentative opening date is projected for 1986.

Trustee Ernest Hahn will head the solicitation campaign for the complex.

Hughes said part of the founding concept of the university "was that it would include a central meeting place." The proposed building will turn the "dream into a reality" and will provide a "vital structure that has long been missing from USD's campus life."

Already under construction are three other buildings. The Helen K. and James S. Copley Library is scheduled for completion Feb. 1, 1984, at a cost of $3.72 million. Also scheduled for completion in February is the $2.4 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center. Olin Hall, the School of Business Administration building, is to be completed in July at a cost of $4.5 million.

Construction is half completed on a perimeter road that will eliminate Marian Way, the main road through the center of the campus.

The south perimeter road, from the east side of the law library to the east end of the sports field, is already finished. Work is now scheduled on the north perimeter road, which will run from the west side of the Copley Library to the east side of the new university center.

This is tentatively scheduled to be completed in 1986 at about the same time the new center is opened. At that time, Marian Way through the campus will be closed and converted into a landscaped pedestrian and bicycle mall.

USD intersession enrollment begins

The University of San Diego's intersession classes will get underway on Monday, Jan. 2 with a schedule offering 24 courses on both the undergraduate and graduate levels.

Pre-enrollment is available from Nov. 28 through Dec. 2, and registration can be handled any time before Dec. 16 or on the first day of class, from 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. The last day of classes will be Friday, Jan. 20.

The School of Business Administration will offer eight classes ranging from Principles of Economics to Executive Career Development. In the College of Arts and Sciences, students will have their pick from 14 courses including Computer Literacy, classes in art and literature, history, philosophy, international relations, political science, religious studies, and communications.

The School of Education offerings include Group Dynamics and Leadership and Resource Acquisition Management.

The maximum number of units which may be taken during intersession is four. Tuition is $190 per semester unit for undergraduate students, $195 for 200 and 300-level units, and $210 for students taking 600-level units.

Priests, religious, and seminarians of the Roman Catholic faith, and clergy of other faiths whose principal support is from their ministry, pay 50 percent of the regular tuition.

Persons interested in further information may write the School of Graduate and Continuing Education, USD, Alcalá Park, San Diego 92110.

Reports about Soviet Jewry aired

"There is a growing pride in being Jewish which was expressed by the Soviet Jews we met while traveling through the Soviet Union," according to Sheldon Krantz, dean of the University of San Diego Law School.

Krantz spoke about his recent trip to the Soviet Union as part of a delegation of American lawyers and judges at a recent meeting of the Jewish Community Relations Council of the United Jewish Federation of San Diego County.

Dean Krantz said that while the gates of emigration are virtually closed for Soviet Jews, there is immense interest in learning Hebrew and meeting American Jews.

JCRC chairwoman Lucy Goldman introduced Krantz, saying that his experiences in the Soviet Union were "very unique and very moving."

Arthur Mehl gave a Soviet Jewry Roll Call for Josef Begun along with the Oppressed Jewry Commission report. (A Soviet Jewry Week of Awareness is scheduled for Dec. 2-13 to call attention to the plight of Soviet Jews.)

Elaine Moser reported that the JCRC, in cooperation with the San Diego Ecumenical Conference, the American Civil Liberties Union and Americans United for Separation of Church and State, are distributing a letter to area schools requesting copies of their guidelines for dealing with holiday observances.

Norman Greene told the gathering that the JCRC Israel-Mideast Commission, which he chairs, was monitoring the current events in Lebanon and had responded to several editorials in local newspapers.

Other reports given at the meeting were a North County update by Martin Alliger and a Lay and Legislation Commission report by Gordon Gerson, chairman of that commission. The JCRC is the public relations arm of the United Jewish Federation of San Diego County.

For more information, phone Steven Klappholz at the UJF, 582-2483.

DEAN ON THE SCENE — Sheldon Krantz, dean of the University of San Diego Law School who recently addressed the Jewish Community Relations Council on his recent trip to the Soviet Union, with JCRC Chairwoman Goldman.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

NOV 2 6 1983

Animal art — "Beasts," an exhibit of animals in art form, will be on view from noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Wednesday at the Founders Gallery, Founders Hall at the University of San Diego. Admission is free.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 2 7 1983

Colleges

Founders Gallery: "Beasts," an exhibit of animals in art form from the USD permanent collection. Through Dec. 18. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.

Mirror Sunday, November 27, 1983 A21

USD offers a wide assortment of classes

The University of San Diego's intersession classes will get underway on Monday, Jan. 2 with a schedule offering 24 courses on both the undergraduate and graduate levels.

Pre-enrollment is available from Nov. 28 through Dec. 2, and registration can be handled any time before Dec. 16 or on the first day of class, from 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. The last day of classes will be Friday, Jan. 20.

The School of Business Administration will offer eight classes ranging from Principles of Economics to Executive Career Development.

In the College of Arts and Sciences, students will have their pick from 14 courses including Computer Literacy, classes in art and literature, history, philosophy, international relations, political science, religious studies, and communications.

The School of Education offerings include Group Dynamics and Leadership and Resource Acquisition Management.

The maximum number of units which may be taken during intersession is four. Tuition is $190 per semester unit for undergraduate students, $195 for 200 and 300-level units, and $210 for students taking 600-level units.

Priests, religious, and seminarians of the Roman Catholic faith, and clergy of other faiths whose principal support is from their ministry, pay 50 percent of the regular tuition.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

OCT 2 8 1983

FASHION SHOW/ The University of San Diego Auxiliary will have its annual fashion show and luncheon called "Masquerade," Monday, Oct. 31, at the San Diego Hilton Hotel on Mission Bay. A social hour will be held at 11 a.m. followed by a luncheon at noon. Fashions will be provided by Robinson's Department Store. Individual tickets cost $25. Group reservations of 10 persons per table are also available. Call 291-6480, Ext. 4271.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

NOV 2 9 1983

San Diego

PRAYER IN SCHOOL/ "Religion and the Public Schools" will be the topic of the first of a two-part seminar beginning today at 5 p.m. in Room 106 at the University of San Diego School of Nursing. The school is located on the west end of Linda Vista Road in San Diego. Superior Court Judge Larry Kapiloff and Assemblyman Larry Stirling will address the role of prayer in the public schools. The next meeting will be held at the same place on Tuesday, Dec. 6. The topic will be "Tuition Tax Credits: Issues and Implications." The cost of each program is $2.50. Co-sponsoring organizations include the National Conference of Christians and Jews, the Jewish Community Relations Council, the San Diego Ecumenical Conference and the USD School of Continuing Education.

Sports

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 5 1983

Toreros take on 4-3 Azusa

The University of San Diego football team can ensure Coach Brian Fogarty a winning record in his first season with the Toreros with a victory over Azusa Pacific in today's homecoming game at USD Stadium.

The Toreros are 5-3 and finish their schedule next week at St. Mary's College.

Azusa Pacific brings a 4-3 mark into the 1:30 p.m. game. The Cougars average 362 yards per game, most of that on the ground.

"Azusa uses the same type offense as us," Fogarty said. "Again, we'll be going up against a team that is bigger than us in most positions. They have two outstanding running backs in Joe Shulter and James Brewer. We'll have to contain those two to do well."

Shulter leads the Cougars' ground attack with 693 yards and nine touchdowns on 93 carries. Quarterback Dave Williams has completed 52 of 89 passes for 722 yards and five touchdowns.

The Toreros, who have allowed 86 points in losing their last two games, have 16 players who will be participating in their last home game for USD. Four of those are four-year veterans, led by tailback Jerome McAlpin, who has netted 800 yards on 172 carries. Quarterback Phil Spencer has 57 completions in 138 attempts for 807 yards and six touchdowns.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 5 1983

USD Closes Home Football Season Against Azusa Pacific This Afternoon

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego football team plays its last home game today when it entertains Azusa Pacific at 1:30 p.m.

USD, a Division 3 team, has a 5-3 record and is coming off a 46-22 loss to Cal Lutheran last week. Azusa Pacific, a Division 2 team, is 4-3 and lost to Sonoma State last week, 15-9.

The Toreros usually have a difficulty beating their larger-school opponents; thus far, two of the team's losses are against the only Division 2 opponents it has played.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 6 1983

San Diego On VIEW

Add sports. Irish Olympic boxers, runners and other athletes intend to go to the University of San Diego to train and get over their jet lag before going to Los Angeles for the Olympics, it was announced at the USD fashion show at the San Diego Hilton. A turn-away crowd of more than 700 came out for the two-dessert luncheon and Robinson's fashion show, planned by Patty Edwards and her committee. University President Art Hughes was a big winner in the raffle—a $1,000 merchandise order.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 6 1983

USD's Offense Goes Nowhere in Loss to Azusa Pacific

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—In keeping with their homecoming theme, "Puttin' on the Ritz," University of San Diego students ran around dressed in oversized cracker boxes and threw water balloons during Saturday's game against Azusa Pacific.

As a counterpoint to the festivities, the Toreros' offense was "Goin' on the Fritz" as they fell to the Cougars, 10-6.

It was USD's third consecutive loss since beginning the Division 2 portion of its schedule. The Toreros (5-4) are a Division 3 independent.

The San Diego defense played well enough to give the offense plenty of touchdown opportunities, but the offense could only manage field goals in the third and fourth quarters. The USD offense put on an exhibition of how not to take advantage of good field position the first half when it did not make a first down. The Toreros wound up with 10 first downs for the game.

"The first half was the time we had the chance to blow the game open," first-year Coach Brian Fogarty said. "We got a good return on the opening kickoff and our punter kept them deep and the defense did a good job."

USD's first possession began at its own 45-yard line. Other drives started at the Azusa Pacific 26, 25, 43, 46 and the USD 41. The Cougars also had trouble moving, so the teams traded possessions through punts and turnovers.

However, Azusa Pacific did mount a 14-play, 64-yard drive, that resulted in a 38-yard field goal by Dave Johnson, with 52 seconds left in the half, giving the Cougars a 3-0 edge.

Azusa Pacific scored its decisive touchdown following the second-half kickoff. Beginning at its own 25, the Cougars scored seven plays later on a four-yard pass from quarterback David Williams to Kimball Cahse. The drive's big play was a 28-yard pass play from Williams to Ron Clark.

USD immediately followed with 11-play, 70-yard drive of its own, capped by a 27-yard field goal by Jack Kratochvil. From then on it was good defense and sloppy offensive play by both teams, punctuated only by 31-yard field goal by Kratochvil.

For the game, Azusa Pacific (5-3) lost three fumbles and threw two interceptions. San Diego lost two fumbles and gave up one interception, all in the second half to stop offensive drives.

"In the fourth quarter I thought we had them," said USD quarterback Phil Spencer, a senior who played his last home game Saturday. "We had some missed (blocking) assignments up front at the beginning of the game. So, we got down in the first half. Then, in the second half, we ran into tough turnovers."

USD finished with 159 yards rushing and 23 yards passing, while the Cougars had 270 yards rushing and 87 yards passing.

Torero running back Jerome McAlpin, a senior, ran for 155 yards on 27 carries for a 5.7 yard average. He has a 4.8 yard average for the season and needs only 45 more yards to hit 1,000. The last time a USD running back had 1,000 yards in one season was in 1972 when Sammy Croom had 1,177. McAlpin's chance to hit 1,000 will come Saturday in the team's finale at St. Mary's College, which has one of the toughest defenses in NCAA Division 2.

THE TRIBUNE

NOV 7 1983

TOREROS CLOSE SEASON—The University of San Diego Toreros will be seeking to snap a three-game losing streak and finish above .500 when they conclude their football campaign at St. Mary's Saturday afternoon.

The Division III Toreros dropped a 10-6 decision to Division II Azusa-Pacific in their homecoming game Saturday. It was their third straight loss to a Division II foe and dropped their record to 5-4.

NOV 6 1983

Azusa-Pacific depth ruins USD, 10-6

By Rick Hazeltine
Special to The Union

After going 5-1 against Division III teams, the University of San Diego has lost three straight to Division II schools and if you ask Torero head football coach Brian Fogarty what the main difference is he'll tell you it's depth.

"Since we've played Division II teams we've just been outmanned," Fogarty said. "The depth is a big difference."

This was more than evident yesterday as tailback James Brewer came off the bench in the second quarter and ran over the Torero defense for 132 yards on 25 carries to lead Azusa-Pacific to a 10-6 victory before a USD Homecoming crowd of 3,800.

Joe Schuller, the Cougars' No. 1 tailback, came into the game averaging 7.5 yards a carry, but suffered a pulled hamstring midway through the second quarter and was unable to return.

The Toreros' Jerome McAlpin, who, along with 16 other USD seniors, was playing in his last home game, rushed for 155 yards on 27 carries. He is just 43 yards short, with one game left, of becoming the first USD tailback to hit a 1,000 yards in a season since Sammy Croom had 1,177 in 1972.

Not bad for a guy who rarely touched the ball in high school, playing safety for Loyola High of Los Angeles. Although he'll be happy when he hits the milestone, McAlpin doesn't put a lot of personal emphasis on the achievement.

"Our offense is geared towards me, so my job is to get a 1,000 yards," the 5-9, 180-pound tailback said. "I'll be happy, but I won't be overjoyed when I get it because that's my job, that's what's expected of me."

In the first half, neither team effectively moved the ball as Azusa Pacific held USD to 52 total yards. The Cougars, however, did manage a 38-yard field goal with 48 seconds left in the second quarter to take a 3-0 halftime lead.

In the second half, the Cougars solved their scoring problems as David Williams passed four yards to tight end Kimble Cahse to cap a 72-yard, seven-play drive and take a 10-0 lead. The Toreros moved the ball well behind McAlpin, but could only manage 27- and 31-yard field goals by Jack Kratochvil. In the final quarter, USD had two drives halted by fumbles. "Every time we got the ball we drove," Fogarty said. "Those two fumbles killed us."

SD BUSINESS NEWS

NOV 7 1983

Update Breakfast Business Seminars. "Managing for Quality Improvement," Nov. 11; "Preparing Today for Tomorrow — A Look at Megatrends," Nov. 11; "Effective Negotiation," Nov. 18 & 25; "Beyond the Current Reagan Expansion," Nov. 18 & 25, are part of the USD School of Business Administration and Continuing Education Program. All seminars, 7:30 — 9:30 a.m. Fee, $20. Info.: 293-4585.

SENTINEL

NOV 9 1983

Azusa too much for Toreros

By MARK STADLER

USD's football team had plenty of chances Saturday against Azusa Pacific.

Playing at Alcalá Park before a homecoming crowd of 3,800 people, the Toreros began their first five drives in Azusa territory.

Their opponents, meanwhile, started their first five possessions inside their own 20 — their first three inside the 10. Azusa suffered two turnovers in the first quarter and three in the first half.

But, just like the Chargers this season, the Toreros were unable to cash in their chances when they needed to do so.

"We had great field position. A good offensive team takes advantage of that. We didn't," USD head coach Brian Fogarty said after his team lost 10-6 to Azusa.

Fogarty said the loss, USD's third in a row, was particularly disappointing because Azusa was one Division II team his Division III squad expected to beat.

"This was a game we thought we'd win," said Fogarty. "But the offense just didn't do the job in the first half. It was a matter of execution. And then some turnovers hurt us in the second half."

USD, which started the season by winning five of six games against fellow Division III teams, has now lost three straight to Division II schools. Now 5-4, the Toreros close their season this weekend by visiting powerful St. Mary's College, which boasts a 7-2 record.

Two-thirds of USD's team came through with flying colors Saturday, Fogarty said. The Torero defense, led by defensive backs Chip Jarvis and Greg Stein and nose guard Joe Kinnally, bent under the onslaught of Azusa's powerful rushing attack but seldom broke.

The special teams, meanwhile, consistently gave the offense good field position while forcing the Cougars to start deep in their own territory. Punter Greg Martin dropped three boots inside the Azusa 10.

Yet the Torero offense was unable to capitalize, despite a 155-yard performance by tailback Jerome McAlpin, and so Azusa was able to escape by virtue of a second quarter field goal and a third quarter touchdown.

USD, meanwhile, scored on two Jack Kratochvil field goals — one coming from 27 yards out in the third period and the other from 31 yards in the fourth period.

McAlpin closed near the 1,000-yard mark with his 155 yards on 27 carries. The senior now has 955 yards this season; the last Torero to clear 1,000 yards rushing was Sammy Croom, who gained 1,177 in 1972.

McAlpin wound up providing almost all of USD's net total of 182 yards. Quarterback Phil Spencer, who was under constant pressure, completed two of seven passes for 23 yards.

The USD offense was particularly lackluster in the first half, when it failed to record a single first down and gained just 12 yards despite having marvelous field position.

The best USD opportunity came with 10:52 left in the first quarter, when a bad Azusa punt gave the Toreros the ball on the Cougar 26. But, a major penalty dropped the Toreros out of even field goal range and they were forced to punt.

Azusa finally got its offense together late in the first half. Powered by the running of tailback James Brewer, who gained 132 yards in the game, the Cougars drove 63 yards on 12 carries before stalling at the USD 21. Dave Johnson then booted a 38-yard field goal to make the score 3-0 at halftime.

The Cougars scored the game's only touchdown with their opening possession of the second half.

The USD defense piles up Azusa Pacific's Michael Brewer. No. 46 is Ray Zanders.

Elson Irwin
TENNIS
NOTEPAD

TEAM TENNIS FORMAT — The team tennis format used in a special match between USD and San Diego State last weekend was a good one for the spectators. The Aztecs won the mix-and-match set to 29-17 with an excellent contribution from Graham Espley-Jones, who won the men's singles 6-1 over Scott Patridge. Carol Neeld was also a strong performer for the Aztecs, teaming with Cathy Berry to win the women's doubles and then with Nicky Getz to win the mixed. USD's bright hope was Mary Carmen Casta, who won the women's singles over Dana Bleicher 7-5. Getting both the men's and women's teams together was an idea more colleges should adopt.

THE TRIBUNE

NOV 10 1983

LOCAL HOOPS — The basketball schedules are out. University of San Diego and U.S. International University open at home Nov. 25 against St. Thomas College and Long Angeles State. San Diego State opens at St. Mary's Nov. 28.

USD wins phantom opponent honors this year with Spring Arbor (Mich.) College and Mount Marty College of Yankton, S.D., on the list. The Toreros have 28 games, 16 at home, including the Australian national team Nov. 18. There can't be much of a beef about San Diego State's lineup. State has no Division II opponents in its 28-game regular schedule which includes two tournaments and 16 home games leading up to the first WAC post-season tournament.

USIU opens with back-to-back home games, then hits the road for 12 games until it returns Dec. 22. The Gulls play 24 games by the time they get to Louisiana State on Jan. 16, and then only four more, all at home, through the end of the season, Mar. 3.

SENTINEL

NOV 13 1983

Basketball benefit set

Tipoff is at 8 p.m. Saturday at the USD Sports Center, for what may just be the hottest rivalry in town — the police vs the priests as they battle on the basketball court to raise funds for the San Diego Organizing Project.

Bishop Leo T. Maher will bring his team to USD to face Police Chief Bill Kolender's officers. Police commander Larry Gore will represent Kolender.

Larry Himmel of KFMB radio and television will announce the match, which will be officiated by the Padres' Dave Dravecky and the Clippers' Bill Walton.

Entertainment will be provided by the St. Francis Seminary Pep Band, Our Lady of Peace and University High School Cheerleaders, and Gulliver, KXYX's silent clown.

Tickets are family priced at $5 for adults, $1 for kids ages 6-17 and $2.50 for students, senior citizens and military. Tickets are available at the door or at Catholic parishes throughout the city.

Fr. Doug "The Bug" Regin will coach priests representing 11 parishes. The SDPD roster will be announced the night of the game.

Funds will be used to further the neighborhood work of the San Diego Organizing Project.

Chairmen of the event are Fr. Dick Howard of Christ the King parish and police officer Ernie Salgado.

For ticket information, call 236-9048 or 231-8906.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 12 1983

Road game at St. Mary's season finale for Toreros

Senior tailback Jerome McAlpin, who needs just 45 yards to reach the 1,000-yard season rushing plateau, leads the University of San Diego in its final football game of the season today as the Toreros travel to face St. Mary's College at 1 p.m. in Moraga.

McAlpin — who is averaging 106.1 yards per game to rank among the nation's NCAA Division III leaders — will have his work cut out for him as he runs up against a St. Mary's squad that ranks third in the country in Division II rushing defense, allowing just 52.3 ground yards per game.

Sammy Croom was the last USD runner to rush for 1,000 yards, totaling 1,177 in 1972.

USD, which got off to a 3-0 start against Division III teams, is now 5-4 after facing several tough Division II opponents. The Toreros, who have lost three straight, go against a St. Mary's team that owns a 6-2 record and 320 yards per game offensive average.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 13 1983

St. Mary's Gets Past USD, 6-0

Bryan White scored on a 3-yard run with 3:47 left in the first quarter and St. Mary's held on for a 6-0 win over the University of San Diego Saturday in Moraga.

White's touchdown was set up when Toreros tailback Jerome McAlpin fumbled and St. Mary's recovered on the San Diego 13. White scored five plays later.

Alpin had 63 yards on 25 carries to become the first USD ballcarrier to rush for more than 1,000 yards in a season since Sammy Croom compiled 1,177 yards in 1972.

USD concludes the season at 5-5. St. Mary's is 7-2.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 13 1983

Toreros lose 6-0 in windup

Special to The Union

MORAGA — Jerome McAlpin reached his 1,000-yard season rushing plateau, but the University of San Diego suffered a 6-0 defeat to St. Mary's College in the football season finale for the Toreros here yesterday.

McAlpin, the 5-9 and 180-pound senior from Los Angeles, gained 63 yards on 25 carries for a season total of 1,018. Sammy Croom was the last Torero to surpass 1,000 with 1,177 in 1972.

Neither team could mount a strong offense yesterday on a field made muddy and soggy by recent rains.

St. Mary's, the fourth straight Division II team to defeat the Toreros, collected the game's only score after recovering a USD fumble at the Torero 13-yard line in the first quarter.

Five plays later, Bryan White sloshed over from the three. After that, neither team could manufacture a serious drive, with St. Mary's gaining a total of 153 yards and USD 112.

"The defense played a great game," said first-year USD coach Brian Fogarty. "The thing that killed us all year was turnovers, and that's what haunted us today."

The Toreros committed five turnovers yesterday as they completed the season with a 5-5 record. The Gaels are now 7-2.

USD failed to penetrate St. Mary's 20-yard line while gaining only 47 yards on the ground and 65 passing. Quarterback Phil Spencer was 5-of-10 passing for the 65 yards.

Andre Hardy was the leading ball carrier for St. Mary's with 63 yards in 19 attempts.

Despite only an even break in its 10-game schedule, USD produced another individual record-breaker in Michael Rish. The 6-3 senior from Huntington Beach became the all-time Torero leader in receptions (101), yards receiving (1,722), and career touchdowns (18). For the 1983 season, he had 23 catches for 1,417 yards and five touchdowns.

THE TRIBUNE

NOV 18 1983

FULLERTON INVADES — The University of San Diego's women's basketball season kicks off at 7:30 Monday night when the Fullerton State team invades the USD Sports Center.

Coach Kathy Marpe is hopeful her Toreros can better their 8-18 record of last season and points to newcomers Mary Godfrey, guard, and Kelly Schroeder, center/forward, as reasons for optimism.

C-6 THE TRIBUNE

San Diego, Monday, November 14, 1983

San Diego Notepad

'Turnover-itis' dooms USD

Habits — whether good or bad — can be hard to kick. Just ask the University of San Diego football team, which finished its season with a 6-0 loss to St. Mary's in Moraga Saturday. Once again, the Toreros were victims of themselves — handing out five turnovers and totaling only 112 yards for the afternoon.

"A great effort by the defense (holding the host Gaels to 153 yards), but turnovers haunted us again," said Brian Fogarty, who finished his first season as USD coach with a 5-5 record. A bright spot was senior tailback Jerome McAlpin, who rushed 25 times for 63 yards to go over the 1,000 mark for the season. He finished with 1,018. Ex-Hoover High standout Andre Hardy led St. Mary's rushers with 63 yards in 19 tries.

NOV 1 8 1993

San Diego Notepad

Aussies to continue cage tour at USD

University of San Diego basketball fans will get their first glimpse of the new-look Toreros tonight when the Australian National team invades the USD Sports Center, with a 7:30 tip-off scheduled.

Jim Brovelli, entering his 10th season at the Torero helm, is looking forward to improving the team's fourth-place finish in the West Coast Athletic Conference last year after posting a 5-7 league mark and going 12-14 overall.

And he believes he has the players this time around, with senior forward Mike Whitmarsh returning, in addition to Anthony Reuss at the other forward position and Mario Coronado, a promising sophomore, holding down the center spot.

Brovelli hopes to augment these players with off guard Mark Bostic from Central Arizona City College, and Al Moscatel, guard from San Diego Mesa Community College. Other Toreros are John Prunty, point guard; Dave McIver, forward, and 6-11 freshman center Scott Thompson.

The Australians are 2-2 on their United States tour after picking up consecutive victories over WCAC member Loyola Marymount (80-75) and USC (57-54).

ANTHONY REUSS

THE TRIBUNE

NOV 2 2 1993

Once again, they say Brovelli doesn't have the horses, but...

By Bud Shaw

Tribune Sports Editor

Before visiting USD last week, the Australian National basketball team played exhibition games against Pepperdine and Loyola-Marymount — two teams that USD will need to beat this year in the West Coast Athletic Conference.

Aussies' coach Lindsay Gaze later offered his analysis of the three WCAC schools.

"I think that USD may have some troubles with those two teams," he explained. "Loyola and USD match up fairly well. Pepperdine, though, has some athletes that you have to concern yourself with. USD does not have the great athletes."

Jim Brovelli, of course, has heard this all before. Preseason predictions in the WCAC do not list the Toreros

'I know that the conference will be... tougher than it was a year ago, but I feel like we've reached a point where we're two deep at every position' at the top of the list. There are no Las Vegas odds on USD's making the Final Four in Seattle.

— Jim Brovelli

Santa Clara has 7-1 center Nick Vanos, guard Harold Keeling and forward Scott Lamson back from a team that went 21-7 a year ago. Defending champion Pepperdine, which nearly beat North Carolina State in the NCAA tournament last season, is strong once again. St. Mary's has shooter Paul Pickett, and Loyola, though thin in rebounders, offers forward Forrest McKenzie (20 points and seven rebounds a game last season).

The list goes on: Portland has good size... Gonzaga has five starters returning, including small forward Bryce McPhee (17 points per game last year).

Brovelli knows all that, too. And he also knows the flip side. Pepperdine has lost its top three scorers from a year ago. Santa Clara graduated four seniors. St. Mary's will miss forward Peter Thibaux. Greg Goorjian (26.5 points a game) is no longer at Loyola. That list probably doesn't go far enough for Brovelli's liking.

"I know that the conference will be as tough or tougher than it was a year ago," Brovelli says. "But I feel like we've reached a point where we're two deep at every position. Our teams here have been sort of slow over the years but this one has better quickness."

College recruiting, at any level, is something of a war. Maybe more so in the WCAC, which annually watches

Please see TOREROS, C-6

HIGH-FLYING TORERO — Mike Whitmarsh, a first-team all-WCAC forward a year ago, goes high to try to block a shot against Pepperdine last year. Whitmarsh returns for coach Jim Brovelli (below left). For Smokey Gaines (lower right) Aztecs, meanwhile, the big question is whether State can fill the guard positions.

★Toreros

Continued From Page C-1

some of the best high school players on the West Coast sign letters of intent with Pac-10 schools. Brovelli seems pleased with this year's crop and even happier that rival recruiters appear to be running out of anti-USD monologues.

"If a kid said he was considering USD before," Brovelli says, "other recruiters would say, 'Who are they?' We were the new kids on the block in the conference. Then we beat some pretty good teams and established some credibility."

"Every year, I think we've given them less bad things to say about us. Now, they bad-mouth our facility to recruits. That's probably the last thing. But I have had kids ask me in their homes if I'd be leaving USD to coach at USC. Recruiting can get vicious."

Brovelli finally recruited a bona fide big man in 6-11 freshman Scott Thompson of Mesa Verde High in Sacramento. Thompson played in the same high school league that produced Bill Cartwright, and averaged 29 points and 18 rebounds a game his senior year.

Brovelli also brought in 6-8 forward Steve Krallman (Anaheim's Servite High), 6-7 forward Nils Madden (El Molino High), 5-10 guard Eric Musselman (Brecksville High in Ohio, and the son of ex-San Diego Sails coach Bill Musselman) and transfers — 6-5 Mark Bostic (Central Arizona JC), 6-4 Chris Carr (Santa Monica City College) and 6-2 Al Moscatel (Mesa College), all guards.

Bostic started the exhibition game against the Australians, along with 6-0 senior guard John Prunty, 6-7 senior forward Mike Whitmarsh (first-team all-WCAC a year ago), 6-7 junior forward Anthony Reuss and 6-9 sophomore center Mario Coronado. Additional help is expected from 6-5 senior forward Randy Brickley, 6-5 senior guard

Bill Penfold and 6-8 senior forward Dave McIver.

"Mike (Whitmarsh) is as fine an all-around player as we've had here," says Brovelli. "He averaged something like 26 or 27 over our last six games a year ago. He played with the Clippers during the summer and they were impressed. If he's good enough, he'll get drafted but there's no sense looking past the present."

Presently, Jim Brovelli's team is good enough to have beaten the Aussies 68-58 last Friday night. The regular-season home opener is Friday against St. Thomas College, after which the WCAC is expected to produce the usual test to USD's hopes.

USD Toreros schedule

NOVEMBER (3 home, 0 away) — 25: vs. St. Thomas College, 26: vs. Army, 28: vs. Long Beach State.

DECEMBER (3 home, 5 away) — 1: at Texas Tech, 3: at Northern Arizona, 15: vs. Spring Arbor College, 17: vs. Cal-Irvine, 19: at Cal-Santa Barbara, 22: vs. Idaho State, 28-29: Wolfpack Classic in Reno, Nev.

JANUARY (6 home, 1 away) — 2: vs. Idaho, 5: vs. San Diego State at Sports Arena, 7: vs. Western Illinois, 9: vs. Mt. Marty, 19: vs. Gonzaga, 21: vs. Portland, 28: vs. Santa Clara.

FEBRUARY (2 home, 4 away) — 3: at Loyola Marymount, 4: at Pepperdine, 11: at St. Mary's, 16: vs. Pepperdine, 18: vs. Loyola Marymount, 23: at Santa Clara.

MARCH (1 home, 2 away) — 1: at Portland, 3: at Gonzaga, 8: vs. St. Mary's.

NOTE: All Torero home games begin at 7:30 p.m. and are played in the USD Sports Center.

NOV 1 9 1993

Aussies play it casually

Basketball's still an amateur's game

By Bud Shaw

Tribune Sports Editor

Australian television offers a weekly National Basketball Association game. It is not exactly a craze yet, not in the same class as Australian Rules Football, anyway.

Recently, viewers saw Philadelphia vs. Los Angeles. In last season's NBA finals. At this late date, Australia's networks have also finally confirmed a rumor that North Carolina State has won the Final Four.

"Sometimes you get the games around midnight," Australian National basketball coach Lindsay Gaze explained last evening. "But kids have petitioned the TV stations to show the games at a more appropriate time."

The team that will carry Australia's basketball hopes in the 1994 Olympic Games stopped by the University of San Diego last night as part of a 12-game, 14-day tour. This was one scrimmage that the networks back home are only too glad not to be carrying.

USD eased out of its practice schedule by beating Australia 68-58 behind senior Mike Whitmarsh (27 points), junior college transfer Mark Bostic (19) and freshman Anthony Reuss of El Cajon (13 points, 14 rebounds). USD head coach Jim Brovelli has another week to prepare his team for a game that counts on its record — next Friday's home opener against St. Thomas College (St. Paul, Minn.).

For Australia's part, this was just another one-night stand. The loss was the Aussies' sixth in eight games on the tour, their only wins coming against Loyola Marymount and USC. They do not expect to compete with the Americans and Russians at the Summer Games, if only because basketball in Australia is something less than a religion or a cog in a sports/political machine.

Gaze's players started practicing together about five days before leaving for the States. One of them, center Ray Borne, works as a linesman for a telephone company. When the Aussies return home, they will go back to their jobs and reassemble for more practice around Easter. After another break, they will have two weeks of drills before the Olympics.

"I'd have to say we are the last bastion of amateurism," Gaze said. "Many of our players have to pay their way into gymnasiums. It is a joke compared to any other Olympic team."

"If we won any kind of medal, it would be really something. But nothing can compare to America's Cup over there. The publicity over that was amazing. But tell me. Who in their right mind would stay up until 4 a.m. to watch a sail boat race? It must be the most boring event one could ever watch."

There was a move on to claim a national holiday when the Cup was won. Our prime minister didn't go that far but he said any boss who would sack an employee for missing a day of work is a bum. That's not bad talk coming from a prime minister. The reaction over the Cup wasn't because of the event. It was the history involved."

There is a lack of history and event-status in Australian basketball. High schools consider the sport to be a part of the physical education curriculum, nothing more. While basketball is Australia's largest participant Olympic sport, the country's facilities are nothing anyone would mistake for the Forum.

'Right now, we are a tired team. Tonight, we did not attend the game until seven minutes were played'

— Lindsay Gaze

Still, the Aussies finished seventh in Moscow and fifth at the World Games. They also produced the 1980 Olympic Games' leading scorer in 6-6 Ian Davies, who presently is working on his jump shot in Switzerland but will be part of the 1984 team.

And they have a head coach who has the proper sense of humor for their hopes in Los Angeles.

"Right now, we are a tired team," said Gaze. "Tonight, we did not attend the game until seven minutes were played. I called a timeout and said, 'We at least have to jog down the floor.'"

"The college rules are sometimes difficult to understand. Some aspects of the college game are just diabolical. We got a technical foul after (USD) scored a three-point play. So now it's a four-point play and they get the ball back?"

"I also don't understand why the referees have to handle the ball on the sidelines all the time. The international rules are different. The way it is here, the game is slowed down to the speed of the slowest referee. And taking turns on jump ball situations is crazy."

The tired Aussies will finally get a day off tomorrow, after which they'll play four more games and then board a day-long flight back home. The team will scatter in 12 different directions until Easter, which is not exactly the way they do things in Moscow.

"And I will resume my full-time job," Gaze said. "See, coaches don't get paid in Australia. They get punished."

USD defeats Aussie team

By Rick Hazeltine, Special to The Union

The University of San Diego opened its 1993-94 season with a 68-58 exhibition game victory over a tired Australian National Boomers team before a crowd of 625 at the Sports Center last night.

The Boomers were playing their eighth game in as many days, and the wear and tear of the trip was evident in the first seven minutes as the Toreros jumped to an 11-4 lead. After waking up, the Aussies came back to tie the game at 16 on a layup by guard Philip Smyth with 9:39 left in the first half.

From then it was a very aggressive, physical game that saw 45 personal fouls by the two squads, including 29 by the Boomers.

The game remained close until late in the second half, when USD pulled away with an eight-point flurry.

Guard John Prunty hit two free throws at the 2:29 mark to give the Toreros a 60-56 lead. After a missed shot by the Aussies, USD scored six points in three seconds to put the game away. Mike Whitmarsh, who led all scorers with 27 points, scored on a charging layup over two Aussies, drawing a foul in the process. Boomer Larry Sengstock was then called for a technical foul. Whitmarsh made both shots, and Mark Bostic took the inbound pass and drove to the basket for a slam dunk to give the Toreros a 66-56 lead with 1:50 remaining.

The Australians had trouble getting the ball inside because 7-2 center Andrew Campbell was unable to play due to a back injury. The Aussies had to rely on 6-10 center Ray Borne, who got into foul trouble with three in the first half. After Borne left the lineup, the Toreros scored at will under the basket.

"We were dwarfers after Borne left," Boomers head coach Lindsay Gaze said. "Campbell was 50-50 to even make the tour with us, because of a back injury."

With Campbell in the game it undoubtedly would have given Australia an inside game. Also missing was Ian Davies, who led the Boomers to a fifth-place finish in last year's world championships.

"The purpose of the trip was to give our team a workout," Gaze said. "We have four or five guys who are on trial on this tour."

In Australia, basketball is not a major sport. Most of the players on this tour are teachers or students.

"Our players spend about one-third to one-half the time on basketball that American college players do," Gaze said. "In fact they pay to play. In Australia our players pay about 40 cents to use a gym."

C-4 The San Diego Union

①

Saturday, November 19, 1993

The San Diego Union/Don Bartlett

Torero Mark Bostic races past Australia's Andrew Gaze.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 1 8 1993

USD quintet hosts Aussies

The University of San Diego will offer a sneak preview of its basketball team to-night when the Toreros host the Australian National team at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center.

The Australians are 2-4 thus far on their American tour, but they have beaten USC and lost by only seven points to UCLA and three to UC Irvine.

USD, which opens its season at home next weekend with games against St. Thomas College and Army, will feature all-West Coast Athletic Conference forward Mike Whitmarsh. He averaged 26 points a game over the last six contests last season and finished with per-game averages of 15.3 points and 5.3 rebounds.

The 6-foot-6 Whitmarsh will be joined in the starting lineup tonight by returning forward Anthony Reuss (4.5 points, 3.7 rebounds per game), 6-9 center Mario Coronado, 6-4 wing guard Mark Bostic (a newcomer from Central Arizona College) and 6-foot point guard John Prunty.

The Australians are led by 7-2 center Andrew Campbell.

Whitmarsh-led USD five hosts St. Thomas in season opener

By Bill Finley, Staff Writer

On Nov. 25, 1982, Mike Whitmarsh hoped only to become a starter at the University of San Diego.

Today he is on the verge of becoming a star, which explains why Whitmarsh — and USD — are so eagerly awaiting a basketball season that will finally begin tonight in Alcalá Park.

The Toreros will meet St. Thomas College at 7:30, and the player to watch will be Whitmarsh, the 6-foot-7 forward out of Monte Vista High and Grossmont College.

In his last six starts a year ago, Whitmarsh averaged 26 points a game. When the West Coast Athletic Conference announced its all-stars at season's end, he became the first USD player ever named to the first team. Now he awaits his senior season, and Whitmarsh is anxious to begin.

"When you finally get it going, the way we did at the end of last year, you want to play some games," Whitmarsh submitted yesterday. "It's kind of discouraging to finally start playing well and have the season end on you like that. I wanted it to keep on going, right through the summer."

reinforced his ranks with seven new recruits.

"We've improved every year we've been in Division I, and that's our goal again," Brovelli said. "It's realistic, I think. We have some pretty good players, and they seem to play pretty well together. Right now, we're trying to coordinate our experienced players with our new players, and it will take some time to get things where we want them. By midseason, though, we have a chance to be OK."

Predictably, Brovelli is comforted by the presence of Whitmarsh.

"He's one of the most complete players I've ever had here," the coach said. "He defends, he can score, he can pass. He set a league record for steals in a single game last season. He's a total basketball player, believe me. As a newcomer to our program, I think he was a little reluctant to take charge at the beginning of last year. When he finally did, though, he was exceptional. And we became a pretty good team."

USD's other forward tonight will be Anthony Reuss, a 6-foot-7 junior out of Christian High in El Cajon. Reuss had 13 points and 14 rebounds against the Australians.

Sophomore Mario Coronado (6-9) will open at center, with John Prunty (6-0) and Mark Bostic (6-4) at guard.

Tonight's game also will serve as the college debut for 6-11 freshman Scott Thompson. "He's going to improve every time he plays," Brovelli said. "He's going to be an excellent player someday, but I'm not going to ruin him by putting too much pressure on him now. All I want him to do as a freshman is to have fun and enjoy playing basketball."

basketball."

Mesa College transfer Al Moscatel (6-3), Santa Monica CC transfer Chris Carr (6-4) and Dave McIver (6-8) will probably be USD's key reserves.

St. Thomas is an NAIA school in St. Paul, Minn. The Toros visited USD a year ago and led at halftime before bowing in the closing minutes. They finished 14-12 and are 0-1 as they await tonight's visit to the Sports Center.

USD will entertain Army tomorrow night and Long Beach State Monday night before journeying to Texas Tech next week.

It will be interesting to see if Whitmarsh can pick up where he left off in March.

In last week's exhibition game against the Australian national team, he scored 27 points, gathered six rebounds and doled out five assists.

Significantly, his performance spurred USD past the Aussies 68-58. This was the same Australian team that defeated USC and Cal on its California tour.

"We have a chance to be a pretty good team," Whitmarsh said. "We're not ready for North Carolina yet, I'm not saying that. But if we grow and come together the way I think we can, there's no reason we can't take a run at the championship of our conference."

USD has yet to post a 500 season since joining the WCAC five years ago. The Toreros are progressively coming closer, though. They finished 5-7 in the WCAC and 12-14 overall last season, and Coach Jim Brovelli has reason to believe they will finally become a winning team this year.

"In the last six games last year, I think our people started to realize they were capable of winning the kind of games we'd always lost before," Brovelli said. "It's one thing to give a good team a close game. It's much, much tougher to win it, and we finally started winning some of those games last year."

USD won four of its last six starts, despite playing four of those games on the road.

Forward Robbie Roberts and guard Rich Davis were the only two seniors on the team, and Brovelli has since

San Diego Notepad

Eager Toreros launch season vs. St. Thomas

Buoyed by a 68-58 victory over the touring Australia Boomers in an exhibition opener last week, the University of San Diego Toreros launch their collegiate season against tiny St. Thomas of St. Paul, Minn., tonight at 7:30 in Alcalá Park.

And it will be with some expectation that coach Jim Brovelli watches this inaugural because he believes he has a genuine star in Mike Whitmarsh, 6-7 former Monte Vista High forward who was tantamount to a walk-on at the hilltop school a couple of seasons ago.

"When he first came here, Whitmarsh only hoped to become a starter," said Brovelli. "Now he has achieved star status and we expect to build around him for the entire season."

Whitmarsh reached the apex a year ago when, in his last six starts, he averaged 26 points a game. And he also became the first USD player in history to be named to the West Coast Athletic Conference all-star team.

It will be interesting to see if Whitmarsh can pick up where he left off in March.

"We have a chance to be a pretty good team," said Whitmarsh. "We're not ready for North Carolina yet, but we may be later on."

USD's other forward will be Anthony Reuss, a 6-7 junior from Christian High in El Cajon. Sophomore Mario Coronado (6-9) will open at center, with John Prunty (6-0) and Mark Bostic (6-4) playing the guards.

St. Thomas is an NAIA school and played the Toreros to a close game last year, losing in the final minutes.

USD Develops the Groundwork for a Successful Program

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Though overlooked by basketball recruiters, John Prunty is the kind of player University of San Diego Coach Jim Brovelli needed badly four years ago.

Brovelli needs good students to remain eligible under USD's exacting academic standards. But he also needs athletes, such as Prunty, devoted to playing basketball in Division I and committed to USD for four years.

Prunty, a senior with a 3.73 grade average, has become a starting guard. But he also is being recruited by many of the nation's biggest accounting firms. He already has a job offer from one and may get a couple more in the next few weeks.

The only thing that stands between him and a lucrative job in San Diego is passing the Certified Public Accountants exam in May.

"But I'm not going to start studying for it until after March 8," Prunty said. The date coincides with USD's final basketball game.

"Basketball has always been my number one priority. I've always done everything I could to be the best player I could. I managed my time well enough so I could do well in school."

The 6-0 Prunty is primarily concerned about USD's season opener Friday night at the Sports Center against St. Thomas College of Minnesota.

Because Brovelli has had enough good players such as Prunty, USD has earned enough respect in big-time basketball to recruit potentially great players. As Prunty is soon to be accepted into the world of business, USD is achieving legitimacy in its fifth season in Division I and the West Coast Athletic Conference.

"The identity we were lacking when we first went 'Division I is here now,'" said Brovelli, beginning his 10th season as head coach. "People know now we are a major college basketball team that has to be reckoned with."

USD has had to bolster its roster with junior college players. Although Brovelli added three JC

Please see TOREROS, Page 8

NOV 23 1983

Los Angeles Times

TOREROS

Continued from Page 1

players this season, he also got four bona-fide Division I freshmen because the team's image has improved. The freshmen are 6-8 forward Steve Krallman, 6-7 forward Nils Madden, 5-10 guard Eric Musselman and 6-11 center Scott Thompson.

"You now can establish that foundation of four-year people," Brovelli said, while he sat in his office overlooking the basketball floor at the USD Sports Center.

The team went from a 2-14 league record in 1979-80 to 5-7 last season. Just ask nonconference rival San Diego State about how much USD has improved. Last year, the Aztecs edged the Toreros, 47-45, in the final minute of play. USD has a reputation for being competitive.

USD was 12-14 overall last season, but four of those losses were by three points or less. Prunty thinks those close losses can be reversed this season with the help of returning 6-7 senior forward Mike Whitmarsh, who made all-WCAC last season and set a conference record for steals.

"This is the best team that I have played on in my four years," Prunty said. "Having a player like Mike is a big help. We always had to work so hard just to get close. If we can play at a level Mike was at last year (when USD won four of its last six games), we can get over the hump and win."

Whitmarsh averaged 26.8 points in his last six games, besides playing sound defense and sparking the team. He scored 27 points in the Toreros' 68-58 exhibition win over the Australian National team a week ago. The Australian National team earlier beat a weak USC, 57-54.

"Beyond mid-season he performed as well as or better than anyone in the conference," Brovelli said. "He scored well and broke the league record in steals. He plays the complete game. He gives the ball off to the open man, he can make the free throws and he boards for us."

Whitmarsh, who transferred from Grossmont College before last season, said his final year could be his best.

"I feel less pressure this year," Whitmarsh said. "Now I know I can do it. Before last season I wasn't sure I could play at this level. We are really starting to come together as a team. We can beat anybody in this league."

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

NOV 29 1983

USD LOSES/ Former Monte Vista High and Grossmont College standout Mike Whitmarsh scored 29 points, grabbed nine rebounds and handed out five assists Monday night against Long Beach State, but it wasn't enough. The visiting 49ers beat the University of San Diego, 73-65 in overtime. Whitmarsh was 11-of-19 from the field. The Toreros are 2-1.

BLADE TRIBUNE

NOV 29 1983

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Ricky Smith scored 21 points to lead Long Beach State to a 73-65 overtime win over the University of San Diego Monday night.

Mike Whitmarsh's free throw with 40 seconds to play in regulation forced the game into overtime at 59-59 after Long Beach State's Greg Allen had given the 49ers a 59-58 lead with 1:03 to play with four points and a steal in less than a minute.

The 49ers, 1-1, scored eight of the first nine overtime points to break open the game. USD is now 2-1.

Whitmarsh finished with 29 points to lead all scorers. Craig Lack had 14 for the 49ers.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 26 1983

USD Rolls By St. Thomas College, 94-59

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—University of San Diego basketball coach Jim Brovelli is certain of two things after Friday night's season opener against St. Thomas College of Minnesota.

First, USD routed the visitors, 94-59. Second, fans won't beat down the door to see this kind of a matchup. The Toreros played before a crowd of about 250 at the Sports Center.

"You just never know what will happen in a game like this," Brovelli said. "Last year, St. Thomas was ahead at halftime. (USD won, 79-54.) I think they are a little tired after traveling. They lost to Grand Canyon College in overtime Tuesday."

But Brovelli didn't seem the least bit uncertain, substituting regularly after his team had taken a 32-14 lead with eight minutes left in the half. USD led 48-28 at intermission.

All-West Coast Athletic Conference forward Mike Whitmarsh had 16 points, seven rebounds and seven assists in 19 minutes.

Freshman center Scott Thompson, the biggest man on the floor at 6-11, was eight of 13 from the field and had 17 points and 11 rebounds in 26 minutes. Junior guard Mark Bostic, who had three fastbreak slam dunks, scored 14.

Center Mike Randall led St. Thomas, a NAIA division II team, with 16.

Brovelli said that the Toreros were uneven on defense.

"We'll have to improve our defense. There were spurts when the played well defensively. But we'll have to play 40 minutes of good defense each game to be competitive in the conference," he said.

USD plays Army at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Sports Center. It will be the season opener for the Cadets, which finished last season at 11-18.

"I got a report on them from a couple guys I know in the East," Brovelli said. "Although it is from seeing them last year, it's the same team, with the same coach and all the starters returning."

The Cadets are led by 6-4 junior guard Randy Cozzens, who averaged 16.7 points per game last season and center Kenny Schwartz, a 6-7 sophomore who averaged 14.1 points last season.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 26 1983

USD breezes in debut 94-59

By Rich Feuerstein, Special to the Union

Twenty-five colleges coveted Scott Thompson last year after he averaged 30 points and 16 rebounds a game for Mesa Verde High School in Sacramento. Though tempted by USC and Washington State, Thompson, 6-11, chose the University of San Diego.

"Recruiting is a funny thing," USD coach Jim Brovelli said last night after Thompson helped the Toreros demolish St. Thomas 94-59 at the Sports Center. "Scott looked at our coaches, the conference, the area, the academics. He got along well with the people on our team. We're happy to have him."

Happy? C'mon coach. The word is ecstatic. Thompson came off the bench to score a game-high 17 points and grab a game-high 11 rebounds in 26 minutes in the Toreros' auspicious season opener. The 18-year-old displayed soft hands, a gentle shooting touch and an imposing presence as he kept the St. Thomas players away from the middle. Yet Brovelli spoke of the youngster with guarded optimism.

"We knew Scott could score," he said. "As he gains experience and maturity, he'll improve each game."

Brovelli had at least two reasons for not getting giddy. For one, the road-weary Minnesota team didn't have a man over 6-7; for another, Brovelli does not want to bill Thompson as the "savior" of a basketball program still looking for its first 500 season after four years in the West Coast Athletic Conference. Why put added pressure on the broad shoulders of the 240-pounder?

Thompson, who chose USD because he wanted to play as a freshman, came off the bench when starting center Mario Coronado picked up his second foul 4:43 into the game. At the time, USD led, 10-6.

Fifteen minutes later, Thompson had 13 points, six rebounds and USD had a 48-28 halftime lead.

The second half started with Thompson on the bench once again. But when St. Thomas whittled the lead to 17 points with 15:40 to go, Thompson re-entered the contest. He and senior forward Mike Whitmarsh combined for eight points to lead USD on a 13-2 spurt. With 12 minutes to go, USD led 64-36. The game was over.

Whitmarsh, USD's leading scorer and an all-conference selection last year, finished with 16 points.

THE TRIBUNE

NOV 26 1983

Toreros open with a flourish

By Barry Bloom

Tribune Sports Writer

There's one thing you can say for St. Thomas College's Division II basketball team — at least it lasted longer than Marvis Frazier did last night.

Not much longer. "It was our first game," said Jim Brovelli, the coach of University of San Diego's Division I team after last night's season-opening 94-59 blowout at the USD Sports Center. "Until you play, it's hard to get a feel for anything. Did it prepare us for our next few games? It's hard to say."

The Toreros didn't have a hard time coping with the visitors from St. Paul. They ran the Tommies out of the gym by 18 points before the evening was even 12 minutes old in front of a crowd estimated at 400.

But tonight, they must come back strong against a highly touted Army team that visits San Diego two days before Long Beach State. And because of yesterday's Army-Navy football game played in Pasadena, the local school is expected nearly 3,000 Cadets to invade their cozy gym.

"It's going to be tough for us, but I think these kids will come back strong," said Brovelli, who was most pleased by the game-high 17-point performance of 6-11 freshman center Scott Thompson.

"This is a hard weekend to draw fans anyway. It's Thanksgiving and nobody is on campus. But I can't worry about things like attendance. I have enough to do just worrying about being a coach."

Last night, Brovelli had enough to do just to keep his team awake in a game that was a sure advertisement for implementation of the technical knockout in college basketball. It was a TKO at the 9:38 mark of the second half when USD led by 30 points.

All-West Coast Athletic Association Mike Whitmarsh added 16 points. He was the Toreros' leading scorer last season.

"Let's just say you can't decide a whole season over a game like this," said senior forward Dave McIver, one of just seven upperclassmen on the 15-player USD roster.

"You never know how a game is going to turn out," said Brovelli, now in his 10th year as USD's coach. "Last year, they came in here and were ahead at halftime (USD eventually won). This year they looked tired."

NOV 27 1983

USD bench powers past Army

Special to The Union

Ever since the University of San Diego joined the Division I basketball ranks five years ago, there had been one important ingredient missing from its attack — depth.

USD may have found that ingredient. Last night forward Al Moscatel came off the bench to score 17 points, 11 in the first half, and lead the Toreros to an 87-57 victory over a defenseless Army team before a Sports Center crowd of 530.

All-WCAC forward Mike Whitmarsh led USD with 18 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists. Center Kenny Schwartz led the Cadets with 18 points. But it was the play of Moscatel that broke the game open for USD midway through the first half.

With the Cadets playing a tight match-zone defense, Moscatel was called on to perform his role as USD's zone breaker. Moscatel hit five shots in the early going from more than 18 feet to force Army to come out of their zone and give the Toreros some inside room.

Local Colleges

"They started sagging in on the inside guys," said Moscatel, a sophomore transfer from San Diego Mesa. "As soon as they start sagging, you've got to hit that outside shot."

With the inside opening up, the Toreros broke the game open, scoring the final 11 points of the first half to take a 37-20 lead at intermission.

If the Army had any thoughts of coming back, they were soon put to rest. USD outscored the Cadets 20-4 to open the second half. The Toreros put on the press, sped up the tempo and threw the Cadets off balance the rest of the game.

"We spotted some weaknesses that we thought we could exploit, especially after (Randy) Cozzens and Schwartz got into foul trouble," USD head coach Jim Brovelli said.

But it was his bench, which contributed 44 points, that most pleased Brovelli. "We got some great play off the bench, especially from Moscatel," Brovelli said.

For Moscatel being the sixth man is a new experience.

"This is the first time I've had to come off the bench," he said. "I started every game of my career (four years at Mercer Island High in Washington and last season at Mesa). As far as starting goes, if it comes, it comes. Right now,

The San Diego Union/Don Bartlett
Torero Mike Whitmarsh gets and Pat Appleman (41) while trying to lobbed by Army's Mike Yeager (24) shoot. USD won its second.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NOV 29 1983

A Free Throw Fails and USD Is No Longer Unbeaten

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Cal State Long Beach's Dave Buss got his first victory as 49er basketball coach Monday when Long Beach defeated the University of San Diego, 73-65 in overtime.

"It came hard, but it really feels nice," said Buss, who had been disappointed by a 65-59 loss at UCLA on Saturday.

The Long Beach win was also the first loss for the USD Toreros (2-1), who had easily won their first two games against St. Thomas College of Minnesota and Army.

This one got away at the end, however. In regulation play, Long Beach's Greg Allen stole a pass in the backcourt and drove in for a layup to give his team a 59-58 lead with one minute left.

USD forward Mike Whitmarsh then was fouled and tied the score by making the first of two free throw attempts with 40 seconds left in regulation. He missed the second and the game went to overtime.

Whitmarsh, the game's high scorer with 29 points, was two-of-six from the free throw line in the last seven minutes of play. He was a 76% free throw shooter last year when he made the All-West Coast Athletic Conference team.

"All we can do is put ourselves in a position to win," San Diego Coach Jim Brovelli said. "If the free throws don't drop or we make turnovers, then that's that."

"Whitmarsh does everything for us. He is normally an excellent free throw shooter. Tonight, they just wouldn't drop."

Long Beach called a time out after Whitmarsh missed his second free throw attempt, but the play broke down and guard Joedy Gardner took an off-balance shot that failed.

Long Beach dominated the overtime period, taking the lead for good, 61-59, on a field goal by Allen. A San Diego turnover was followed by a Craig Lack field goal making it a four-point margin.

San Diego's Al Moscatel tried a field goal on the next possession but missed. Long Beach's Ricky Smith was fouled and made one of his two free throws.

Long Beach kept the margin at least four the rest of the way, getting another field goal by Vince Singleton, and a field goal and two free throws from Ricky Smith.

"Greg Allen was great at the end," Buss said. "He scored the crucial points."

Ricky Smith led Long Beach with 21 points; Gardner had 19.

The lead see-sawed throughout the game, and the Toreros led 31-30 at the half.

The Toreros were behind, 13-5, six minutes into the game when Moscatel replaced John Prunty. With Moscatel in, the home team moved out to a 27-19 advantage, but Long Beach fought back. The Toreros use a controlled style offense, which relies heavily on good passing and good free throw shooting. USD was an abysmal 13-for-31 from the line, however.

The Toreros also made as many bad passes in the closing minutes of the game as they had in the opening minutes. USD had 12 turnovers, two came in the last two minutes of regulation play.

"I can't sleep when we don't win," Brovelli said. "I won't be able to sleep until Thursday." That's when USD plays at Texas Tech.

SAN DIEGO UNION

NOV 28 1983

Long Beach State to test USD

By Bill Center, Staff Writer

It is an unusual question that has to be pleasing to Jim Brovelli's ears. How good is the University of San Diego basketball team?

Brovelli, who typically has had a forward playing center, now has two legitimate centers to work with. Instead of having two short point men at guard, he now has a small (John Prunty) and a big (Mark Bostic) guard. Brovelli also has a bench to work with this season. The Toreros might be eight or nine players deep. In the past they've been iffy beyond a solid three or four.

After two games, the Toreros also have victories by 25 (St. Thomas) and 30 (Army) points. "We haven't had a 30-point victory in seven years," Brovelli said, going back to before USD was a Division I basketball school.

As of yet, however, USD has not played a quality opponent. The early-season successes have offered more clues than evidence. While impressive, a preseason exhibition over the Australian National Team came against a traveling club playing its fifth game in six days.

So the question persists. How good is USD? The answer might come tonight at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center at Alcalá Park.

The Toreros will play Long Beach State. The 49ers might be among the better clubs on the West Coast. Saturday night they dropped a 65-59 season-opening decision at UCLA after being tied at halftime.

"Long Beach will be among the best teams we play," Brovelli said yesterday. "I imagine we'll find out a lot about ourselves."

Tonight, for example, will be a good test for the Toreros' young centers — 6-foot-9 sophomore Mario Coronado and 6-11 freshman Scott Thompson. Long Beach State has a quality center in 6-11 Ivan Verbeek, an exchange student from Finland. Two years ago the challenge might have been frightening for USD, which once gave up 20 points to a 7-foot freshman who had never scored more than five before. Now Brovelli is anxious to see what happens.

"We can take almost 10 fouls at center without being in big trouble," Brovelli said. "Last year if we got two or three fouls in the middle, we were in big trouble."

Long Beach State will also test USD's guards. Last year the 49ers' Joedy Gardner and Ricky Smith riddled USD's tandem of 6-footers by taking them low. That was pre-Bostic.

"Some of our biggest improvement has been at guard," Brovelli said. "Bostic is 6-3 and quick. In the past we've had midget guards, and teams with big guards always gave us problems. This year we have Bostic and Chris Carr to defend against big guards."

"Mark also plays the transition game well and can run. That's made it easier for Prunty on the point. And we have a good backup there in (Al) Moscatel."

Bostic, Carr and Moscatel are all newcomers to the Torero program.

"We're better," Brovelli said. "Tonight we start finding out how much better."

USD throws away 73-65 OT decision at foul line

By Bill Center
Staff Writer

Jim Brovelli had a word for his team's shooting exhibition last night.

"Amazing," said the University of San Diego basketball coach. "I've never seen anything like that as long as I've been coaching."

Unfortunately for the Toreros, that was not good. The "amazing" Brovelli had in mind was followed by some "terribles" and "awfuls."

Last night, USD missed 16 of its final 20 free-throw attempts to drop a 73-65 overtime decision to Long Beach State at the USD Sports Center.

It was a game the Toreros would have won with a hotter hand at the foul line. "We would have won it with even a poor night of free-throw shooting," Brovelli said. "But this was sad... there is absolutely no excuse for missing free throws."

Miss them the Toreros did, however. They missed the front end of four straight one-on-ones to close out the first half, throwing away eight points and turning what might have been a four-basket lead into a narrow one-point advantage.

The real disaster struck in the final minutes of regulation time, though.

With 1:58 to go, Mike Whitmarsh, who had just shot USD into the lead with two beautiful driving layups, went to the free-throw line with two shots and a chance to put USD up by five points. Miss. Miss.

After Long Beach's Greg Allen scored twice on a 10-foot jumper and a dunk after his interception of the inbound pass, Whitmarsh did tie the game by hitting one of two free throws with 40 seconds to play.

But with a chance to put USD back on top 19 seconds into overtime, Whitmarsh missed two more foul tosses. After that the Toreros game seemed to collapse. Long Beach ran off five straight points and went up 67-60 with a minute to play in the five-minute overtime.

After two straight wins to open the season, USD was headed to its first loss in an important game it could have won.

See USD on Page C-5

USD: Toreros throw game away at foul line

Continued from C-1

"We worked hard for 39 minutes to get into position to win, then we didn't do the primary fundamental of the game to get the victory," Brovelli said. "It's unfortunate."

Brovelli felt that his side's poor free-throw shooting eventually took its toll on the parts of USD's game that had been working so well.

"Mentally, we let down defensively," he said. "It came to a point where we had missed so many free throws that it hurt us in other parts of the game. After Mike missed the two free throws at the start of overtime, the rest of our game just broke down."

"Free-throw shooting is the fundamental that we practice more than anything else," he continued. "But it comes down to either you can shoot them in a game, or you don't."

USD shot 72½ percent from the line last week while routing St. Thomas College and Army to open the season. In a tight game last night, however, the Toreros went 13-for-31.

Whitmarsh was an unlikely victim of the cold hand. The Toreros were also plagued by poor free-throw shooting last year when they hit 67 percent as a team. But the all-West Coast Athletic Association forward hit at a 75 percent clip and this season was 8-for-10 going into last night's game. He was 7-for-18 from the line against the 49ers.

That one statistic ruined an otherwise outstanding game for Whitmarsh, who finished with 29 points (11-for-19 from the floor), nine rebounds and five assists. He paced the Toreros throughout, scoring 13 of the club's first 19 points.

His last basket from the floor was worthy of the highlight films.

Coming down the middle out of the USD weave, Whitmarsh took a pass and cut for the basket, only to have the most direct route blocked by 6-foot-11 Long Beach center Ivan Verbeek. Whitmarsh shifted the ball into his left hand and scored on a reverse layup that put USD up by three with less than two minutes to go in regulation.

"We got the game exactly where we wanted it," said Brovelli, "and we shot it away."

Long Beach State fought back behind the perimeter shooting of guards Ricky Smith (21 points) and Joedy Gardner (19 points) and the inside play of forward Craig Lack (10 points, 14 rebounds).

All along, however, USD shot Long Beach back into the game — missing nine straight free throws in one stretch that could have meant 13 points.

'Foul' finish has Toreros shaking heads

By Bud Shaw
Tribune Sports Writer

Jim Brovelli says that the days of moral victories are over at USD. Now, if he can only do something about the immoral losses.

Last night, the Toreros were so close to beating Long Beach State (which dropped a six-point game to UCLA this past weekend) that the "W" had to be airbrushed out of the USD record book.

It happened like this:

USD's Mike Whitmarsh was at the foul line with less than two minutes remaining and the Toreros ahead 58-55. As fortune would have it, the lead had been autographed by none other than Mike Whitmarsh.

So under normal circumstances, Brovelli would have nothing to worry about. The problem was that last night, USD — and Whitmarsh in particular — had been treating the foul line as if it was a land mine.

"In 15 years of coaching, there have been a lot of games we've lost because we didn't make foul shots at the end," Brovelli would say later. "But I can't ever remember a team missing so many."

Whitmarsh gave Brovelli two more reasons for amnesia. Following the missed free throws, the Toreros turned the ball over twice. They watched a possible five-point lead become a tie game (59-59) at the end of regulation, then saw the rest of their best-laid plans evaporate in a 73-65 overtime loss.

Having eased into the season by beating St. Thomas College and Army, the Toreros were expecting Long Beach State to be their first real challenge. They did not expect to shoot themselves in the foot by blowing 18 of 31 foul shots — 16 of 20 during one horrendous stretch.

Tribune photo by Jerry McClard

MIKE WHITMARSH (32) TRIES TO GET BALL FROM RICKY SMITH

"When you put yourself in a position to win and you earn the win, there's absolutely no excuse for missing free throws," Brovelli said. "I mean, you work hard all game to get a lead and be in the penalty situation at the end. That's the time when you just put a team away. At the end of the game, you simply have to have the poise to win." Long Beach came to the USD Sports Center looking to even its record after losing (65-59) to UCLA in Pauley Pavilion. But watching Long Beach struggle against USD's matchup zone defense, it made you wonder less about a moral victory for USD than about UCLA.

USD made its run in last night's second half behind Whitmarsh, the senior forward who spent the summer scrimmaging against Clipper players on the very same floor where it all unraveled against Long Beach. Please see TOREROS, C-3

Tribune photo by Jerry McClard

'I don't have any answers for what happened. We're a good foul-shooting team'

— Jim Brovelli, above

*Toreros

Continued From Page C-1
State.

The reasons why Clipper management thinks that Whitmarsh could be a draftable National Basketball Association player by season's end were evident in spurts last night. He finished with 29 points on 11-for-19 shooting from the field, including two consecutive, twisting layups off NBA caliber drives, which gave USD its 58-55 lead.

"Mike was just outstanding tonight," Brovelli said. "That's why it's hard to put the blame on him for missed free throws. He got us in a position where we could win the game. I don't have any answers for what happened. We're a good foul-shooting team. Mike's an exceptional foul shooter."

Whitmarsh shot from the line 18 times and missed 11 of them, a few of which were front ends of one-and-one situations. Guard Al Moscatel and forward Dave McIver, who gave the Toreros some punch off the bench, were a combined four for nine at the foul line.

USD, of course, is a team that wins on fundamentals — sharp passing, a bounding defense, good percentage shots and, until last night, automatic foul shooting. That was the final irony.

The loss leaves the Toreros with a 2-1 record and a case of indigestion as they prepare to go on the road for two games before returning home Dec. 15 against Spring Arbor College.

USD's next game is Thursday at Texas Tech ("into the fire of the Southwest Conference," Brovelli puts it). That's followed by a Saturday contest against Northern Arizona.

What Brovelli knows about Northern Arizona is that it lost a seven-point game at the University of Arizona last week. No more moral victories for USD. Only the memory of an immoral loss.

Tribune photo by Jerry McClard

USD'S SCOTT THOMPSON WATCHES PLAY AS LONG BEACH'S VINCE SINGLETON (24) DEFENDS

December

TIMES-ADVOCATE
DEC 1 1983

20/NC48 Theater

"Medea," at the University of San Diego, is one of the oldest stories in show business. Itinerant poets recited accounts of how her husband betrayed her and the terrible vengeance she exacted as early as 1200 B. C., and the first dramatization was by Euripides in 413 B.C.

Georg Benda's melodrama is thus comparatively recent — 1775, mint-fresh in San Diego, and "... may well be a first in the United States," according to Henry Kolar.

Kolar, music director at USD and a specialist on Czechoslovakian and Middle European composers, discovered the manuscript that is a musical rarity. Benda was a musician and composer whose texts were not sung but recited with musical accompaniment. The USD version is translated from Czech and German by Renata Valois, with annotations by Kolar and adapted for theater by director Pamela Connolly.

"It's true to the spirit of the original," Miss Connolly says, crossing her fingers. "The manuscript had no stage directions, quite often no clues as to who was the speaker, or to whom. It's a challenge for the cast as well."

"The piece is a precursor to 19th century melodrama, highly stylized, completely alien to present-day concepts of dramas which are influenced greatly by Stanislavski's theories and methods. But it's a great opportunity, a full emotional drama, augmented by the music."

Tess Delano plays Medea, the sorceress who kills her brothers in order to help Jason capture the Golden Fleece. Her revenge on an unfaithful spouse is bloodier still. Ina Levy plays the nurse to Medea's children, a role which Benda makes larger and stronger than in other versions of the story. Gina De Luca is Kresia, whom Jason marries after abandoning Medea, with Bill Hart and Matt McGowan trading the roles of Jason and First Chorus. Kolar conducts the USD orchestra and Marilyn Green choreographs.

"Medea" plays at 8 p.m., Dec. 2 and at 2:30 p.m., Dec. 4 in USD's Camino Theatre, on campus in Alcala Park. For further information, call 291-6400.

THE TRIBUNE
DEC 2 1983

Pajama party for USD registration

By Joseph Thesken
Tribune Staff Writer

If you have to wait in line all night, make yourself comfortable.

That's the rationale of a small band of University of San Diego students who have spent their nights this week in Camino Hall on campus, waiting to be first in line to register for the spring semester.

"They've been bringing their sleeping bags, stereos and snacks along with them at night, and sleeping in the lounge until the registration office opens at 7 a.m.," said the campus police chief, Donald Johnson.

"We let them sleep in the building, and one of our officers looks in on them to see that everything is all right, Johnson said.

"There's been about 20 or 25 of them each night this week."

Dean of Students Patricia Watson said students take this rather drastic approach to registration because they want certain classes at certain times and, possibly, certain professors.

"They could register without any difficulty during the day, but they probably feel they will get exactly what they want if they are the first in line," she said.

TIMES-ADVOCATE
DEC 1 1983

Nursing conference scheduled

"Power of Politics — Future of Nursing — Learn to Use It Or Lose It," is the theme for the National Honor Society of Nursing (Sigma Theta Tau) fall conference to be held Saturday at the University of San Diego. The program will run from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in room 106 of Hahn School of Nursing. Cost is $45 for non-members, $35 for members and $25 for students. For more information, call 459-3586.

THE TRIBUNE
DEC 3 1983

Seminar set on tax credits

A seminar on tuition tax credits will be held at 5 p.m. Tuesday in Room 106 of the University of San Diego School of Nursing.

The speakers will be Dr. Charles Ballinger, president of the San Diego chapter of Americans United for Separation of Church and State, and Dr. Joseph C. Rost, professor of education at USD.

LA PRENSA
DEC 2 1983

Spanish Film Festival

A Spanish film festival featuring the works of Luis Berlanga has been announced by the University of San Diego's Spanish Department in collaboration with "Casa de España". The film series began November 29 and will run through December 10. All films are in Spanish with English subtitles and will be shown in Salomon Lecture Hall, DeSales Hall. Admission is free and the public is invited.

The festival offers "The National Shotgun" on December 2, "Calabuch" on December 3, "National Heritage" December 6, "National III" December 8, "Welcome, Mr. Marshall" December 9, and "The Executioner" on December 10. All shows begin at 7 p.m. Many of the films took honors at the Cannes and other festivals.

Berlanga, until recently the president of the National Film Library of Spain, was awarded the National Prize for Cinematography in 1981. That same year he won the Gold Medal for Merit in the Fine Arts and was selected as one of the "Five Directors of the Year" by the International Film Guide. In addition to his work as director of films, he has been a teacher, writer, and critic.

SAN DIEGO
MAGAZINE
DEC 1983

San Diego Magazine deserves applause for its efforts to cover San Diego's rich and varied higher education offerings ("The Class of 1988," September 1983).

Back in 1981 the University of San Diego was described by Harold Keen in your own pages as "perhaps the West's most prestigious Catholic institution." We are pleased that you note in 1983 our focus on quality education combined with personal attention. Despite USD's phenomenal growth—a more than doubled enrollment in a decade—and other signs of expansion such as this year's addition of three new facilities, we have sustained the values on which the university was founded.

One of those is the belief in the dignity of the individual. In "everyday" terms that translates to a faculty that cares about students, engages with them, knows them by name, and spends an extraordinary amount of time with them outside the classroom. This is true in our four professional schools in business, education, law and nursing, as well as in our graduate programs and at the undergraduate level.

We hope San Diego Magazine will consider providing in-depth coverage of area higher education in the future. In the meantime you have emphasized how important our campuses are to the vigor of America's Finest City.

SARA FINN
Director of Public Relations
University of San Diego

DEC 4 1983

MARGE HUGHES:

"You get tired of it (entertaining) sometimes, night after night." But she paused a moment and then changed her tune. "But once you get there you have a great time. There are many lovely, beautiful evenings you never would have experienced, except as part of this job."

Photos by BARBARA MARTIN / Los Angeles Times

College Leaders' WivesA Touch of Class in Supporting Role

By LANIE JONES, Times Staff Writer

Their husbands' get the headlines, but the wives of San Diego's college presidents play an important, sometimes humanizing, supporting role.

There are parties to give, boards to sit on and possibly even speeches to make.

Three presidents and chancellor's wives talked this week about their roles. Anne Day, wife of Thomas B. Day, the president of San Diego State University, cited family privacy in declining to be interviewed.

For some president's wives, however, publicity comes with the turf.

□

Rita Atkinson was planning a party for the university's six vice chancellors and their spouses. She was also trying to prepare a scholarly talk to a local women's club. And then there was the little matter of the flood in the basement.

Once again, something had gone wrong with University House, the elegant barn of a home where UC San Diego Chancellor Richard Atkinson and his wife live.

On the cliffs above Black's Beach, the sprawling adobe home with its spectacular views, high ceilings and exposed oak beams goes to every chancellor along with the job.

Or perhaps it goes to the chancellor's wife, because it becomes her job to decorate and maintain it.

In her four years there, University House has frequently tested Rita Atkinson's mettle. Last year, for example, there was a leaking roof and drains that clogged and then poured torrents of water onto the patio.

She recently discovered water on the basement floor. It was draining from somewhere. The question was, Where? Maybe the heater? The heat wasn't turned on yet in most of the house. And there was company coming Thursday night.

Such are the trials of the chancellor's wife.

Atkinson, 54, is a clinical psychologist with a best-selling psychology textbook to her name. But, recently, she described her current role this way: "The main thing is decorating the house and planning parties."

There are two or three parties at the house every week. She has help for them—a social secretary and a trusted housekeeper who has worked for nearly all the UCSD chancellors. "But I still feel I'm the hostess," Atkinson said.

As the chancellor's wife, she believes it's her job to get to know university faculty and students and community leaders.

Two years ago, when she was working hard on revising her

RITA ATKINSON: Two years ago, when she was working hard on revising her psychology textbook, "I didn't have that much time to get involved with university and non-university groups," she said. She had felt a little guilty about that. Now she has shifted gears, immersing herself in clubs.

Continued from Page 1
above everyone else.

But Atkinson said she sees no need to be haughty. She really likes getting to know the faculty and students. "And I think they respond to me as a person," she said. "I act as a person. I really don't play any role."

□

In a cozy sitting room near the kitchen, Anne Peed sipped coffee and laughed at the idea that she—the chancellor's wife—could ever be considered a celebrity. "I don't think of myself as the chancellor's wife. I didn't marry the chancellor. I married Garland Peed," she said firmly.

Peed's husband is the chief executive officer of the San Diego Community College District, one of the largest vocational and junior college districts in the state and considered one of the best run.

That kind of job has put many chancellors and their wives and families on permanent public view.

But Peed, 35, has a different idea of her role. Hang the public, she suggested. Most of the time, she does what she wants.

For instance, her husband's career in education didn't stop her from an educational venture of her own. Nine months ago, she started a small school, the Academy of Image and Colour, to train fashion consultants. It should graduate 30 color consultants this year.

Peed is raising two children—one son is 3, the other 13. But now she juggles motherhood with writing lesson plans, lecturing to her small fashion classes and managing a staff of six.

The only thing she doesn't do is handle the academy's books. Her husband does that several evenings a month. "That's his idea of a good time."

Peed acknowledged she probably could have taught the same fashion courses at her husband's college district. But she didn't want to. "Then I'd be just an employee rather than the president."

Besides, she said, the role of chancellor's wife has at least one limitation: Working for the district would be improper.

Peed has had to think about that issue. Before she married the chancellor seven years ago, she was a college district secretary. And for a time after their marriage, she taught some business communications courses for the district.

But then she reconsidered. Because of her husband's job, Peed said, she no longer feels comfortable being employed by the district.

Recently, she turned down an offer to teach a community college fashion class. "It would have been a conflict," she said. "Why open yourself up to any unnecessary criticism? That's why I quit (teaching) before." Otherwise, Peed said, there seem to be few expectations or limitations to being the chancellor's wife. She and her children lead a fairly private life. She doesn't have to make public speeches. She hasn't been pressured to join clubs or do volunteer work. Her children go to school unrecognized, although once a teacher asked about the family name.

Few Perquisites

Garland Peed's job entitles him to few perquisites. The chancellor's contract does provide him with a car, but there is no free home, no social secretary, no maid service.

The idea of a secretary amused Anne Peed. "Are you kidding?" she said. "That would be the first thing the board would cut out" in its many rounds of budget cuts. But she reflected a moment on the paper work her new school generates, then grinned. "I'll settle for a clerk-typist," she said.

Although other chancellors have a heavy entertainment load, the Peeds are not expected to entertain business acquaintances at home and have not done so, she said.

She is expected to join her husband anywhere from three times a week to once a month at receptions. But when asked if she served as the hostess, she responded quickly and in a sharp tone: "I do not do that."

As Peed discussed being a chancellor's wife, she sounded amazed that, for other wives, it is a public role.

At other colleges, "maybe the game is just played differently," she said. "Personally, I think it's a game as far as I'm concerned. But perhaps I don't understand it."

She smiled, but she sounded as if she didn't care to understand it. She guessed she was lucky, Peed said. But "no one ever suggested it (a more prominent role)—not Garland, not any of the board. I've never been expected to act in any official capacity."

Instead, if she has any role to play, it is a role shared by many women. "My day revolves around my children and my own business."

ANNE PEED: The idea of a secretary amused her. "Are you kidding? That would be the first thing the board would cut out" in its many rounds of budget cuts. But she reflected a moment on the paper work her new school generates, then grinned. "I'll settle for a clerk-typist," she said.

psychology textbook, "I didn't have that much time to get involved with university and non-university groups," she said. She had felt a little guilty about that.

Shifting Gears

Now she has shifted gears, immersing herself in clubs. She is honorary chairman of Oceanids, a faculty-staff women's group, and sits on the board of the La Jolla Chamber Music Society. She belongs to the UCSD Medical Center's women's auxiliary and to The Wednesday Club, an intellectual club that requires its members to give a paper each year. (She worked this week on her annual report, a talk on the latest research about memory.)

After spending so much time on the book, it has felt good to have a year off, Atkinson said. She has been "relaxing and doing all the things I didn't do (last year)—organizing the house, going to committee meetings." And, on purpose, she had not picked a single project this year, because "I just wanted to have a year off to feel my way around and see what I'm going to do."

So far, she hasn't decided. She might want to work with the student counseling center, but she wondered if such a role would be proper for the chancellor's wife.

She had also talked with other UC chancellors' wives about getting together more often to share common problems—how to say "no" to an engagement, how to find friends among the faculty, how to handle the job of chancellor's wife.

Atkinson said she doesn't like to think about the role. One UC chancellor's wife plays it to the hilt, she said, trying to set herself

Please see COLLEGE, Page 8

Supporting Her Husband

Although business school is challenging, Hughes said she has no plans to work once she gets her degree. Her real work now, as it has been since 1971, is supporting her husband.

From the beginning, "It was up to us as a couple to meet people and reach out into the community," she said.

That has meant attending a social engagement three or four nights a week and, during the Christmas season, nearly every day.

Hughes said she likes the socializing but admitted there are a few disadvantages. "It's hard to find time to do any personal entertaining. Hard to find time for friends."

And with all the parties, there sometimes comes burnout. "You get tired of it (entertaining) sometimes, night after night," Hughes said.

But she paused a moment and then changed her tune. "But once you get there you have a great time. There are many lovely, beautiful evenings you never would have experienced, except as part of this job."

For instance, in just a few weekends, the Hugheses take a private jet to San Francisco to look at an exhibit of Vatican art with the chairman of USD's President's Club.

"It's a nice fringe benefit," she said. All in all, she said she likes being the president's wife.

After the parties are over and Marge Hughes has written her thank-you notes, she still has one more chore: studying for final exams.

Hughes, the wife of University of San Diego President Author Hughes, is working on her master's degree in business administration at USD.

As the president's wife, she doesn't get any favored treatment, Hughes said. No matter what her social schedule, she studies until midnight several nights a week.

"Thanksgiving night I stayed up to 4 o'clock working on my paper, and the night before that I made my pies and then worked," the 52-year-old Hughes said. "You just have to squeeze these things in."

Hughes has squeezed a lot of things in during her 12 years as a university president's wife. She has raised four children (the youngest, 15, is still at home). She has hosted receptions and fund-raising parties and, several times a month, more intimate dinners at home—"small" parties for 12 or 14.

In between, Hughes has found time for Jazzercise, tennis, puttering about the garden and, lately, business school.

She gets some help maintaining the Spanish-style president's house at the west end of campus. There's a housekeeper, a gardener twice a week and, when parties are scheduled at home, catering by the campus food service.

But although life revolves around the school and representing her husband, Hughes said she still gets some time off.

"You don't have to live that role 24 hours a day," she said. "I'm a very casual person, and I like to wear slacks and gardening clothes. I don't have to feel dressed up all the time."

Nevertheless, it has been hard to be treated as just another business student. The presence of the president's wife in class has sometimes intimidated her professors, Hughes said. But if the professors think they're under pressure to perform, they should think again, she said. "If anybody's under pressure, it's me." As the president's wife, "I'm the one who has to be doing well, making the A's."

In two years of school, taking at least one course a semester, Hughes has done that, scoring one B-plus amid the A's.

■ 8 — December 1983

GIVING TRADITIONS

The Volunteer Connection

Judy Rauner

Holiday season is a time for giving gifts and not just to family and friends. Traditionally, the year-round concerns for the less fortunate, for a favorite charity or special interest, accelerate this month. Youth groups make tray favors for home- and institution-bound elderly. Caroling groups entertain; clubs gather and distribute food to the needy. Funds and service that help keep nonprofit organizations in 'business' come from individuals, foundations, and corporations. The end of the calendar year provides opportunity to reflect on just how extensive the tradition of giving is in our country.

Individual philanthropists still give the occasional big gift, as they have since early in our nation's history. In San Diego, the Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center, named after the donor, reflects a major gift to the University of San Diego. This spring, 25,000 square feet of land in La Jolla was donated by Florence Riford as the site for a library.

Total figures of monetary gifts aren't yet available for 1983, but the American Association of Fund Raising Counsel has published the figures for 1982: $60 billion, an increase of 11 percent over the previous year. Individuals contribute 80 percent of that total — nearly $50 billion. Most cities have a number of foundations that make grants to support local non-profit programs. One such organization, the Community Foundation, provides donors, individuals, and corporations with information about community giving. They recommend some resources to be designated for specific projects or capital needs, while other donations are made without restriction.

Corporate giving, too, is a tradition that is alive, and well, and receiving encouragement. The President's Task Force on Private Sector Initiatives recommends a two percent increase. In fact the records show that corporate donations have continued to grow even through periods of declining profits.

The giving of funds is only one part of the tradition; the giving of volunteer time is another, and it's an essential for the survival of many non-profit agencies. One study set the annual value of donated time at $64 billion, based on hours and education level of the workers.

The act of charitable giving, both in money and time, is a tradition that, happily, remains healthy in modern-day America.

Judy Rauner is a consultant to volunteers and coordinators. She has written two books and numerous magazine articles on the subject of volunteerism.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 5 1983

Holiday craft fair

The University of San Diego will hold its third annual holiday craft fair from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday. Local artists will display their work in front of Serra Hall. Items for sale include hand-crafted jewelry, stained glass, floral arrangements and Christmas decorations.

THE SCENE

DEC 1983

BEFORE YOU NEGOTIATE

—On examining inflation and interest rates, today's financial markets, and the U.S. economy. 7:30am-9am. USD. 293-4585.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 4 1983

USD CHORUS — The University of San Diego Chorus, directed by organist Paul B. Carmona, will perform the First Mass of Christmas at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Founders Chapel, USD.

USD CHORUS AND VOCAL ENSEMBLE — The University of San Diego Chorus and Vocal Ensemble will present the Fall Choral and Christmas Concert at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday in Founders Chapel, USD.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 4 1983

Founders Gallery: "Beasts," an exhibition of animals in art from the University of San Diego permanent collection. Through Dec. 16. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 7 1983

Stuff that stocking and make it personal. The University of San Diego will hold its Third Annual Holiday Craft Fair from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 7 and 8 when local artists display their work in front of Serra Hall. The fair will feature items including personalized Christmas stockings, wooden calligraphy, weavings, bread dough, floral arrangements, etchings, mirrors and hand-crafted jewelry.

— Donna Donovan

READER

DEC 8 1983

Fall Choral and Christmas Concert by the USD Chorus and Vocal Ensemble will include the works of Bach, Buxtehude, Joubert, Carmona, and others, Friday, December 9 and Saturday, December 10, 7:30 p.m., Founders Chapel.

USD, Alcala Park. Free. 291-6480 x4427.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

DEC 9 1983

The University of San Diego has $2 million in commitments toward its $9.2 million University Center with a $400,000 grant from the James Irvine Foundation, announced this week.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

DEC 8 1983

USD Chorus and Vocal Ensemble — The Fall Choral and Christmas Concert including selections by Bach, Buxtehude, Schroeder, Joubert, Christiansen and others will be performed on Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the university's Founders Chapel, 291-6480.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 8 1983

Concerts from USD Chorus

Two concerts will mark the opening of the holiday season at the University of San Diego's Founders Chapel.

Tonight at 7:30, a celebration of the First Mass of Christmas will include choral works for the seasons of Advent and Christmas. The USD Chorus will be directed by organist Paul B. Carmona, assistant professor of music.

USD's Chorus and Vocal Ensemble will present the Fall Choral and Christmas Concert on Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Founders Chapel. Selections by Bach, Buxtehude, Schroeder, Joubert, Christiansen, Hairston, Carmona and others will be included.

There is no admission fee. For information, call 291-6480.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

DEC 9 1983

USD CHORUS AND VOCAL ENSEMBLE (Founders Hall, University of San Diego, Alcala Park). The group will present the Fall Choral and Christmas Concert at 7:30 p.m. The program includes works by Bach, Christiansen, Joubert and Buxtehude.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 10 1983

USD chorus, ensemble concert

USD's Chorus and Vocal Ensemble will present the Fall Choral and Christmas Concert today at 7:30 p.m. in Founders Chapel. Selections by Bach, Buxtehude, Schroeder, Joubert, Christiansen, Hairston, Carmona and others will be included. There is no admission fee. For information, call 291-6480.

THE TRIBUNE

DEC 12 1983

USD receives Irvine grant of $400,000

The University of San Diego has received a $400,000 grant from the James Irvine Foundation of Newport Beach to help pay for the proposed $9.2 million University Center.

The grant brings commitments to the project to date to $2 million, USD President Author Hughes reported.

The center will provide student lounges, dining areas, game room, recreation and travel center, offices and conference rooms.

"The University Center will truly complement the center of learning envisioned by (the late) Bishop Buddy 40 years ago," Hughes said. "For the first time, our student population will be served by a single facility unifying recreational, counseling, medical and activities functions."

The center will be the final project in the campus development plans.

THE TRIBUNE

DEC 8 1983

1984

USD professor says Orwell based his warning on hope

"The two aims of the Party are to conquer the whole surface of the earth and to extinguish once and for all the possibility of independent thought. There are therefore two great problems which the Party is concerned to solve. One is how to discover, against his will, what another human being is thinking, and the other is how to kill several hundred million people in a few seconds without giving warning beforehand."

— From "Nineteen Eighty-Four" By George Orwell

By Gregory N. Joseph
Tribune Staff Writer

Already social scientists, political pundits, journalists and garden variety doomsmen have braced for an inspection of how the real 1984 will compare to the one outlined in George Orwell's bleak novel about life in a totalitarian state.

Come Jan. 1 — 34 years and six months after the book was published — the Orwellian year will no longer be in the future. It will be in the present.

Never mind that Orwell originally planned to call the book "The Last Man in Europe," that he came close to placing it in 1981 or 1982, or that he arrived at the ultimate title simply by inverting the last two digits of the year (1948) in which he completed this, his last and most famous work.

Through his vision, Orwell (real name: Eric Arthur Blair) transformed 1984 into the dark looking-glass year, the reflection against which generations to follow would survey the quality and quantity of their own freedoms.

And so the questions have arisen: Does a form of Newspeak — the official Party language which was "designed to meet the ideological needs" of the fictional government of Oceania in the book — exist now? Is there a Big Brother watching us, using everything from computerized data banks to electronic surveillance to rob us of our privacy and individuality?

Tribune illustration by Kris Lindblad

In short, was Orwell attempting to predict the future — or issue a warning?

Dennis Rohatyn, a philosophy professor at the University of San Diego and an Orwell scholar, believes the late author was issuing a warning, not prognosticating.

Elements of Newspeak or Big Brotherism may indeed exist — Rohatyn doesn't deny it — but he insists they will be held in check as long as people read "Nineteen Eighty-Four" and are cognizant of the many threats against freedom it describes.

Freedom, he says, is ours to lose. "We tend to use the word 'Orwellian' for anything we dislike, from taxes to red lights," Rohatyn said.

"But some people don't seem to understand that rules are what make freedom possible. To the extent that we're aware of incursions into our freedom, to that extent the incursions can't fully happen."

"Orwell wasn't trying to prognosticate, he was trying to warn us. He was telling us that if we didn't watch out, it would be an awful slip down the mountain into totalitarianism."

Rohatyn says a key difference between the fictional society in "Nineteen Eighty-Four" and that of the United States is that people in this country believe democracy, despite its flaws, is basically good.

"It seems to me that the difference between the fictional society in the book and ours is not that we don't need to coerce people into believing democracy is good. Americans may moan and groan about things, but most of them still believe democracy. Please see 1984, E-3

DENNIS ROHATYN
... Orwell issued a warning

THE TRIBUNE

DEC 8 1983

USD student Doris Campos, 19, received a $2,500 student loan today. Her loan put the state's educational loan program over the $2 billion mark.

Tribune photo by Cindy Lubke Romero

USD student's $2,500 loan puts program over $2 billion

When University of San Diego sophomore Doris Campos received her $2,500 student loan today, the California Guaranteed Student Loan program went over the $2 billion mark in lending since 1979.

Campos, 19, was given the loan in a special ceremony at USD's De Sales Hall. She was congratulated by Sister Sally Furay, USD vice president and provost, and Thelma Eaton, chairman of the California Student Aid Commission and Richard Reinhardt, the commission's associate director, both from Sacramento.

Herbert Whyte, USD's financial aid officer, said the CGSL program is popular among USD students. Last year, 1,412 USD students borrowed $3,378,800 through the program.

Campos, the first of five in her family to attend a university, is working on a double major at USD — international relations and Spanish.

Last year, Campos also received a $2,500 loan through the CGSL program.

Campos has a busy schedule at USD. She is in a work study program, working in the Roman Catholic diocese office on campus. She also is a live-in companion for an elderly Mission Hills widow.

★1984

Continued From Page E-1

is good. They don't want to change the system. They just want to make a good living, most of them, and be left alone.

"In Oceania, the people are constantly being coerced into accepting their beliefs. Americans don't need to be compelled to believe in the system, however imperfectly they understand it."

Rohatyn, who was born in April 1949 — two months before publication of "Nineteen Eighty-Four" — is married and the father of two. A native of New York City, he holds a doctorate in philosophy from Fordham University. He has lived in San Diego six years.

He edited and was one of eight USD professors to contribute to a manuscript on Orwell that is being published in "Cogito," an international journal on philosophy, society and politics. His paper, "Politics and the Human Essence," focuses on Orwell's view of human nature.

Rohatyn also appeared with the other professors on a five-part panel series on Orwell broadcast over Cox Cable's public access channel in May and June. The programs are being repeated at 8 p.m. Sundays through New Year's Day.

In addition, he was a guest on the "On Campus" TV show with George Fenneman, where he and several other experts discussed Orwell. The show will be aired at 10:30 p.m. Jan. 30 and repeated at 2 p.m. Feb. 2.

Rohatyn will be one of three professors to lead a special honors class on Orwell at USD in the fall, and he is looking forward to traveling to Akron, Ohio, next month for a conference on the author.

In a word, he believes Orwell had a message for us all. Unlike many Orwell aficionados, Rohatyn believes it is one of optimism. He views the ending of "Nineteen Eighty-Four" as one of hope, not despair.

He says it is merely a human reaction when the protagonist of the story, minor bureaucrat Winston Smith, betrays Julia, the office co-worker he loves, when threatened with torture by interrogators.

"My own feeling is that if there were no hope, then Winston and Julia wouldn't have met on a park bench later to discuss their feelings," Rohatyn said.

"At the end of the book, Winston is told that Julia betrayed him, too, even though we never see that and we never know that to be true. The point is that the couple meets on the bench. There is a bare flicker of hope and care, in my estimation, when they do...."

"Orwell said the book was a satire on tendencies in society that, if left unchecked, would lead to disaster. I have to say that it is a work based on hope. If not, why write it?"

LA JOLLA LIGHT

DEC 15 1983

UCSD's Clements honored in USD ceremony

The eighth annual Bishop Francis Buddy Award to outstanding alumni of the University of San Diego was awarded Dec. 8 at a special alumni ceremony to UCSD's David Eugene Clements of Mira Mesa and Father Neal Dolan of San Diego.

The Bishop Buddy Award, named for the University's founder and first bishop of the Diocese of San Diego, was created by the USD Alumni Association to recognize alumni whose lives are marked by outstanding contributions to their career fields, community, and the university.

Presentations were made by the 1982 winner Ned Wilson and alumni director Tom Martz.

Clements, a resident of Mira Mesa and member of the USD Class of 1977, teaches at Muir and Reville Colleges at UCSD, where he also is working on his doctorate in English.

Highly active in his parish, Good Shepherd, he is active in the Planetary Society and local right-to-life organizations, assists in the religious education program, and has been a group leader in RENEW, a three-year program of spiritual renewal.

A quadriplegic suffering from a rare muscle disorder, Clements had been confined to a wheelchair for the past 16 years.

"Those who know him well," Wilson said, "point to his perseverance, sense of humor, and willingness to give."

Sharing this year's award with Clements was Father Neal Dolan, USD Class of 1960 and since July 1982 episcopal vicar and dean of the university deanery in the Diocese of San Diego.

Described during the presentation ceremonies as "an outstanding human being and an extraordinary priest," Dolan is involved in the ministry to priests and in work with newly ordained priests.

Among his former posts have been director of vocations for the Diocese, during which time he was cited as the country's most outstanding vocations director, director of Pre-Cana, faculty member of St. Francis Seminary, and director of the permanent deaconate program, and vice president of the National Association of Deaconate Directors.

Program marks $2 billion level with USD loan

Doris Campos certainly was the right student yesterday to be honored for receiving the two billionth dollar in the state's Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

First of all, Campos, 19, is a sophomore at the University of San Diego with a double major of Spanish and international relations. She was born in Mexico, reared in Chula Vista and is the first of her family to attend a four-year college.

Beyond that, she is the executive director of the university's "People to People" program, works in the Roman Catholic diocese office on campus and is the live-in aide for an 89-year-old Mission Hills widow.

Campos, honored yesterday at a luncheon at the campus, called the loan program "an investment on both sides."

"The lender gets the money back and the recipient gets an education at the institution best suited to the student's needs," she said.

She said the loans give students "the chance to earn an education now rather than having to wait."

When Campos received her $2,500 student loan, the second she has received so far, the program officially went over the $2 billion mark in lending.

The loan program administered by the California Student Aid Commission (CSAC) has given loans to more than 600,000 students since April 1979.

The San Diego Union/John Gibbins

USD student Doris Campos, right, with her mother Concepcion Campos, during ceremonies marking allocation of 2 billionth dollar in the state's student loan program.

Congratulating Campos yesterday were Dr. Thelma L. Eaton, CSAC chairwoman; Sister Sally Furay, USD provost; Tom Billard, product manager for student loans, Citibank of New York; Richard Reinhardt, CSAC's associate director for educational loan programs; and Herbert Whyte, USD's director of financial aid.

USD student gets 2 billionth dollar

from The Associated Press

A check for $2,289,59 issued to a 19-year-old student at the University of San Diego represented the two billionth dollar disbursed under California's Guaranteed Student Loan program.

State officials marked the occasion by presenting Doris C. Campos with the check during a ceremony at the San Diego campus Thursday.

One of five children and the first in her family to attend a university, Campos thanked the delegation for the loan, saying she would not have been able to attend college without the financial assistance made available to her through the program.

Born in Mexico and raised in Chula Vista,

Campos is a sophomore at the university, where she is majoring in Spanish and international relations.

Campos is also involved in a number of campus activities, including the Mission Club, which raises money and gathers supplies for the poor of San Diego and Tijuana.

Campos also received a certificate of recognition from Dr. Thelma Eaton, chairwoman of the California Student Aid Commission, which directs the student loan program and other student financial assistance programs.

Dr. Eaton said that Campos was "a fine example of the kind of aspiring student we want to help," noting that she was working part-time as a live-in aide for an elderly woman to help finance her education.

Since May 1979, the state administered loan program has guaranteed $2,000,000,000 in loans to 607,828 students.

The principal lending institutions that participate in the program are Citibank, Chase Manhattan, Bank of America, First Interstate Bank, Crockier Bank, Wells Fargo, Security Pacific, California First, First Independent Trust Co., and Marine Midland Bank.

Tom Billard, product manager in the student loan section of Citibank, the institution through which Campos got her loan, said the loan program has been instrumental in financing the education of "thousands of students who were previously denied funding."

SENTINEL
DEC 11 1983

Fund for USD complex grows

A proposed $9.2 million dollar University Center at the University of San Diego has been brought closer to implementation by a $400,000 grant from the James Irvine Foundation of Newport Beach.

The Irvine grant brings commitments to the project to a total of $2 million. The Foundation, in a separate action, also increased its challenge support of the USD Alumni Fund to $200,000 in the current academic year, up from $53,000 as a result of the first-year challenge, in which alumni more than doubled previous gift records.

Author E. Hughes, USD

president, described the University Center as the final project in USD's campus development plans, which have already launched the construction of a new facility for the School of Business Administration, the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library, and the Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center, all scheduled for completion in 1984.

USD's student enrollment has doubled in ten years and currently stands at 5,129.

The 70,000 square-foot University Center, described as "the living room of the campus," will provide student lounges; dining areas; grille and coffeehouse; game room; the offices of Student Affairs, student government, and Campus Ministry; exhibit areas; an outdoor recreation and travel center; conference and seminar areas; study rooms; and a sundries store.

The building will overlook Tecolote Canyon from a site just east of DeSales Hall.

DOWNTOWN

DEC 19 1983

IN STEP WITH SENIORS

Academic Program Set

BY EVELYN HERRMANN

The University of Third Age is offering a special program of lectures, physical exercise and seminars for persons 55 years of age and over. This program offers senior citizens the opportunity to engage in a program with an academic atmosphere. There are no exams, papers or grades. The program begins Jan. 4 and extends through Jan. 19. Many of the topics offered to the senior citizens are concerned with political problems, information pertaining to San Diego business and the political arena. The program also addresses the area of travel, medical and technical information. The 10 sessions cost $45. Persons are required to provide their own transportation to the University of San Diego. For further information, please phone 293-4585.

Senior Citizen Services has been making Identification Cards (ID) for senior citizens for the past eight years. Thousands of senior citizens have been served through the office at 202 "C" St. (the City Administration Building) in the lobby. This program has been manned by volunteers dedicating hours of service. On Dec. 21, due to pre-Christmas activities, there will not be any ID cards made. Senior Citizen Services will once again start to issue ID cards each Wednesday morning from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Jan. 4. These are available for any person 50 years of age. San Diego Transit ID's are for persons 62 years or older. For further information, phone 236-5765.

There never seems to be enough trips to Las Vegas to satisfy the demand met by senior citizens. The Senior Citizen Services will sponsor a January trip to Las Vegas. This includes round trip bus transportation, a three day and two night stay at the Westward Ho. Passengers are advised to bring warm clothing. The evenings are quite cool. Only money reservations are accepted. Checks should be made payable to Senior Citizens. The cost is $48. For further information, please phone 236-5765.

The Old Globe Theatre is offering discount tickets to Kiss Me Kate on Wednesday, Jan. 4, 1984, at 2 p.m. The price is $7.50. Regular price is $12. Tickets can be purchased at Senior Citizen Services, 202 "C" St. D

THE TRIBUNE
DEC 23 1983

Vatican envoy to speak at USD

William A. Wilson, the presidential envoy to the Vatican, will speak at the University of San Diego Jan. 10.

His address will be on "Peace and Freedom as Observed from the U.S. Vatican Office." The lecture, open to the public, will be held in the Joseph P. Grace Courtroom in the USD School of Law.

A native of California, Wilson was appointed by President Reagan as envoy to the Vatican in 1980. He has been a regent of the University of California since 1972. He lives in Los Angeles.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 25 1983

Founders Gallery: University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.

SENTINEL
DEC 25 1983

Envoy will speak at USD

The presidential envoy to the Vatican, William A. Wilson, will speak at the University of San Diego Jan. 10 on the subject of "Peace and Freedom as Observed from the U.S. Vatican Office."

Wilson will speak at 4 p.m. in the Joseph P. Grace Courtroom, USD School of Law, as part of an ongoing lecture series sponsored by the law school. The free lecture is open to the public.

A native of California and graduate of Stanford University, Wilson was appointed to his present post by President Reagan in 1980. In that same year, he was made a member of the Knights of Malta.

The envoy is a recipient of the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Award from the Navy League, and the Brotherhood Award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He has been a regent of the University of California since 1972.

SENTINEL
DEC 28 1983

Envoy speaks next month

The presidential envoy to the Vatican, William A. Wilson, will speak at the University of San Diego Jan. 10 on the subject of "Peace and Freedom as Observed from the U.S. Vatican Office."

Wilson will speak at 4 p.m. in the Joseph P. Grace Courtroom, USD School of Law, as part of an ongoing lecture series sponsored by the law school. The free lecture is open to the public. A native of California and graduate of Stanford University, Wilson was appointed to his present post by President Reagan in 1980. In that same year, he was made a member of the Knights of Malta.

The envoy is a recipient of the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Award from the Navy League, and the Brotherhood Award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

DEC 23 1983

William A. Wilson, presidential envoy to the Vatican, will discuss "Peace and freedom as observed from the U.S. Vatican office" in a Jan. 10 lecture at the USD law school. The lecture, open to the public, is to be held at 4 p.m. in Grace Courtroom at the law school and is part of a lecture series sponsored by the school. Wilson, a graduate of Stanford University, was appointed to the Vatican post by President Reagan in 1980. He also is a trustee of Reagan's personal trust and has served as a regent of the University of California since 1972.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

DEC 15 1983

$400,000 grant given for proposed facility

A proposed $9.2 million University Center at the University of San Diego has been brought closer to implementation by a $400,000 grant from the James Irvine Foundation in Newport Beach, it was announced recently by USD President Dr. Author E. Hughes.

The Irvine grant brings commitments to the project to a total of $2 million.

The Foundation, in a separate action, also increased its challenge support of the USD Alumni Fund to $200,000 in the current academic year, up from $53,000 as a result of the first-year challenge, in which alumni more than doubled previous gift records.

Hughes described the University Center as the final project in USD's campus development plans, which already have launched the construction of a new facility for the School of Business Administration, the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library, and the Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center, all scheduled for completion in 1984.

"The University Center," Hughes said, "will truly complete the center of learning envisioned by Bishop Buddy some 40 years ago. For the first time, our student population will be served by a single facility unifying recreational, counseling, medical, and activities functions. This has been a pressing need for some time, and especially in recent years because of our strong enrollment growth."

USD's student enrollment has doubled in 10 years and currently stands at 5,129.

The 70,000 square-foot University Center, described as "the living room of the campus," will provide student lounges, dining areas, grill and coffee house, game room, the offices of Student Affairs, exhibit areas, an outdoor recreation and travel center, conference and seminar areas, study rooms, and a sundries store.

The building will overlook Tecolote Canyon from a site just east of DeSales Hall.

"With the construction for academic needs well under way," Hughes said, "the University Center has taken top priority in our fundraising efforts. The Irvine Foundation grant is a major step forward towards our remaining goal of $5.5 million for this important final phase in our campus plans."

THE TRIBUNE

DEC 19 1983

The University of the Third Age — an intensive program for those older than 55 who are seeking intellectual stimulation and physical activity — opens a new session Jan. 4. The fee for the three-week program, which stresses classroom learning and a physical exercise program, is $45. The sessions will be held Mondays through Thursdays and begin at 8:30 a.m. For information or to register for classes, call the University of San Diego's Office of Continuing Education, 293-4585.

SAN DIEGO NEWSLINE

DEC 26 1983

LECTURES/MEETINGS

The University of the Third Age, a special program offered by the University of San Diego for persons over age 55 seeking intellectual stimulation and physical activity, will open its sixth year on Jan. 4. The three-week program, Jan. 4-19, is held Monday through Thursday, beginning at 8:30 a.m. with a physical fitness class at the USD Sports Center and continuing with classes held in the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing, room 106. $45 fee. Additional info and registration forms may be obtained by calling 293-4585.

SENTINEL

DEC 28 1983

AND HERE'S A chance to go back to school.

The University of the Third Age, a special program offered by the University of San Diego for persons over 55 seeking intellectual stimulation and physical activity, will open its sixth year on Jan. 4.

The three-week program, Jan. 4-19, is held Monday through Thursday, beginning at 8:30 a.m. with a physical fitness class at the USD Sports Center and continuing with classes held in the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing, Room 106. The fee is $45. Additional information and registration forms may be obtained by calling 293-4585.

Course topics in the upcoming session include nutritional quackery, mass media, the changing Bell family, protection of the great whale, the right to health care, wills and estates, San Diego's Convention Center, the US/USSR arms race, and medication use in the elderly.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT
DEC 29 1983

Because women now account for 93% the enrollment increase in management courses at USD, Dr. Johanna Hunsaker's new leadership development course there will avoid male-oriented methods and data and examine issues peculiar to women. It's designed, says Hunsaker, "to help women enter an organizational world still dominated by men."

USD IN ACTION — The University of San Diego men's basketball team, which has lost three straight games, will try to halt that streak tonight at 7:30 when it plays host to Spring Arbor College at the USD Sports Center.

USD attempts to rebound against little-known Spring Arbor

The University of San Diego hasn't played a basketball game in 12 days, but the time away from the court really couldn't be considered a respite. There's nothing restful about finals week at Alcalá Park.

So it's not as if the Toreros have had all that time to prepare for tonight's 7:35 game against Spring Arbor College and Saturday's game with UC-Irvine, both at the USD Sports Center.

"Ideally," said Toreros coach Jim Brovelli, "you'd like to be able to mix finals and basketball, so that basketball gives the players a mental break from exams. It doesn't necessarily work out that way. The last 12 days have enabled us to get back to the floor and break things down a bit, but we haven't had as much practice time as we'd want."

The Toreros needed some work after three straight losses, including tough ones at Texas Tech (64-53) and Northern Arizona (70-63). USD's overall record slipped to 2-3, and Brovelli said the Toreros were being victimized by their own lack of familiarity with each other.

"We've got to become more consistent," he said. "We have a lot of new players, seven in all, and we're still trying to coordinate the returning players with the new ones. We've played some good basketball, but we haven't been able to sustain a full effort for 40 minutes."

Brovelli and his staff used the time between games to make some revisions — most notably, the insertion of Chris Carr into the starting lineup. Another of the newcomers, Carr is a 6-foot-4 guard who came to USD from Santa Monica Community College, where he averaged 11.8 points per game.

Carr, replacing senior John Prunty in the first five, is expected to enhance the Toreros' quickness and scoring. He also adds height to a backcourt that already includes 6-4 Mark Bostic, another JC transfer.

Bostic has been a starter from day one with the 6-0 Prunty, who last year averaged seven points per game while coming off the bench but this winter has produced only six points in five games. Prunty, a two-time WCAC scholar-athlete, is the only four-year player at USD.

The Toreros' backcourt will have its hands full with Spring Arbor, since the Cougars play without a pure center, using a three-guard offense that features Deon Blackwell with his scoring average of 22.5. The other guards are 6-2 juniors Greg Fairbanks and James Simmons. Todd Edmonds averages 16 points per game, Maurice Gossett 10 on the front line.

Spring Arbor, a tiny school in Michigan with a student enrollment of 750, is 8-4 but lost both games last weekend in the Aquinas Classic. The Cougars fell 58-44 to Ohio Northern and 79-78 in overtime to Kalamazoo.

USD's leading scorer (19.6) and rebounder (8.2) is senior forward Mike Whitmarsh. Rounding out the USD lineup are forward Anthony Reuss and center Mario Coronado.

THE TRIBUNE
DEC 16 1983

Defense, height win for USD

By Rick Davis
Tribune Sportswriter

Hank Burbridge must have suspected trouble when he brought his undersized Spring Arbor (Mich.) College basketball team out on the floor last night. Their hosts, the University of San Diego, sent out a frontline that averaged 6-foot-8.

It was David vs. Goliath in Alcalá Park and what Spring Arbor really needed was a big rock. The host Toreros, sleepwalking through the first half, went to the whip after that and came away with an 83-54 victory to even their season record at three wins and three losses.

"Their size just wore us down," Burbridge assessed afterward. "The mismatch (Spring Arbor's tallest starter was 6-4 Todd Edmonds) took its toll in the end. Looking at it realistically before the game, I was hoping to keep the difference to 15 points. But it got out of hand, didn't it?"

Indeed it did, but only after USD coach Jim Brovelli delivered a half-time oration on the rewards of playing sound defense. A 38-27 cushion at that point became 54-31 just 4:46 into the second half and the end result suddenly was taking shape.

"I only talked about one thing. Defense," said Brovelli. "We were just flat, coming off 12 days without a game and finishing final exams. Had the other team been shooting decently, the halftime score would have been pretty close."

The Toreros though were the ones zeroing in, shooting 63 percent on field goals the first half, to 36 percent for the visitors. USD guard Mark Bostic, a 6-foot-4 transfer from Central Arizona Community College, had 17 points at intermission and finished with 21 — his season high.

"I'm learning how to play guard because I was a forward and center in community college," said Bostic. "Tonight was a good night for my confidence and I need that."

"I still need work on defense and ball-handling and spotting the open man when I'm coming down the floor. My outside shooting is inconsistent, too. Some days, it's really off. It looks like I'm throwing bricks."

Perhaps, but on this occasion, Bostic was driving nails with a velvet hammer. His 10-for-13 shooting showed the way as the winners finished at 60.3 percent. Many of the baskets came on fast breaks and attempts from close range.

"We have the quickness to make the break and get the easy basket," added Brovelli. "You just have to make sure the guy running with the ball does the right thing to take advantage."

SAN DIEGO UNION
DEC 16 1983

Torero Chris Carr scores over Cougar Jim Simmons.

Bostic, USD win 83-54 over Spring Arbor

By Rick Hazeltine, Special to The Union

For a while last night the Sports Center at the University of San Diego could have been a high school gym in Michigan. The first half featured the hot shooting of former rivals Deon Blackwell of Spring Arbor (Mich.) College and the Toreros' Mark Bostic, who grew up in nearby Ann Arbor.

Bostic and USD, evening its record at 3-3, came out on top with an easy 83-54 victory over the Cougars (8-5) before a crowd of 225.

The first half, however, gave USD head coach Jim Brovelli something to worry about. "They took it to us in the first half; they were real battlers," Brovelli said. "Frankly, I was worried. We were very flat."

The Toreros had not played in almost two weeks because of final exams. Fortunately for USD, the layoff had little effect on Bostic, who scored 17 of his 21 points in the first half and helped the Toreros take a 38-27 lead at intermission.

On the night, Bostic was 10-of-13 from the floor and added five assists. The Toreros, enjoying a big height advantage, shot 60 percent from the floor as a team.

Blackwell led all scorers with 22 points, 12 in the first half.

Chances are Blackwell would not have recognized his old rival from his position on the court. After playing forward and center throughout his high school and junior college career, Bostic is converting to off-guard.

"I always felt I would be playing guard if I went to a big college," Bostic said. "It's (converting) going pretty good right now; it was tough at first. Tonight, I felt real comfortable at the off-guard spot."

The Toreros host UC-Irvine tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the Sports Center.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN
DEC 16 1983

Toreros roll Spring Arbor; Crusaders rolled by Denver

The University of San Diego men's basketball team used a 12-2 spurt early in the second half to turn a 42-31 advantage into a 54-33 lead and an eventual 83-54 win over Spring Arbor of Michigan Thursday night in the Toreros' Sports Center.

Mark Bostic led 3-3 USD with 21 points, 17 of which came in the first half. He was backed by 16 points and three steals from Christian High graduate Anthony Reuss and 14 points, nine rebounds, eight assists and three steals from Mike Whitmarsh, who played 30 of a possible 40 minutes. Spring Arbor fell to 8-5.

The Toreros will next be in action Saturday evening at 7:30 in the Sports Center against UC-Irvine. The Anteaters own wins over USC and San Diego State this season.

Reuss, a 6-foot-7 junior forward, canned eight of 10 floor shots in 25 minutes as he turned in his best offensive output of the season. He is averaging just under 10 points a game. Reuss has hit an excellent 64 percent (25 of 39) from the field. Six-11 freshman center Scott Thompson added 10 points for USD.

In other action former Santana High and Grossmont College star Brian Caradonna scored 11 points in Pt. Loma's 65-63 loss to Denver in the mile-high city. Scott Vaughns, another former Griffin, scored five for the losing Crusaders.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

DEC 16 1983

Whitmarsh speaks with actions

By Mike Mathison
of The Daily Californian

Mike Whitmarsh admits it. "Basically, I'm a quiet basketball player," he said. Quiet in words, but not in actions.

Whitmarsh scored 14 points, grabbed nine rebounds, handed out eight assists and totaled three steals Thursday night as the University of San Diego whipped visiting Spring Arbor of Michigan 83-54 in the Sports Center.

"I talk more this year than I did last year," said Whitmarsh. "But I still need to talk a little more."

He's the E.F. Hutton on the hardwood. In his case actions speak louder than words.

The USD senior is the team's leading scorer, rebounder and assist man through the Toreros' first six games of 1983-84. Whitmarsh has scored 112 points (18.6 average), collected 50 rebounds (8.3), dished out 37 assists (6.1) and stolen nine balls as the team has gone 3-3.

"He is definitely the key ingredient for USD's success," said Northern Arizona University coach Jay Arnone after the Toreros dropped a 70-63 decision two weeks ago in which Whitmarsh scored 18 points before fouling out. "He provides solid overall play both offensively and defensively. We were real happy to see Mike foul out in the second half."

A nice compliment to the 6-foot-7 Whitmarsh.

He is a 1980 graduate of Monte Vista High. Whitmarsh was voted the Grossmont League's player of the year as a senior. Not too many recruiters were knocking on his door so he furthered his skills at Grossmont College for two seasons.

"In high school I played both tennis and basketball, so I didn't really concentrate on basketball," Whitmarsh said. "When I got out of high school I was just playing basketball so I had more time to concentrate on it. In my freshman year at Grossmont I didn't think I would go on to play. It all came together that year. And here, now it (this collegiate career) is almost over."

"It's hard to believe this is my last year. With all the young kids coming in it really makes it real. College goes fast."

Because this is it for Whitmarsh, he wants his final year to be special.

"In the off-season I tried to play every day," he said. "My number one priority was to improve my game. One aspect I tried to improve this year was my rebounding. Last year I had about five or six rebounds a game. I couldn't do that this year. I had to do better. I didn't work out by myself much at all. I played with some of the Clippers a lot. Playing against people who are better than you helps you become a better ballplayer."

"I don't think I have a major strength or weakness. I don't want to go out and score 20 to 25 points a game. I have just as much satisfaction in making a good assist as I do making a basket."

Whitmarsh is a strong candidate for repeating his first-team all-West Coast Athletic Conference (WCAC) honors last year. It was the first time a USD player was named to the WCAC top team. After receiving that honor Whitmarsh reflected on whether he should have played somewhere else.

"I think about that quite often," he admitted. "But I'm glad I decided to stay in San Diego. I'm with a good program and I'm glad I could be a part of helping this program get going. Now, maybe we're at a point where we could start winning some games."

"I fit right into this program, without a doubt. All the coaches I played for (Pete Colonelli at Monte Vista, Jack Shawcroft and Rick Wilkerson) stressed defense and being patient on offense."

Although the collegiate career is some 20 games away from concluding, Whitmarsh does have some ideas about next year.

"Playing in Europe is a possibility," Whitmarsh remarked. "But I'm going to have to make some good money to go there."

"If I do move on to play some more, I have to improve on my outside shot. It's not that bad, but I never really shoot it here. I either pass the ball for something better or I drive to the basket."

Jimmy Dorantes/for The Californian

Mike Whitmarsh is USD's star this season. The former Monte Vista High and Grossmont College star leads the Toreros in scoring, rebounding and assists.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 17 1983

USD hosts Anteaters in hunt for major win

Still searching for that special first victory over a recognized major-college basketball team, the University of San Diego takes another shot tonight when the Toreros host UC-Irvine at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center.

The Toreros are 3-3, but their victories have come against Army, St. Thomas College and Spring Arbor (83-54 Thursday night).

The Toreros almost scored the "breakthrough" victory three weeks ago over Long Beach State, only to miss 18 of 31 free-throw attempts and lose to the 49ers in overtime. USD also lost at Texas Tech and Northern Arizona.

Now the Toreros play an Irvine team that defeated San Diego State 79-76 two weeks ago at the Sports Arena. The Anteaters, with all five starters averaging in double figures, are led by the forward line of 6-foot-10 Bob Thornton (15.3 points, 71 percent field goal shooting, 6.0 rebounds), 6-8 Ben McDonald (14.8 points, 4.5 rebounds, 4.0 assists) and 6-9½ Tod Murphy (13.8 points, 5.5 rebounds).

USD will open with 6-7 forwards Mike Whitmarsh (18.7 points and 8.3 rebounds a game) and Anthony Reuss, the center tandem of 6-9 Mario Coronado and 6-11 freshman Scott Thompson, and guards Mark Bostic and Chris Carr.

DEC 1 9 1983

San Diego Notepad

Toreros take to the road after big win

Having finally gotten over the hump with a big 85-77 upset win over highly regarded UC-Irvine Saturday night, USD's Toreros will attempt to continue their roll tonight on the road when they take on UC-Santa Barbara, starting at 7:30.

USD's win over UC-Irvine, a team that earlier this season posted wins over San Diego State and USC, ended a trend in recent years that had seen the Toreros come close to knocking off heavily favored opponents several times, only to come up short down the stretch.

This time, however, coach Jim Brovelli's squad kept its poise, made its free throws in the clutch and was rewarded with a victory before only 570 spectators at USD Sports Center.

Mike Whitmarsh (19 points, 7 rebounds, 6 assists) and Anthony Reuss (14 points, 5 rebounds, 4 assists) sparked the Torero triumph.

"We got the lead and kept it," Brovelli said after his club improved its record to 4-3. "We did all the things you have to do to win. It was a big one."

JIM BROVELLI
His team is 4-3

USD

Continued from Page 1

USD (4-3) was led by all-conference forward Mike Whitmarsh, who scored 19 points and had 7 rebounds though suffering an ankle injury late in the game.

"Whitmarsh was good, but I thought that kid (Chris) Carr wasn't going to miss," Mulligan said. "And their center played well."

The center in question was reserve Scott Thompson, who scored 10 points on 4 of 5 shooting in 31 minutes of play.

Bostic led all scorers with 23 points. Irvine's Rob Thornton scored 21 points and had 13 rebounds whereas Ben McDonald had 17 points and 7 rebounds. San Diego shot 59.6% from the floor, 72% from the line while Fullerton was 59% from the floor and 59% from the line. The Titans outrebounded San Diego, 31-27.

"This is a big win for our program," said Brovelli, who is trying to give San Diego its first winning team in Division I competition.

And while the victory gave credibility to the Toreros, it did nothing but tarnish the Anteaters' image.

BLADE TRIBUNE

DEC 1 8 1983

USD 85, Irvine 77 — Mark Bostic scored 23 points. San Diego hit nine consecutive field goal attempts and held off the late UC-Irvine rally.

The Toreros built up a 47-38 halftime lead against the Anteaters, who dropped to 3-3.

Irvine, behind a 21-point, 13 rebound performance by Bob Thornton, came back to tie the score at 69-69. However, USD, 4-3, made 11 of 13 foul shots in the final 3:54 seconds to win the game.

Mike Whitmarsh added 19 points and seven rebounds for San Diego.

The Anteaters' Ben McDonald scored 18 points.

BLADE TRIBUNE

DEC 2 3 1983

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Forward Mike Whitmarsh scored 24 points and guard Mark Bostic hit 13 and passed off for 11 assists as University of San Diego dropped Idaho State 81-69 in a non-conference basketball game Thursday night.

Whitmarsh scored 14 of his points in the first half as the Toreros went out to a 45-33 halftime advantage. All five USD starters scored in double figures while Donn Holston led the visiting Bengals with 20 points.

A rough second half saw the ejection of Whitmarsh and two near fights. Idaho State, 5-6, got the margin down to five points 54-49 with 11:11 left to play but got no closer.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 2 3 1983

Whitmarsh paces USD to victory

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Forward Mike Whitmarsh scored 24 points and guard Mark Bostic dished out 11 assists as the University of San Diego defeated Idaho State, 81-69, in a non-conference basketball game Thursday night.

Whitmarsh scored 14 of his points in the first half as the Toreros went jumped to a 45-33 halftime advantage.

All five USD starters scored in double figures, while Donn Holston led the visiting Bengals with 20. Two near fights marred the second half and Whitmarsh was ejected for a flagrant foul.

Idaho State closed to within five points, 54-49, with 11:11 to play, but could come no closer as the Toreros won it at the line, where they were 8-for-9.

Mike Williams added 18 points on 9-for-11 shooting for Idaho State.

USD is now 5-4 on the season, while ISU dropped to 5-6.

"This was a good win," said USD Coach Jim Brovelli. "Earlier this season, we had to play parts of two games without Whitmarsh and we sort of came apart. We didn't do that in this game."

"We have a lot more depth this year. We have some people now who can contribute off the bench. We're deeper and have quicker players. We have a lot of potential and should continue to develop."

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 2 2 1983

USD to start 6-11 Thompson

Freshman center Scott Thompson will get his first start tonight when the University of San Diego hosts Idaho State at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center.

In a reserve role through his first eight games for the 4-4 Toreros, the 6-foot-11 Thompson has played 24 minutes per game and averaged 7.5 points and 4.5 rebounds. He is shooting 51 percent from the floor and has improved steadily on defense and in ballhandling.

The Toreros have opened each previous basketball game with 6-9 sophomore Mario Coronado at center.

An 85-77 winner over UC-Irvine in their last home game, when all five starters hit in double figures, USD is rebounding from a 75-66 loss at UC-Santa Barbara Monday night.

"Santa Barbara played its best game of the season and we had a little letdown early," Torero coach Jim Brovelli said yesterday. "We came back, but Mike Whitmarsh got in foul trouble and fouled out when we were down by three with 1½ minutes to play."

USD's only senior starter, the 6-foot-7 Whitmarsh, is averaging 17.1 points and 7.9 rebounds a game. Junior guard Mark Bostic has been USD's scoring leader in three straight games and is now averaging 13.9 points a game.

The club's third-leading scorer is forward Anthony Reuss (9.4 points, 4.6 rebounds). Idaho State is 5-5.

JIM BROVELLI
USD coach

USIU, USD share road woes

Tribune Staff Report

Brett Crawford continues to put up the numbers. Unfortunately for his coach, Freddie Goss, it's been one of the few encouraging signs in U.S. International University's young basketball season.

Crawford, an importation from San Diego City Community College, netted 25 points last night — maintaining his season average near 30 — but it wasn't enough as the Gulls dropped a 72-61 decision to the University of Toledo in the Ohio city.

The loss dropped USIU's record to 0-4 with tomorrow night's matchup against Kansas State (1-2) in Manhattan, Kan., next up. With 10 more road games following that one, their itinerary doesn't get any easier.

Meanwhile, crosstown rival University of San Diego also winds up a road swing. The Toreros, 64-53 losers to Texas Tech last night in Lubbock, Texas, conclude a two-game trip with a game tomorrow night against Northern Arizona (1-1) in Flagstaff.

Crawford's latest effort actually lowered his average slightly — to 29.2 points a game. The problem is only two teammates are hitting in double figures. Steve Frederick, who missed last night's game to attend his father's funeral in Texas, is at 11 and Bill Morales at 10.

At the other end of the floor, the Gulls are surrendering points at the rate of 91 a game — last night's total by the

DEC 1 8 1983

USD hurdles 'mental barrier,' upsets Irvine

By Bill Center, Staff Writer

The path was lined with "good efforts" and "near misses." Last night, though, the University of San Diego found victory at the end of the trail.

The Toreros didn't just come close. They didn't miss free throws. They even put down a rally to defeat UC-Irvine — which earlier this season beat San Diego State and USC — 85-77 before only 570 spectators at the USD Sports Center.

"We've been respectable and competitive," said USD coach Jim Brovelli, "but to get over the hump ... well, we've been in this position before and we haven't won ... so to get over that mental barrier we had to go out and do it, beat a quality team. Tonight we did.

"This was so important."

The Toreros had come close in their five seasons as a Division I team. Pepperdine twice beat USD at the buzzer en route to the NCAA playoffs. The Toreros once took nationally ranked San Francisco into double overtime and twice had the last shot at victory. San Diego State has beaten USD the last three years in overtime.

When they had Long Beach State on the ropes earlier this season the Toreros KO'd themselves instead by missing 18 of 31 free throws in another overtime loss.

"We always knew we could win one of these games, but we never did," said senior point guard John Prunty. "... I know this is going to give us a lot of confidence.

"We no longer have to think about all those times we came close ... but."

USD grabbed the lead 22 seconds into the game on a slam by junior guard Mark Bostic and pulled to a four-basket lead that they held through the half (47-38). The Toreros led 65-55 with 10 minutes to play.

But the Anteaters battled back, and with 4:41 to play, point guard George Turner swished a 20-foot line drive to pull the visitors even at 69.

The Toreros didn't break. They ran their weave for 30 seconds, and then Bostic slipped behind the UCI defense, took a lob pass from Mike Whitmarsh on the point and laid in the go-ahead basket with 3:54 to go. Prunty drew an offensive foul from Ronnie Grandison and hit both ends of the one-and-one and it was 73-69.

USD: Upsets Irvine

Continued from H-1

Bob Thornton, one third of UCI's rugged 6-foot-8-and-above front line, scored to bring UCI to within two with 3:19 to play.

But USD forward Anthony Reuss answered with a pair of free throws. Then Whitmarsh hit a free throw and a lay-in, and Bostic hit four straight free throws and slammed home a dunk. The Toreros were up by 11 with 2:30 seconds to play.

They had cleared the barrier.

"We might have had better personnel, but they won the game," UC-Irvine coach Bill Mulligan said after his club fell to 3-3. "It's a big win for USD. They deserved it. They outplayed us."

"We got the lead and kept it," Brovelli said after his club went to 4-3. "When they made a run and tied it, we fought right back. Then we took care of the boards and hit the free throws."

"We did all the things you have to do to win. It's a big one."

Whitmarsh (19 points, seven rebounds, six assists) and Reuss (14 points, five rebounds, four assists) played well, as expected. The big improvement in the Toreros' game came from 6-11 freshman center Scott Thompson and junior college transfer guards Bostic and Chris Carr.

Bostic led all scorers with 23 points and had two steals against a lone turnover. Carr had 10 points and five steals. Thompson had 10 points, four rebounds, a blocked shot and two steals in the last 3½ minutes.

Thornton led UCI with 21 points and 13 rebounds. Ben McDonald had 18 points and seven rebounds.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

DEC 2 0 1983

USD LOSES

The UC-Santa Barbara Gauchos handed the University of San Diego men's basketball team a 75-67 defeat in Santa Barbara Monday night. The Toreros, who host Idaho State Thursday evening in the Sports Center at 7:30, fell to 4-4. Mike Whitmarsh was held to a season-low six points for USD. He was in foul trouble most of the night.

THE TRIBUNE

DEC 2 0 1983

TORERO HIGH SHORT-LIVED — Coming on the heels of one of its biggest basketball victories ever, USD got kicked in the shins last night by host UC-Santa Barbara 75-67.

Saturday night, the Toreros had defeated UC-Irvine to — in coach Jim Brovelli's words — "get over the hump against a quality team." Last night was a different story. And 38 percent shooting from the field in the first half was a factor as the hosts led 38-28 at the break.

Mark Bostic paced the Torero attack with 16 points. The loss evened their record at 4-4, while the Gauchos improved to 5-3. USD returns to action at home against Idaho State Thursday night at 7:30.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

DEC 1 8 1983

USD Gains Respectability With Victory

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — After defeating USC last Tuesday, UC Irvine looked as if it had finally found some consistency in its game.

No such luck, however. The Anteaters (3-3) proved to be as bad as they were good against the Trojans, losing to the University of San Diego, 85-77, Saturday night at the Sports Center.

"We keep going up and down, up and down," Irvine Coach Bill Mulligan said. "We have better personnel, but you couldn't tell tonight."

Indeed, you couldn't. San Diego, a member of the West Coast Athletic Conference, took the lead five minutes into the game, and the best UCI could do was to tie it up once, 69-69, on a George Turner field goal with 4:36 to play.

San Diego is no slouch on the basketball court. But Irvine, attempting to become a legitimate Division I basketball school, must beat the San Diego as well as the USC's of the world to gain respectability.

USD Coach Jim Brovelli stopped Irvine's comeback in the final minutes by going to a spread offense. The Toreros took the lead for good with 3:50 left on Mark Bostic's field.

"We finally showed the character we have to show to win," Brovelli said. "We held onto the ball when we had to and at the end we put away our free throws."

"When you play good defense against a team," Brovelli said, "you automatically put yourself in a position to rebound well and we played good defense."

Please see USD, Page 5

THE TRIBUNE

DEC 1 9 1983

USD WOMEN WIN THRILLER — The USD Women's basketball team edged Cal Poly SLO 41-40 last night here, after overcoming a 24-20 halftime deficit.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 2 0 1983

UC-Santa Barbara chews up USD 75-67

The University of San Diego beat UC-Irvine Saturday but that first taste of victory over a major Division I school was short-lived — last night the Toreros were stunned by UC-Santa Barbara 75-67 at Goleta.

The Toreros shot only 38 percent from the field in the first half and trailed 38-28 at intermission.

Mark Hertenstein and Scott Fishar, both 6-7 forwards, scored 11 points each to give the Gauchos their halftime lead.

The Toreros charged back in the second half, outscoring UCSB 10-2 in the first five minutes. The burst cut the Gauchos' lead to 40-38, but they pulled away again with free throws.

Local Colleges

The Toreros were called for 30 fouls, and the Gauchos made 27 of 38 free throw. USD hit 14 of 21.

Fischer led all scorers with 26 points, and Fischer added 21 for the Gauchos.

The Toreros were led by Mark Bostic's 16 points on 7-of-13 shooting from the field. Mike Whitmarsh, USD's all-conference forward, was in foul trouble most of the night and had only six points on 3-of-8 shooting from the field.

The Gauchos used their height advantage to outrebound the Toreros 40-27. UCSB also outshot USD, hitting 53 percent of its shots to the Toreros' 46 percent.

Forward Dave Melver and guard Chris Carr added 10 points apiece for the Toreros.

USD fell to 4-4. The Gauchos raised their record to 5-3.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 1 8 1983

USD 85, UC Irvine 77

SAN DIEGO — Mark Bostic scored 23 points, leading the University of San Diego to an 85-77 victory over UC Irvine.

Mike Whitmarsh added 19 points, grabbed seven rebounds and had six assists for the Toreros, who raised their season record to 4-3.

Bob Thornton led UC Irvine with 21 points and 13 rebounds. Ben McDonald added 18 points and grabbed seven rebounds for the Anteaters, who fell to 3-3.

The Toreros finished with 31 field goals in 51 attempts for 59.6 percent accuracy. The Anteaters connected on 57.9 percent of their floor shots.

THE TRIBUNE

DEC 2 1 1983

ADD GRIFFINS — Speaking of Grossmont College, Rump reports he has another good team for the 1984 season. Grossmont will meet USD in its opener on Feb. 6 at USD, and then will "scrimmage" with Foothill, Stanford University and Redlands University on Feb. 9-10 and 14, respectively, before facing Long Beach City College in earnest on Feb. 17 at Grossmont. Grossmont's first Pacific Coast Conference match doesn't come until Feb. 28.

"By then we'll be ready," he said. Rump, who has won more community college championships than you could shake a racket at, sees his team in contention for conference title again this year. Many four-year colleges have benefitted from Rump's transfers over the years. He wishes he could keep them longer than just two years. "Every year is a rebuilding year as far as we're concerned," he said.

SAN DIEGO UNION

DEC 2 2 1983

USD women beat Northridge

USD's Michele Dykstra scored a game-high 20 points while teammate Debbie Theroux added 13 points and pulled down 14 rebounds as the Toreros downed Cal State-Northridge 62-45 at the USD Sports Center last night. Julie Middleton led Northridge with 10 points.

The Citrus Heights kid gives Brovelli's Toreros a boost

By Nick Canepa
Tribune Sportswriter

There is one sure way to elevate a collegiate basketball program. Think big. Or tall, at least. As in size 52 extra-long sport coats. Smokey Gaines, who coaches across town at San Diego State, calls it "higher education." Jim Brovelli, who coaches at the University of San Diego, calls it "nice."

Funny Brovelli should act that way, for he has struggled for so long to bring a quality big man into his basketball program. And now that he appears to have one of promise, in the person of 6-foot-11, 240-pound freshman Scott Thompson, he refuses to go overboard.

There is little panic in Brovelli. Since the Torero program made the big jump to NCAA Division I five years ago, his plan has been to move ahead bit by bit. Forced to play in the tough West Coast Athletic Conference and recruit for a school with very high academic standards, Brovelli, a master tactician, has managed to hold his own with the big boys.

Enter Thompson, a center who a year ago averaged 29.5 points, 16.2 rebounds and 6.2 blocks per game for Citrus Heights Mesa Verde High near Sacramento. Thompson chose USD because it was small, academically excellent and had a program where he could play right away.

And he has played, averaging 23 minutes an outing. But through eight games, he hadn't started, because of Brovelli's way. Until last night, that is, when Thompson got his first starting assignment versus Idaho State in the USD Sports Center.

It wasn't a sensational debut, but Thompson did hit five of seven shots from the field and one of two free throws for 11 points as USD defeated the Bengals 81-69. Thompson also managed a couple of blocked shots. The Toreros are now 5-4 while Idaho State is 5-5.

The entire team displayed a marked improvement with Thompson at center, although it was Mike Whitmarsh, with 24 points and 11 rebounds (both game-high totals), who provided the major spark for the Toreros. Whitmarsh was ejected with 3½ minutes to play for retaliating

Tribune photo by Bob Redding

USD'S SCOTT THOMPSON APPLIES PRESSURE
Torero freshman guards Bengal Nelson Peterson against a Bengal player who had fouled him. Idaho State's leading scorer Buck Chavez missed last night's game with a sprained ankle.

But back to Thompson, who replaced 6-9 center Mario Coronado in the starting lineup last night and now has 71 points and 43 rebounds in nine games.

"Things are going good for me," said Thompson. "I really didn't expect to be starting until the conference began (Jan. 19)."

"Everything's so tense at the beginning of games. As it is, I was nervous and tense when I went in as a sub the first few games. It takes some getting used to."

To all this, Brovelli merely shrugs. Thompson has been everything the coach has expected. The 18-year-old's improvement has been steady, and Brovelli is patient enough to wait.

"There's a mighty big adjustment from high school to college ball," Brovelli said. "Sometimes, I think, coaches expect too much from young people too soon. Scott's only 18, and I just want him to have fun playing basketball."

"There's absolutely no pressure on Scott. I've always been against that kind of thing, and I'm not about to start doing things I don't believe in. No one needs that kind of pressure."

But Brovelli realizes that the successful recruitment of Thompson can be a turning point in his program. In the past, his efforts to land a big-time prep recruit failed. But in Thompson, he met a youngster who had more on his mind than scoring points at a basketball factory.

"I ruled out the bigger places (such as Cal and USC), and visited the University of Pacific, Santa Clara, San Jose State and USD," Thompson said. "I didn't think I'd get much playing time at the bigger schools... it's a bigger deal all the way around."

"So far, there have been no problems. The academic thing is a lot different than high school, for sure, but I'll be all right. I'll be here four years — at least. It's a nice environment. The teachers really care about you here. You can actually talk with them one-on-one."

"Plus, this is away from home without being that far away. My parents can see me play. And we play some games in the Bay Area, so they can watch me there."

Thompson's improvement from high school can be measured through the eyes of his father, Leonard, who visited Alcala Park to watch his son play not long ago.

"During the game, my dad said, 'Is that Scott? I hardly recognize him. I've never seen him run that fast,'" Thompson said. "I'm not all that quick. I'm working on it. And my jumping ability."

In high school, Thompson's best shot was a turnaround jumper. But not at this level. Brovelli has him working on a hook shot.

"In high school, he could shoot that shot over smaller people," Brovelli said. "But it isn't that easy at this level against big people. It really is a good shot, but we want him to develop others."

There is much to learn.

"I'm just not that dominant here yet," Thompson said. "But time will take care of that. There are far better players on this team than I've been used to playing with. I don't have to do everything myself."

And that, of course, is just the way Brovelli prefers it. For now.

"Obviously, Scott was a great recruit for us," Brovelli said. "He's going to be an asset all the way through. But this is not a one-man game. Everyone has to be involved for a successful program, not just one person."

"It's important to have a big guy — I've always tried to get one. This is a tough conference. It's always been a big, physical conference. It was that way when I was a kid (in San Francisco) watching it, it was that way when I played (at USC) and it's that way now."

"It's going to be quite an experience for Scott. He could be a great college player by the time he's through. He's got a great set of hands and he can score. He's only been around here a short time, but I'm very pleased with him."

Now, all Brovelli needs is, well, let's see...

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

DEC 23 1983

TOREROS GET PHYSICAL

Whitmarsh ejected, but not before assuring USD of a victory

By Mike Mathison
Of The Daily Californian

In addition to being a basketball player Thursday night, Mike Whitmarsh was also used as a punching bag. Idaho State's Nelson Peterson was doing the sparring at the University of San Diego's Sports Center.

Peterson's classless tactics finally worked on the Toreros' 6-foot-7 Whitmarsh late in the contest. With 3:49 left in the game, Whitmarsh, tired of being used as a boxer's favorite tool, retaliated with a shove of his own. He was ejected from the contest.

Whitmarsh left with the Toreros leading 70-59. Idaho State made it 71-63 on the ensuing two free throws for the flagrant foul and basket after getting the ball out of bounds. But it wasn't enough for the visiting Bengals as USD prevailed 81-69.

"That was one very dirty basketball player out there," Whitmarsh said of Peterson. "I lost my head at the end, though. I told the referees (Gary Bunker and Jerry White, the one who ejected Whitmarsh) three or four times during the game to watch the guy. He was elbowing, holding, hitting. I got a good one (cheap shot) in the stomach. That's the one that did it."

"That was one very dirty basketball player out there. I lost my head at the end, though. I told the referees three or four times during the game to watch the guy. He was elbowing, holding, hitting. I got a good one (cheap shot) in the stomach. That's the one that did it."

— Mike Whitmarsh

shot) in the stomach. That's the one that did it."

Whitmarsh finished with a game-high 24 points and 11 rebounds as the Toreros raised their record to 5-4. He also dished off four assists. Whitmarsh netted eight of 12 from the floor and eight of 11 from the free throw line.

Guard Mark Bostic added 13 points and 11 assists for USD. Freshman center Scott Thompson chipped in 11 points and seven boards. Chris Carr and Christian High graduate Anthony Reuss both hit 10 points apiece. Reuss showed his usual fine touch from the floor, hitting on five of seven attempts.

The Toreros held a 65-55 lead with 5:39 remaining in the game. After a Whitmarsh and Peterson exchanged pushes and shoves, Whitmarsh converted a three-point play off Peterson. After Idaho State scored, Whitmarsh struggled free from Peterson underneath the basket, took a pass and scored an easy lay-up to put the Toreros ahead 70-57 with 4:16 unplayed.

"Getting burned made him mad," Whitmarsh said with a smile.

"Tonight was a nice win. I thought it would be a lot tougher than it was. It was good to get back on track. We play damn good down here."

The Toreros, 5-1 at home, came off a 75-66 loss in Santa Barbara Monday night. Whitmarsh scored a season-low eight points because he was in foul trouble.

"I think I had only one foul tonight," Whitmarsh said, "but I made it a good one."

He laughed. Officially, Whitmarsh had two fouls.

THE TRIBUNE

DEC 22 1983

San Diego Notepad

Toreros make pivotal change, eye No. 5

The University of San Diego's basketball team will attempt to push its record above the 500 mark tonight when the Toreros (4-4) entertain Idaho State (5-4) at 7:30 at the USD Sports Center.

In a lineup change, coach Jim Brovelli said yesterday he will start 6-foot-11 freshman Scott Thompson at center in place of Mario Coronado.

The Toreros won twice at home last week, routing Spring Arbor 83-54, then surprising UC-Irvine 85-77. They dropped a 75-66 decision on the road to UC-Santa Barbara Monday night.

Forward Mike Whitmarsh continues to lead USD scoring with an average of 17.1 points a game. Guard Mike Bostic is second in scoring at 13.9. The visiting Bengals, coming off a 98-77 victory over Mesa College (Colo.) and a 91-67 win over Washington State, are paced by forwards Nelson Peterson and Mike Williams and center Mike Denkers. Williams is the Big Sky Conference's player of the week.

TORERO WOMEN WIN — Michelle Dykstra's 20 points paced the USD women's basketball team to a 62-45 victory over Northridge State last night in the USD Sports Center. Debbie Theroux added 13 points and 14 rebounds.

THE TRIBUNE

DEC 24 1983

San Diego Notepad

USD women drop decision to Illini

The University of San Diego's women's basketball team made it close, but dropped a 60-58 decision to University of Illinois last night at USD's Sports Center.

USD's Michelle Dykstra led all scorers with 18 points as the Toreros, now 6-6, refused to be shaken off by the 6-3 Fighting Illini, who took the lead early with a 12-point surge. USD pulled even late in the game, but a pair of free throws by Diane Eickholt with 44 seconds left gave the winners a four-point lead that proved too much for USD to overcome.

The USD women play their next game Jan. 3, a home contest against the University of Nevada at Reno.

Sports

Sunday, Dec. 25, 1983

Santa leaves a few gifts from sports staff

John Maffei

By now, the presents have been opened, the house is a mess and half the toys Santa brought the kids have already been broken.

But that won't stop us. The Times-Advocate sports staff still has some Christmas gifts they would like to deliver.

So Santa, if you please, make these deliveries:
To San Pasqual Football Coach Bob Woodhouse — More linebackers like Barry McKeever, Wade Aschbrenner and Erik Vance to warm those cold Friday nights next fall.

To San Pasqual Linebacker Barry McKeever — The success his father Mike had in his All-America career at USC.

To Escondido Football Coach Denny Snyder — Some Herculean-type talent to match his coaching ability.

To Ramona's Jack Menotti — A class coaching job for a class man.

To Billy Clark — The Ramona football job and the good luck that eluded Menotti in his term.

To Ramona Baseball Coach Bill Tamburri — A head coaching job at Notre Dame.

To Poway Basketball Coach Neville Saner — A healthy John Colborne at center.

To Escondido boxer Don Hunt — What he wants most in life, an Olympic gold medal.

To Coach Doug Scovill and the San Diego State football program — To San Diego State Athletic Director Mary Alice Hill — The wisdom to hire highly-competent people for the fund-raiser and sports information openings in her department.

To San Diego State Baseball Coach Jim

Bob Vetter
How about a title?

Denny Snyder
Talent in his stocking.

Don Hunt
Olympic gold medal.

Neville Saner
A healthy center.

Dietz — The NCAA championship that has eluded him the past 10 years.

To San Diego State Basketball Coach Smokey Gaines — The talent to coach the talented athletes he has recruited.

To USD Baseball Coach John Cunningham, the newest North County resident — A team that can challenge for the conference title.

To Palomar College Baseball Coach Bob Vetter — Enough base hits, running catches and pitching to carry him to a conference title.

To Palomar College Football Coach Tom Craft — A good recruiting season and an even better 1984 season.

To Palomar Assistant Coach Mark Halda — A tremendous training camp with the Denver Gold of the USFL and the fulfillment of his dreams to play professional football.

To Palomar wide receiver Lafo Malauulu — A repeat performance of this season and a scholarship to the school of his choice.

To Jack McKeon, general manager of the Padres — That one big deal that will put the club into the World Series.

To Padres first baseman Steve Garvey — An injury-free season to silence his critics.

To Padres President Ballard Smith — A Goose to stuff in his Christmas stocking.

To the bungling Padres ground crew — A clue.

To Kellen Winslow of the Chargers — A return of the soft hands that turned to steel in '83.

To Charlie Joiner and Ed White of the Chargers — That Super Bowl season so they can retire and go out in glory.

To Chargers quarterback Ed Luther — A case of stickum for his receivers.

To Chargers quarterback Dan Fouts — The Incredible Hulk's right shoulder.

To Chargers running back James Brooks — A dictionary which excludes the words, "No Mas."

To Chargers Coach Don Coryell — A season when no players go on the injured reserve list.

To Large Louie Kelcher, ex-Charger — The will power to push himself away from the table at meal time once in a while.

To Paul Phipps of the Clippers — The wisdom to put his brain in gear before shooting off his mouth.

To Randy Johnson of the Atlanta Braves — The chance to play regularly in the major leagues, even if it's not with the Braves.

To Palomar College Basketball Coach Andy Gilmour — Continuation of what has been a pretty successful season so far.

To Bob Bell, owner of the Sockers — The wisdom to leave well enough alone and to quit messing in his coach's affairs. Also, the wisdom to get out of the NASL and play strictly indoors in the MISL.

To Julie Veece of the Sockers — A contract as big as his ego.

To Bill Walton of the Clippers — What he wants most in life — to play just one season of basketball injury free.

To USC quarterback Sean Salisbury — A senior season that will silence the critics and lead to a professional future.

To USC Football Coach Ted Tollner — A Rose Bowl date to quiet his critics.

To San Jose State Football Coach Claude Gilbert — All the luck in the world to one of the world's truly nice guys.

To all the high school and JC coaches in our area who don't bother to call in their results after a loss — A dime.

To Yankees Owner George Steinbrenner — More ex-players so he can make them ex-managers.

To Raiders Owner Al Davis — The welcome in New York that he never got in Los Angeles.

To Howard Cosell — Stitches in his lips.

To Steve Howe, Jerry Martin, Willie Wilson, Willie Aikens and Vida Blue — Anything but a white Christmas.

To all our readers — The best of times this Christmas and in the year ahead.

Merry Christmas.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 24 1983

Weinbaum

UCI-USD: How disgraceful to see just a total of 570 fans attending last Saturday night's University of San Diego vs. UC-Irvine basketball battle.

These are two talented, well-coached and winning teams.

The USD Toreros upset the Anteaters, 85-77.

Granted the USD students were on vacation, but the public in this area should be aware of quality basketball.

USD Displays Its Depth Once Again in an 81-69 Victory Over Idaho State

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Last year, if all-West Coast Athletic Conference forward Mike Whitmarsh fouled out, it was the beginning of the end for the University of San Diego basketball team.

This season, things are different. USD Coach Jim Brovelli just sends in another player.

That's what he did Thursday night in USD's 81-69 win over Idaho State University before a crowd of 300 at the Sports Center.

The Toreros (5-4) were cruising with a 70-59 lead with four minutes left, when Whitmarsh was ejected for hitting Idaho State's Nelson Peterson. (The two had contact throughout the second half, but Whitmarsh was tagged with the infraction.)

But unlike last season's Toreros, no one panicked against ISU, a team that beat Washington State, 91-67, a week ago. ISU was playing without forward Buck Chavez (sprained ankle), who has a 10-point scoring average. Brovelli just sent in guard Chris Carr, and the new lineup increased the margin by game's end.

"We have more depth and more poise," said Brovelli, who used eight players, and even took Whitmarsh out voluntarily for a minute in the first half.

"We have lost Mike a couple of times already this season, so we are learning to play without him. (Mark) Bostic has taken charge."

Bostic, a junior college transfer, is among those who have assumed the leadership role.

"Everyone has confidence in everyone else," said forward Anthony Reuss, one of only two returnees in the lineup when Whitmarsh was forced to leave. The other returnee was senior guard John Prunty.

Bostic and Carr are junior college transfers. Also in the lineup was 6-11 freshman center Scott Thompson, who was making his first start for USD.

Whitmarsh led all scorers with 24 points. He also had 11 rebounds and four assists in 35 minutes. But four of the other players also hit double figures. Bostic had 13 points and 11 assists. Thompson had 11 points, Reuss had 10 and Carr had 10.

"This year we have quickness and speed," Reuss said. "Now we get some fast break points and easy layups that we didn't get last year."

That speed is what makes Brovelli think the Toreros will have their first winning campaign since USD went Division I in the 1979-80 season.

The quickness, coming from Bostic and Carr, is also a defensive plus. It allowed USD to execute a pressing defense that was successful, when used through some of the game. Last year, that defense would only have been attempted by USD in the closing minutes of a losing game.

And in the first half, Bostic and Carr helped the home team mount a lead it never lost.

USD pulled out to a 45-33 halftime advantage with the help of a nine unanswered points. The Toreros went from a 26-23 advantage with 9:26 left to a 35-23 lead with six minutes remaining.

Late in the half, Idaho State went into a zone defense that slowed USD considerably, but even that didn't phase the new Toreros, who slowed down the tempo and was more patient offensively.

USD, 0-3 on the road, travels to Reno, Nev. for the Wolfpack Classic Dec. 28-29, where it will face Nevada-Reno, Florida A&M and UC Davis.

SAN DIEGO UNION
DEC 23 1983

New, improved USD topples Idaho State

By Bill Center, Staff Writer

Slowly but surely, the University of San Diego is becoming a better basketball team.

There was noticeable improvement again last night as the Toreros defeated Idaho State, 81-69, at the USD Sports Center. They led from the fifth minute of the game, pulling away down the stretch even though leading scorer Mike Whitmarsh had been ejected with 3½ minutes to play for retaliating against a fouling Bengal player.

The Toreros had proven earlier this season they could win with Whitmarsh. Winning without him, a player who had contributed game-high totals of 24 points and 11 rebounds before his departure, was clearly a major hurdle.

"When we lost Whitmarsh in two games earlier this year, we sort of came apart without him," said USD coach Jim Brovelli.

"They're a much better team than they were a year ago," said Idaho State coach Wayne Ballard, whose leading scorer and second-leading rebounder, swingman Buck Chavez, missed last night's game with a sprained ankle.

"USD gets up and down the floor better and shoots better. But we're really hurting without Chavez."

Last year, the Toreros beat Idaho State by three points.

"But we're a better team, too," said Ballard of a club that beat Washington State by 24 last week.

Last night, the Toreros not only beat the Bengals, they controlled the game. All five USD starters finished in double figures, and USD hit 57 percent from the floor after a blistering first half in which it downed two of every three shots.

"We have a ways to go yet," said Brovelli. "We've got to become a better defensive team and we've got to improve our rebounding."

"This club has a lot more depth than last year's, though. We have more people able to contribute. We're deeper, with more quickness. Everyone is also playing their roles. We've got a lot of potential that should keep developing with time."

USD also is a rebuilt team. Three of the five starters and four of the eight participants last night are in their

See USD on Page C-5

The San Diego Union/Bob Redding

USD's Scott Thompson pulls a rebound away from Idaho State's Greg Houskeeper.

USD: Tips Idaho State, 81-69

Continued from C-1

first year at USD. Six-foot-11 center Scott Thompson is in his first year of college. He got his first start against Idaho State and responded with 11 points and seven rebounds.

Slowly, Brovelli has melded his new players into the starting lineup.

Junior college transfer Mark Bostic opened the season as a starting guard after making a quick adjustment from forward. After leading the Toreros in scoring the past three games, he backed Whitmarsh with 13 last night. He added 11 assists and five steals to the cause.

A second junior college transfer, Chris Carr, joined Bostic in the starting back court four games into the season. Against Idaho State, he had 10 points and four assists.

When Idaho State, down 8-10 points the majority of the game, made a run early in the second half, another junior college guard, Al Moscatel from nearby Mesa College, came off the bench and threw in two bombs to cut short the rally. There were also Dave McIver spelling Anthony Reuss (10 points) at forward and senior point guard John Prunty settling the club down.

Guard Donn Holston (20 points) and 6-8 forward Mike Williams (18) paced the long-bombing Bengals, who fell to 5-6. USD is now 5-4 and will resume the season Dec. 28-29 in the Wolfpack Classic at Reno.

SAN DIEGO UNION
DEC 28 1983

USD resumes play at Reno

The University of San Diego basketball team, above .500 at Christmas for the first time in five years as an NCAA Division I school, resumes its season tonight against Florida A&M in the first game of the Wolfpack Classic at Reno, Nev.

UC-Davis will play host Nevada-Reno meeting in the second game of the four-team tourney.

The Toreros have a 5-4 record and are paced by 6-foot-7 forwards Mike Whitmarsh (17.9 points, 8.2 rebounds) and Anthony Reuss (9.4 points, 4.2 rebounds), 6-11 freshman center Scott Thompson (7.9 points, 4.9 rebounds) and transfer guards Mark Bostic (13.8 points) and Chris Carr (6.6 points).

THE TRIBUNE
DEC 29 1983

TOREROS BITE RATTLERS — The University of San Diego Toreros accomplished two things last night with their 78-52 basketball victory over the Florida A&M Rattlers. The win put them in the finals of the Wolf Pack Classic tonight in Reno and it marked their first road victory of the season.

USD will tip off tonight against host Nevada-Reno, an 81-64 winner over UC-Davis last night, in the championship game.

Randy Whitmarsh scored 17 points on eight-of-12 shooting from the floor to lead the Toreros (6-4) while Scott Thompson contributed 16 more.

After a close first half, in which USD led 28-22, the Toreros blew out the Rattlers 50-30 in the second half.

THE TRIBUNE
DEC 28 1983

USD ON THE ROAD — Looking for its first road victory of the season, USD travels to Reno for the 8th Annual Wolf Pack Classic tonight and tomorrow.

The Toreros will meet the Florida A&M Rattlers tonight at 7. The other two teams in the tournament are host Nevada-Reno and UC-Davis. The losers of tonight's games face each other tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the consolation game and the championship game follows. The Toreros' record is 5-4.

SAN DIEGO UNION
DEC 29 1983

Toreros advance, face Nevada-Reno

The University of San Diego did something last night that it hadn't been able to do all season — win on the road.

The Toreros shot 63.5 percent from the field en route to a 78-52 thrashing of Florida A&M in the first round of the 8th Annual Wolf Pack Classic in Reno, Nevada last night. USD will face host Nevada-Reno, an 81-64 winner over UC-Davis, at 9 tonight.

The Toreros' Mike Whitmarsh led both teams with 17 points. Freshman center Scott Thompson continued to perform well, scoring 16 points on 7-of-9 shooting from the field.

USD (6-4) took only a 28-22 lead after the first half, despite shooting 58 percent from the field. Whitmarsh and Thompson opened the second half with four points apiece as the Toreros outscored the Rattlers 11-3 and gradually pulled away. Michael Toomer led the Rattlers (2-6) with 12 points and 13 rebounds.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

J Thursday, December 29, 1983/Part III 13

Whitmarsh Paces San Diego, 78-52

Mike Whitmarsh scored 17 points to lead the University of San Diego to a 78-52 win over Florida A&M in the first round of the Wolf Pack tournament in Reno Wednesday.

USD led 28-22 at halftime, and outscored Florida A&M, 11-3, at the start of the second half to gain its sixth win of the season against four losses. Other Torero starters in double figures were Scott Thompson (16), Mark Bostic (15), and Chris Carr (10). Anthony Reuss added seven points and nine rebounds. Micheal Tommer led Florida A&M (2-6) with 12 points and 13 rebounds.

SAN DIEGO 1781—Whitmarsh 17, Bostic 15, Thompson 16, Carr 10, Reuss 9, Moscatel 15, Brinkley 3, Moscatel 2, Madden 2, McIver 4, Coronado 2. FLORIDA A&M 521—Toomer 8, Moore 12, Riggins 7, Ware 2. Halftime—San Diego, 28-22. Attendance—1,222.

THE TRIBUNE
DEC 30 1983

San Diego Notepad

Toreros' star awarded MVP

Nevada-Reno defeated the University of San Diego 70-66 last night in the finals of the Wolf Pack Classic in Reno.

Cal-Davis beat Florida A&M earlier to take third place in the tournament.

Torero Mike Whitmarsh, who scored 32 points last night, captured Most Valuable Player honors despite being on the second-place team. He had 49 points for the two-day tournament.

San Diego led 36-33 at the half and twice pulled to within one point late in the game, the last time with 2:46 remaining.

Both teams finished the tournament with 6-5 records.

In other men's college action last night, the Point Loma Nazarene Crusaders dropped a 66-49 semifinal game to Grand Canyon in the Stanislaus State Tournament at Turlock. Point Loma's Dean Richard led all scorers with 19 points.

Locally, U.S. International University allowed Prairie View A&M (Texas) to break a 10-game losing streak spanning two years by losing to the Panthers last night in overtime 68-65 at Poway High. It was Prairie View's first road victory since it defeated the Gulls last year.

Prairie View is 1-5 and USIU is 1-15.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN
DEC 30 1983

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

WHITMARSH MVP Nevada-Reno won its own basketball tournament — the Wolfpack Classic — Thursday night by defeating the University of San Diego 70-66 in Reno. USD's Mike Whitmarsh scored a game-high 32 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in the loss and was voted the tournament's most valuable player. The Toreros (6-5) led 36-33 at halftime but the Wolfpack grabbed a 41-39 lead with 16:14 remaining and never looked back.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

DEC 30 1983

Basketball:

USD loses in Reno

Forward Rick Gosse scored 21 points to pace Nevada-Reno to a 70-66 championship victory over the University of San Diego in the Wolf Pack Classic. Gosse, making only his second start of the season, connected on 10 of 17 field goals, mostly from long range, and also paced UNR with nine rebounds. Mike Whitmarsh of San Diego, who scored 32 points, captured Most Valuable Player honors despite being on the second place team. He had 49 points for the two-day tournament. Both teams finished the tournament with 6-5 records.

4B The Daily Californian □ East San Diego County, California □ Thursday, December 29, 1983

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

USD WINS Mike Whitmarsh scored 17 points and Scott Thompson added 16 Wednesday night as the University of San Diego overwhelmed Florida A&M 78-52 in the first round of the Wolfpack Classic in Reno. Mark Bostic scored 15 and Chris Carr collected 10 as the Toreros placed four players in double figures. Whitmarsh, who formerly starred at Monte Vista High and Grossmont College, also handed out five assists. Former Christian star Anthony Reuss scored seven points and pulled down a team-high nine rebounds for the winners. USD will play host University of Nevada-Reno tonight for the championship. The Wolfpack defeated UC-Davis 81-64 in Wednesday's other first round game.

SAN DIEGO UNION
DEC 30 1983

USD falls short in final of Wolf Pack tourney

From Staff and News Reports

Nevada-Reno defeated the University of San Diego 70-66 last night in the championship game of the Wolf Pack tournament at Reno.

Nevada-Reno (6-4) captured the title of its tournament despite a game-high 32 points from USD forward Mike Whitmarsh, who was voted the tournament's most valuable player. Whitmarsh also grabbed 16 rebounds.

The Toreros led 36-33 at halftime behind Whitmarsh's 20 points and 13 rebounds, but the Wolf Pack took a 41-39 lead with 16:14 to go and didn't trailed again.

USD (6-5) got as close as one point twice before succumbing.

Nevada-Reno was led by Rick Gosse's 21 points and nine rebounds. The Toreros got 11 points from center Scott Thompson, who was named to the all-tournament team.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN
DEC 31 1983

USD BASKETBALL The University of San Diego men's basketball team will host the University of Idaho Monday night in the Sports Center. Game time is 7:30 p.m. The Toreros are 6-5 on the year. They have won two of their last three.

January 1984

A-26 The San Diego Union

Sunday, January 1, 1984

Over-the-Hillers pick up speed on skis

There's a group of people who believe that "Once you're over the hill, you pick up speed."

So saying, they've formed the Over The Hill Gang Ski Team International, a ski club for persons 50 and over.

The group is headquartered in Colorado, but there is a San Diego area chapter headed by Gemma Parks in Solana Beach and Betty Peterson in La Jolla.

"I look forward to being part of this young and growing group," says Park, who is also editor of the San Diego newsletter, "Legendary."

One of the trips being planned is a week in Vail, Colo., this month. Members also receive discounts at Adventure Ski Schools and Grass Skiing here. Year-round events include fitness classes, sailing, tennis, golf and ballooning, rafting and cycling.

The club now has about 100 members, said Peterson, a real estate agent who founded it in November 1982. "We're busy people," she said. "We don't sit back."

Senior Scene

Other chapters have been organized in San Francisco, Chicago, and as far away as Australia.

Inquiries should be addressed to the Over The Hill Gang, Box 1113, Solana Beach, Calif. 92075. Or call 454-4969.

EDUCATION: The University of the Third Age, a special program offered by the University of San Diego for persons over 55, will begin its sixth year this Wednesday. The three-week program will be held Monday to Thursday through Jan. 19 beginning each day at 8:30 a.m. with a physical fitness class at the USD Sports Center followed by classes in the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing, Room 106. Registration is $45. Information and forms may be obtained by calling 293-4585.

The Institute for Continued Learning, an educational-cultural group for retirees, operated by its members under auspices of UCSD Extension, begins its winter quarter Jan. 9.

Classes cover subjects as varied as autobiographical writing, public speaking, art, theater, music, world affairs, investments and philosophy.

Those interested should call 452-3409.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 1 1984

Founders Gallery: University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 3 1984

Judith Turnbull Green, has been appointed director of personnel at the University of San Diego. Michael J. Kearney was named director of planned giving at the university.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JAN 5 1984

KayPro Corp. has donated 10 computers to the University of San Diego School of Law to assist in word processing and legal research needs of its faculty and administration and to establish a training center for students.

"No discipline involves more word processing than the legal profession and law schools all over the nation have been computerizing their operations," said Sheldon Krantz, dean of the law school.

"We are very thankful to KayPro for making it possible for us to meet this need."

KayPro also is providing training for the law school faculty and staff and working with the school to determine feasibility of joint venture software development for legal education and the practice of law.

Lillian Heller, marketing director, said KayPro is "committed to helping introduce computer technology in the educational system, not just for teaching and drilling but to help educators utilize technology to enhance creativity and productivity."

KayPro also has donated 30 computers to secondary schools in San Diego County and more than 200 in Orange County. Headquartered in Solana Beach, it has 600 employees in its regional offices in 13 cities.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 3 1984

PROGRAM/ The University of the Third Age at the University of San Diego is offering a three-week program for people 55 or older seeking intellectual stimulation and physical activity. The class is from 8:15 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Monday through Thursday, Jan. 4-19. Registration is $45. Call 293-4585.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 5 1984

TOM BLAIR

WE GET ITEMS: Environmental impact: Bob Coates, the USD environmental law professor, felt vaguely guilty celebrating New Year's Day with lunch at the Whaling Bar. But then, he says, he hosted a pair of Dolphins: Medevac owners Joe & Peggy. ... Phillip Weil, operator of Seaport Cruises' luxury yacht Jada, has added a new wrinkle to San Diego whale-watching. Passengers who bring along a blank VHS videotape on Weil's morning and afternoon excursions can record their adventures on his camera and recording equipment.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 2 1984

USD law school moving into computer age

The University of San Diego School of Law is in the process of computerizing its operation.

"Very few law schools in the country actually have taken steps to computerize," Professor Robert Fellmeth said. "Many are talking about it, but few have done it."

Fellmeth, who was given the responsibility of computerizing the school by Dean Sheldon Krantz, said the Kaypro Corp. of Solana Beach has donated 10 personal computers to the school for use by students.

"Already, 30 of our full-time faculty have purchased computers at a reduced price... as the first step in computerizing the entire school," he said.

"In time, we want to put a personal computer on the desk of each faculty and staff member, and in our library, and network them together. And the students themselves will have a bank of computers to use."

The company has donated 300 computers to secondary schools in San Diego County.

RANCHO SANTA FE TIMES

JAN 4 1984

Kaypro donates 10 computers

The University of San Diego School of Law has received a donation of 10 computers from Kaypro Corporation in Solana Beach to meet the word processing and legal research needs of its faculty and administration and to establish a training center for its students.

"No discipline involves more word processing than the legal profession," said Sheldon Krantz, dean of the USD School of Law. "Law schools all over the nation have been computerizing their operations. We are very grateful to Kaypro for making it possible for us to meet this need."

In addition to the donated computers, Kaypro is providing faculty and staff training and working with the Law School to determine the feasibility of joint venture software development for legal education and the practice of law. USD Law School faculty and staff have been able to purchase units at reduced prices.

SAN DIEGO NEWSLINE

JAN 2 5 1984

Offshore oil drilling and related issues will be the topic of a debate sponsored by the Environmental Law Society, USD School of Law. USD, Joseph P. Grace Courtroom, noon. Free. 461-9284.

LA MESA COURIER

JAN 5 1984

Do you know about the Pain Treatment Unit? It is an in-patient evaluation and treatment program located within the University of San Diego Medical Center.

According to the newsletter of the Institute for Research on Aging, chronic pain syndromes are a major national health problem affecting over 30 million Americans. Medically, chronic pain by definition has not been resolved by conventional interventions. The original medical problem often becomes an amalgam of medical and psychological difficulties which require a coordinated approach, usually beyond the scope of any single medical subspecialty.

Chronic pain invades all spheres of the patient's life. Self esteem is often diminished and depression develops.

At the medical center, the program combines the expertise of the departments of anesthesiology, neurosurgery, orthopedic surgery, internal medicine, physical medicine and psychiatry as well as allied health professions including physical therapy and behavioral psychology in diagnosing and aggressively treating chronic pain problems. The involvement of each specialist will be determined by the patient's presenting complaint, previous treatment and concurrent treatment by the referring physician. The Pain Unit nursing staff is highly experienced in the behavioral evaluation and treatment approaches.

All patients to the Pain Treatment Program must be physician-referred. Appropriate candidates are persons who have experienced pain for three months or longer without obtaining satisfactory relief from their pain by conventional medical

The San Diego Union

Tuesday, January 3, 1984

Tom Blair

SAN DIEGO SHUFFLE: At the dedication of Peterson Hall, a $14 million classroom building named for him, financier Bob Peterson was cited for $2.5 million in donations to the UCSD campus. In fact, beamed Chancellor Richard Atkinson, noting several large Peterson gifts to the Scripps Institution of Oceanography and Foundation for Ocean Research, "He's single-handedly responsible for giving UCSD the world's 13th-largest navy." And that, quipped foundation director Richard Seymour, "undoubtedly earns Bob a commission as commodore in the Scripps Navy." ... The Santa Fe Land Improvement Co. is proceeding apace with its Santa Fe Depot project. Workers from the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe were pulling up excess tracking this week; removal of warehouses and billboards and construction of a new rail line for Navy Pier will begin in a few weeks. ... USD's Jim Brovelli is considered a prime candidate for basketball coach at his alma mater, University of San Francisco. Brovelli, who's coached the Toreros for a decade, was inducted into USF's Hall of Fame a year ago. ... Hypnotist Michael Dean, whose association with one-time heavyweight champ Ken Norton went sour, is reported mulling an offer to co-manage undefeated middleweight James "The Heat" Kinchen.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

JAN 5 1984

Green assumes position at USD

Judith Turnbull Green, Ed.D., has been appointed director of personnel at the University of San Diego and will be responsible for policy administration and implementation affecting the university 650 employees.

Green has been on the staff of UCSD since 1977 in the capacities of personnel administration, student center director and assistant dean of Muir College. She assumes her new position Jan. 10.

JAN 5 1984

City showdown due tonight

Will the Mayor's Trophy have to be packed up and moved from Montezuma Mesa to Alcalá Park?
Will forward Mike Whitmarsh, an all-West Coast selection last season, outshine forward Michael Cage, a potential All-American?
Will USD beat San Diego State for the first time in five years?

Answers to these and other questions of burning interest on the local college basketball scene will be provided tonight at 7:30 in the Sports Arena when 7-5 USD plays the 8-3 Aztecs (KSDO 1130-AM).

"We'll have to control the boards or at least contain State there," said Jim Brovelli, now in his 10th year as the USD coach. "They're awfully big and strong under there. We'll have our work cut out."

"We'll just have to do what we do best," said Cage, one of four Aztecs whose scoring average is in double figures. "Play with our balanced attack and wear them down."

After beating Idaho State and Idaho, the Toreros should be rated No. 1 in the home of famous potatoes. But USD is more interested in being No. 1 in its own hometown. The Toreros have won four of their last five games, but winning this one could stir the awakening of an in-city rivalry that has long been dormant, despite the fact that heavily favored State has won the last two games by a total of just seven points.

Whitmarsh, a 6-foot-7 forward, is averaging 19.7 points and has led USD in scoring in eight games. The team, bigger and faster than in the recent past, is running more this year and has outshot and outrebounced its opponents while averaging 76 points per game.

The Aztecs are led by Cage, who is averaging 27.2 points and 14 rebounds, and are playing in their last game before opening their Western Athletic Conference season at seventh-ranked Texas-El Paso next Thursday.

—T.R. Reinman

S.D. BUSINESS JOURNAL

JAN 9 1984

The University of San Diego has received a $400,000 grant from the James Irvine Foundation in Newport Beach for the university's proposed $9.2 million University Center.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 17 1984

OPEN HOUSE/

The University of San Diego's Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing will hold an open house for registered nurses Thursday from 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Call Santa Carol Hougaard at 293-4578.

MORNING PRESS

JAN 11 1984

Man heard on radio about appointment

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Millionaire real estate developer William A. Wilson said he hadn't spoken to President Reagan yesterday, but heard on the radio that he had been named ambassador to the Vatican, as the U.S. established diplomatic relations with the Holy See for the first time in 117 years.

"This will not have an effect on foreign policy because our policy is formulated in the White House," Wilson told a news conference before making a scheduled speech at the University of San Diego, a private Catholic school.

Of his nomination, Wilson said simply, "I hope the Senate will approve it... This was quite a surprise to me and I'm very gratified with what I've heard on the news this morning."

Wilson, a longtime friend of Reagan and a trustee of the president's personal trust during his term in office, was appointed envoy to the Vatican in 1981.

William A. Wilson

Associated Press

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JAN 12 1984

Justice Stanley Mosk of the California Supreme Court and J. Skelly Wright, chief judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals, are to join the faculty of the University of San Diego law school in its European programs next summer.

Mosk is to teach in Dublin, where the program will concentrate on international human rights problems.

Judge Wright, who is widely known for administrative law decisions, will co-teach comparative administrative law in Paris with California Western professor Therese de Saint Phalle.

The USD institute, now in its 12th year, also offers summer programs in Mexico City on law of the Americas, Oxford on Anglo-American comparative law, London on international business transactions, and Russia and Poland dealing with socialist law and East-West trade.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 11 1984

Women offered management course

Management courses are traditionally taught by men and to men, according to Professor Johanna Hunsaker of the University of San Diego.

Feeling it's time for a change, Hunsaker will be offering a course on "Leadership Development for Women" at USD in the spring semester, which begins Jan. 25.

"Women now account for 93 percent of the enrollment gain in graduate management courses in the last five years," she said. "This course is designed to help women enter an organizational world still dominated by men."

Hunsaker, author of a new book, "Management Skills for Women: Strategies for Success," said she designed the course to give professional women a repertoire of skills needed for work-related situations.

Among the topics to be covered are team-building skills, career strategy planning, assertiveness training, conflict management and management theories.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 20 1984

IMMIGRATION LAWS/

Maurice C. Inman Jr., general counsel for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, will talk on the nation's immigration laws and related issues at noon Monday in the Joseph P. Grace Courtroom, University of San Diego School of Law. The session is open to the public and is free.

MORNING PRESS

JAN 20 1984

COMPUTER COURSE: The University of San Diego offers a computer course for North County educators, beginning at 4 p.m. Jan. 24 in the Palmquist School, 1999 California St., Oceanside. The course has been approved by the university's graduate school of education and is worth three semester units of credit. Registration takes place at the first class. Call 727-5999 for more information.

BLADE TRIBUNE

JAN 20 1984

Computer class offered

OCEANSIDE — The University of San Diego will hold a local class for North County educators who want to acquaint themselves with computers beginning Tuesday, Jan. 24, at the Palmquist School.

The class will run for the next seven consecutive Tuesdays. There will be lectures and discussion, as well as hands-on experience.

The course is the first in a three-part series which leads to a certificate of computer competence. It has been approved by the U.S.D. graduate school of education and is worth three semester units of credit. Registration takes place at the first class.

Call Dennis Garrahy at 727-5999 for more information.

SENTINEL

JAN 8 1984

USD gets computers from firm

The University of San Diego School of Law has received a donation of 10 computers from KayPro Corporation to meet the word processing and legal research needs of its faculty and administration and to establish a training center for its students.

"No discipline involves more word processing than the legal profession," said School of Law Dean Sheldon Krantz, "and law schools all over the nation have been computerizing their operations. We are grateful to KayPro for making it possible for us to meet this need."

In addition to the donated computers, KayPro is providing faculty and staff training and working with the Law School to determine the feasibility of joint venture software development for legal education and the practice of law. USD Law School faculty and staff have been able to purchase units at reduced prices.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 9 1984

ELSEWHERE

VATICAN ENVOY/ The presidential envoy to the Vatican, William A. Wilson, will speak Tuesday at 4:00 p.m. at the University of San Diego. The subject of the free lecture at the Joseph P. Grace Courtroom, USD School of Law, will be "Peace and Freedom as Observed from the U.S. Vatican Office."

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 11 1984

Vatican ambassador nominee in San Diego

from The Associated Press

William Wilson, nominated as U.S. ambassador to the Vatican, says the re-establishment of full diplomatic relations with the Holy See should strengthen America's ability to deal with oppressive regimes.

"From my position I see two world leaders fighting communism — the pope and the president," Wilson said Tuesday in an address to a group of law students at the University of San Diego, a private Catholic school.

A millionaire real estate developer who resides in suburban Bel-Air near Los Angeles, Wilson has served as President Reagan's special envoy to the Vatican since 1981. Reagan nominated Wilson to the ambassadorial post Tuesday, subject to senate confirmation, after deciding to resume formal relations with the Vatican following a break of 117 years.

Noting that Pope John Paul II is outspoken in his defense of democracy, Wilson said, "His Holiness is, in my opinion, a great statesman. He and others in the Vatican are also pragmatic and realize that peace without freedom is not the peace of which Christ spoke."

Wilson, 69, said formal relations with the Vatican, which were severed in 1867, were important because "the Vatican is not like any other sovereign state. It is only 200 acres, but its influence is immense."

"This president is heavily concerned with opposing communism. The pope is a world statesman who also feels the results of oppressive regimes."

Prior to Wilson's address, Dennis Howerton, who said he represented Americans

William Wilson

United For Separation of Church and State, passed out pamphlets claiming the action was a "cynical election year maneuver by a president who has been unable to deliver on his promises to the American Catholic hierarchy in the areas of tuition tax credits, abortion and school prayer. We decry this abominable disregard of the separation of church and state."

At an earlier news conference, Wilson said, "I have read carefully the First Amendment. I personally do not see a problem. This really makes official what has been unofficial."

CORONADO JOURNAL

JAN 19 1984

Vido named to Who's Who

Edward Vido, a resident of Coronado and student at the University of San Diego, is one of 49 USD students named to the 1984 "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

His selection recognizes him as being among the country's outstanding campus leaders.

Selection is based on academic achievement, community service, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential.

SD BUSINESS NEWS

JAN 16 1984

People Parade

Judith Turnbull Green, has been appointed director of personnel at the University of San Diego. She will be responsible for policy administration and implementation affecting the university's employees.

SD BUSINESS NEWS

JAN 16 1984

Leadership Development for Women is a course designed to help women entering the business world. Team-building skills, career strategy planning, assertiveness training, conflict management, politics, and management theories will be presented from a woman's point of view. USD, Mondays, 7:00 p.m.-9:50 p.m., starts Jan. 30. Info.: 293-6480.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JAN 20 1984

Off-shore oil drilling and related issues will be subject for a debate at noon Wednesday (Jan. 25) in Grace Courtroom at the University of San Diego School of Law. Admission will be free with the public invited.

Participants are to include Dr. Cedrick Garland of the family and community medicine unit at UCSD; John Ford, a member of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce energy committee; William Cox, vice president of the Western Oil & Gas Assn and Art Letter of Citizens on Off-Shore Leasing. Bernard Siegan, USD distinguished professor of law, will moderate.

Sheldon Krantz, law school dean, said the debate will provide an opportunity for the public and members of the legal profession to "hear four experts probe the crucial issues" confronting San Diego in off-shore oil tracts.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JAN 20 1984

The Graduate Tax Program of the University of San Diego School of Law has announced plans to present a major conference on revisions in the corporate income tax structure April 26 and 27 in the Hyatt Islandia Hotel.

Representatives said 20 tax authorities, many of whom played a significant role in formation of the corporate tax revisions, will discuss "the sweeping effects of the first recommendations for fundamental change in corporate taxation in more than three decades."

Agenda brochures may be obtained by writing Jeanne Schell, Continuing Education, Manchester Conference Center, University of San Diego, Alcalá Park, San Diego 92110.

SENTINEL

JAN 11 1984

USD Nursing School holds open house

The University of San Diego will hold an open house for registered nurses Jan. 19 in the Philip Y. Hahn School of Nursing.

The open house is designed to provide information regarding the fully accredited National League for Nursing B.S.N. and M.S.N. degree programs, and will run from 4:30 to 7 p.m.

Participants include Irene S. Palmer, dean of the school of nursing, nursing faculty members, students from various programs, and graduate and undergraduate student association representatives.

Guests will be provided with an opportunity to ask questions regarding the various programs. Refreshments will be served.

For more information, call Santa Carol Hougaard at 293-4578.

POWAY

NEWS-CHIEFTAIN

JAN 19 1984

In the classroom

Computers for educators

University of San Diego will hold a class for North County educators who want to learn about computers.

The class will begin Jan. 24 at 4 p.m. at Palmquist School in Oceanside and will last seven weeks.

The course will feature lecture and discussion as well as hands-on experience with the computer.

For further information, call Dennis Garrahy, 727-5999.

USD PROFESSOR'S VIEW

Americans keep politics secular

By Robert Di Veroli
Tribune Religion Writer

Church-state issues in the United States have never been as bitter or divisive as they have been in other countries, says Maimon Schwartzschild, professor of law at the University of San Diego.

Americans have, by and large, succeeded in keeping church-state strife to a minimum by creating a virtual secular political state, although as a people, they are far from secular, Schwartzschild said in a recent lecture before the Jewish Public Affairs Council.

"Separation of church and state is a problem in America is something like a dog that's never barked," Schwartzschild said.

"It has been not much of a problem over the years ... and all things considered, it's not terribly much of a problem nowadays. There just hasn't been much public strife about religion in this country."

Schwartzschild said one reason is that there have been few political divisions along clearly religious lines in the United States, as in Northern Ireland today.

"By and large, when we get a church-state question — the relation of religion to the government — the religious community tends to be divided about that, and that's been a fairly healthy reflection of the extent to which American politics have not become like, say, politics in Northern Ireland," he said.

"The remarkable thing is that while America has been a very successful secular political state, it's not a country in which people don't care about religion."

"It would be easy to be tolerant and secular if you

'Separation of church and state as a problem in America is something like a dog that's never barked' didn't care very much about religion, but that's never been the case in the United States. The first Americans came here because of their religious commitment, and ever since, this has been a country which takes religion very seriously.

"Polls show more Americans say they believe in God and, more importantly, church membership and church attendance are probably the highest in the Western world, so it's not a secular country in the sense of being a secular people. It is a country which has been politically secular, and pretty successfully so."

Schwartzschild said the courts have laid down three basic principles on church-state relations: Government must always act with a secular purpose, government should neither promote nor inhibit religion, and government should not become "too entangled" with religion.

"These three general principles have really worked very well over the years," Schwartzschild said. Schwartzschild said the courts have struck down state laws requiring school prayer, and although this is still a controversial issue, "to a surprising extent the actions of the courts in this area have gotten a pretty good consensus nationwide."

He said the religious community is divided over the issue of aid to parochial schools, with the courts permitting free textbooks and lunches to parochial school children, but forbidding tax breaks for parents of parochial school children or funds that could be used to advance religion.

Schwartzschild said abortion has also become a church-state issue, but that it is different in that not all the opposition to it is religious.

"There are a lot of very good secular reasons for being against abortion in the same way there are a lot of very good reasons for being against murder," Schwartzschild said.

Laws against murder echo the Fifth Commandment ("Thou shalt not kill"), but no one has ever challenged them on establishment grounds because there are secular reasons for such laws, Schwartzschild said.

"There are good secular reasons for having laws against abortion, too," he said. "There is at least a potential human being involved. There are questions of secular public morality, of the health of the mother involved. There are a lot of good nonreligious reasons such services could be seen as hindering the free exercise of religion because it would render churches less safe, Schwartzschild said.

"There's a kind of a tension, an antagonism between the two halves of the First Amendment, and that's been the basis for legal problems that affect separation of church and state," Schwartzschild said.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 2 2 1984

Founders Gallery: University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

JAN 2 2 1984

The world of computers

The University of San Diego will offer a local class for North County educators who want to familiarize themselves with computers. The class will be held at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Palmquist School, Oceanside. There will be a lecture, discussion and hands-on experience with the computer. This is the first in a three-part series which will lead to a certificate of computer competence. For more information, call Dennis Garrahy at 727-5999.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 2 5 1984

Offshore drilling to be debated

Offshore oil drilling and its environmental impact will be the topic of a public debate and discussion at the University of San Diego School of Law at noon today.

The program will take place in the law school's Joseph P. Grace courtroom. There is no admission charge.

Participating will be Cedric Garland, an epidemiologist and leader of a local anti-drilling group; John Ford, a member of the energy committee of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce; William Cox, vice president of the Western Oil and Gas Association; and Art Letter, a director of an anti-drilling group called Concern for Offshore Oil Leasing (COOL).

The debate is sponsored by the USD environmental law society.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

JAN 2 4 1984

Former La Mesa Ed Meese's designation as the next U.S. attorney general brought a flood of inquiries into his background at USD, where he founded the Center for Criminal Justice and is still retained on the faculty. "I wish he wouldn't have done this on a Monday," sighed Sara Finn, USD's spokeswoman.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 2 3 1984

Building boom hits university

New buildings are sprouting all over the campus at the University of San Diego.

In 1984, three major buildings, at a cost of $10.6 million, will be completed. And a fourth could get under way if a drive to raise the money reaches the $9 million mark. They represent probably the most ambitious construction programs ever attempted among San Diego's private universities.

Completion of the new Helen K. and James S. Copley Library and the Manchester Executive Conference Center is expected by early February. The new Olin Hall, which will house UCSD's School of Business, is scheduled for completion by July.

A fund drive is being conducted for the University Center, which will accommodate student and faculty dining rooms, a central lounge, student affairs offices and conference rooms.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 2 3 1984

John Kownacki of El Cajon is a student at the University of San Diego who was one of 49 USD students named to the 1984 Who's Who among Students in American Universities and Colleges. Selection for inclusion in Who's Who is based on academic achievement, community service, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential.

S.D. BUSINESS JOURNAL

JAN 2 3 1984

Michael J. Kearney has been appointed director of planned giving for the University of San Diego.

X-40 THE TRIBUNE

San Diego, Monday, January 23, 1984

EDUCATION

WORLD IN CHANGE — Dean Allan Bailey of SDSU's College of Business discusses career study plans with a student. The international scope of American businesses and San Diego's proximity to the Mexican border will have an impact on curriculum offered at San Diego's universities in the 1980s, local educators say. — Tribune photo by Don Bartlett

Business schools expand horizons

By Joseph Thesken
Tribune Education Writer

The international scope of American businesses will have a significant impact on course offerings at San Diego business colleges and universities in the next decade, school officials say.

Dean Allan Bailey of San Diego State University's College of Business Administration said it will be one of the major influences on the college's curricula.

"Business is becoming so international in scope that we'll see more integration of international issues in the entire curricula," he said.

"For example, at present we teach International Accounting, International Finance, International Marketing. They are isolated in separate courses. In time, they will be brought together."

"This trend is important to San Diego State because we are on an international border and multinational companies are a part of life here."

Bailey's prediction agrees with that of Dean David Feldman of United States International University's School of Business and Management.

"The biggest trend in business schools today and in the future is the international dimension of businesses," Feldman said.

"It's the hottest thing going. No longer is the emphasis limited to domestic corporations."

Feldman said USIU recognized the importance of the international aspect years ago. The school has established a master's of international business administration.

Harold Wells, dean of graduate studies at National University, said the university's recent opening of a new campus in San Jose, Costa Rica, is indicative of the university's emphasis on international business.

"We are sending down to the Costa Rica campus our faculty in international business who are bilingual, to teach courses in business administration," he said.

"In turn, we plan to bring up to our campus Costan Rican faculty members who are bilingual, so there will be a cross-fertilization of ideas between Costa Rica and here."

"So far, our university has chosen to concentrate on Latin America. But in the future I can see us going to the Far East and the Pacific."

The increasing role computers will play in business schools also was discussed by university officials.

"The integration of computers into actual coursework will be one of the major factors to be considered in the next five to 10 years," Bailey said.

"First they will be installed in technical areas of the School of Business Administration, then their use will spread through the entire university."

Computers are very much in the future for business students at the University of San Diego.

USD School of Business Dean James Burns said widespread use of computers will be inaugurated, once the new $4.5 million Olin Hall School of Business is completed by summer.

"We believe it will be the most progressive business school building in the United States," he said.

"There will be 100 personal computers, which will be linked to several minicomputers. We hope to place one computer in every classroom and one in every faculty office, in addition to 40 in our business laboratory for use by the students."

"Besides the computers, we will have the latest in audio-visual equipment, video tape recorders and a satellite receiving station to bring in any programs offered via satellite."

"I anticipate that personal computers will be used across the curricula in our school in the near future."

"Already, our students have a strong interest in computers. Our school has five required courses which include heavy use of computers."

At National University, computers have been around for years.

About 240 personal computers presently are in use by students at the university's Mission Valley, Vista, Irvine and Sacramento school sites.

"We have a wide variety of computer courses, everything from computer science to information systems," Wells said.

"In the early part of 1984 our school will be offering a new course in software engineering, dealing with the development of software."

The master's of business administration degree program, so popular a few years ago, is declining in popularity at SDSU, according to Bailey.

"Now we're seeing a resurgence of the master of science degree, with special emphasis on accounting, finance or marketing," he said.

Burns said the MBA program is peaking nationally, as well as at USD.

Please see BUSINESS, X-41

*Business

Continued from X-40

But it has continued to be popular at National University and USIU, school officials report.

Enrollment in San Diego business schools has increased steadily, despite the recent recession.

At USD, there has been a 250 percent increase in the past six years. In 1977, enrollment of undergraduate majors was 400; today it is 1,000. The school's master of business administration program had 145 students; today it has 360, Burns said.

"There has been a strong interest in business across the country," he said. "Here at USD, since we're a private university, we are more flexible and can deal with the needs of the students."

"Basically, we want to stabilize our undergraduate enrollment at its present level, and show a slow growth at the graduate level."

Both USIU and National University have tripled their enrollment since 1977.

SDSU's business school, the largest in the area, was severely overcrowded until two years ago, when the California State University system allowed it to limit the number of students admitted to the program.

"Prior to 1981-82, our college had 7,250 undergraduate business majors," Bailey said. "We reduced the number to 5,600 majors, which was too low. Now we have about 6,100 majors, which is where we'd like to keep it."

And the future continues to look promising for the county's business schools, with officials predicting that enrollment will hold steady, or show some gains, in the years leading to 1990.

ENTERPRISE

JAN 2 6 1984

USD offers Oceanography class for No. Co. educators

The University of San Diego has announced a class for local North County educators, entitled "Oceanography for the classroom teacher." The course will feature three weekends of lectures, field trips, and hands-on experiences.

The class is designed to give teachers a background knowledge as well as specific handouts for classroom use. The instructors, Barbara Moore and Lynn Bailey, have a combined 24 years of experience as teachers at Scripps Aquarium.

The course has been approved by the University of San Diego graduate school of education and is worth three semester units of credit. The first class and registration will take place on Friday, Jan. 27 at 6 p.m. at Vista High in Room D-20. For further details, call Dennis Garrahy, 727-5999.

HAZEL TOW

TRIBUNE SOCIETY EDITOR

THE ANNUAL DINNER of the President's Club of the University of San Diego of 1984 moved off campus temporarily but will be back at Alcalá Park next year. That was the assurance of Dr. Author E. Hughes, USD president, as he and Mrs. Hughes welcomed 210 members of the club and Maudsley Fellows of the USD Law School at Saturday night's black-tie party at Little America Westgate Hotel.

Traditionally the party has been given in the James S. Copley Library, a campus facility which is undergoing major expansion and will be dedicated April 8 as the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library. Mrs. Copley, publisher of The Tribune and The San Diego Union, is vice chairman of the USD board of trustees.

Harpist Elizabeth Adams entertained in the foyer during the reception hour and Mariachis del Sol played during dinner. Linc Ward, 1984 chairman of the President's Club Council, introduced Dr. Hughes for after-dinner remarks and he presented outgoing President's Club chairman Josiah Neepner and Mrs. Neepner with a Baccarat bowl with a plaque inscribed "In Grateful Recognition of Your Generous Support and Leadership."

Dr. Hughes also announced that a statue of St. Didacus, known as "the caretaker of people," had been commissioned and will be placed in front of the new library. The artist is Jesus Dominguez, member of the art department at San Diego State University.

Welcomed were the Maudsley Fellows, a support group for the law school named for the late Ronald H. Maudsley, distinguished British barrister who taught in the law school as well as at Oxford.

The Most Rev. Leo T. Maher, bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of San Diego and chairman of the USD board, presided at one of the dinner tables and Dr. Hughes at another. Seated with Bishop Maher were retired Rear Adm. and Mrs. Edward E. Grimm, Mrs. Harry Collins and the Messrs. and Mmes. Ernest W. Hahn, Edward T. Keating and Robert Taylor.

Seated with Dr. and Mrs. Hughes were Mr. and Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Jack L. Oatman, Legler Benbough, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Warren and Mr. and Mrs. C.R. Harmon. Another table group included Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Brown and the Messrs. and Mmes. Richard Erion, Charles Grace, Robert Brue and John Doyle.

Some others in the crowd were Sister Sally Furay, Sister Virginia McMonagle, Dr. and Mrs. William Pickett, Mrs. Lowell E. Davies, Mrs. William R. Boehm and the Messrs. and Mmes. Dean Dunphy, George Pardee Jr., Walter J. Zable, John McBride Thornton, Douglas Manchester and O. Morris Stevett.

Also, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Pavel, Dr. and Mrs. Cornelius Zondag, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Shillito, Mrs. Carlos Tavares and Thomas J. Fleming, Drs. Burt and Ethel Aginsky, Mr. and Mrs. S. Falck Nielsen and Mr. and Mrs. William Ward.

THEME OF THE 1984 KPBS AUCTION is "The San Diego Adventure" and chairmen are Mr. and Mrs. Craig McClellan. That was the word passed at the cocktail buffet Viviane Pratt gave at her home Friday in honor of the McClellans. Guests included staff and past chairmen of the auction, including Mr. and Mrs. Homer Delawie, chairman of the first auction to benefit the public broadcasting station located at San Diego State University.

Mr. McClellan is an attorney and a member of the board of the San Diego Trial Lawyers Association as well as a volunteer in various civic groups, including the Young Connoisseurs of the San Diego Museum of Art. His wife, Susan, has been a professional in the research and marketing of educational and business films and has assisted with the production of television programming through a cooperative project of KPBS and the Junior League of San Diego.

Party guests included station manager Paul Steen, Stephanie Bergsma, the station's manager of development, attending with husband, Dr. Alan Bergsma and Janet Jenkins, new auction director. Maggie Coleman, who recently retired as auction director was there with husband Jerry Coleman.

Other guests included retired Rear Adm. and Mr. W. Haley Rogers, Dr. and Mrs. Michael Channick, I. and Mrs. Ronald Heller and the Messrs. and Mmes. Richard Burt, William B. Rick, Ron Mix and Robert Kritzik.

Tom Fleming, left, chats with two of his guests, Emma and Jack Powell, at the Paris-Flores party.

George Pardee, left, with Dean and Marie Dunphy at the USD President's Club dinner Saturday night.

Scene Around Town ...

Paul Steen, right, makes a point during a chat with Ron and Patti Mix at the KPBS auction kickoff party.

Jo Carmichael congratulates Jean-Pierre Paris and Ella Isabel Flores at party honoring the soon-to-be-marrieds.

Hostess Viviane Pratt, center, with Susan and Craig McClellan at the KPBS auction planning party.

A University of San Diego President's Club dinner, a kickoff party for the 1984 KPBS auction and a dinner party to celebrate the forthcoming marriage of two members of the San Diego Consular Corps were among the week's social events.

Some 40 guests attended the dinner party Thomas J. Fleming gave for Ella Isabel Flores and Jean-Pierre Paris. The bride-elect is the honorary consul of Honduras and Paris is honorary consul of France. A Feb. 18 wedding date has been set by the couple.

The kickoff dinner for the 1984 KPBS auction, hosted by Viviane Pratt at her La Jolla home, included planning for the annual event. Craig and Susan McClellan are the 1984 KPBS auction chairmen.

The Versailles Ball Room of the Westgate Hotel was the setting for the University of San Diego President's Club dinner honoring club members and Maudsley Fellows. The black-tie event was hosted by Dr. Author Hughes, USD president, and Mrs. Hughes. A reception in the Versailles foyer preceded the dinner.

Ernest and Jean Hahn, left, and USD President and Mrs. Author Hughes enjoy a chat at USD President's Club dinner.

Tribune photos
by Bob Ivins

College and business join hands

By Richard Halstead

Business involvement in higher education graduated from war research in the 1960s to fund-raising in the 1970s.

Today, the role of business in education is shifting again, this time to a partnership.

On public and private university campuses in San Diego, throughout California and the rest of the nation, business is adopting a higher profile. Faced with increasingly sophisticated competition in the international marketplace, executives are awakening to the need for quality education to fuel the work force. They are calling for closer collaboration between business and universities and are backing up their renewed interest with dollars, donations of equipment and their time.

At the private University of San Diego, for example, President Author Hughes has formed a high-powered board of trustees, nearly all of whom are business executives. Not only do they provide substantial financial contributions to the institution, they also assist Hughes in shaping USD's future.

"It would be myopic not to use those people and garner information that relates to their expertise," reasons Hughes.

Sunkist Growers and PMC Corp. donated orange juice plant equipment valued at $386,000 for plant and science study at California State Polytechnic University at Pomona. The university also reports a "town and gown" relationship with General Dynamics and Lockheed Corp., whose employees serve as part-time lecturers in their areas of expertise.

UCLA has received a fat donation of $2.2 million worth of equipment for computer-aided design and manufacturing from IBM since 1982.

Perhaps the most dramatic example of business melding its interests with academia is the Center for Integrated Systems at Stanford University. Funded by the federal government, the university and business, the center will be a research hub designed to maintain U.S. technological leadership in the computer field. A total of 19 companies have each donated $750,000 toward the center's building, now under construction on Stanford's Palo Alto campus and expected to be finished this spring. These companies will also fund research at the center, to which the government will contribute a whopping $30 million annually in research funds.

Total corporate donations at Stanford last year climbed to $24.6 million, quite a change from the $5.3 million the university received from business in 1974-75.

In the Bay Area, a host of high-tech companies have contributed money to universities. Last year, Avantek shelled out $150,000 for a scholarship fund at Stanford; Verbatim Corp. gave $180,000 toward faculty salaries at four different universities; and AMI/Gould plunked down $167,000 to aid professorships at the University of Santa Clara.

continued on page 6

Meanwhile, Gov. George Deukmejian's decision to make education his top budget priority by recommending $13.3 billion be spent during the next fiscal year to bolster California's weakened school system has been applauded by educators and business executives alike.

California, once renowned for its excellent public schools and universities, has lived on its reputation for some time. Educators have been complaining for years about inadequate salaries for teachers and ballooning class sizes.

Ecstasy best describes the initial reaction of educators to the governor's news. "If approved by the legislature, the budget will be a major turning point in the university's history," said University of California President David P. Gardner.

California State University Chancellor Ann Reynolds was equally rapt. "The 1984-85 budget is the most positive funding proposal for the university in several years," she remarked. The $5 billion budgeted for the University of California system would allow faculty salaries to be raised 16 percent. The $1.8 billion proposed for the 19-campus California State University system would rise faculty salaries by 10 percent.

The University of California at Berkeley had fallen thousands of dollars behind the schools it competes with for top faculty, said Ray Miles, dean of the business school at UC Berkeley.

USD's Hughes: 'New arrangements'

ary by the Center for Public Resources in New York indicates that businesses are becoming more aware of deficiencies in the basic skills of employees. The study, commissioned by the Ford Foundation, the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation, American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Prudential Insurance Co., Gannett Co. Inc. and Sun Chemical Co. found that industry is being handicapped by a workforce that lacks adequate skills in reading, writing, mathematics and science.

Berkeley has always operated at a slight financial disadvantage to other schools but the gap had grown so wide recently that neither the school's excellent reputation nor its beautiful climate could overcome it, Miles said. The proposed increases will put Berkeley "back in the ball game" but the university will remain at a slight disadvantage.

"The most damaging thing that could happen is if legislators next year say, 'They got all they needed last year,' worries Miles.

National statistics released this month by the U.S. Department of Education revealed how low California had sunk in its rankings among other states in public school education.

The numbers showed that one-third of California's high school students dropped out before graduating. That shouldn't be surprising since the state has the second highest teacher to student ratio in the nation. Only five other states spend less per capita on schools than California where 19 percent of total individual income went to education, the department found.

California spends $2,427 per pupil. That is $300 less per pupil than the national average and places the state behind 21 other states.

Normally business isn't concerned with the performance of lower levels of education. It is more directly dependent on quality graduate students emerging in the fields of electrical engineering, computer science and biotechnology.

However, a study conducted last Febru-

Of the 184 companies responding to the study, 50 percent said their employees could not perform mathematical problems involving fractions or decimals. Half also said their managers and supervisors could not complete reports without making errors in grammar or spelling. Forty percent complained that secretaries had difficulty reading at the level required for their jobs.

The study also found that education had become a priority issue for American industry only recently due to stiffer competition from other nations.

"The increasing competitiveness of the international high-tech marketplace has led business to realize that ties with universities are essential to economic competitiveness with countries such as Japan, West Germany and France," said Bruce Darling, University of California at San Diego's vice chancellor for university relations.

One recommendation made in the study by educators and businessmen alike was that companies become more involved in the development of curriculum.

Miles said this belief is particularly popular among those critical of the current crop of MBAs. Many people are suggesting that business schools should put more emphasis on production techniques and other basic issues and reduce the focus on esoteric analysis, he notes. They say we're producing elitists with overdeveloped expectations for instant success," he adds.

But Miles noted that educational institutions can't afford to simply mirror current trends. It is the job of educators to lead, not follow, he points out. However, he does foresee a dramatic change in business education coming soon. Just as the '50s and '60s focused on plant layout, the '80s and '90s will concentrate on the management of high-technology systems, he predicts.

"It's where you draw the line — and the line changes over the years," explains Allan Bailey, dean of the School of Business Administration at San Diego State University (SDSU). "There will be faculty/business dialogues about curriculum; we're always talking about the line dividing business and the university, and it's an open and healthy discussion."

Bailey's involvement with the business community is through a 21-member business school advisory group, comprised mostly of business executives. But he also helped organize an entrepreneurial management center at SDSU, which to date has raised $20,000 to help pay faculty salaries and research and curriculum development — all dealing with entrepreneurial concepts.

"Business wants more involvement in education; executives are increasingly recognizing that," offers Red Baumer, vice president of Equidon, an Irvine-based firm and developer of the 2.2 million-square-foot Wateridge business park under construction in Sorrento Valley. Wateridge is targeting high-tech users as tenants, so Baumer and his colleagues have joined forces with educators at nearby UCSD.

Last year, UCSD received more than $120 million from the federal government for basic research, ranking it sixth among the nation's colleges.

A survey of California's 500 largest publicly traded companies conducted by Stanford Research Institute and California Business magazine found that three-quarters of the 106 chief executive officers who responded supported tax increases to help improve schools. Ninety percent wanted to see attention paid to improving students' attitude toward hard work.

Nothing has contributed more to focusing attention on California's educational system than the state's failure to attract the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. to San Diego. MCC is a pioneering, high-tech research and development consortium formed by 12 of the nation's leading corporations — Control Data, Digital Equipment, Honeywell and National Semiconductor among them.

Last December, MCC was searching for a home for its research center and San Diego was selected as one of four finalists nationwide. MCC eventually settled on Austin, Texas, leaving California politicians and businessmen to ponder why the Golden State took a back seat. The heated discussion that ensued brought Lt. Gov. Leo T. McCarthy before the Assembly Select Committee on Job Development and Economic Productivity.

McCarthy testified that the state's beleaguered educational system was one of the major reasons MCC rejected San Diego in favor of Austin. "The lesson we must learn from the loss of MCC is that in order to avoid similar losses in the future, California needs to recommit itself to the quality of our public university and school systems."

The boom in high technology and the increased need for skillful business management has made it even more difficult to attract top-flight faculty. Over the next five years, the American Electronics Association of Palo Alto estimates there will be 197,662 openings for electrical engineering and computer science graduates. But U.S. universities will only produce 84,256 qualified applicants, leaving a $113,500 shortfall. Few universities can compete with the wages offered by industry for qualified personnel.

Businesses are faced with a dilemma. They must hire the very best personnel available to remain competitive but unless they replenish their supply of engineers and scientists they will eventually suffer from brain drain.

The AEA's Electronics Education foundation tries to soften the blow by donating money to the educational system to supplement faculty salaries and buy new equipment. The foundation has raised $3.2 million so far, not to mention an additional $800,000 in pledges. In addition, individual donations since 1981 amount to $149 million, said Jeff Parienti, an AEA spokesman. IBM alone donated $50 million, he noted.

The AEA is currently pushing legislation — HR 4475 in the House and 82165 in the Senate — which would encourage industry to give even more to universities by making donations tax deductible. Referred to as the High Technology Research and Education Act, the legislation would also extend tax credits for industrial research and development which ends in 1985.

The sections involving education would give corporations a 25 percent tax credit for higher levels of donations for basic research; provide graduate students financial incentives for teaching after graduation; and reimburse corporations for donating computers to schools.

The Semiconductor Research Corp., a subsidiary of the Santa Clara-based Semiconductor Industry Association, will double the amount of money it gives to universities this year to $3 million from about $1.5 million last year. Nearly 200 graduate students are employed through the program, said Dr. Robert Berger, SRC's assistant director of research programs.

However, research funded by SRC must have some practical applications for its 25 member companies, which retain exclusive rights to all patents.

The social sciences, too, benefit from corporate giving. An example: Getty Oil Co. contributed funds to University of California at Los Angeles Center for International and Strategic Affairs to be used for research and conferences. "They recognize the need to study arms control, disarmament, regional stability and security problems of developing countries and super powers," said Raymond L. Orbach, UCLA's provost of the College of Letters and Science.

Every university department has industry donors contributing unrestricted funds for research and instruction, he added. The chemistry department alone has 17 companies as donors.

"This enables us to fund special programs, such as seminars, which we couldn't do otherwise," Orbach said. Frequently the dollars from business bring expert speakers to the campus.

Especially important in the 1980s are donations for endowed faculty positions, chairs, scholarships and program costs, said James R. Appleton, vice president for development at the University of Southern California. "Fortunately, we see corporations sophisticated enough to value all of these. They don't limit their giving to bricks and mortar but go on to support quality teaching, good research and tuition supplements."

Also contributing to this report on the new business/education partnership were Gertrude Lieblich, Los Angeles Business Journal staff writer, and Bill Ritter, San Diego Business Journal editor.

Los Angeles Times

JAN 29 1984

San Diego On VIEW

Send-off for March on Birth Defects

The 1984 Mothers March on Birth Defects received an intriguing send-off in the form of a party in honor of the 101st birthday of the March of Dimes founder, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. F.D.R. liked to get the annual March of Dimes campaign rolling by tossing a birthday ball—his birthday is Jan. 31. This year, the march in San Diego has 6,500 volunteer marchers and they are looking for $6,500. The march ends today.

Lois Kolender, wife of Police Chief Bill Kolender, and Linda Duffy, wife of Sheriff John Duffy, presided over an afternoon party at the Balboa, a retirement home where they stuffed 8,000 kits for volunteers. Anita Sgobba, wife of Marshal Michael Sgobba, was on the committee, giving the proceedings a distinctive law-enforcement aura.

The agenda included music from the '40s by the Paul Sims Trio and a show of '40s fashions from Wear It Again Sam, coordinated by Susan Clifton of Hollywood South Productions and aptly modeled by a group including Ashley Gardner of Channel 39.

Among the guests were committee workers such as Ken and Bennie O'Brien, Charlene Doran and Stella Diaz, volunteers such as Alice and Harry Paisin and Fran Ellis; and Al Gabbs, Mary Mueller, Bill Adams, the Robert Swishers and Donna Hughes from the board.

University of San Diego President Art Hughes and his wife, Marge, moved their annual President's Club dinner from its usual location in the James S. Copley Library on campus to the Westgate Hotel downtown. About 200 of the university's key contributors attended, among them the Ernest Hahns, the Josiah Neepers (he was honored for his year as chairman of the group), the Barry Shillitos and Darlene Davies, who was escorted by Father Leo Lanphier.

The USD library has been dismantled to make room for construction of the new enlarged Helen K. and James S. Copley library. If you like dedication ceremonies, it will be dedicated April 8.

Sunday, January 29, 1984

The San Diego Union D-7

By Janet Sutter
Staff Writer

of ceremonies. Tickets are $15 if bought in advance, $20 at the door.

There are chapters of Epsilon Sigma Alpha in Holland, Guam, Germany, Denmark, Peru, Australia, Mexico and here. The San Diego Gamma Chapter will sponsor "Spring Is in the Air" Saturday — that's a show of fashions from Clairemont Square. It will begin at 11 a.m. at Hanalei Hotel. The major project of the chapter this year is "Services for Battered Women and Children," so proceeds will go toward the YWCA/Battered Women's Services. These include a hot line, emergency residence and other support services. Tickets are $15; call Rosie (Mrs. Ngip) Mah.

It will be "Education Day" Feb. 7 for members of six chapters of Hadassah, the programs to take place at Congregation Beth-El in La Jolla. At 10 a.m. Dr. Aaron V. Cicourel, UCSD professor, will speak on "From Ghetto to Modern City: Aspects of Sephardic Jewish Community Life in Morocco and Spain." After lunch, Hadassah national board member Ruth Kaslove will talk about "New Dimensions for Hadassah and the Jewish Woman." For further information and transportation, call Sylvia (Mrs. Harold) Margolis or Marcella (Mrs. Harry) Gevinson in North County or Susan (Mrs. Michael) Naiman, Bert (Mrs. Morris) Friedkin or Ella (Mrs. Al) Poland.

A "Scholarship Grand Slam" is the title of the luncheon and card party of University of San Diego's Friends of Music tomorrow at 11 a.m. at Bahia Hotel. The annual benefit raises money for music students.

The new president of Washington and Lee, John D. Wilson, will be in town Feb. 17, and will speak to the Washington and Lee Alumni Chapter at a dinner and reception at La Valencia. Alumni, students and parents may call John D. Klinedinst for further information.

Start stitching! The "Needlework Classic" is scheduled for March 31 to April 8, and entry deadline is March 1. It's sponsored by the Doctors' Wives Unit of the Auxiliary to Scripps Memorial Hospital — La Jolla as a benefit for the hospital. It is also at the hospital, open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day of the classic. Needlework categories are: canvas work, counted thread work on canvas, counted thread work on fabric and surface embroidery. To enter, call Rebecca (Mrs. William W.) Bradbury.

The big KPBS Auction 15 will be called "The San Diego Adventure" this year, and it will be June 3-9, with Craig and Susan McClellan as chairmen.

Point Loma Assembly will celebrate the organization's 72nd birthday with a luncheon at 11:30 a.m. Thursday at the clubhouse on Talbot, with a program by the Sweet Adelines. All former members and interested women are invited. Call D.J. Rozean for reservations.

LA JOLLA LIGHT Thursday, January 26, 1984 B3

University of San Diego President and Mrs. Arthur Hughes greeted guests at the annual President's Club dinner, held this year at the Westgate Hotel. The event honors President Club members and Maudsley Fellows.

Marge Hughes (top row, from left) greeted guests who included Betsy Manchester, Jo and George Fletcher, Morris and LaWanda Sievert, Tom Fleming with Claire Tavares and Bishop Leo T.

Maher, Doug Manchester (bottom row, from left) and Trudy Pearlman with Sara Finn. President Arthur Hughes (bottom right) hosted the USD dinner.

Photos by Dana Fisher

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
San Diego Newswire
(Cir. W. 15,000)

JAN 25 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Offshore oil drilling and related issues will be the topic of a debate sponsored by the Environmental Law Society, USD School of Law. USD, Joseph P. Grace Courtroom, noon. Free. 461-9284.

MORNING PRESS

JAN 29 1984

OCEAN STUDY: The University of San Diego announces a class for local North County educators, entitled "Oceanography for the Classroom Teacher," starting at 6 p.m. Jan. 27 in Room D-20 of Vista High School, 400 E. Bobier Dr. The course is worth three semester units of credit. Call 727-5999 for information.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 27 1984

UCSD MUSIC: A luncheon and card party to benefit music education at the University of San Diego will begin with a social hour at 11 a.m. Monday at the Bahia Hotel, W. Mission Bay Drive, San Diego. Cost for the social hour is $15 and lunch is $60 per table. There will also be a fashion show. Call or 295-7998 for more information.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 30 1984

Toreros buck the Broncos in a WCAC upset

By Mike Mathison
of The Daily Californian

A standing room only crowd showed up Saturday night at the University of San Diego Sports Center.

No, there wasn't a local concert in town that you didn't hear about. It was a basketball game. One of the biggest basketball games in years for the Toreros.

The University of San Diego put on a show for the 2,030 who packed the gymnasium. The Toreros' brand of basketball on this night against Santa Clara University in a key West Coast Athletic Conference (WCAC) rocked the visiting Broncos out of this town.

The Toreros used assists by Mike Whitmarsh, two key free throws by Anthony Reuss, a combined 21 rebounds by the duo, and the loud sixth man to buck Santa Clara 69-62. The win puts USD at 2-1 in WCAC activity. The Broncos fell to 2-2. St. Mary's leads the pack at 3-0. Pepperdine is tied for second with USD.

"That was a good win," Reuss understated after the Toreros won their 10th home contest in 12 starts.

Whitmarsh hit one of two free throws to put USD up 62-58 with 4:02 unplayed. The Toreros didn't score again for another 3:05. USD was in a delay offense where head coach Jim Brovell wanted nothing by layups. Freshman center Scott Thompson missed the front ends of two one-and-one situations in that span.

With 57 seconds showing USD junior guard Mark Bostic sank two free throws for a 64-62 lead. Santa Clara's Harold Keeling missed a shot the next time down the floor but was fouled by Reuss in a scramble for the ball. Keeling was at the line with 27 seconds left shooting a one-and-one.

"I wouldn't have wanted to be Harold Keeling at the line," Reuss said. "It was so loud in here I had just a little buzzing in my ear."

Keeling missed. Reuss rebounded and was fouled. Santa Clara then called a timeout.

"I just kept thinking to myself in the huddle that this was just like practice," Reuss said. "I don't miss them in practice so I shouldn't miss them in a game. I put the crowd out of my mind. Even though they were for us they could still have made a little difference. I just knew they (the free throws) were going down."

The Toreros had four players in double figures. Whitmarsh led them with 16. Reuss and Bostic each added 12 and Chris Carr, who capped the evening perfectly with a slam dunk, had 10. Whitmarsh doled out seven assists. Reuss grabbed 12 rebounds and Whitmarsh had nine.

"That was a helluva game wasn't it?" Whitmarsh said with a smile. "Wasn't that crowd great. That sixth man really helps. That was a very big game for us. If we would have lost we might have been down going on the road next weekend in Los Angeles. We've lost so many close games. And I've seen this team lose so many other close games when my brother (Rusty) was playing here. I think we've turned it around. This team is for real."

The Toreros play six of their final nine conference contests away from the friendly Sports Center. USD will visit Loyola-Marymount Friday evening and Pepperdine Saturday. Both are 7:30 p.m. starts. The Toreros are 1-5 on the road thus far. They are 11-7 overall.

"Two wins in conference is great for us," Reuss said. "This game should give us that much more confidence on the road. But it hasn't worked like that for us yet. Now we're beginning to see just how serious this is. Maybe that will make a difference on the road."

SPORTS

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 3 1984

Whitmarsh honored

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — University of San Diego forward Mike Whitmarsh and Gonzaga University guard John Stockton were named basketball players of the week yesterday by the West Coast Athletic Conference.

Whitmarsh, a senior from San Diego, was named most valuable player in the Wolf Pack Classic in Reno last week.

Stockton, a senior from Spokane, led Gonzaga to a third-place finish in last week's Far West Classic, in which he was named most valuable player.

Saturday, January 28, 1984

The San Diego Union C-5

7-foot-1 receiver key to Santa Clara's passing attack

By Bruce Schoenfeld
Staff Writer

Nick Vanos, who plays basketball the way Todd Christensen plays football, has soared among the scoring leaders of the West Coast Athletic Conference this season by catching passes.

Some pointmakers produce by driving inside for layups. Others ring up baskets with long jumpers from the baseline. Vanos, Santa Clara's 7-foot-1 center, loves to post up high with his back to the basket and call for the ball. Point guard Steve Kenilvort plays Jim Plunkett and gets it to him, usually with a looping pass over a smaller opponent. And Vanos nearly always hangs on.

"He's got exceptionally good hands," said Santa Clara coach Carroll Williams, who brings his club to the USD Sports Center to face the 10-7 Toreros at 7:30 tonight. "And once he gets the ball, he's got a nice spinning jump shot."

Which is fortuitous, because Vanos isn't as powerful as a lot of 7-footers. He's listed at 255 pounds, but if the wiry junior were forced to rely on his power game, Santa Clara wouldn't be 14-5 with 12 victories in its last 14 games. This is not to deny the excellence of Bronco guard Harold Keeling, fourth in the WCAC with a 16.7-point average, or forward Scott Lamson. But the Toreros have seen hot-shooting guards and persistent small forwards. A 7-footer with a mean turn-around jumper is something new.

"What makes him most effective is that he has an extra-soft touch," said USD coach Jim Brovelli. "He's a big guy who can score. It's very, very difficult to deny him the ball, because he's so big."

Vanos is fifth in the league in scoring with a 16.1 average and second in rebouncing with a 9.3 average. He leads the WCAC with 42 blocked shots. He has been named the league's top player two of the last three weeks.

"We're basically a share-the-wealth team," said Williams, "but we like to search the post and if something's there, we'll go to it."

Something, meaning Vanos, is usually there.

Except Thursday night at St. Mary's. The Gaels' Ken Jones held Vanos to eight points and five rebounds to help pull off an 81-68 upset.

"Some nights they can shut him down and other guys can pick up the slack," said Williams. "St. Mary's shut everyone down."

Brovelli was pleased to see the Gaels stop Vanos with a tight man-to-man defense, especially since he had planned to go heavy on the man-to-man tonight. Unfortunately, his starting center, 6-11 freshman Scott Thompson, will be slowed if not completely stopped with a broken toe. Mario Coronado, a 6-9 sophomore, will start and probably go most of the way.

"We'll probably mix it up a little, man-to-man and zone," said Brovelli. "I felt that Vanos was really going to be crucial if we could control him, and I thought Scott Thompson would help because he has the size. Now we'll have to start Mario. But Mario did play him last year."

Coronado started 10 conference games as a freshman last season, including the Toreros' 79-64 loss at Santa Clara. In that game, Vanos scored 15 points and had seven rebounds; Coronado did not score.

Still, Coronado is confident he'll be able to handle Vanos tonight.

"We've been working on the man-to-man in practice, and that's what we'll be playing," said Coronado, averaging 1.5 points and 1.2 rebounds a game spelling Thompson this season.

"I really think that Vanos doesn't play well facing the basket. I have to get good position on him."

Mike Whitmarsh continues to lead the Toreros with an 18.5-point average and 7.9 rebounds a game — both good for third in the conference.

"But he can't do it alone; that's too much of a load to put on his shoulders," said Brovelli.

Anthony Reuss is second in scoring at 11.6, and Mark Bostic is third at 11.1.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 3 1984

WHITMARSH HONORED

Led by 6-foot-7 senior forward standout Mike Whitmarsh, the vandalized University of Idaho 92-64 Monday night in the Toreros' Sports Center. Whitmarsh had a seven assists as USD raised its record to 7-5. He also grabbed seven rebounds. Earlier he was named the week for his performances in last week's Wolfpack Classic in Nevada. Anthony Reuss hauled in a game-high 11 rebounds and scored 17 points in Monday's game.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

JAN 3 1984

Basketball:

Whitmarsh paces USD

Mike Whitmarsh recorded game highs of 26 points and 7 assists and Anthony Reuss added career highs of 17 points and 11 rebounds as the University of San Diego beat Idaho, 92-64, in a nonconference basketball game Monday night at USD. The Toreros have won six of seven games at home this season to raise their overall record to 7-5. Idaho dropped to 5-5.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 6 1984

It was one of those nights the Toreros would like to forget

By Mike Mathison
Of The Daily Californian

Let's just say the University of San Diego men's basketball team has had better days.

"We played our worst game of the year," Torero coach Jim Brovelli said after watching his troops get whipped by San Diego State 61-47 Thursday night in the Sports Arena. "We were beaten soundly."

True. The Aztecs took a 23-12 lead with 9:45 left in the first half off a Michael Kennedy slam and the Toreros never threatened after that. San Diego State is 9-3. USD, which hosts Western Illinois Saturday night at 7:30, fell to 7-6.

The Toreros' East County connection of senior Mike Whitmarsh and junior Anthony Reuss, both 6-foot-7 forwards, will not put this game into their respective family scrapbooks.

Whitmarsh scored 16 points, grabbed five rebounds, dished out four assists, had three steals, shot eight of nine from the free throw line and played 39 minutes. All were team-highs. That was the good stuff.

The bad stuff was he shot a miserable four of 19 from the floor and had a handful of his shots blocked by the taller and more physical Aztecs. Whitmarsh was intimidated on the offensive end.

"I really was," he said. "I got a few of my shots blocked and that made me change some other shots. I haven't really gone up against guys that big this year. I should have played straight up I was trying to get the contact and the three-point play."

"I knew what to expect tonight. They had the same guys last year. I just couldn't get it going tonight. It (having a bad game) happens, unfortunately it got me tonight."

"I'd like to play this one over. It's going to be kind of hard getting to sleep tonight. We didn't give them a good game. Maybe the fans should get half their money back because only one team came to play — and unfortunately it wasn't us."

Even with the bad night, Whitmarsh still got a nice compliment from San Diego State's all-America forward Michael Cage.

"Make sure you say this about Mike Whitmarsh," Cage said. "I have nothing against him personally. I think he's a great ball player. I wish him and his team the best of luck this season. I think he could end up playing in the NBA."

Not only did Whitmarsh have a bad night, so did the Toreros' team.

Reuss played 24 minutes. He scored eight points and had just two rebounds. Reuss was three of eight from the floor and two of five from the line. He picked up his second foul 4:57 into the contest and sat the rest of the first half.

"Speaking for myself, I wasn't intimidated by them," Reuss said. "The first half was the worst half we have had all year. People weren't moving on defense. It was just like the offense, everyone was standing around in the first half."

USD From 1B

"In the second half we went out and knew what we had to do. We got some improvement and executed in the second half. But we had zero execution in the first half. We lost our heads."

Brovelli pointed to the defense which caused the problems early in the game.

"We were trying to prevent Cage from getting the ball, and we were trying to trap down on him when he got it," Brovelli said. "But we didn't have a chance to do that in the first 10 minutes because he got the ball where he wanted. We were out of position. We did a very poor job defensively."

"We changed our normal style of play from the beginning. You can call it intimidation. I call it a lack of concentration. We were standing around on the defensive end. Once we got behind we were trying to hurry out shots. We got behind eight points and started rushing. One guy took a bad shot, then another guy took a bad shot. It was a snowballing effect."

"It wasn't a game," he concluded, "we didn't make it one."

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 3 1984

TOREROS CRUISE — Forward Mike Whitmarsh was named West Coast Athletic Conference co-player of the week yesterday and then went out and scored a game-high 26 points last night to lead the University of San Diego to a 92-64 non-conference basketball win over Idaho at the USD Sports Center. Whitmarsh, a 6-foot-7 senior from Monte Vista High School via Grossmont College, hit 11 of 14 shots from the field and four of five free throws. He also grabbed seven rebounds and handed out seven assists. The Toreros increased their record to 7-5 while tuning up for Thursday night's match with San Diego State at the Sports Arena.

An indication of how much the Toreros have improved was the way they dismantled the University of Idaho, 92-64, before a crowd of about 300.

Part of that improvement can be traced to the play of Scott Thompson, the 6-11 freshman who replaced Coronado.

"Thompson is improving with every game," Coach Jim Brovelli said. "He's coming along real well."

But Thompson didn't single-handedly beat Idaho (5-5) with his 10 points and nine rebounds. All-West Coast Athletic Conference forward Mike Whitmarsh scored 26 and Mark Bostic added 18. Forward Anthony Reuss had 17 points and 11 rebounds.

"We played good defense in the first half," said Brovelli, whose team is off to its quickest start since joining Division I. "Bostic played real well. Whitmarsh played well as always. Reuss is really taking off on the boards. He's getting everything that's in the air."

USD took the lead for good three minutes into play on a Bostic field goal and continually increased the margin, mounting a 42-25 halftime advantage. Bostic, a guard who had 10 first-half points, scored on a dunk off a fastbreak with 12:42 remaining in the half to give USD a 20-11 advantage, prompting Idaho Coach Bill Trumbo to call a timeout.

It didn't help. Another Bostic field goal plus four

Los Angeles Times JAN 3 1984

Things Change for the Better for Toreros USD Rolls Past Idaho, 92-64, and Sets Up Clash Against Aztecs

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—One indication of how much things have changed for the University of San Diego basketball team since its season opener is that 6-9 Mario Coronado, who was the original starting center, didn't get into Monday night's game at the Sports Center until a mere 2:50 remained.

Idaho was led by Freeman Watkins, who scored 16 points, and Stan Arnold, who had 11.

USD will really get to see how improved it really is on Thursday night when it faces city rival San Diego State (7-3) at the Sports Arena.

USD (7-5) hasn't beaten San Diego State since the 1976-77 season, when USD played in Division 2. The Toreros, a Division I team since the 1979-80 season, take their strongest team ever into the game against the Aztecs.

For one upperclassman, the next game is the big one. "If we don't win another game this year I want us to win this one," Whitmarsh said.

However, Brovelli isn't as adamant about the San Diego State game.

"I'm really glad we're playing well because our conference schedule starts in two weeks," Brovelli said. "State is an excellent team. (Forward Michael) Cage is an all-American; as fine a basketball player as we will see. We'll need a total team effort to win."

Whitmarsh said USD will likely use a zone defense against the Aztecs since no one player can handle Cage.

USD has three new players in the starting lineup since last season when it lost to SDSU by two points. Besides Thompson and Bostic, there's junior college transfer guard Chris Carr, who finished with three points by Reuss staked USD to a 26-13 lead with seven minutes left. Brovelli used four substitutes in the late minutes of the first half, but the advantage still climbed to 17, which illustrated the strength of the Toreros' bench.

Idaho was led by Freeman Watkins, who scored 16 points, and Stan Arnold, who had 11.

USD will really get to see how improved it really is on Thursday night when it faces city rival San Diego State (7-3) at the Sports Arena.

USD (7-5) hasn't beaten San Diego State since the 1976-77 season, when USD played in Division 2. The Toreros, a Division I team since the 1979-80 season, take their strongest team ever into the game against the Aztecs.

For one upperclassman, the next game is the big one. "If we don't win another game this year I want us to win this one," Whitmarsh said.

However, Brovelli isn't as adamant about the San Diego State game.

"I'm really glad we're playing well because our conference schedule starts in two weeks," Brovelli said. "State is an excellent team. (Forward Michael) Cage is an all-American; as fine a basketball player as we will see. We'll need a total team effort to win."

Whitmarsh said USD will likely use a zone defense against the Aztecs since no one player can handle Cage.

USD has three new players in the starting lineup since last season when it lost to SDSU by two points. Besides Thompson and Bostic, there's junior college transfer guard Chris Carr, who finished with three the most disappointed people were the 3,866 who went to the Sports Arena rather than stay home and watch television. The Aztecs won, 61-47.

16 Part III/Saturday, January 7, 1984 J

SPORTSCENE

Continued from Page 1

It was certainly not a game which would encourage future visits to either the Sports Arena or to the USD Sports Center. They should have opened windows for refunds.

USD could not have been more intimidated if it had been up against the Philadelphia 76ers. The Toreros went to the basket like it was mined. It seemed like they were hoping the ball would land in the neighborhood of the basket rather than in it.

The Aztecs won easily. However, they didn't inspire the crowd. In fact, in the second half, when the game was out of USD's reach, San Diego State was content to slow its attack rather than play with abandon.

It was a boring display of college basketball.

But, does it make any difference? It may be that San Diego is not a basketball town.

Last month, former Marquette coach and current NBC basketball analyst Al McGuire said that basketball in Southern California would never have the appeal that it has on the East Coast.

"It's the water," McGuire said, "and the little bells on top of the sailboats that go ding, ding, ding."

Maybe he was just talking about attitudes. Philosophers never make things perfectly clear. Philosophers are considered more astute if no one knows for sure what they are saying.

The attitude in San Diego is more of doing than watching. The golf courses here will be crowded tomorrow even though National Football League playoffs are on television.

McGuire's philosophy, however, is not completely consistent with the facts: How is it that the Sockers will be near another sellout tonight when they play Tampa Bay?

Because the Sockers don't play basketball.

The point is that maybe basketball does not excite the San Diego populace.

Look at the Clippers' crowd against the Dallas Mavericks on Friday night. It's safe to assume they will not draw more than 5,000. Yet, when the same two teams played last week in Dallas, with the roads slick with ice and the temperatures diving close to all-time lows, the crowd was 12,454.

You say the Clippers aren't very good? Maybe not. But San Diego State provides a counter-point to the Clippers' mediocrity. It's been said that fans would not pay to see what was offered last season—a light-weight home schedule which included San Francisco State, Prairie View, Doane and Howard. So Gaines upgraded the menu to a more respectable attraction. The Aztecs finished their non-conference schedule at 9-3, but only drew 6,484 when they played unbeaten Virginia in the finals of the Cabrillo Classic.

Maybe the Aztecs, the Clippers and the Toreros should follow the example of USIU. Why not go on the road in late November and come home in March? It won't make for much of a won-lost record, but it might be nice to play in front of wild-eyed crowds.

ry 3, 1984

②

The San Diego Union D-3

USD wallops Idaho, 92-64

By Chris Wildermuth, Special to The Union

On paper, it was a perfect matchup. But on the court, the University of San Diego proved too overpowering for Idaho as the Toreros raced to a 92-64 victory before 468 fans at the Sports Center last night.

USD went into the game with a 6-5 record and Idaho was 5-4. The players' heights were nearly even, and both teams were averaging in the mid-70s in scoring. So much for averages.

Mike Whitmarsh of USD put in 26 points to lead all scorers. The 6-7 senior forward, yesterday named co-West Coast Athletic Conference player of the week, hit 11 of 14 from the field and 4 of 5 from the line, pulled in seven rebounds and dished out seven assists.

Anthony Reuss made the difference early for the Toreros. USD and Idaho exchanged points in the first five minutes. With USD leading 12-9, the 6-7 Reuss hit from 10 feet, then stuffed a two-handed dunk after a Stan Arnold steal. Reuss was then fouled on a third shot attempt, sinking both free throws as the Toreros took an 18-9 lead and never looked back.

"Anthony (Reuss) is really playing with confidence," USD coach Jim Brovelli said. "We've been getting a better performance from him each game."

After leading 42-25 at the half, USD maintained a 20-point margin throughout most of the second half, working the ball around. The Toreros shot 62 percent from the floor in the second half and 59.7 for the game.

Idaho shot only 42 percent in the first half, 48.3 percent overall. The Toreros outrebounded their opponents 36-30, and Idaho gave up the ball 21 times to USD's 13.

"We played well," Brovelli said. "We were very strong right down the line tonight. We are really coming along well. They play quick and can shoot, but we had a good defensive first half."

"I think this is a better team than we have been over the years. Before, we used to drop off in the talent off the bench. Now we have more transition baskets than in past years."

USD plays San Diego State Thursday night at the Sports Arena for the Mayor's Trophy.

"State's an excellent team," Brovelli said. Last year, the teams battled throughout with SDSU taking a 48-46 victory.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 3 1984

ANTHONY REUSS
USD forward

Toreros' Statistics

PLAYER	G	MIN	FG	FGP	FT	FTP	R	BP	A	PF	ST	TO	BL	PTS	PPG
Mike Whitmarsh	12	32.1	22-31	71%	10-11	91%	10.0	8.6	6.9	3.4	1.7	2.0	3	52.8	4.4
Mark Bostic	12	31.4	14-27	52%	26-32	81%	10.0	8.6	6.9	3.4	1.7	2.0	3	52.8	4.4
Anthony Reuss	12	27.2	10-23	43%	14-16	88%	14.2	3.0	1.8	1.8	2.2	1.0	15	31.8	2.6
Scott Thompson	12	27.2	10-23	43%	14-16	88%	14.2	3.0	1.8	1.8	2.2	1.0	15	31.8	2.6
Chris Carr	12	21.0	8-19	42%	14-16	88%	14.2	3.0	1.8	1.8	2.2	1.0	15	31.8	2.6
Al Mazzetti	12	18.2	10-23	43%	14-16	88%	14.2	3.0	1.8	1.8	2.2	1.0	15	31.8	2.6
Don Mciver	12	12.7	10-23	43%	14-16	88%	14.2	3.0	1.8	1.8	2.2	1.0	15	31.8	2.6
John Priddy	12	14.3	11-27	41%	22-27	81%	10.0	8.6	6.9	3.4	1.7	2.0	3	52.8	4.4
Eric Mazzetti	7	2.8	5-8	63%	4-4	100%	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1	15.0	2.1
Mario Coronado	10	10.4	6-15	40%	12-13	92%	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1	18.0	1.8
Randy Bricker	7	3.1	5-5	100%	12-13	92%	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1.0	1	15.0	2.1
Bill Purfield	2	3.0	2-2	100%	0-0	0%	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0	4.0	2.0
Mike Madden	6	2.5	2-2	100%	0-0	0%	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0	4.0	2.0
Steve Krollman	5	2.8	0-1	0%	0-0	0%	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0	0.0	0.0
Joe Fals	2	1.7	0-0	0%	0-0	0%	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0	0.0	0.0
TOREROS (7-5)	12	48.8	332-641	52%	189-204	92%	421	35.1	22.8	11.9	5.8	22	712	74.1	6.2
Opponents	12	46.8	322-688	47%	144-245	59%	416	34.7	197	22.8	62	191	38	784	65.3

Abbreviations: G: Games; MIN: Average minutes per game; FG: Field Goals; FGP: Field Goal Percentage; FT: Free Throws; FTP: Free Throw Percentage; R: Rebounds; BP: Blocked Shots; A: Assists; PF: Personal Fouls; ST: Steals; TO: Turnovers; BL: Shots Blocked; PTS: Points; PPG: Points Per Game.

Whitmarsh paces USD in easy win

By ERIC JOHNSON
Sentinel Staff

If University of San Diego basketball coach Jim Brovelli is caught nailing a sign with the words "There's no place like home" somewhere in the gym at the USD Sports Center, don't be surprised.

Because, for the Toreros this season, the sentiment is most accurate.

Brovelli's Toreros have won six of seven on their home floor, their latest coming Monday night 92-64 over the University of Idaho, while dropping four of five contests on the road.

After spending much of December away from home, Brovelli and his charges will have a chance to forget what it's like having to travel; all seven of their January games, including three league matches, are in San Diego. Of course, one of the game's, this week's annual matchup with San Diego State, will take place at the Sports Arena.

Six-foot-seven forward Anthony Reuss offered a theory as to why the Toreros have been so successful on their own court.

"At home we have so much confidence that it's hard to beat us," the junior forward said. "It may be the smaller facilities, and we do practice in this gym. But whenever we play here, there's no doubt that we're going to win."

Reuss' 17 points made him one of the five Toreros in double figures Monday evening and he led the team in rebounds with 11 as the Toreros dominated Idaho in the non-conference game.

"We played well tonight," Brovelli said after the victory against the Vandals, who dropped to 5-5. "We're trying to improve every game, and I think right down the line we are getting better."

The two teams traded three baskets apiece without a miss to open the game, but the Toreros made a move several minutes into the contest to create a lead they would never relinquish.

With six minutes left in the half, USD was sitting on top of a 26-13 advantage.

A 42-25 halftime advantage was later increased to 60-36 on a three-point play by Whitmarsh.

Brovelli emptied his bench with three minutes remaining in the game, and senior guard John Prunty gave a demonstration on the outside jumper, pumping in an array of five different shots in a two-minute period.

Forward Mike Whitmarsh was the game's high scorer, as he hit 11 of 13 shots for 26 points. Other Toreros in double figures were Mark Bostic, who had 18, and center Scott Thompson, who contributed 10 while adding eight rebounds.

Last week, USD took second place in the Wolfpack Classic at Reno, Nevada, beating Florida A & M 78-52 and then losing to the University of Nevada at Reno 70-66.

Whitmarsh was named the tournament's MVP, with a total of 49 points, 22 rebounds (16 in the championship tilt) and 11 assists. Whitmarsh, who currently is averaging more than 19 points a game, was also named the West Coast Athletic Conference Co-Player of the Week along with Gonzaga's John Stockton. Besides Whitmarsh, the 6-foot-11 freshman Thompson was also named to the All-Tournament Team, after scoring 29 points on 12-for-18 shooting from the floor.

(Continued on page A-17)

Toreros

(Continued from page A-14)

The Toreros now take on cross-town rival San Diego State tomorrow night at 7:30 in the Sports Arena. According to Reuss, the annual contest is "more than just a non-league game."

"This is one game we've had circled on our calendar," he said. "We probably match up better against their players this year than the other (two) years I've been here."

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 4 1984

USD WOMEN WIN — Paced by Michelle Dykstra's career-high 26 points, USD defeated Nevada-Reno last night 88-72 at USD's Sports Center. The win moved the Toreros over the 500 mark at 7-6. The victory overshadowed the performance of Reno's Chris Starr, who was 11 of 12 from the floor and 18-18 at the line.

JAN 4 1984

USD women trounce Nevada-Reno 88-72

Michelle Dykstra scored a career-high 26 points and guard Lori Morris added 10 assists as the University of San Diego defeated Nevada-Reno 88-72 last night at the Sports Center.

The loss by UNR (4-10) overshadowed a near record-breaking performance by Chris Starr. The 6-1 center, who holds the NCAA record for points in a game with 53, almost set another mark as she was 18-of-18 from the line, one short of the collegiate record. Starr was 11-of-12 from the floor and led all rebounders with 11.

Debbie Theroux and Mary Godfrey added 13 points apiece for the Toreras (7-6).

JAN 5 1984

USD to get day on Aztecs' court

By Bill Center
Staff Writer

USC-UCLA it's not. Still, it's the best rivalry this city has.

San Diego State vs. University of San Diego. Goliath and David on the basketball floor of the Sports Arena tonight at 7:35 (KSDO-AM, 1130).

In one corner, wearing the black (naturally) and red, are the taller, bigger and nationally prominent Aztecs of San Diego State. This is the power club of Michael Cage. They are the clear favorites; bullies if you listen to the followers of USD.

In the other corner, wearing blue and white, is the little team that would like to think it could. Underdogs with a capital U, the Toreros represent a private school. This is a team of poise and discipline. Truth is, USD gives San Diego State fits.

"Rivalry? I don't think this is a rivalry," said San Diego State coach Smokey Gaines last night. "A rivalry is when there are 10,000 people in the stands... when it's up for grabs."

"San Diego State is in a can't-win situation. USD playing us is like us playing UCLA. We don't gain nothing for winning. But if they beat us it makes their season. This is no rivalry."

It's beginning to sound like a rivalry.

And if it hasn't been a rivalry in the past, it's certainly been close.

Although San Diego State has won all four games since USD became a Division I "major" in 1979, the matches have been close. One game went to overtime. Last year, USD had the ball in the final minute with a chance to go into the lead when guard Rich Davis was called for a traveling violation, although he actually was tripped. San Diego State regained possession and won 47-45.

The score was low, but not as low as the 41-36 of a year earlier. That's been USD's secret — control the tempo, knock San Diego State off its fast-paced stride and pray the last shot falls.

This year could be different — not necessarily good news for the Toreros, who always play this game on the Aztecs' floor with the Aztecs' (Western Athletic Conference) officials.

Gaines is of the opinion USD has its best team ever. Mike Whitmarsh might not be a Cage, but he is one of the West Coast's more accomplished forwards. The USD guards are bigger than San Diego State's and are the most athletic tandem the Toreros have ever paired in the backcourt. And there is a fast-improving 6-foot-11 freshman in the middle named Scott Thompson.

See AZTECS on Page E-6

Aztecs: Close name of game

Continued from E-1

"They've got better players than they've had before," said Gaines. "The big guards are going to give us problems. This is the first year they've been able to run with us."

An attribute which could also be a problem for USD.

The Toreros can run, but are they good enough to run with San Diego State? And are they disciplined enough to slow it down if needed. Last year at this time, USD starting guards Mark Bostic and Chris Carr were playing junior college ball.

Understandably, USD coach Jim Brovelli has a somewhat different perspective on the game.

"Nothing much has changed for us," said Brovelli. "We still have to control the game. We've opened up this year. But our defense still could use improvement and we don't rebound as well as we should. Our play on the defensive boards is going to be crucial to our hopes."

"San Diego State's rebounding and transition game scares me," Brovelli added. "The Aztecs control the boards and race the ball up and down the court. It's a devastating game when it works."

San Diego State's transition game can be a double-edged sword. The Aztecs also are averaging 21 turnovers a game — and USD, a 53 percent shooting team from the floor, has the knack of making the most of other teams' mistakes while making a minimum of their own.

Looking only as far as the statistics, there is a great matchup in this game: Cage vs. Whitmarsh.

Cage is averaging 24.4 points and 12.3 rebounds a game and shooting 64 percent from the floor. He is power at 6-foot-9 and 225 pounds. Whitmarsh is averaging 19.7 points and 8.6 rebounds and is shooting 56 percent from the floor. He is 6-foot-7, but he is also finesse, averaging 5.8 assists a game.

But USD probably will stick to its shifting zone defenses.

For the first time in their relatively short Division I history, the Toreros are above .500 (7-5) at this stage of the season. They also seem to be improving as Thompson and their guards get game experience.

Since moving into the starting lineup four games ago, Thompson is averaging 12 points and 5½ rebounds a game while shooting 69 percent from the floor. USD is 3-1 with Thompson starting.

He and Whitmarsh are joined in the front line by 6-7 Anthony Reuss, who is shooting 64 percent and averaging 9.8 points and 5.6 rebounds a game.

Thompson has a one-inch edge on the Aztecs' Leonard Allen at center, but both Cage and Andre Ross are two inches taller and considerably heavier than their Torero counterparts at forward. Allen is averaging 10 points and 7.7 rebounds a game and Ross is averaging 7.4 points and six rebounds a game.

Although John Martens is out, the Aztecs have a stronger forward off the bench now that 6-9 Michael Kennedy is coming around.

The matchups at guard will be interesting. USD depends heavily on the 6-4 Mark Bostic (13.2 points, 50 percent from the floor) and 6-3 Chris Carr (6.2 points). Al Moscatel is a 51 percent shooter averaging 6.2 points off the bench and John Prunty is the smart, seasoned pace-setter in the USD mold.

Jeff Konek (6-2) and Bobby Owens (6-1) again will start at the guards for the Aztecs, although Anthony Watson (6-3) will see considerable action in his sixth game back from eligibility problems. Watson equalled his career high with 26 points Tuesday night against Navy and is averaging 9½ points a game. Konek is averaging 10 points a game and 9½. Late in the Navy game, Gaines had all three guards on the floor at the same time.

As a preliminary, alumni teams from both schools meet at 5.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 4 1984

Tribune photo by Peter Koeleman

ANTHONY WATSON (12) EVADES MIKE JONES (22), BOB ROMAIN (24)
Aztec guard had an SDSU-career-high 26 points against Navy last night

Watson: He pumps up Aztecs' outside attack

By T.R. Reinman

Tribune Sportswriter

When this basketball season was very young, San Diego State coach Smokey Gaines said he wanted to go into Western Athletic Conference play with a 9-3 record.

"That would be pretty good, don't you think?" he said, mindful of the trips to Tulsa and Texas, the visits by Oral Roberts and Virginia.

Now he is only 40 minutes short of that goal, but historically they have been some of the toughest 40 minutes his teams have played, especially the last two years. They are against USD, and they come tomorrow night at 7:30 in the Sports Arena.

Last night State beat Navy 88-81 at the arena. Forward Michael Cage rebounded from his lackluster Cabrillo Classic performances with 20 boards, 11 of which were enough to set an Aztec career record (1,100). Move over, Al Skalecky.

"After that Virginia game I dedicated myself to being more aggressive," Cage said. "In that game I stood around wondering what I was going to have to do instead of doing it. I told myself afterward I was going to make somebody pay for it."

And so he did, charging 20 points to Navy's account. But what made things toughest for the Middies (9-3) was Anthony Watson, who as a freshman last season was a "hot newcomer," but who last semester was a part-time gas pumper and a student at Mesa College.

Please see AZTECS, C-3

*Aztecs

Continued From Page C-1

Last night all he pumped were running one-handers and jump shots, good for a game-high 26 points, the most he has ever scored for State. He made five of six second-half field goal attempts and — Holy charity stripe, Batman — all eight of his free throws on a night when the Aztecs shot 84.6 percent from the line.

"He's got to give us that outside scoring," Cage said of Watson, who also had six rebounds. "Four times he drove in just far enough against the man sagging on me to where he had the 10-foot shot instead of taking, like, the 15-foot shot with his man five feet off of him. In the long run, that'll help both of us."

In only his fifth game of the season, Watson played 29 minutes last night as a sixth man.

"I'm not trying to move anybody out of a job," Watson said. "The guys we have playing guard are all capable of playing major college ball. While I was out I realized that more and more, I'm just happy to be back."

And he appeared to be back to where he left off last season, which was in the running for the title of head chef in the shake and bake department. Watson can dish off, but he usually gets a certain gleam in his eye when he has the ball and is pointed toward the basket.

"I'll take the shot whenever it's there," he said. "And if it's there I don't think I should miss it."

"He is hyper," Cage said, smiling and shaking his head.

"Right now, though, I think my role is to sort of keep the team organized out there," said Watson.

"He said that out of hypersness from the game," Cage said, still smiling.

Watson playing the way he does and then saying that is like the wolf dressing in sheep's clothing and telling the shepherd he's just one of the flock. Anthony Watson is a product of the Detroit playgrounds, and there is no one in town who plays the way he does. His idea of organization is simple: carry it, throw it, push it, tip it or pass it, but get the pill to the rack, uh, the ball toward the rim.

For example, after fighting off five ties and four lead changes through the second half, the word from the Aztec bench was to work the clock in the last two minutes. But with less than a minute to go, Watson found himself in the left corner and lofted an improbable alley-oop pass to center Leonard Allen who failed to convert. A Middie was fouled on the ensuing fast break and the lead was cut to seven with 50 seconds to play. Three gray hairs popped on Gaines' pate.

"It was kind of a bad pass," Watson guessed. "But in another way it was perfect."

Earlier, Gaines had said he expected Watson to be up to full speed by "the second or third game in the WAC," which would be two weeks from now. Did that jibe with Watson's timetable?

"It does if the coach said it," Watson said.

"Right now I'm having a lot of second thoughts. My conscience is saying 'You can do it, you can do it,' but I keep having to stop and think, 'should I do this or that?'"

A second-thought case in point: Asked how he looked forward to the USD game, Watson blurted, "I want to kill 'em." And then quickly added, "No, no, I don't have anything against those guys. Most of the guys who played last year (when the Toreros narrowly lost 47-45) are gone. It's just another game."

The latter seemed to be the feeling throughout the Aztec locker room, but notice had been taken of a quote on the State game by USD forward Mike Whitmarsh in yesterday's Los Angeles Times. "If we don't win another game this year I want us to win this one," he said.

USD coach Jim Brovelli, scouting the Navy game, downplayed the rivalry talk. Gaines dismissed it by saying "They play us tough, and they're playing well this year. But they play on a lot of emotion and sometimes emotion is better than talent. All I know is we're 4-0 against them (in the Gaines' era)."

But Whitmarsh has taken his stand, and Cage and Watson stood State in good stead last night. Rivalry or no, tomorrow's should be more than just another game.

San Diego, Wednesday, January 4, 1984

THE TRIBUNE C-3

*Rivalry

Continued From Page C-1

it a bit more seriously.

"Every year it's been close and exciting," Brovelli said. "I don't know why they wouldn't want to play us. We play in a tough conference (the West Coast Athletic Conference). I could see when we were Division II, but not now."

"We haven't seen a sellout, but we have seen progress. The timing isn't the greatest. School is out here (and at

'If I had a grudge against a coach, it might be different. But I don't have a grudge against Jim'

— Smokey Gaines

State)... there's nobody around. But look at California in general. Fresno State is the only school in the state, I think, that sells out every game. Not even UCLA does anymore."

Maybe it would be more interesting if the coaches were arch-enemies. Alas...

"If I had a grudge against a coach, it might be different," Gaines said yesterday. "But I don't have a grudge against Jim. There's nothing there... no more than our game with Navy tonight."

"If we went 12-0 in non-conference games and then lost big in the WAC, those 12 wins wouldn't mean (bleep) to me."

"Special? No. The only grudge I have against Jim is on the golf course. And we're both about 50 handicaps." Crosstown golf rivals. Now that's exciting.

Tribune photo by Peter Koeleman

AZTECS' BOBBY OWENS PASSES BALL OFF
As Navy's Kylor Whitaker tries to defend play

Crosstown rivals

Will Aztecs-Toreros encounters ever fully blossom on the court?

By Nick Canepa
Tribune Sportswriter

AS FAR AS rivalries go, it's about as intense as Switzerland versus Bulgaria. Vanilla. A Tupperware party for 10, with white wine, crackers and Brie.

San Diego State will play the University of San Diego in a game of basketball tomorrow night at the Sports Arena. So? How many people really care? Other than the winning and losing part of it, do the coaches and players even care?

This thing is to crosstown rivalries what Yasser Arafat is to the fashion world. It's a nice little game, a series that was resumed five years ago only because USD had graduated from NCAA Division II to Division I. Those looking for USC-UCLA or Villanova-St. Joe's had better get in a car or a plane.

"I don't get any special satisfaction out of playing USD ... none whatsoever," Aztec coach Smokey Gaines said yesterday. "It's just another non-conference game, as far as I'm concerned."

"Now, if USD would put 12,000 people

College basketball
roundup, C-6

in here (the arena), I'd get excited. If USD wants me to get excited, I'd like to see some people in the seats."

Just gets your blood boiling, doesn't it? Actually, more than anything else, USD is a threat to San Diego State. Deep down, the Aztecs probably would rather not play the Toreros.

"We never get up for them," Gaines insisted. "It's all one-sided, I think — their side. They have everything to gain and nothing to lose."

Gaines, it should be remembered, comes by way of the University of Detroit, where folks get enthused about playing the likes of Michigan and Michigan State.

"I'm sure there are some people over there (at State) who'd rather not play this game," said Jim Brovelli, who coaches the Toreros. "But this game is good. People who do come to it may like what they see and come and see us play other games."

"Everyone knows my philosophy: It takes time to build tradition. A lot of schools have been going after each other since the '40s. Four years ... what's that for tradition?"

"The Santa Clara and USF rivalry can match any other rivalry. Even when I was a kid (in San Francisco), it was standing-room only ... the intensity of those crowds matched any in the country."

"I can remember going to those games and seeing the athletes. I remember the names. But I grew up with those games. That has to happen here. Hopefully, young people will see this game, too, and they will remember it and it will blossom."

But will it? San Diego's collegiate basketball fans — and they are not legion — hardly have tripped over themselves buying tickets to watch the Aztecs and Toreros play, even when they've hosted some of America's big shots. Not even the DePauls, Indians and Georgetown's that have blessed the Aztecs' Cabrillo Classic have filled the building.

Simply, there is very little — if any — basketball tradition in this town. Adding to it all is the fact that schools such as State and USD go elsewhere to get most of their talent.

"That's a problem," said Michael Brooks, the Clipper forward. Brooks grew up in Philadelphia and attended LaSalle, which has furious crosstown rivalries going in Philly with the four other Big Five schools — Villanova, St. Joe's, Temple and Penn.

"There's no way this can be compared to that," Brooks said yesterday prior to the Clippers' practice at USD. "It's so intense back there, it's unbelievable."

"When I was going to LaSalle, most of the players at all the schools in the city were from Philly. They knew each other. There was a friendly rivalry before you even got on the court. Here, you have guys spread out from all over. How many people here (at USD) do nothing but think, 'I want to beat San Diego State?'"

"Those are real rivalries back there. It was wild ... so intense. After a game, some of the guys would get together and go out. Here, I don't think these guys mix it up together off the court."

Jimmy Lynam, the Clippers' head coach, played at St. Joe's and coached there. He knows all about crosstown rivalries.

"I may sound provincial, but what goes on in Philadelphia goes on nowhere else in the country," Lynam said. "The Big Five ... four of the teams play home games on Penn's home court. That's how badly they want to play each other."

"A lot of the players are from the city, and most of those who aren't are from the Northeast. Everyone gets to know each other. It's crazy. Some people might think Villanova's one of the better teams in the East. They've already lost to LaSalle and Temple. Anything can happen in those games."

For that matter, anything can happen in the State-USD matchup. The Aztecs, usually blessed with greater talent, have won four in a row, but USD always gives them fits. Maybe the Toreros take

Please see RIVALRY, C-3

SMOKEY GAINES:
"I'd like to see some people in the seats."

The Series

Since the 1962-63 season, the San Diego State Aztecs and the University of San Diego Toreros have met 18 times in basketball games against each other. The Aztecs hold a 14-4 edge during that stretch, with the Toreros' last victory being achieved during the '76-77 season. The year-by-year history of the series follows:

1962-63:	SDSU 47, USD 45
1963-64:	SDSU 41, USD 36
1964-65:	SDSU 60, USD 52
1965-66:	SDSU 67, USD 58
1966-67:	USD 67, SDSU 63
1967-68:	SDSU 78, USD 62
1968-69:	SDSU 84, USD 61
1969-70:	USD 78, SDSU 67
1970-71:	SDSU 87, USD 69
1971-72:	SDSU 97, USD 82
1972-73:	SDSU 70, USD 67
1973-74:	USD 72, SDSU 65
1974-75:	SDSU 69, USD 59
1975-76:	SDSU 55, USD 50 (OT)
1976-77:	USD 54, SDSU 47
1977-78:	SDSU 85, USD 69 (2OT)
1978-79:	SDSU 70, USD 69
1979-80:	SDSU 68, USD 49

JIM BROVELLI:
"It takes time to build tradition."

NOTES — Three's a charm from the unknown, but not untalented, friends in the West Coast Athletic Conference. Three players from the WCAC were named MVPs in three holiday tournaments — Mike Whitmarsh (USD) in the Wolf Pack Classic where the Toreros lost in the title game, John Stockton (Gonzaga point guard) in the Far West Classic where they finished third, and Nick Vanos (Santa Clara's 7-foot center) in the Cable Car Classic which the Broncos won ...

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 7 1984

● MEN'S COLLEGE BASKETBALL — USD hosts Western Illinois at the USD Sports Center, 7:30 p.m. The Point Loma Nazarene College Classic concludes at Point Loma's Golden Gym. Seventh place game, 2:30 p.m.; consolation championship, 4:30; third place, 6:30; championship, 8:30. The UCSD Tournament winds up at UCSD's Main Gym. Third place game, 5 p.m.; championship, 9.

For once, Aztecs have easy time against USD, 61-47

By United Press International
Playing against crosstown rival University of San Diego has never been easy for San Diego State.

The games have always been close — until Thursday night. Forward Michael Cage hit 9-of-11 field goal attempts and had 26 points and 18 rebounds to lead the Aztecs to an easy 61-47 non-conference victory over USD.

Cage, a 6-foot-9 senior, scored 12 points in the first half and grabbed 10 rebounds in guiding the Aztecs to a 32-20 lead.

The Aztecs, 9-3, increased the lead to 38-23 early in the second half, holding the Toreros scoreless from the field for nearly five minutes. The closest the Toreros, 7-6, came the rest of the way was within 11 points.

San Diego shot only 29 percent from the field. The Toreros, whose total was 30 points below its season average, were led by Mike Whitmarsh's 18 points while John Prunty added 10.

Aztecs 'host' Toreros in cross-town matchup

SAN DIEGO — Smokey Gaines will try to increase his winning streak against the University of San Diego tonight at the Sports Arena.

Gaines, the fifth year San Diego State basketball coach, has played and beaten the Toreros in his first four seasons, 67-58, 60-52, 41-36 and 47-45.

Tonight's contest, which begins at 7:35, is the final preseason match for the Aztecs, whose record is 8-3. They open Western Athletic Conference play next Thursday at Texas-El Paso.

USD has two more non-conference games before beginning its Western Collegiate Athletic Conference schedule Jan. 19 against Gonzaga at the USD Sports Center.

SPORTS DIGEST

Basketball

SDSU BEATS UCSD: Senior forward Michael Cage scored 26 points and grabbed 18 rebounds last night to lead San Diego State to a 61-47 non-conference college basketball victory over the University of San Diego.

Sophomore guard Bobby Owens added 10 points for the Aztecs, who won their fifth game in a row over their crosstown rivals. San Diego State now has a 9-3 record.

Forward Mike Whitmarsh led the losing Toreros, who fell to 7-6, with 16 points and five rebounds. Reserve guard John Prunty added 10 points for San Diego.

The Aztecs led all the way, taking a 10-2 lead in the opening minutes at the San Diego Sports Arena. It was 32-20 at halftime and the Toreros weren't closer than 11 points in the final 20 minutes.

San Diego State connected on 48.9 percent of its field goal attempts while the University of San Diego could hit on only 29.3 percent of its floor shots. The Aztecs outrebounded the Toreros 45-28.

San Diego SportsScene

Crosstown Rivalry May Cure Apathy

By DAVE DISTEL,
Times Staff Writer

The crosstown rivalry between San Diego State and the University of San Diego was to be renewed Thursday night, so I visited the Sports Arena to absorb the ambience of the frantic multitudes.

I've got to admit that when I pulled into the parking lot I thought I had gotten the date wrong. Being a spectator rather than a reporter, I arrived a few minutes before the tip-off. And parked in the second row.

The arena was no more congested than the parking lot. The crowd was 3,866.

Maybe San Diego State's Smokey Gaines was correct when he said that it really isn't much of a rivalry, and won't be until the matchup produces a crowd of 10,000.

There are times when Gaines is baffling. If attendance is such a concern why not promote the credibility of the crosstown rivalry rather than announce that it really doesn't exist?

It bothers Gaines to have to play USD. Jim Brovelli's Toreros have always been the little kids on the block, troublesome and ambitious. It's been said that San Diego State has everything to lose and nothing to gain. Wrong. A decent intra-city rivalry could eventually become a nice gate attraction, one less night a year when university business managers don't have to look up into the stands and grimace.

As it turned out Thursday night, Please see SPORTSCENE, Page 16

Aztecs versus Toreros

1981 Christian High graduate Anthony Reuss says tonight may be USD's turn to Cage San Diego State

By Mike Mathison
of The Daily Californian

Like any athlete, all Anthony Reuss wanted was a shot.

He wanted his shot to prove he could play Division I basketball for the University of San Diego.

This season head coach Jim Brovelli gave Reuss that shot. The 6-foot-7, 205-pound junior hasn't been disappointing. Reuss has been taking those shots and hitting them at a 64 percent rate.

His efficiency from the floor is one of the reasons the Toreros are 7-5. Tonight at 7:30 in the Sports Arena USD faces its toughest challenge yet. The Toreros will hook up with San Diego State in the annual clash of crosstown rivals.

"This could be the year to beat them," Reuss said. "We match up the best now than we ever have. We did not have the personnel in the past that we do now and we were always close."

The Aztecs have won the last four meetings and hold a 14-4 series edge. Last year's contest was 47-45. USD last won 67-63 in 1976-77.

Reuss came out of Christian High in 1981 highly touted. He was named The Daily Californian's Grossmont League Player of the Year for the 1980-81 season — the only year Christian was a part of the league. He dominated the league in every aspect, scoring at a 24.6 clip and grabbing at least 10 rebounds in all but one contest.

When it came down to choosing a college, the choices were USD and San Diego State.

"I wanted to stay in San Diego," he said.

Reuss is averaging 9.8 points and 5.6 rebounds through 12 games this season. He had the best outing of his career Monday night in a 92-64 win over the

"This could be the year to beat them. We match up the best now than we ever have. We did not have the personnel in the past that we do now and we were always close."

University of Idaho, scoring 17 points and pulling in 11 boards.

Toreros head coach Jim Brovelli will need an encore from Reuss tonight.

"Anthony is really coming into his own," said Brovelli, who is in his 10th year at USD. "He is really playing with confidence. We've been getting a better performance from him each game."

Reuss has started every game and has netted 47 of his 73 floor shots. That percentage is the best on the team for anyone who has taken over 15 shots. His problem has come at the free throw line where he has made just 24 of 40 (60 percent).

That's not like him. In his senior year at Christian, Reuss fired in 110 of 163 (71 percent).

"The free throws got a little better tonight," Reuss said after going nine of 12 against Idaho. "I've worked a lot on them in practice. It's coming around a little now. I just don't know what it is. This year I've gone back to the way I was shooting them in high school. They tried to change my ways my first two years here."

Reuss' first two years at USD weren't ones he will put in the memory bank. He played in 10 games as a freshman, totaling 45 minutes of court time. Last season he appeared in 26 contests, starting four of them. He averaged 4.5 points and 3.7 rebounds.

"I was not happy last year," he said. "It (sitting the bench) was not what I expected or was used to. I just kept at it."

"All along I knew I could play. I never thought I had the full opportunity. This is the first time in my college career that I've been healthy. I've had Achilles and knee problems. I feel really good now. The two biggies for me is that I'm getting a chance to play and I'm healthy."

"I'm looked upon to rebound, score in the nine-to-11 point range and get some assists every once in a while. Basically, I do a little bit of everything. I know the system a little better than most of the guys who are younger than I am."

Although Reuss has achieved one of his goals in being a starter, he knows there is still work to be done.

"I need to quit being inconsistent," he said. "I feel the same all the time before a game. I don't have a good explanation for it. I would like to play like that (against Idaho) all the time."

"I like to perform and do well."

Jimmy Dorantes/For The Calif.
Anthony Reuss.

Michael Cage (26 points, 18 rebounds) led San Diego State Aztecs Thursday over University of San Diego, 61-47.

San Diego County

CC/Part III

Aztecs Defeat Toreros, but No One Cares

By STEVE DOLAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—So much for crosstown rivalries that elicit big crowds and exciting games.

Only 3,866 fans showed up at the Sports Arena Thursday night to watch San Diego State defeat the University of San Diego, 61-47.

The Aztecs scored the first six points of the game and things only got worse from there for USD. It soon was 10-2 and after just four minutes it was 14-5.

By then, USD could just be thankful that its bus ride home was only five minutes.

"When we got off to the 6-0 lead, USD started having doubts," Aztec guard Bobby Owens said. "After that, they just fell apart. They were not playing as intense."

Traditionally, the game takes on different meanings for the two teams. As Owens noted afterwards, it was "just another game" for the Aztecs. But for USD, it was a big game. Perhaps too big.

The Toreros, normally a disciplined team, hurt themselves by playing out of control and taking poor shots. They were just 30% from the field in the first half, but even that was better than their 29.3% overall ratio.

On the other hand, San Diego State was adding a new word to its vocabulary—defense. The Aztecs came out with a full court press, which is not the norm for them.

"We thought we had to put pressure on them to see how they reacted," Coach Smokey Gaines said. "We scouted USD two or three times and we noticed they had problems with the press. Our press made the difference. By getting the lead, we could control the tempo of the game."

In recent seasons, undermanned USD teams had always given the Aztecs fits by playing a controlled offense. And, although the Toreros have not beaten San Diego State for five years, all of the games were competitive until Thursday's.

The Aztecs held USD 29 points below its scoring average. It was also the best defensive effort of the year for San Diego State, which had allowed 58 points to Oklahoma City and East Tennessee State.

A key factor in the game was the play of each team's top man. Michael Cage had another big night for the Aztecs, but Mike Whitmarsh of USD was way off.

Cage had game highs of 26 points and 18 rebounds. And although Whitmarsh had 16 points, a true indication of his night was a 4 of 19 mark from the floor.

"From the tip, we couldn't get it going," Whitmarsh said. "We played scared tonight. I probably should've started talking and try to make something happen. I just got frustrated."

Michael Kennedy was primarily the one who frustrated Whitmarsh. Kennedy, a reserve, played so well on Whitmarsh through halftime that he started the second half.

"Normally, coaches tell you to deny the man with the ball," Kennedy said. "Whitmarsh moves a lot, but I

Please see AZTECS, Page 10

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 9 1984

PORTLAND 63, USD 49 — Jolene Barton scored 20 points and Lorena Le Gard added 18 last night as Portland University knocked USD out of the Oregon State Classic in a women's basketball victory at Corvallis, Ore.

Michelle Dykstra tallied 16 points and Mary Stanbra added 14 for the Toreros (7-7), who trailed 30-22 at the half.

AZTECS

Continued from Page 1
stayed with him. That's what it takes. My defense has been improving and it took its toll on Whitmarsh."

Good defensive play by San Diego State's guards also took their toll on USD. Toreros' guards Chris Carr and Mark Bostic were both held to only two points. Carr was one of five from the field and Bostic was one of nine.

Going in, USD actually figured to have the advantage at guard and a disadvantage underneath.

"That's probably what USD thought," Owens said. "I thought our guards were as good as theirs."

The Aztecs, who next play undefeated Texas-El Paso in their Western Conference opener, improved their record to 9-3. USD fell to 7-6.

Before the game, Torero Coach Jim Brovelli had talked of how conference games were more important than crosstown rivalries. As it turned out, he could be thankful for not putting too much emphasis on the San Diego State game.

"We played our worst game of the year," Brovelli said. "Mentally, we were in a different world the first 10 minutes. Sometimes, you get too emotional, then this happens."

After the first four minutes, USD never came within six points. At halftime, the Toreros trailed, 32-20.

San Diego State came out cold in the second half, not scoring for the first 2:03. But USD was worse, going 2:14 before Anthony Reuss hit a free throw. The Toreros never came closer than 11 points after halftime.

Cage again dominated inside, hitting nine of 11 from the field and eight of 11 at the line. His 18 rebounds helped the Aztecs hold a commanding, 45-28 edge on the boards. Coming off a subpar Cabrillo Classic last week, Cage has 46 points and 38 rebounds in his last two games.

"I never felt like my game left me," he said. "I never doubted myself. Why should one or two off games raise questions?"

One off game will definitely raise questions for USD. It could not have picked a worse time than Thursday to play a bad game. Earlier in the week, Whitmarsh had said, "If we don't win another game this year, I want to win this one."

Leonard Allen (left) fights for rebound with USD's Mario Coronado (No. 44) and Mike Whitmarsh (No. 32) Thursday night.

Gaines said: "They had a few comments in the papers that our players saw. I always say to let a sleeping dog lie. USD reminded us, we didn't remind them."

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 8 1984

Reuss sparkles as USD wins

By Tom Krasovic, Special to The Union

Most players who score 10 points a game don't consider basketball an easy game.

But the University of San Diego's Anthony Reuss found it that way last night. Entering the game with a 9.7-point scoring average, Reuss poured in 29 to lead the Toreros (8-6) over Western Illinois, 71-62, before a sparse crowd at USD's Sports Center.

Reuss took some of the scoring pressure off Mike Whitmarsh, USD's high-scoring forward, who tossed in 15 points.

"They were watching Mike, and my teammates got me the ball. I just fronted the post. That's easy basketball," Reuss said.

For Reuss, shooting looked more than easy. The 6-7 forward missed only one of his 14 shots from the field, and after that miss he grabbed the rebound and put it in. With the Leatherneck defense collapsing on Whitmarsh, Reuss was frequently able to go one-on-one and utilize a spinning move and a soft left-handed jumper.

"I haven't had that feeling for a long time," said the junior from El Cajon High School. "I almost forgot what it feels like to be that hot."

Reuss, who also grabbed nine rebounds, was largely responsible for negating a hot Western Illinois team in the first half. Shooting from way out, the Leathernecks hit 54 percent of their shots in the first half. Reuss, meanwhile, sank 8 of 9 shots from the field to lead the Toreros to a 43-37 halftime lead.

Reuss got some help from his teammates in the second half, as USD used a patient passing offense to pick apart Western Illinois. Chris Carr came on to score all of his 10 points, including two slam dunks, and guard John Prunty scored eight second-half points and fed the ball to Reuss and Whitmarsh.

But it was Reuss who continued to dominate. After Western's Daryl Reed threatened to bring back his team with a dynamic slam dunk, Reuss blocked the next Leatherneck shot, and followed up the Torero fast break with a three-point play coming off a rebound basket. That effort, and another jumper by Reuss, gave USD a 64-48 lead and broke Western's back.

"He's (Reuss) really come into his own the last month," said Brovelli. "When they key on Mike they're taking something away. But they're also giving us something. We exploited that."

The win for USD came after Thursday's debacle against San Diego State, in which the Toreros were thrashed 61-47 in a performance that Brovelli called "the worst we've ever played."

"This was a critical game for us," said Brovelli. "After Thursday night, we were going to see the real character of this team."

LOS ANGELES TIMES

JAN 9 1984

USD Women Fall to Portland, 63-49

Center Lorena Legard scored 18 points and had 16 rebounds and forward Jolene Barton scored a game-high 20 points Sunday as the University of Portland defeated University of San Diego, 63-49, in the first round of the Oregon State women's basketball tournament at Corvallis.

Pilots (12-3) employed a zone defense that held Debbie Theroux, USD's leading scorer, to a season low three points. Theroux averages 11.2 points per game. The USD front line was limited to a total of 15 points. Guards Michelle Dykstra (16 points) and Mary Stanbra (14) led USD (7-7).

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 9 1984

Reuss paces Toreros; Crusaders win crown

The University of San Diego will enter in Mt. Marty's College of Yankton, South Dakota in its final pre-conference tuneup tonight at the USD Sports Center at 7:30.

The Toreros are coming off an impressive 81-62 victory over Western Illinois Saturday in which former Christian High standout Anthony Reuss scored a career-high 29 points.

Reuss made eight of nine shots in the first half as USD pulled out to a 43-37 advantage.

Reuss pushed his season average to 11.7 points per game. He leads the team in shooting from the floor having hit 66 percent of his 95 tries.

Mike Whitmarsh added 15 points and eight assists for the Toreros.

USD should be able to get out to a good start in the WCAC this year. The Toreros host Gonzaga (Jan. 19), Portland and Santa Clara to begin that campaign.

Meanwhile, Point Loma Nazarene College won three straight games to capture the PLN tournament championship Saturday. The Crusaders rallied from a 10-point deficit to nip Missouri Baptist 75-73 in the finals.

Former Grossmont College player Scott Vaughns scored 43 points and grabbed 22 rebounds to earn a spot on the all-tournament team. He had 12 points for Point Loma in Saturday's finale.

Former Santana High School and Grossmont College star Brian Caradonna popped in 17 points for the Crusaders in Saturday's championship game. He had 43 points and 14 assists in the three games.

Point Loma's Deon Richard was voted the tournament's most valuable player. He had 20 points and 13 rebounds in the finals.

Point Loma, now 8-7, opens NAIA District 3 play Tuesday by taking on Los Angeles Baptist College in Newhall.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 10 1984

Reuss is rolling along for USD

By T.R. Reinman

Tribune Sports Writer

WHEATIES, somebody in the USD locker room kept insisting last night. Anthony "Rolls" Reuss was going to have to eat more Wheaties. He had missed a shot, and that kind of stuff couldn't go on. He'd have to eat more Wheaties.

Reuss, by his own description a "quote, unquote power forward," had made only seven of eight field goal attempts and five of eight free throws. He only had 10 rebounds and 19 points. He had to eat more Wheaties.

All right, so this was in a game against something called Mt. Marty, which turned out to be a team from a 600-student school in Yankton, S.D., whose starting center was 6-foot-6, a team that had lost its last four games in California by 80 points and that was almost as easy to get excited about as a bowl of cold cream of wheat.

OK, so there were 180 fans in the stands at USD to watch the home team win 70-48. Sure, the Martians, uh, Lancers, scored all of eight points in the first 15 minutes of the second half. But Reuss missed another shot and only took eight. Eating Wheaties, it was insisted, was the cure.

This Clark Kent character had pulled off his warmups to hit 13 of 14 shots and a total of 29 points in his last game, and the Son his jersey was starting to look big and red. But all of a sudden making 20 of 22 shots in the last two games was not enough. He had to eat more Wheaties.

"I guess I'm slacking off," Reuss said, giving new meaning to the concept of deadpan.

With Reuss sliding by like he is, the Toreros are off to their best-ever pre-conference record, 9-6. League play starts next Thursday with Gonzaga, the first of three straight at home.

"It's a matter of getting the playing time," Reuss said. "The last three weeks I've been getting things going. I look back to the first game in the Reno tournament. I took control of the rebounds and I enjoyed it. Now every time I try to recapture that feeling. Except for the State

Please see USD, E-5

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 10 1984

MIKE WHITMARSH
Leading scorer

Toreros' Statistics

PLAYER	G	MIN	PG	FPG	FT	FT%	R	APG	A	PF	ST	TO	BL	PTS	PPG
Mike Whitmarsh	15	500	107-292	320	49-97	711	121	8.1	88	40	24	27	6	283	18.9
Anthony Reuss	15	421	78-123	280	34-59	576	58	5.9	27	41	19	19	6	174	11.6
Mario Coronado	13	177	9-15	60-60	1-1	143	15	1.2	6	27	4	6	6	19	1.5
John Prunty	15	244	22-47	468	14-13	353	12	8.8	37	16	10	12	0	56	3.7
Mark Bostic	15	405	78-155	432	25-51	486	46	3.1	34	26	17	24	1	105	7.0
Chris Carr	15	227	34-69	425	23-32	288	15	2	6.3	4	8	2	4	20	1.3
Eric Hauselman	8	21	7-11	436	4-8	378	3	0.3	4	8	1	1	0	20	2.5
Randy Strickley	9	25	6-11	545	1-2	500	3	0.3	4	8	1	1	0	20	2.2
Bill Penfold	4	10	2-7	110	0-4	200	1	0.1	2	2	1	1	0	10	2.5
Al Mesrobian	15	257	26-73	493	10-21	455	17	1.1	29	34	36	30	1	82	5.5
Nils Madden	8	26	3-5	487	1-2	500	11	1.4	2	7	9	5	1	8	1.0
Dave Mciver	15	191	19-42	432	1-2	500	11	1.4	2	7	9	5	1	82	5.5
Scott Thompson	15	391	54-86	251	23-38	379	27	2.5	12	27	10	10	2	122	8.2
Steve Krollman	7	18	0-4	200	15-27	549	76	5.1	20	30	12	24	0	10	1.4
Joe Fish	3	5	0-4	200	0-4	200	4	0.9	2	5	1	0	0	0	0.0
TOREROS (9-6)	15	428-841	317	125-241	451	579	34.8	314	292	137	137	186	45	1111	61.1
Opponents	15	388-841	441	125-241	451	579	34.8	314	292	137	137	186	45	1111	61.1

Abbreviations: G: Games; MIN: Minutes per game; PG: Field Goals; FPG: Field Goal Percentage; FT: Free Throws; FT%: Free Throw Percentage; R: Rebounds; APG: Assists; PF: Personal Fouls; ST: Steals; TO: Turnovers; BL: Blocks; PTS: Points; PPG: Points Per Game.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 9 1984

San Diego Notepad

Toreros play Mt. Marty tonight

The University of San Diego basketball team, fresh from an 81-62 victory over Western Illinois on Saturday night in which Anthony Reuss scored 29 points, takes on Mt. Marty College of Yankton, S.D., tonight at the USD Sports Center at 7:30.

Reuss, a 6-foot-7 junior forward, enjoyed the finest scoring night of his Torero career against Western Illinois, and he'll be in the starting lineup tonight, along with forward Mike Whitmarsh, center Scott Thompson, and guards Mark Bostic and Chris Carr.

Reuss, an former all-county prep star from Christian High, made 13 of 14 shots from the floor against Western Illinois, and he rebounded the miss into a basket.

Aztecs' Leonard Allen snatches the ball away from Toreros' Mike Whitmarsh.

Michael Franklin/The Times-Advocate

Rivalry? It's more a San Diego sleeper

By Jay Posner
Special to The Times-Advocate

SAN DIEGO — If there is indeed a rivalry between San Diego State University and the University of San Diego — and the Aztecs say there isn't — Thursday night's game between the two teams didn't exactly remind anyone of such classics as UCLA-Notre Dame.

In fact, a high school game between Escondido and Orange Glen would probably have been more interesting than the Aztecs' 61-47 victory before a paltry crowd of 3,866 in the Sports Arena.

The Toreros had made noises all week about how much Thursday's contest meant to them — "If we don't win another game this year, I want to win this one," USD forward Mike Whitmarsh had said.

And then the Toreros went out and played like a mediocre high school team. They made just 17 of 58 field goals, a miserable 29 percent, and were never in the game.

The Toreros have now lost five straight to SDSU since the series started up again in 1979. And if USD was trying to earn the Aztecs' respect and promote a crosstown rivalry, it failed miserably.

Even Rodney Dangerfield gets more respect than the Aztecs showed the Toreros after the rout was complete.

"I'm not too sure why there's a rivalry," said center Leonard Allen, who scored eight points and had nine rebounds. "In fact, I don't think there is one. You know, we're in the same city and all that, but there's not a rivalry."

"We're 5-0 against them right now," said Aztecs Coach Smokey Gaines, whose team closed out non-conference play at 9-3 and will open Western Athletic Conference action next Thursday at Texas-El Paso, the undefeated conference favorite. "And we didn't have but three or four thousand people in the stands. I don't consider it a rivalry until we get 10-12,000."

Gaines didn't mention the fact that the Aztecs never draw 10,000 for any game.

USD Coach Jim Brovelli was disappointed, but he insisted the rivalry isn't non-existent.

"What's most disappointing is the way we played," he said. "This was our poorest game of the year, particularly early. We're a better team than that. But we have two intra-city teams here, and this is still a young rivalry. If they don't think there is one, that's fine, but it's still developing."

The Aztecs decided to use a full-court press at the start, which led to an up-tempo, albeit one-sided, first half.

SDSU jumped out to a quick 10-2 lead and expanded it to 21-10 just nine minutes into the game. The Aztecs led, 32-20, at the half, and never let USD any closer than 11 the rest of the way.

The keys for SDSU, beside the Toreros' horrible play, were a solid defense and an inside offense featuring Allen and Michael Cage. The latter scored 12 points and grabbed 10 rebounds in the first half, and wound up with 26 points and 18 rebounds, respectively.

Please see Aztecs, page C3

TOREROS WIN/ Anthony Reuss led all scorers with 19 points and Mike Whitmarsh added 16 Monday night as the University of San Diego overwhelmed Mount Marty's 70-48 at the USD Sports Center. Reuss hit seven of eight shots from the field as the Toreros improved their record to 9-6 against the NCAA Division II school from Yankton, S.D. The Lancers are 4-12.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 12 1984

TOREROS BEATEN — Mary Stanbra was USD's leading scorer in a losing cause last night in Tacoma, Wash., as the University of Puget Sound defeated the Toreros 54-49 in women's basketball. Stanbra scored 10 points as USD completed a winless three-game trip in the Northwest.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 12 1984

Toreras lose 54-49

TACOMA, Wash. — Trish Armstrong scored 10 points here last night to lead the University of Puget Sound to a 54-49 women's basketball victory over the University of San Diego.

Mary Stanbra was the Toreras' high scorer with 10 points as USD completed a winless three-game trip to the Northwest.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 15 1984

Toreras 1-2 in swim meet

University of San Diego's Stacey DeGooyer won the 200-meter freestyle race in 2:00.36 and placed second in two other events yesterday as the Toreras edged UC-Santa Barbara, 68-66, but lost to Utah (85-53) and Nevada-Reno (77-61) in a four-school swimming meet at the Alcalá Park pool.

USD's Shelly McAdoo won the 100 freestyle in :57.69, DeGooyer finished second in 100 and 200 butterfly races, Jan Hollahan was runner-up in the 1,000-meter freestyle and USD won the 200 freestyle relay in 1:45.10.

Laurie Birney, Laurie Maddock, Hollahan and McAdoo swam on the winning USD relay unit.

•Aztecs

Continued from page C1

The San Diego State defense was sparked by Michael Kennedy, who came off the bench to shut down Whitmarsh, the Toreros' leading scorer with a 20-point average. Thursday, however, Whitmarsh made just four of 19 shots from the floor, and although he finished with 16 points, he was never a factor in the game.

It was probably the 6-foot-9 Kennedy's best game since transferring to SDSU from junior college, and he was rewarded by starting the second half in place of Andre Ross.

A native of Jamaica, Kennedy starred at Tyler JC in Texas two years ago and earned All-America honors, but he played only briefly there last year before transferring to San Diego CC where he sat out the remainder of the year.

Kennedy scored 4 points and grabbed 5 rebounds Thursday, but he was more satisfied with his defense.

It's taken Kennedy a little time to get used to his new team, but as he said, "Things are getting more comfortable now. I kept working hard in practice because how you play in practice is how you play in the games. I'm starting to put it all together."

The Aztecs appear to be doing the same thing, having played two good games since losing by 16 to Virginia last week. Gaines thought the press was the key on Thursday.

"Because of the press, we were able to push the tempo and make the early lead," Gaines said. "I told the guys it was important to get the lead right away so we could control the tempo and not let USD play its game (the Toreros prefer a slower pace)."

Added Brovelli: "We were prepared, but sometime you get overemotional and tend to go flat. It's difficult to explain."

"We just have to forget about tonight."

Most of the fans who were at the game would probably like to do the same thing.

Tuesday, January 10, 1984

②

The San Diego Union C-3

USD shakes off both lethargy, Mt. Marty's

By Rick Hazeltine
Special to The Union

The University of San Diego fine-tuned its attack for its West Coast Athletic Conference opener Jan. 19 against Gonzaga by brushing off pesky Mount Marty's 70-48 before an intimate gathering of 180 at the USD Sports Center last night.

The Toreros' swarming defense in the second half held the Lancers, from Yankton, S.D., to just six points in the first 14:45, turning a close 33-31 game at halftime into a rout.

USD's Anthony Ruess continued his hot streak, hitting seven of eight from the field to lead all scorers with 19 points. All-WCAC forward Mike Whitmarsh pumped in 16 as the Toreros improved their record to 9-6. Mt. Marty's, an NCAA Division II school, fell to 4-12.

The Lancers kept the game close in the first half as guards John Boyle and Devin Pesicka consistently hit from 15-20 feet. Boyle hit a 10-foot jump shot to give Mt. Marty's a 21-17 lead with 7:30 left in the first half. The Toreros were unable to score for nearly five minutes until forward Al Moscatel came off the bench and hit two free throws and three straight jumpers from 18 feet to cut the Lancers' lead to 25-23 with 5:23 to go.

USD took the lead for good on a Ruess layup and a 20-footer by John Prunty that made the score 33-29. Pesicka hit an 18-footer to pull Mt. Marty's to within two at the half.

The second half was a different game. The Toreros put on a swarming defense that held the Lancers to just 17 points, with nearly half of those coming with less than two minutes to play.

"We've gone 10 consecutive days without a day off," said Toreros coach Jim Brovelli. "I knew we were going to be tired coming in. At the half I just let my Italian side do a little talking."

The Toreros outscored the Lancers 24-6 in the first 15 minutes of the half. The outside attack that had kept Mt. Marty's in the game the first half went cold and the team suffered through a 6:30 scoring drought that wasn't quenched until Haywood Lampley hit two free throws with 5:44 to go.

For the Toreros, the game served its purpose as a warm-up for their WCAC opener.

"This is the best record we've ever had going into conference," Brovelli said. "But I think we could have won a couple more games."

Gonzaga currently is 7-6, finishing third in the prestigious Far West Classic. But the Bulldogs have been beset with injuries. Three starters from the team that last year tied USD for fourth in the conference either have left the team or have been injured.

Leading Gonzaga will be point guard John Stockton, who is averaging 23.3 points a game, shooting 63 percent from the field and handing out 6.5 assists.

"He's (Stockton) the best point guard in the conference and one of the best on the West Coast," Brovelli said. "Gonzaga is a very disciplined team, they aren't going to give the game away."

The Toreros will host the Bulldogs Jan. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Sports Center. After Gonzaga, USD will host Portland University and Santa Clara before playing its next six of eight on the road.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

JAN 19 1984

Toreros Open WCAC Play

U. of San Diego Toreros will open up WCAC cage play with home games this week against Gonzaga U. tonight and the U. of Portland on Saturday. Both games start approximately 7:35 p.m. in the USD Sports Center.

USD is off to its best start ever, having won 9 games in 15 outings thus far. The Toreros are led by All-WCAC forward Mike Whitmarsh. Mike leads the team in scoring (18.9 ppg), rebounding (8.1 rpg) and assists (5.8 apg). He has led the team in scoring 9 times, rebounding 8 times and assists 17 times.

Coming on strong of late has been junior forward Anthony "Rolls" Reuss.

Anthony totaled 48 points and 21 rebounds in USD's last 2 victories over Western Illinois and Mount Marty College.

On the season, he is shooting .680% from the field (70X103) and is averaging 11.6 ppg and 5.9 rpg.

JAN 10 1984

Los Angeles Times

133 Fans Watch as Unspectacular USD Defeats Mt. Marty

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—For the University of San Diego basketball team, Monday night's game against Mt. Marty College of South Dakota was supposed to be just a tuneup, the last such opportunity before USD begins West Coast Athletic Conference play on Jan. 19.

However, although the final score was 70-48 in their favor, the Toreros hardly looked convincing and the visitors actually led late in the first half.

Mt. Marty College is the Division II team that is 4-12 and has lost all five of its games on its West Coast trip — to Cal State Northridge, Cal Poly Pomona, Cal State Bakersfield and Cal Poly San Luis Obispo.

The Lancers, the pride of Yankton, S.D., shot only 36 percent from the floor Monday night, but out rebounded the taller Toreros, 38-35.

They took the lead midway through the first half on two free throws by center Marvin Veasy and maintained an advantage until USD took the lead for good with 2:10 remaining in the half.

A successful free throw by Anthony Ruess tied the game, 29-29. Replacement guard Al Moscatel stole a pass and, after three quick passes, Ruess scored on a layup that gave USD the lead, 31-29.

USD lost its early game lead because it went scoreless for nearly five minutes midway through the half.

But USD played good defense in the second half and the Lancers didn't score in the first four minutes of the half. Midway through the final period USD held a 49-37 advantage.

"We've had 10 consecutive days without a day off," USD Coach Jim Brovelli said. "You could see we were tired in the first half. Fortunately, in the second half we came out and played good defense."

"We've had some tough games recently. This time of year it's hard to go 10 days without a rest."

The fact that the game was played in front of a "crowd" of 133 didn't encourage the Toreros. Nor did the fact that a USD cheerleader fell during a routine and was taken to the hospital with a hip injury.

"It's a lot easier to get psyched up when there are 10,000 people in the stands and you're on national TV," Brovelli said. "But each game is important. You have to accept what you have and go with it."

But why play a team like this anyway? "Every game can't be as intense as our game was against UC Irvine," Brovelli said. "Every Division I team has college-level teams on its schedule. Some of the games must be designed to build confidence and give you a chance to see your bench play."

All but one of the Toreros saw action, but the pattern of the two starting forwards, Ruess and all-West Coast Athletic Conference player Mike Whitmarsh, leading the team is becoming established.

For the second game in a row, Ruess was the team's leading scorer. He had 19 points and 10 rebounds. Whitmarsh had 16 points, six rebounds and seven assists.

The San Diego Union / James Skovmand

This Mount Marty ball-handler obviously has the attention of USD guard Mark Bostic. A hot second half carried the Toreros, 70-48.

JAN 17 1984

SCOTT THOMPSON
USD Center

Toreros' Statistics

PLAYER	G	MIN	FG	FGP	FT	FTP	R	RPG	A	ST	TO	BL	PTS	PPG
Mike Whitmarsh	15	32.3	107-207	.516	49-97	.711	121	8.1	88	40	24	27	283	18.9
Mark Bostic	15	31.0	78-155	.503	35-51	.686	46	3.1	39	26	19	19	174	11.6
Anthony Reuss	15	28.1	78-173	.451	34-69	.578	88	5.9	27	41	19	19	199	13.3
Scott Thompson	15	26.1	54-98	.551	15-27	.556	76	5.1	20	26	17	24	196	13.1
Chris Carr	15	21.8	34-80	.425	22-32	.688	16	1.1	24	26	17	24	196	13.1
Al Muscetti	15	17.1	36-71	.507	19-27	.693	17	1.1	29	26	20	2	85	5.7
Dave Miller	15	12.7	19-42	.452	23-38	.599	27	2.3	17	16	12	0	58	3.9
John Prunty	15	16.3	22-47	.468	14-15	.933	19	1.3	6	7	4	4	49	3.3
Eric Muselman	8	2.8	7-11	.636	4-8	.500	2	0.3	4	2	1	1	13	1.6
Mark Carasolo	13	9.8	6-15	.400	1-7	.143	15	1.2	6	4	1	1	13	1.0
Randy Brinkley	9	2.3	6-11	.545	1-2	.500	3	0.3	4	2	2	1	13	1.4
Bill Field	4	2.5	2-7	.286	1-2	.500	1	0.3	2	2	1	0	5	1.3
Wes Madden	8	3.3	2-5	.400	0-1	.000	0	0.0	2	1	0	0	4	0.5
Steve Kralman	7	2.8	0-0	.000	0-0	.000	0	0.0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
Joe Fish	3	1.7	0-0	.000	0-0	.000	0	0.0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
TOREROS (9-6)	15	48.0	438-847	.517	235-361	.651	519	34.4	314	292	177	199	1811	121.4
Opponents	15	48.0	388-803	.481	185-306	.607	322	21.5	243	314	88	245	1155	77.0

Abbreviations: G: Games, MIN: Average minutes per game, FG: Field Goals, FGP: Field Goal Percentage, FT: Free Throws, FTP: Free Throw Percentage, R: Rebounds, RPG: Rebounds Per Game, A: Assists, PF: Personal Fouls, ST: Steals, TO: Turnovers, BL: Shots Blocked, PTS: Points, PPG: Points Per Game.

SENTINEL
JAN 18 1984

Toreros open league action tomorrow night

USD, coming off its best non-conference start since joining the NCAA Division I men's basketball ranks, opens West Coast Athletic Conference play this week.

The Toreros host Gonzaga University tonight, then takes on visiting Portland Saturday night. Tipoff for both games is 7:35 at the USD Sports Center in Linda Vista.

The Toreros stand at 9-6, with their latest victory coming last week over visiting Mt. Marty 70-48. The nine victories in pre-conference play better by two the team's previous high, set in 1981, '82 and '83.

USD has definitely proven itself to be a strong home team, with an 8-1 record at the Sports Center. The Toreros only home loss came by a 73-65 score in overtime against Long Beach State.

As expected, returning first-team All-WCAC player Mike Whitmarsh leads USD in scoring, rebounding and assists. The junior forward is averaging 18.9 points, 8.1 rebounds and 5.9 assists per game.

Anthony Reuss, another junior forward, is second on the slub in scoring, with an 11.6 average, and rebounding, with 5.9 per game. He is hitting a blistering 68 percent of his shots.

Guard Mark Bostic averages 11.7 points per game, while center Scott Thompson pulls down an average of 5.1 boards per contest.

The Toreros are outscoring their opponents 74.1-63.7 in an average game, while converting 52 percent of their shots.

They have had some problems on the boards, where they are averaging 34.6 rebounds per game compared to 34.8 for their opponents.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 19 1984

USD hosts Gonzaga in conference opener

The University of San Diego men's basketball team can hardly wait to start the West Coast Athletic Conference (WCAC) season. The 9-6 Toreros are coming off their finest pre-conference campaign since they entered NCAA Division I competition four years ago.

The Toreros tip off the WCAC season tonight at 7:35 by hosting Gonzaga University (10-5) in the USD Sports Center. That's the first of three straight conference home games for the Toreros, who'll entertain Portland Saturday and Santa Clara Jan. 28. USD is 8-1 at home.

Former Monte Vista High and Grossmont College star Mike Whitmarsh is the Toreros' main man. The 6-foot-7 senior's 18.9 scoring averages ranks third in the conference. He's third in rebounding (8.1), third in assists (5.8) and his 53 percent floor shooting (107 of 202) ranks sixth.

Six-foot-7 Anthony Reuss is the WCAC's top floor shooter. The USD junior, a graduate of Christian High, has connected on 68 percent of his 103 shots. His 5.9 rebounding average is the ninth-best in the circuit.

Gonzaga is led by All-America candidate John Stockton, who is the WCAC's leading scorer with a 23.3 average. He connected on 17 of 20 floor shots en route to a 38-point effort in a 91-80 win over Eastern Washington. He followed that with a 26-point, 12-assist performance in an 84-67 triumph over Seattle Pacific.

Portland was 9-7 in non-conference action. The Pilots have played six overtime games, winning four. They open the WCAC season tonight at St. Mary's.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 19 1984

Toreros open run at WCAC

By Bruce Schoenfeld, Staff Writer

Forgive Jim Brovelli if he sounds a little disoriented. The University of San Diego basketball coach isn't used to talking about a conference race he has a chance of winning.

The Toreros, usually destiny's doormats by the time West Coast Athletic Conference play rolls around, are sticking with the pack this season. USD opens conference play against Gonzaga at the USD Sports Center tonight at 7:30 with a 9-6 record, its best start as a Division I team. Only Santa Clara (12-4) and Gonzaga (10-5) have won more games among WCAC teams, and even four-time conference champ Pepperdine seems mortal this season. The Waves (9-7) still are smarting from the loss of all-conference stars Dane Suttle and Orlando Phillips from last season's 20-9 squad.

"As I look up and down the conference, I think on a given night any team is as good as anyone else," said Brovelli. "Santa Clara and probably Gonzaga and Pepperdine have to be the preconference favorites, based on the people they have coming back and the way they've played so far this season, but nobody's out of it."

Not even USD. Brovelli has added four new faces to last season's 11-15 team that finished tied for fourth in the WCAC, the Toreros best finish ever. Junior College transfers Chris Carr (Santa Monica JC) and Mark Bostic (Central Arizona CC) have stepped in to form a starting backcourt, with Bostic second on the team in scoring at 11.7 points per game.

USD's big name, however, is senior forward Mike Whitmarsh, who is third in the league in scoring (18.9) and rebounding (8.1).

"Obviously, for us to contend, Mike Whitmarsh has to continue to play as well as he's played," said Brovelli. "He's done everything we could have expected from him."

Anthony Reuss, the junior who plays opposite Whitmarsh, has chipped in with some big games. Reuss leads the WCAC with a 68 percent shooting percentage from the floor, and he's 12th in scoring at 11.6. As a team, the Toreros are second in the conference in both scoring and defense, and first by nearly two points in average scoring margin.

"And our schedule has been as good as almost anyone's," said Brovelli.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

JAN 19 1984

USD, Gonzaga to Open WCAC Season Tonight

SAN DIEGO—What University of San Diego basketball Coach Jim Brovelli calls "the second season," begins tonight when his Toreros hosts Gonzaga University at the Sports Center at 7:30 p.m.

The game is the West Coast Athletic Conference opener for both schools.

Last season, USD finished in a fourth-place tie with Gonzaga in the league standings. The finish was the best ever for USD, now in its fifth season of play in the seven-team league.

At 9-6, the Toreros take their best ever preconference record into league play. And, they're 8-1 at the Sports Center, having lost only to Cal State Long Beach in overtime.

Gonzaga (10-5) has one of the West Coast's best guards in John Stockton, a 6-1 senior. Stockton is shooting 65 percent from the field and averaging 23.3 points, 6.5 assists and 4.3 steals per game. Although Gonzaga didn't make the finals of the Far West Classic, Stockton was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Brovelli plans to start 6-11 freshman center Scott Thompson, all-West Coast Athletic Conference forward Mike Whitmarsh, averaging 18.9 points per game, forward Anthony Reuss, guard Chris Carr and guard Mark Bostic.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 19 1984

Toreros take 'edge' into league play

The University of San Diego just concluded its most successful non-conference basketball schedule as a Division I team. Now, all Torero coach Jim Brovelli can hope is that his squad can maintain a similar level through the rest of the season.

The Toreros, 9-6 on the year thus far, open their West Coast Athletic Conference schedule tonight against Gonzaga (10-5) at the USD Sports Center. Tipoff is set for 7:30.

Getting a seat at midcourt is not a problem at University of San Diego games at the Sports Center. BARBARA MARTIN / Los Angeles Times

Coldest Ticket in Town

It's Really Easy to Find a Good Seat for a University of San Diego Game

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego men's basketball team may have set a record for nonattendance on Jan. 9 when it hosted Mount Marty College, a Division 2 team from Yankton, S.D.

Only 133 fans showed up at the 2,000-seat Sports Center for that one.

Mount Marty is hardly one of the biggest draws in sports, but the acute lack of interest was an example of what the Toreros have faced all season. Average attendance at nine home games has been only 401. Presumably, the price of admission—$3 for adults and $2 for students and free for USD students—is not keeping fans away.

"Obviously, we would like to play before a sellout," Toreros Coach Jim Brovelli said. "Everybody wants to play in front of a crowd."

Brovelli's teams have played before home sellouts many times before. When USD was a top Division 2 team in the late 1970s, capacity crowds at the Sports Center were not unusual. But since USD moved up to Division I four years ago, sellouts have been rare.

Fans want to see a winner and in their first four seasons in Division I the Toreros weren't. This season, just when USD (9-6) was catching fire on its home court (the Toreros are 8-1 there with the lone defeat coming in overtime against Cal State Long Beach, 73-65), students went on a holiday break.

That break lasts until Jan. 25. "Part of our problem is that the students start exams Dec. 10," Athletic Director Rev. Patrick Cahill said. "This is an academic university. So, we lose the students."

Please see USD, Page 6

6 Part III / Wednesday, January 18, 1984 J

USD

Continued from Page 1

from the time exams start until Jan. 25."

But the fundamental problem is still that fans want to see a winner.

"People want to see you win at home every time," Brovelli said. "We are getting close to doing that."

Cahill: "It's the history of teams in San Diego. San Diegans will support a winner, but otherwise they would rather do something else."

If USD completes its fifth Division 1 season with a winning record, it may begin to reverse its losing image. But Cahill already has plans to increase attendance for the West Coast Athletic Conference opener Thursday against Gonzaga at the Sports Center.

"We are offering free tickets to University High, Francis Parker and St. Augustine to students and their parents," he said. "We are trying the giveaways and later hope to get paying fans."

Cahill seems most disappointed about the lack of student support during semesters.

"If the students came to the games we would pack the gym for every game," he said. "We get a good student attendance at our football games, even though football is Division 3. I don't know why football has more appeal. That just seems to be the place to be on Saturday."

The last time USD had a sellout at the Sports Center was Jan. 29, 1983 against Pepperdine, which is probably the biggest name team in the WCAC now that the University of San Francisco abandoned the sport.

But there are other factors besides semester breaks, apathy and losing records that affect attendance. One is tradition. Since USD is young and only in its fifth year in Division I, there really isn't any heritage, particularly when compared to the established Eastern and Midwestern institutions.

"We just don't have a lot of alumni and a long athletic tradition," Cahill said.

Second, there are no big-time teams in the conference that are highly recognizable.

"I think we were hurt with the demise of San Francisco," Cahill said. "They were the big-name team in the West Coast Athletic Conference. With their loss a big name was lost. With all due respect to teams like St. Mary's and Gonzaga, they are not big names in San Diego and not big names in basketball."

Third, USD has difficulty scheduling big-name teams. These schools won't come to play in the Sports Center and the Toreros are reluctant to rent the 14,000-seat San Diego Sports Arena just to attract them.

The overhead cost of renting the Sports Arena is something USD prefers not to take on just yet. San Diego State, the big-name team in town, has a winning record and rents the Sports Arena for its home games.

But the Aztecs' biggest crowd this year was 6,494

There's lots of room to stretch out at USD home games, where the average crowd is 401. BARBARA MARTIN / Los Angeles Times against Virginia in the final of the Cabrillo Classic.

San Diego State, with an undergraduate enrollment of about 26,000, compared to USD's 3,200, has averaged only 3,800 fans for eight home games this season. And that's even with advertising.

This year, the Toreros' image was improving before they lost abysmally to San Diego State at the Sports Arena before 3,866 on Jan. 5. USD hasn't beaten the Aztecs since moving up to Division I.

"I don't buy the idea that this is not a basketball town," Brovelli said.

Cahill: "When we were in Division 2 and winning, the place was packed against no-name teams. The analogy seems to be to win."

At least for now, the Toreros seem to be in a no-win situation.

USD lacks consistency in search for credibility

By Michael Canepa
Tribune Staff Writer

They have progressed in each of the last four seasons. And each one has represented another step closer toward the upper echelon of the West Coast Athletic Conference basketball standings.

University of San Diego coach Jim Brovelli, for one, long has entertained dreams of his program some day reaching such a destination. There are even those who feel it's inevitable. But he also knows that in order to do so, the Toreros will have to practice a certain degree of consistency, as well as win the close games.

And, ironically, they managed neither last night in their conference opener against Gonzaga.

"This is something we're going to have to get used to because almost all of our games from here on out will be like this one," said a disappointed Brovelli, after his team dropped a last-second 60-58 decision to the Bulldogs at the USD Sports Center.

"It's so darn tough to win on the road in this conference that it makes your home schedule that much more important."

"Gonzaga is an experienced club and we have a lot of new faces... some of them have played together three and four years. But I could list excuses all night. The bottom line is that you have to play the entire 40 minutes."

About all the Toreros could maintain was a solid 20. And that was only out of desperation in the second half when the Bulldogs assumed a 15-point advantage in the early going. Gonzaga had hit 73 percent (on 19 of 26 shots) from the floor during that opening period, many of those chances coming off defensive mistakes under the basket.

"If you had to look for a bright side, I guess the second half would be it," said USD senior forward Mike Whitmarsh, who was held to just 10 points, nearly nine below his season average. "It was a nice comeback, but I don't know what happened before that. In some ways, it was a lot like the San Diego State game (a 61-47 Aztec win) earlier this year."

"I got the feeling personally that I just couldn't get into the game. I think the whole team came out lackadaisical. Still, after all that, I thought we were going to pull it out. That's a team we wanted to beat; a team we should have beat."

Instead, for the fifth straight year since they joined the WCAC and the Division I status it represents, the Toreros opened conference play on a down note. Last season they went on to tie for fourth place. Brovelli would at least like to top that finish this time.

"Every year we've seemed to improve and we obviously want to continue that kind of a trend," he said. "It's been a battle just to get where we're at, but to improve from here will be a lot tougher. If you're talking championship, you're talking about a major, major goal."

"This isn't an easy conference."

USD's MIKE WHITMARSH TAKES A SHOT

JAN 21 1984

USD Hosts Portland in WCAC Game

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego basketball team will be looking for its first West Coast Athletic Conference win when it hosts the University of Portland at 7:30 tonight at the Sports Center.

The Toreros lost to Gonzaga, 60-58, on a field goal at the buzzer Thursday. Portland (9-8) lost its conference opener to St. Mary's College, 63-59.

Portland is led by 6-8 junior center Darran Jenkins, who is averaging 11.1 points per game. Portland is noted for rebounding and USD (9-7) has been vulnerable in that area.

"They are a big, physical team," USD Coach Jim Brovelli said. "They will be the toughest team that we have faced on the boards."

TIMES-ADVOCATE

JAN 22 1984

USD 65, Portland 63
SAN DIEGO — Forward Mike Whitmarsh paced the Toreros with 22 points as the University of San Diego defeated the Portland in a West Coast Athletic Conference game.

San Diego raised its overall mark to 10-7 and its WCAC mark to 1-1. Portland dropped to 9-9 and 0-2.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 22 1984

WOMEN

Pepperdine 68, University of San Diego 58 — The Waves (9-11) scored 15 unanswered points in the second half to defeat the Toreros (8-11) at the Sports Center. Mary Stanbra and Debbie Theroux led USD with 13 points apiece.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 20 1984

The San Diego Union/Peter Koelman

USD's Chris Carr hovers over Gonzaga's John Stockton.

USD falls to Gonzaga on final-second shot

By Hank Wesch
Staff Writer

Gonzaga University forward Jeff Reinert took a pass from guard John Stockton and threw home a 12-foot jump shot with one second remaining to defeat the University of San Diego 60-58 last night in a West Coast Athletic Conference basketball opener for both teams at Alcala Park.

USD rallied from a 15-point deficit early in the second half to take a two-point lead twice in the final 7:17, but couldn't avoid losing a WCAC opener for the fifth year in a row. That's every year since the Toreros advanced to NCAA Division I status and joined the conference.

"Every game in this conference is going to be tough, and it's going to boil down to the teams that are fortunate enough to win the one- and two-point games or the overtime games," said USD coach Jim Brovelli. "We got ourselves in a hole the first half, but our kids came back and played a great second half. Unfortunately, we made a couple mistakes and turnovers in key situations that cost us."

When it gets to the nitty-gritty of games, Gonzaga has the luxury of Stockton. Though the senior from Spokane, Wash. — where Gonzaga is located — is listed as only 6-1 and appears shorter, Bulldog coach Jay Hillock is fond of pointing out that Stockton is the type of player who can dominate a game.

Or in the case of last night's contest, merely apply influence at all the right times.

With USD leading 54-52 with less than six minutes remaining, Stockton hit a driving layup in heavy traffic, then stole a pass and drove for a full-twisting, left-handed layup to put Gonzaga on top. Moments later, Stockton slapped the ball away from USD's Chris Carr, broke downcourt and took a pass for another layup.

USD tied the score at 58 with a layup by Mike Whitmarsh and two free throws by Anthony Reuss with 2:16 remaining. But Gonzaga ran the clock down to 15 seconds, called time out and set up for a last shot.

So with eight seconds left Stockton took the ball, drove down the lane closely guarded by USD's Mark Bostic, and found Reinert, who was left briefly unattended when Whitmarsh sidled over to try and stop Stockton's drive.

Reinert, a 38 percent field goal shooter, made his jumper despite a frantic attempt by the remaining Toreros to pick him up.

"They did the right thing," Hillock said. "They played percentage basketball and got one of our low percentage shooters to take the last shot. It's a great game to win, a tough one to lose."

Stockton led all scorers with 17 points, and Jeff Condill added 13 for Gonzaga. Reuss had 13 points and a team-high 13 rebounds for USD. Carr had 12 points, Bostic 11 and Whitmarsh 10. Gonzaga is now 11-5 for the season, USD 9-7.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 20 1984

USD LOSES/ The University of San Diego men's basketball team lost its West Coast Athletic Conference (WCAC) opener Thursday night to visiting Gonzaga University 60-58. Gonzaga all-around guard John Stockton flipped a pass to teammate Jeff Reinert who netted a 12-foot jumper with one second remaining for the win. Gonzaga is now 11-5 overall. USD fell to 9-7. The Toreros had four players in double figures — Anthony Reuss with 13, Chris Carr 12, Mark Bostic 11 and Mike Whitmarsh 10. Stockton had a game-high 17 points and 13 assists. Whitmarsh handed out 12 assists and had five steals. Reuss collected four steals. USD returns to conference activity Saturday night when it hosts Portland University for a 7:30 p.m. tipoff. Portland is also 0-1. The Pilots lost 63-59 to St. Mary's.

BLADE TRIBUNE

JAN 20 1984

Gonzaga 60, USD 58 — Jeff Reinert hit a 12-foot jumper at the buzzer, lifting Gonzaga over San Diego Thursday night in a West Coast Athletic Conference game.

USD, 9-7 and 0-1, chipped away, taking the only lead of the half at 4:52 on an dunk by Mark Bostic off a pass from Mike Whitmarsh.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

6 Part III/Friday, January 20, 1984 J

Gonzaga Defeats USD at the Buzzer in WCAC Opener, 60-58

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Forward Jeff Reinert hit a 15-foot jump shot at the buzzer to give Gonzaga a 60-58 victory over University of San Diego Thursday night in the West Coast Athletic Conference opener for both teams. The game was played before an announced crowd of 332.

Anthony Reuss, who led USD with 13 points, made two free throws with 2:16 to play to tie the score, 58-58. Gonzaga (11-5) elected to play for the last shot. The ran the clock down to 15 seconds before calling a time out.

After the inbound play, all-WCAC guard John Stockton tried to penetrate USD's man-to-man defense but couldn't. He passed to Reinert, whose shot ended the game and USD's chance to win their first WCAC opener.

"What happened was everybody was so tired," Gonzaga coach Jay Hillock said, "that it is difficult for a defense to exert much pressure. And if San Diego had exerted too much pressure, we might have driven in for a layup."

"In that situation you are damned if you do and damned if you don't. They played it perfectly. The ball went to our worst perimeter shooter, who fortunately made it."

"We got ourselves in trouble in the first half," USD coach Jim Brovelli said. "The kids came back and played a great second half."

Strong rebounding and good defense by Gonzaga allowed it to take a 39-26 halftime lead.

The Bulldogs took the first half lead for good, 18-17, on a Tim Ruff field goal with 10:52 remaining. Gonzaga then went on an 8-2 spurt and by halftime all the Bulldog starters had scored at least two points, while only Jeff Condill was in double figures with 11 points.

Although Gonzaga scored the first field goal of the second half, USD cut Gonzaga's lead through good man-to-man defense until tying the game, 50-50, on a Chris Carr field goal.

Stockton was the high scorer with 17 points. For USD, Carr had 12 points, Mark Bostic 11 and all-WCAC forward Mike Whitmarsh 10.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 21

USD, Point Loma post wins in conference

It was a good day for San Diego County schools as basketball teams Saturday. The University of San Diego evened its West Coast Athletic Conference record at 1-1 by defeating Portland 60-58. Point Loma Nazarene College whipped Pepperdine 76-70, and San Diego State jumped BYU 74-75.

In another game, former Grossmont College stars Larry White and Tom Ruettgen combined for 18 points to lead Cal State-Northridge past Cal State-Bakersfield 71-57 in Bakersfield.

In women's basketball, former Helix High and Grossmont College standout Debbie Theroux scored 13 points but it wasn't enough as USD fell to Pepperdine 68-58.

Forward Mike Whitmarsh, a product of Monte Vista High and Grossmont College, paced USD with 22 points. He clicked on seven of 11 floor shots and eight of 11 free throws. He also grabbed a team-high eight rebounds. Teammate Anthony Reuss, a graduate of Christian, tossed in 11 points.

Freshman Eric Musselman, a 91 percent free throw shooter, came off the bench to attempt a bonus free-throw opportunity with USD leading 62-59 and 1:29 unplayed. Musselman missed the front end of the bonus, but grabbed a rebound at the other end of the floor. He was fouled. This time he sank the two free throws to seal the win for USD.

Former Griffins Scott Vaughns (17 points, six rebounds) and Brian Caradonna (11 points) guided Point Loma College to its third NALA District 3 victory in four starts. The Crusaders, 11-8 overall, meet Southern California College Tuesday in Costa Mesa.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 23 1984

FOOTBALL COACHES' CLINIC

Football coaches on all levels are invited to attend a five-week clinic that begins Thursday night at 6:30. The program will be conducted once a week during the five-week session at the Kensington/Normal Heights Branch of the San Diego Federal Savings Bank, 3844 Adams Avenue.

The featured speaker will be Bill Williams, former USD coach and currently with the Chicago Blitz of the United States Football League. Each presentation is to include a lecture, demonstrations and film clip analysis.

For clinic fee and more information, call 578-7034.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

J Sunday, January 22, 1984/Part III 7

Freshman Eric Musselman Helps USD Beat Portland

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego had a most unlikely hero in its 65-63 West Coast Athletic Conference victory over the University of Portland Saturday night.

With 1:29 remaining and the Toreros holding a 62-59 lead, guard Mark Bostic was fouled by a Portland player, thus setting up a one-and-one free throw opportunity. Bostic, however, had sprained his ankle in the fall and was taken to the training room.

"I looked down the bench and there was Eric (Musselman)," USD coach Jim Brovelli said. "I said 'Do you want to go, Eric?' and he said 'Yeah, coach.'"

Musselman, a 5-11 freshman guard, went in and missed the free throw. However, at the other end of the floor, he grabbed a rebound and was fouled in the process.

This time, with 1:09 on the clock, he made both free throws and sealed the win in front of an announced crowd of 570.

"I was glad I got the rebound," Musselman said. "I really wanted to try the free throws again. The first time I was nervous, but the second time I knew they'd go in. I'm very confident about my free throw shooting."

Musselman shot 91 percent from the line during his senior season in the Pioneer League in suburban Cleveland. He is eight of 11 for 73 percent in his USD career.

After Musselman's shots, Portland could get only two field goals, while USD got one free throw from guard Chris Carr.

Portland fought back from a 47-31 deficit with 12:40 remaining by using of a full-court press.

"That stopped the clock every time down the floor," Brovelli said. "They fouled us every other time down the floor. Fortunately, the kids made the free throws for the most part."

USD was 21 for 30 from the line in the second half for 70 percent and 23 for 35 for the game. The home team needed every advantage it could get because the visitors out-rebounded the Toreros, 34-18.

"They're an extremely physical team," Brovelli said. "They and Santa Clara are probably the best rebounding teams in the league."

The win left the Toreros 1-1 in the WCAC and 10-7 overall. Portland is 0-2 and 9-9.

All-WCAC forward Mike Whitmarsh was the game's leading scorer with 22 points. He was seven of 11 from the floor and eight of 11 from the line. Forward Anthony Reuss had 11 points and Carr 10.

The visitors were led by forward Dwayne Corbitt with 16 points.

USD guard John Prunty, who finished with 13 points, shot four for four from the floor in the first half to power the home team to a 32-22 lead by the half. Prunty, who entered the game midway through the first half and played a total of 24 minutes, made his final shot from the corner with six seconds left to give USD its final first-half points.

Portland quickly took the ball out and moved down the floor, but a desperation shot by forward Dennis Black failed.

January 22, 1984

Musselman's 2 free throws aid USD win

By Rich Feuerstein, Special to The Union

A vicious collision sent Mark Bostic sprawling to the gym floor. His ankle was so badly twisted he couldn't shoot his one-and-one free throws. With 1:29 to go and his team leading Portland 62-59, University of San Diego coach Jim Brovelli was faced with a difficult decision:

Who would shoot the one-and-one?

Brovelli looked down the bench. "Eric, you feel like it?" Brovelli asked freshman Eric Musselman.

"Yeah," said Musselman.

Musselman went to the line. With 570 fans at the USD Sports Center looking on, Musselman crouched and took aim. The ball arced nicely. But it hit the rim and missed.

Portland raced down the court. Under the basket, three USD defenders surrounded Portland's Dwayne Corbitt. Musselman reached in, stole the ball, and was fouled again. An opportunity for redemption.

Given a second chance to be a hero, Musselman cashed in. He hit both free throws, giving USD a 64-59 lead with 1:09 to go and providing the Toreros with enough cushion to hang on for a 65-63 victory.

The win was USD's first in the West Coast Athletic Conference after a loss to Gonzaga Thursday in the conference opener.

The record will reflect Musselman was taken out after sinking the critical free throws. He played just 10 seconds. Not enough time to work up a sweat. But his contribution did not go unnoticed.

"He's a feisty little guy," Brovelli said. "I have confidence in him."

Musselman, 5-foot-8, grew up with a basketball in his hands. His father is Bill Musselman, former coach of the San Diego Sails, Cleveland Cavaliers and the University of Minnesota. After an outstanding career at Brecksville (Ohio) High School where he averaged 23 points and eight assists a game and canned 89 per cent of his free throws (best in Cleveland), Eric Musselman wanted to come to USD because he lived in San Diego as a ninth-grader.

His father, who coached very physical teams, would have appreciated last night's struggle.

"Portland is an extremely physical team," Brovelli said. "The most physical in the conference along with Santa Clara."

Good free-throw shooting enabled USD to keep its lead. The Toreros made nine of 12 in the final five minutes.

Whitmarsh led all scorers with 22 points. John Prunty, who was 4-for-4 from long range, had 13. Anthony Reuss had 11 and Chris Carr had 10. Dwayne Corbitt led Portland with 16.

The Toreros play home against Santa Clara next Saturday.

USD Expects Bostic to Play Saturday

SAN DIEGO—University of San Diego guard Mark Bostic, who sprained an ankle in a 65-63 victory over the University of Portland last Saturday night, is expected to play when USD (10-7, 1-1) hosts Santa Clara in a West Coast Athletic Conference game on Saturday.

Bostic, who averages 11.1 points per game, is expected to participate in a full practice today. Bostic did not work out Monday. Bostic was injured in a second-half collision with a Portland player.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 24 1984

MIKE WHITMARSH
Top Torero

Toreros' Statistics
PLAYER	G	MIN	FG	FGP	FT	FTP	R	REB	A	PF	ST	TO	BL	PTS
Mike Whitmarsh	17	34.1	118-222	.532	78-112	.705	134	79	105	48	19	42	8	315
Anthony Reuss	17	28.9	78-128	.609	48-69	.696	94	55	35	49	24	21	6	188
Mark Bostic	17	28.9	75-107	.699	26-37	.703	44	50	29	27	27	22	13	177
Scott Thompson	17	26.9	58-109	.532	15-28	.536	83	49	22	22	13	27	22	131
Chris Carr	17	22.9	45-83	.543	28-40	.700	18	18	39	31	20	30	1	112
Al Moschetti	16	16.3	26-34	.765	10-21	.476	17	11	26	10	10	14	0	77
John Prunty	17	16.3	26-34	.765	10-21	.476	17	11	26	10	10	14	0	77
Dave McIver	17	12.2	26-44	.591	22-38	.579	27	23	14	29	10	12	2	67
Eric Musselman	9	2.4	7-11	.636	6-11	.545	1	14	15	12	6	7	4	19
Mario Coronado	13	9.8	6-15	.400	1-2	.500	3	6	3	4	8	1	1	13
Randy Brinkley	9	2.8	6-11	.545	1-2	.500	1	6	3	4	8	1	1	13
Bill Penfold	4	2.5	2-5	.400	0-0	.000	11	14	2	7	0	5	1	6
Nils Madden	7	2.6	0-1	.000	0-1	.000	4	6	9	2	5	1	0	0
Steve Krotzman	3	1.7	0-0	.000	0-0	.000	2	1	0	0	0	0	0	0
Joe Fish	17	48.8	443-931	.477	284-419	.678	589	343	278	353	183	283	42	1078
TOREROS (10-7)
Opponents

Abbreviations: G: Games, MIN: Average minutes per game, FG: Field Goals, FGP: Field Goal Percentage, FT: Free Throws, FTP: Free Throw Percentage, R: Rebounds, REB: Rebounds Per Game, A: Assists, PF: Personal Fouls, ST: Steals, TO: Turnovers, BL: Shots Blocked, PTS: Points, PPG: Points Per Game.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 25 1984

Christian's Dan Henson takes USD coaching job

By Mike Mathison
of The Daily Californian

There really is no truth to the rumor that Dan Henson has a revolving door at Christian High school with his name engraved on it. It may seem like it, though, with all the coming and going he has done the past three years.

That door has taken another turn. Henson is going again. His on-again, off-again relationship with Christian High is off-again.

Henson has accepted a position with head coach Brian Foggarty and the University of San Diego football team.

The 31-year-old Henson leaves Christian for the second time in three years. He departed his head coaching job in 1981 to become an assistant coach at Southwestern College in Chula Vista. He returned to the El Cajon campus and his head coaching duties after one year with the Apaches.

"There was no opportunities to work full-time there (Southwestern)," Henson said. "The classes the assistant coaches were able to teach were all cut back. If I would have had a teaching job at Southwestern I would have stayed there."

A full-time teaching position at USD is more promising Henson believes.

Henson made the move also because he felt it was time to get out of the high school ranks.

"The big thing for me is to make the move now," Henson remarked. "I've talked to too many guys who waited too long to make their move. They wish they would've but didn't. I had to move out now or be hurt in the long haul. If I would have waited another five to seven years I wouldn't have been able to make the move at all. I would have probably had to take a pay cut to start on the college level then."

"I would like to stay around Christian next year. I think it could be the best team we've ever had here. Next year there will be a definite reaping of what we have sown over the past 12 months."

Henson will be working with the offensive backfield at USD.

"Brian Foggarty is a class guy," Henson said. "I respect the way he handles the kids and the program."

Henson said his working with the Toreros could aid USD in recruiting the local talent.

"I know most of the high school football coaches in the county and I think it would be a good recruiting thing," he said. "There are a lot of high school players who want to continue their education and play football. They are not the blue-chippers, but are the ones who are passed over."

"I don't feel they have really researched the type of kid in San Diego who could go to USD. A lot of San Diego football players can fit in."

A decision on Christian's new football coach is expected by Feb. 3.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

JAN 28 1984

USD's Scott Thompson Is Injured

SAN DIEGO—University of San Diego center Scott Thompson is unlikely to play in tonight's game against the University of Santa Clara at 7:30 at the Sports Center.

Thompson, a 6-11 freshman from Citrus Heights, broke a small toe early this week and his participation is doubtful, USD Coach Jim Brovelli said Friday.

Thompson, a starter, is averaging 7.7 points and five rebounds per game for USD (10-7, 1-1).

Santa Clara (14-5, 2-1) suffered its first West Coast Athletic Conference loss Thursday night, 81-64, at St. Mary's.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 29 1984

USD succumbs to Arizona

Guard Karen Smith scored 26 points to lead Arizona to a 69-62 victory over the University of San Diego in a non-conference women's basketball game at The Events Center in Tucson, Ariz., last night.

Mary Standra, a 5-10 junior forward, led USD (9-12) with 18 points. Debbie Theroux added 13 points while Lori Morris had 10. Jill Bradley led the Toreros in rebounds with seven.

The Wildcats led most of the game and were ahead 29-23 at the half. Arizona outrebounded the shorter Toreros 44-30 and outshot them at the free throw line 15-of-18 to USD's 7-of-16.

READER

JAN 26 1984

USD Basketball, USD meets Santa Clara, Saturday, January 28, 7:30 p.m., USD Sports Center, Linda Vista Road, Alcala Park. 291-6480 x4272.

D-6 THE TRIBUNE

San Diego, Thursday, January 26, 1984

College Corner:

Toreras' path to the penthouse strewn with stones

By T.R. Reinman

Tribune Staff Writer

Take a look at the national map of women's college basketball. The former NCAA championship capitals were at Old Dominion in Norfolk, Va.; in Cleveland, Miss., home of Delta State; and Ruston, La., where the Lady Techsters of Louisiana Tech suit up.

Now the road to the top has stretched to Los Angeles — USC, to be exact — with Cheryl Miller and the Women of Troy in the governor's mansion. Other city-states applying for admission to the union are Long Beach State and San Diego State, a couple of red-hot up-and-comers.

Elsewhere on the map there are lines drawn to the edge, ending in "To UC-Irvine" or "To USD."

In the latter case, at least, what the map doesn't say is that "To USD" is a far piece. The Toreros are in the same Division I galaxy, but...

"All programs take awhile to develop," said Debbie Theroux, who leads the Toreros in scoring (10.4), rebounding (9.5), free throw percentage, steals and blocks.

"I'm happy where I am," she says. "The hope is that in It's fun because each day we learn something new and we're growing. We're getting to be a better team.

— Debbie Theroux

a couple of years we'll have a reputation as a sound, competitive program that could... well, give some of those teams a good game, at least."

Tonight the USD women, losers of five of their last six games, are trying to improve their 8-11 record at North San Diego. Along the way there have been other little victories.

"We held San Diego State 25 points under their average the first time we played them," Theroux said, even though State won 74-51. "And (Cal Poly) Pomona (a 15-point winner) was the Division II champ last year. We came out and stung them, but in the end some other factors came into play."

Like? "They were taller, a little quicker." "That'll do it most of the time."

"But we're improving," Theroux says. "We're getting the bigger players we need. Well, 6-foot-1... 6-2. Every little bit helps. Right now when we go out against a couple of girls 6-3... 6-4, we just flip a coin to see who'll take who."

Earlier this month there was some question about who the Toreros had taken to the Oregon State Classic. An Oregon State manager wanted to know if USD had brought its centers. Assistant coach Cindy Fischer pointed to 5-10 Theroux, 6-0 Jill Bradley and 6-0 Bambi Bruning. The manager said "Where? Who? Them?"

Theroux has been humming Aretha Franklin's "Respect" for years now, though. A two-time All-CIF pick at Helix High and the Grossmont League MVP her senior year, she missed a good shot at a scholarship because her interscholastic season ended late in the spring, by the time most college programs have dispersed their scholarship money.

"But that was all right because I wasn't basing my college future on that anyway," Theroux said.

So she went to Chapman College in Orange for a year, but ended up quitting the basketball team.

"The coach was a little too demanding, I think," she says. "But I wasn't mature enough to handle it, either. So, I chose school instead."

And then she chose Grossmont Community College, where last year she was the co-MVP of the Pacific Coast Conference, averaging 13 points and eight rebounds.

And now she's at USD. Right galaxy, wrong light year.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 27 1984

DEBBIE ON THE DIME — It was clutch time, and Debbie Theroux answered the call with a basket as time ran out to give the University of San Diego Lady Toreros a 57-55 victory over Northern Arizona last night at Flagstaff, Ariz.

Theroux's basket came on her third attempt for winning points after rebounding a miss by Lori Morris with four seconds on the clock.

The Toreros (9-11) were also led by Theroux, who had 17 points and 12 rebounds.

USD moves over to Tucson to play the University of Arizona tomorrow.

DEBBIE THEROUX
Buzzer bucket

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 27 1984

Tomorrow night at 7:30, the University of San Diego Toreros (10-7 overall, 1-1 in the WCAC) will face West Coast Athletic Conference foe, the Santa Clara Broncos (14-5 overall, 2-1 in the WCAC) after losing 81-64 to St. Mary's last night) at the USD Sports Center.

SAN DIEGO UNION

JAN 27 1984

Theroux lifts USD to win

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. — Debbie Theroux scored a layup with no time remaining as the University of San Diego defeated Northern Arizona 57-55 here last night.

Theroux's basket came on her third attempt for the winning points after rebounding a miss by Lori Morris with four seconds.

Northern Arizona's Julie Hanks had tied the game at 55 with 13 seconds to go.

Theroux led USD (9-11) with 17 points and 12 rebounds. Hanks led Northern Arizona (8-8) with 19.

Tribune photo by Tony Doubek

USD'S DEBBIE THEROUX TAKES AIM
Her goal is to put the Toreros on the college basketball map

Still, she has a good vantage point to watch the rest of the women's basketball world race by. San Diego State is well within sight.

"They have a nice team but now they're coming up against teams that are just as tall and quick," Theroux said, fingering a three-inch scar on her left forearm left by the nails of State's Dee Dee Duncan. "They'll get progressively better, but so will we. Right now we don't have the height to match up a lot of the time. Even though we're Division I, it'll take some time to get to where we want to be."

Winning more games, in-conference or not, should help. Last year USD went 8-18. The Toreros already have won that many games this year, and play six of their last seven in town.

Bringing in more quality players to go with sophomores Theroux and scoring guard Michelle Dykstra should help. Coach Kathy Marpe sends out a team that has two seniors, two juniors and 10 underclassmen. Cathy O'Brien, a former All-CIF player from San Marcos, is redshirting after transferring from Notre Dame. Theroux and O'Brien are among the top 10 career high school scorers and rebounders in the county.

Pressure is something the Women of Troy are learning to live with, and something on which the Women of Montezuma are taking notes. For the USD women the only pressure, subtle and self-imposed as it may be, is to win more games than they did last year.

"It's fun," Theroux says, "because each day we learn something new and we're growing. We're getting to be a better team."

They're still not on the map, but at least there's a marked road to follow.

THE TRIBUNE

JAN 31 1984

MARK BOSTIC
Double-digit scorer

Toreros' Statistics
PLAYER	G	MIN	FG	FGP	FT	FTP	R	REB	A	PF	ST	TO	BL	PTS
Mike Whitmarsh	18	34.4	122-222	.550	86-122	.705	143	79	102	48	19	42	8	321
Anthony Reuss	18	29.5	84-120	.700	42-72	.583	100	60	38	28	24	21	6	210
Mark Bostic	18	31.2	86-128	.664	41-62	.661	50	29	59	31	27	38	5	201
Scott Thompson	18	26.8	59-111	.532	15-28	.536	88	49	24	24	13	27	25	122
Chris Carr	18	22.8	46-89	.517	20-33	.606	29	11	29	34	20	30	1	102
Al Moschetti	17	15.6	26-36	.722	10-22	.455	15	6	34	22	11	14	0	84
John Prunty	18	16.7	23-40	.575	10-22	.455	17	10	30	36	11	20	1	86
Dave McIver	18	12.9	26-44	.591	22-38	.579	27	23	14	29	10	12	2	71
Eric Musselman	9	2.4	7-11	.636	6-11	.545	1	14	15	12	6	7	4	19
Mario Coronado	14	9.4	10-17	.588	1-2	.500	3	6	3	4	8	1	1	13
Randy Brinkley	9	2.8	6-11	.545	1-2	.500	3	6	3	4	8	1	1	13
Bill Penfold	4	2.5	2-5	.400	0-0	.000	11	14	2	7	0	5	1	6
Nils Madden	7	2.6	0-1	.000	0-1	.000	4	6	9	2	5	1	0	0
Steve Krotzman	3	1.7	0-0	.000	0-0	.000	2	1	0	0	0	0	0	0
Joe Fish	17	48.8	443-931	.477	284-419	.678	589	343	278	353	183	283	42	1078
TOREROS (11-7)
Opponents

Abbreviations: G: Games, MIN: Average minutes per game, FG: Field Goals, FGP: Field Goal Percentage, FT: Free Throws, FTP: Free Throw Percentage, R: Rebounds, REB: Rebounds Per Game, A: Assists, PF: Personal Fouls, ST: Steals, TO: Turnovers, BL: Shots Blocked, PTS: Points, PPG: Points Per Game.

JAN 29 1984

Toreros whip Broncos 69-62

By Bruce Schoenfeld, Staff Writer

Call it the biggest win in the history of the University of San Diego basketball program if you want, but realize that the Toreros have no intention of stopping here.

"I think in previous years, we would just have tried to stay close with a team of this caliber," said senior forward Mike Whitmarsh after USD upset Santa Clara, 69-62, at USD. "But this year, I think everybody knew in the locker room before the game that we could win. This year things are different."

How different? The Toreros, who have not had a winning record in four Division I seasons, have now won 11 of 18 games, one fewer than all of last season.

More important, USD is 2-1 in the West Coast Athletic Conference and sits just a game behind St. Mary's. Pepperdine, the three-time defending WCCAC champ, shares second place with the Toreros at 2-1, while highly-regarded Santa Clara (14-6 and 2-2) is back in the pack.

"This game proves that we have a chance to win this league," said Coach Jim Brovelli, with visions of the automatic NCAA tournament bid dancing in his head. "I said before the season that the league would be tight, and I think this proves it."

Certainly, even a close loss would have been a step in the right direction for the burgeoning USD program. And when Santa Clara's Nick Vanos sank a pair of free throws with 10 minutes left to erase a six-point Torero lead and put the Broncos ahead 52-51, the capacity crowd of 2,030 could only consider past history and brace for the blow-out.

What they got instead was a looping pass from Whitmarsh to Mark Bostic and a rousing dunk. Moments later, those two got together again for a second dunk.

"I think the first dunk was important because it got the crowd in the game," said Bostic, a junior transfer from Ann Arbor, Mich., via Central Arizona College. "The second was a set play. We had seen that I could sneak behind the zone and get the lob and the pass from Mike Whitmarsh was right on the money."

Vanos led all scorers with 19 points and all rebounders with 13, dominating the ailing Scott Thompson (broken toe), Dave McIver and Mario Coronado, who combined for six points. But the 7-1 junior couldn't do it alone. All-WCCAC guard Harold Keeling hit just seven of 18 shots from the field and three of six from the foul line, and the Broncos couldn't find a point guard to get the ball down-court. "That's been our biggest problem," said coach Carroll Williams.

However, the Broncos were in it until Keeling missed a one-and-one with 27 seconds left and USD up by two. Anthony Reuss, who finished with 12 points and 12 rebounds, then hit two foul shots to clinch the win.

"It's pretty exciting," said Bostic. "They expected a lot out of this class of freshmen and transfers coming in, and we've really come through so far."

JAN 29 1984

USD Becomes Challenger After Beating Santa Clara

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—University of San Diego basketball coach Jim Brovelli stopped short of calling Saturday night's 69-62 West Coast Athletic Conference win over the University of Santa Clara the biggest in the school's history.

"But this is the first time we have been 2-1 in the conference," Brovelli said. "This is a good team."

In USD's first four seasons in the league, it was a weak finisher, with its best showing a tie for fourth place last year in the seven-team league.

But Saturday night's win over Santa Clara (14-6, 2-2), a preseason favorite and a team that has beaten New Mexico, Ohio State and Pepperdine this season, seems to indicate the Toreros will challenge for the title for the first time since joining Division I for the 1979-80 season.

San Diego is tied for second place with Pepperdine. St. Mary's is the league leader at 3-0. USD (11-7, 2-1) clung to a 64-62 lead following two free throws by junior guard Mark Bostic with 57 seconds remaining.

On Santa Clara's ensuing possession, guard Harold Keeling was fouled and awarded one-and-one free throws. Keeling, an all-WCCAC player, missed the shot and forward Anthony Reuss was fouled on the rebound.

Following a Santa Clara timeout, Reuss stepped to the line with 26 seconds remaining.

"Sometimes I watch," said Brovelli, who sat with his head down as Reuss stepped to the line. "Yeah, I prayed."

Said Reuss: "I did it just the way we do it in practice. We work on those kinds of things."

Reuss, a junior forward who finished with 12 points, sunk both shots. Santa Clara couldn't score the next time down and USD guard Chris Carr got a fast-break dunk that brought the Sports Center capacity crowd of 2,030 to their feet.

Carr made another free throw before time expired. The lead changed hands many times and the score was tied, 62-62, with 1:32 remaining on a field goal by Michael Norman of Santa Clara. USD was assisted by the play of 6-11 freshman center Scott Thompson who played 25 minutes despite a broken toe.

"Scott was in tremendous pain," Brovelli said. "I'm just so pleased that he played."

Thompson had only two points, but had five rebounds, three blocked shots and two assists. It was his job to counter Santa Clara 7-1 center Nick Vanos, who was the high scorer with 19 points. All-West Coast Athletic Conference forward Mike Whitmarsh had 16 points for the Toreros. Bostic, who ignited the crowd with a couple dunks, had 12 points and Carr 10 points. Keeling had 17 points.

The Toreros went into the locker room at halftime with a 37-36 lead. It was their first lead of the game. With 43 seconds remaining, reserve guard Al Moscatel stole the ball in the Santa Clara zone and drove the length of the court for a layup, putting USD up, 37-36. After that, both teams committed turnovers but neither could score.

Santa Clara had leads of 5-0, 15-10 and 25-18, but they were built upon free throws and its charity opportunities dried up late in the first half. USD was helped by the crowd, the first sellout the school has had since the Pepperdine game a year ago.

"We know we can beat anybody," Reuss said. "Now we just have to prove it on the road."

The Toreros play their next three league games on the road, beginning with play at Loyola-Marymount Friday.

★USD

Continued From Page E-1

game (an embarrassing 61-47 loss to the Aztecs), it's worked every time."

Take out the San Diego State debacle — "I don't know what happened there" — and in five games since that Florida A&M matchup in Reno, Reuss has made 30 of 38 shots. But it's hard to tell. He doesn't load up with windmill dunks or above-the-rim tip-ins. No Lorenzo Charles Atlas power moves are stashed in his gym bag. He hangs around the lane like he's chained to it. But by his reckoning his nickname fits.

"Not flashy, like a sports car, but more reliable, kind of smooth, like a Rolls, I guess," is how Reuss describes his game. Senior guard John Prunty, an in-your-jock, knee-scrapping, elbow-grinding, Eastern urban Catholic league player prototype himself, has another description.

"He's just always there," Prunty says.

Tribune photo by James Skovmand
ANTHONY REUSS GRABS REBOUND

"He's the best I've played with with his back to the basket. He's got all these little dips and swirls and stuff. He never really turns and shoots. The only time it hurts him is in a pickup game because he gets fouled every time he gets the ball."

Last night he had four two-shot foul opportunities, and in the 29-point Western Illinois game he made three three-point plays. On the shot he missed last night "I got fouled and they didn't call it."

For two years Reuss has been biding his time on the pine. For a lot of his spotty playing minutes it was hard to tell if he was wearing two left sneakers or if they were just tied together. Now...

"Now we've got three guys who can score," coach Jim Brovelli said, adding Reuss to leading scorer Mike Whitmarsh and guard Mark Bostic. "I think we're going to have to find a way to get him more shots. The thing I'm most pleased with is his defensive improvement. This year he's almost taking control of this team."

Maybe it was the name change. Last year Reuss was called "Ant," as in Anthony.

Maybe, but Reuss points to consistency. "In the last couple of weeks I've done the same things and done them well," he says. "The 29-point game was not as good as I can do, but it was pretty darn close."

The same might be said for USD's second half last night. Leading by only two points at the half and outrebounded 23-15 to that point, the Toreros came out strong enough to force most of Mt. Marty's 21 turnovers and outscore the Lancers 27-8 in the next 15 minutes.

Now USD has 10 days, including a couple featuring two-a-day drills, before its West Coast Athletic Association schedule starts.

"It was hard to get up for this, but we'll have to get serious for that," Reuss said. "This is the first time we've had a legitimate shot at the league."

"This was, so what, so we beat Mt. Marty," Prunty said. "But this is the best team I've been on in four years. The conference is going to be interesting this year."

It will if Reuss keeps rolling around in the lane, even if he is a power forward who dunks more donuts than basketballs.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

JAN 29 1984

USD 69, Santa Clara 62

SAN DIEGO — Forward Mike Whitmarsh scored 16 points as the University of San Diego defeated the Santa Clara in a West Coast Athletic Conference game.

San Diego's Mark Bostic hit two free throws to break a 62-all deadlock with 57 seconds remaining as the Toreros scored seven unanswered points in the final minute to clinch the victory.

Anthony Reuss also made two free throws after Santa Clara turnovers and then guard Chris Carr added a slam dunk to ice the win.

Nick Vanos led Santa Clara with 19 points and pulled down 13 rebounds.

San Diego improved its record to 11-7 overall and 2-1 in the conference. Santa Clara fell to 14-6 and 2-2.

S.D. HOME & GARDEN

FEB 1984

THE INDIGNANT ARTIST

There is almost always a visual surprise in the small Founders Gallery at USD. This month it's a print show of artists' expressions of protest on politics, social change, human rights, and war. Included are works by William Hogarth, Thomas Nast, Kathe Kollwitz, Jose Clement Orozco, Honore Daumier, Otto Dix, John Sloan, and Reginald Marsh, commenting on the 17th through the 20th centuries. February 23 through March 27. Opening reception February 22, 7 to 9 P.M. Gallery hours weekdays 12 to 5, Wednesday 12 to 7. University of San Diego, Alcala Park, San Diego, 291-6480, x 4261.

A-18 The San Diego Union

Thursday, February 2, 1984

A breathtaking buildup for architects

The subject was houses when 500 of San Diego's top architects and designers and their guests met for cocktails and dinner the other night in the forecourt of the La Jolla Museum of Contemporary Art.

And the suspense was intense. They were all there to see who won this year's Residential Design Awards handed out by the San Diego Chapter of the American Institute of Architects and San Diego Home/Garden magazine.

This is the fifth year of the awards, and the AIA's Donalee Deffenbach and Home/Garden editor Peter Jensen were the chief party-plotters.

After a buffet dinner catered by The French Gourmet, the crowd moved into Sherwood Hall for a multimedia presentation called "Close Focus: The San Diego House," and announcement of the winners.

They turned out to be architects Scott Emsley, Stanley Keniston, Dale Jenkins, John Mosele, Stephen Borow and Skip Haugh.

Mayor Hedgecock and more than 500 others who make news in San Diego crowded into a Town & Country banquet room the other noon to tell Hazel Tow how much they've always admired her.

It was Hazel's last hurrah as society editor of The Tribune. (Before settling into that role 14 years ago, she had been a war correspondent and had held all sorts of journalistic jobs.)

Lois Dechant and Sharon LeeMaster were the ringleaders in planning the luncheon salute, which was sponsored by COMBO and the Trojan League of Southern California. Profits from the party will help to establish an internship at COMBO for a communications student.

There were tributes from Herb Klein, Neil Morgan, Bob Arnhyrn and other friends and co-workers, and the crowd represented a remarkable cross section of the San Diego scene.

Burl Stiff

All those accolades, the guest of honor admitted, left her "overwhelmed" and astonished.

"I thought," she murmured, "I was just doing my job."

Hazel cleared out her desk at The Trib Sunday afternoon, but pooh-poohed any suggestion that she can now put her feet up and take life easy.

Not so, she said. "All those thank-you notes to write!"

They're expanding the James S. Copley Library at the University of San Diego these days, so the annual USD President's Club dinner was moved from its traditional library setting to the Westgate Hotel.

Marge and USD President Author Hughes greeted more than 200 of the university's benefactors in the mirrored opulence of the hotel's Versailles Room.

Lincoln Ward, 1984 chairman of the President's Club, was there to introduce Art Hughes, who reviewed some of the university's long-range plans. Hughes then presented a Baccarat crystal bowl to Josiah Nepper, outgoing President's Club chairman, and his wife, Rita.

(The new, expanded USD library — renamed The Helen K. and James S. Copley Library — will be dedicated April 8.)

A dozen new members of San Diego's Social Service Auxiliary were introduced the other morning at a coffee in the home of Kay and Bill Rippee.

Auxiliary president Mary Madden and membership chairwoman Mary Balne Holmes welcomed Bernadette Arnold, Frances Birney, Mary Ann Fitch, Pat Fritzenkotter, Rachel Nelson, Kay Pasquale, Opal Rafferty, Hazel Schaefer and Arna Thompson.

At the same time, three Juniors of the Social Service Auxiliary were taken into the senior fold. Transferring from Junior to Senior were Jean Hope, Ellie Pecka and Joan Streicher.

MBA glut: Degree no longer job key

800 San Diegans among record U.S. graduating class

By Igor Lobanov

For the 800 San Diegans who will receive a Masters of Business Administration (MBA) degree this year, the outlook may be less-than-rosy.

The sweet-scented world of companies wooing graduates with promises of high salaries and easy entry to corporate management — prevalent only a few years ago — is fading in the harsh glare of economic realities.

The downturn in demand is especially acute for graduates with no prior business experience.

The recent explosive growth in MBA ranks — from 6,000 graduated in 1964 to today's annual crop of nearly 60,000 (produced by almost 600 schools) — has begun to level off, due to increasing competition and the changing economy. At San Diego area universities, however, the rush for an MBA still seems to be in full swing, although some local academic officials see a slackening in the next year or two.

More important, however, is that industry already sees a day-to-day slowdown in demand.

In the past, statistics and surveys showed that MBA holders — especially those with an undergraduate degree in science or technology — could write their own tickets.

That "ticket" meant a high salary. In fact, according to a survey taken by the University of California at Berkeley in mid-1983, the average salary offered their MBA graduates then exceeded $30,000, with a reported high among the graduating class of $48,000.

What the figures do not show, according to university officials here, is that those MBA graduates likely have more than a graduate degree to offer; many have extensive experience in business and, perhaps, even acute skills in a high-demand

continued on page 18

Cover art by Carlos Figueroa

"We would much prefer to take a person with an undergraduate degree, and no MBA, than to go the other way around"

—George S. Murphy
Cubic

Photo by Joe Klein

MBAs

continued from page 1

field such as computers.

In the matter of the MBA/science undergraduate "writing one's own ticket," while that may have been true three-to-five years ago, "the market has been correcting for that and the situation is less true today," according to George Murphy, corporate director of employee relations at Cubic Corp., who believes that the MBA degree has been recently revalued downward. He attributes that partly to the proliferation of schools offering the degree, and to the reservations of some high-tech industry officials about the ability of the MBA holder — even those hailing from the top business schools — "to move into managerial roles, or be willing to earn their way in such roles." Based on his contacts with other high-tech firms across the nation, Murphy sees far more willingness today for companies to train their own executives. Consequently, a number of Cubic employees are now working to earn Master's degrees, either in the technical or business area. Beyond that, his firm is more interested in the person who comes in with five-to-10 years experience in business.

Experience a must

"In San Diego, the young MBA graduate coming out of school faces a tough challenge, for there are not many large companies here who are going to hire that person without any business experience," says Bill Couey, Oak Industries' manager of public relations. "We do not have a large corporate staff, so we don't have an active MBA recruiting program. Our real need is for the degreed engineer."

The fact is that most San Diego high-tech businesses are small-to-medium in size, and need executives with strong technical backgrounds.

"In our case," adds Couey, "those few MBAs we do hire — usually as a financial analyst or in an accounting capacity — already have experience with another company."

That said, does he recommend that a person go for an MBA? "Absolutely. The MBA will keep you up with the competition."

Bucking the trend — somewhat

At Pacific Bell, the move is to increase the intake of MBAs, as the corporation begins to move away from the long-held position of promoting from within and doing all its own training, to hiring outside "experts," reports staff public relations manager Nancy Harlow. This influx of new skills, she says, will help the company remain competitive in the deregulated environment following the breakup of AT&T.

"In order to compete, we must hire people who can 'hit the ground running,'" adds Harlow. However, the PacBell's management intake programs typically involve individuals with undergraduate degrees in engineering, computers and other technologies, as well as those with advanced training in such areas as marketing and planning. And, says Harlow, prior experience is quite important. "We want people with a strong leadership ability and much of that comes from those with extensive prior business experience." That means, she explains, that for those with an undergraduate degree, business experience is almost as good a teacher as getting an MBA.

"The principal thing we look for in a prospective employee with an advanced degree is the person's grade point average (GPA)," says Harlow, although she concedes that a person from Stanford, Harvard or other top business schools most certainly will be looked at regardless of his or her GPA.

Most people working for an MBA in San Diego have an undergraduate degree in a science or engineering field, which reflects the percentage of high-tech industry here. Not surprisingly, their pursuit of advanced training in business has support on the campuses. "An engineer can be an engineer, but with an MBA he or she also can be a manager," says David Feldman, dean of the School of Business at United States International University (USIU).

Don Carver, dean of the School of Management and Business at National University, believes that engineers make ideal MBA candidates because "they are disciplined as students."

How valuable is the MBA? Is it like the BA in business used to be — that is, it is a requirement to get hired? "Yes and no," says Dr. William Barber, associate dean for graduate studies at San Diego State University's College of Business Administration. "There are still many ways to enter the business world, and many people make their way on their own background, skills and abilities, without formal preparation in business subjects. However, where in the past the BA in business was routine as a requirement for admission to some types of business, that requirement probably is for the MBA today."

He cited the retail industry as a field where people with a wide variety of undergraduate degrees find work, and no graduate credentials are required.

Where do MBAs find employment? According to The Official Guide to MBA Programs, Admission and Careers, published by the Graduate Management Admission Council, the areas where positions are available include: accounting, planning/forecasting, financial analysts and human resources management, management consulting, management information systems, and marketing (which encompasses products and services, research, sales, advertising and promotion, account executives and research analysts).

The Guide cautions those seeking an MBA to examine carefully the so-called "glamour" industries to determine how one's personal characteristics relate to job market realities. The material cites former "fast tracks" in career opportunities which failed to maintain the image placed on them: Wall Street in the late 1960s, real estate a few years later; marketing in 1976, and the notion in 1977 that quick success lay in becoming a management consultant, investment banker of assistant to a top corporate executive.

Today, according to a survey of 1,300 chief executive officers, the areas of greatest growth through 1985 will be line-management specialties with an immediate impact on profitability, such as general management and marketing/sales, followed by staff functions such as information systems/data processing, research/engineering and personnel.

The Guide also predicts that industries with the most potential growth include services, health care, retail, leisure/entertainment, agriculture and communications.

A recent study of 1,700 executives in 750 large corporations showed that one-third of those queried regard finance/accounting as the specialty most likely to lead to advancement in a managerial career.

The bottom line

How much more a year can a San Diego MBA graduate expect to make? Barber estimates about $2,000 per year, while others in the academic community opt for $4,000 to $5,000. It should be noted, however, that SDSU graduates are, by and large, a bit younger than their counterparts from other area institutions and are more likely to enter the job market without much prior experience in the business field.

The value accorded the MBA certainly is influenced by training relating to industry trends.

The University of San Diego (USD) School of Business Administration, for instance, recently introduced a course in high-tech management which, on the face of it, seems counter to expressed industry needs. But, according to Mario Picconi, director of MBA programs at USD, when employers in the high-tech community were asked what they want students to learn, they responded, "Give them the traditional disciplines of finance, marketing and basic skills in writing and accounting so they can deal with those functions in the firm they join. What we really want are people who have the flexibility to absorb, so we don't have to worry about individuals who are inarticulate — verbally or quantitatively — or don't know about the computer in a general way. Do a good job with the basics and we will teach them the uniqueness of our business."

Still, the school developed a course in managing high-tech organizations — from a people point-of-view. The premise was that an organization may have talented professionals who are geared heavily to engineering and computer science, but they lack interaction skills.

Another strong emphasis at USD is on international business, with an entire curriculum devoted to the subject. According to Picconi, the national accreditation organization for business schools has indicated that universities should increase emphasis in the international area — not just with parts of courses, but entire courses in the subject. "We are facing a new dimension," he observes.

USIU, by its very name, heralds a stress on international commerce and, says Feldman, the heavy focus long has been on political economy. "We don't separate politics and economics."

He cites the problems encountered by Yamaha Corp. when it tried to sell its motorcycles in the United States as a case in point. "They built the best motorcycle at the cheapest price, came to the United States and did heavy advertising. They were hit with a 49 percent tariff. Honda, on the other hand, built a plant in the United States and is now doing quite well. You have to see the whole world as a mixture of politics and economics."

Among the new courses at USIU is one on production management. "We have realized that while figures and finance are fine, we must produce products — and that we have fallen behind in how we teach people to build a good product, build it well and over time." For this, people must have hands-on experience, he declares.

"The future (in business) will be very heavy, not only on marketing but also — as the Japanese have shown — on turning out a quality product at a good price and knowing how to sell and deliver that product anywhere in the world."

National University's Carver sees a tendency among business administration schools to move more toward industry — reversing what he believes was the direction in recent years.

Carver discounts what he calls industry rumblings that "We (industry) don't want people-trained only quantitatively," and that such people can only be useful on cor-

"Where in the past the BA in business was routine... that requirement probably is for the MBA today" porate long-range planning groups or in very large firms. He sees the demand for MBAs continuing and observes that employees of many mid-size high-tech firms here are studying for their MBAs in an aggressive effort "to show that they are different from the pack."

—Dr. William Barker
SDSU

Photo by Joe Klein

At National University, too, there is strong emphasis on international business and on production, preparing the student to oversee the manufacturing function or, in the case of service firms, to head the operations function.

National's latest thrust, its new MBA program in Costa Rica, a curriculum instigated at the invitation of government education officials there. Carver reports that already there is interest in the idea from Venezuela and other Latin American countries.

But while there is a need for MBAs in developing countries, the trend may be different domestically.

Cubic's Murphy observes a "lessening demand for the MBA and the only way we can consider one today is in combination with an undergraduate degree in a technical area. And we would much prefer to take the person with an undergraduate degree — engineering, some type of computer science, occasionally physics or math — and no MBA, than to go the other way around. "We have occasional demand for the MBA in our finance department and quite rarely in our marketing group."

In the world of finance, BA or MBA holders should not bank on their degrees to land a job. Greg Ruiz, employment manager with Great American Federal Savings Bank, points out that requiring a degree as a minimum qualification for a finance job is not as prevalent as in manufacturing or education. Austerity moves brought on by the recent recession forced many banks to cut back on management training programs, he explains, and, at least at his bank, such programs are not expected to be resurrected this year. Most job opportunities at Great American today

University	Avg. Age of Student	No. of MBAs to be granted this year
SDSU	26-27	135-140
USD	28-30	80-100
USIU	30+	100
NU	34	143*

*Figure for January, 1984. National has 4 graduations a year

are at two points: entry level, where no degree is required and one moves up through the ranks; and in specific positions where the need is for experienced people.

"To say that a degree, either MBA or BA, unlocks the door in the financial industry is not true," Ruiz emphasizes. "We do take (the MBA) degree into consideration, but the person who has six or seven years experience in the firm has attended a multitude of seminars, workshops and in-house training programs which can be just as valuable. The MBA becomes important if the organization has a management training program, as a criterion to get into it. However, the person who has worked for a small bank for five years, became a branch manager, and now wants to move to a bigger bank, could compete with the recent MBA graduate and be able to move (right) into a management training program. What qualifies a person for such a program is a gray area and, as conditions become more competitive, we hire a great number of people with only a BA. And these people are competing against those who come with only a high school education or perhaps only junior college courses."

It is very much an employer's market in San Diego, says Ruiz, and the competition is tough. So tough, in fact, that those coming out of school with an MBA should have related experience. For example, it is virtually impossible for the person with a degree to get a job as an analyst programmer, he says. His company wants a person who has gained a year or two of experience elsewhere, so the beginner must simply "dig in and get (a job) someplace to get that experience."

More selective

Overall demand for MBAs is lessening and, what demand there is in specific areas such as the Big Eight accounting firms. In short, he says, the MBA is helpful but may be not relevant for the type of positions available.

At San Diego Trust and Savings Bank, the only management training program is for those with a BBA. And even a person without a degree can apply, for all that is required is a series of core courses or comparable experience.

Certainly, the MBA graduate will have had the courses, but that is not the only hiring factor. The right-out-of-school MBA, with no business experience, might be competing with an in-house applicant without an advanced degree, or even no degree, but with experience.

San Diego Trust personnel manager John Nersesian explains that, while the bank has not cut back its hiring, the process is more selective now, so that those chosen for the management program "are placed properly and don't end up frustrated or leave to go someplace else." Having an MBA does not necessarily give the person a "leg up" to get into the program, he says, because "you may get a person with an academic background who is not very good with 'people skills.' Most jobs in the bank are either branch-related or corporate-related and people skills are just as important as other work experience. It's a people business."

The student studying straight through college to earn an MBA is at a definite disadvantage, especially if he or she has never worked, says Nersesian. He cites an employee who had worked his way through college with a job in the finance area, had a high GPA, and was a gregarious and outgoing person. "Overall, such an individual would be better able to sell himself (as the best one for the job) over the person with only a degree. There is a lot to be said for where the person is coming from. I don't think our outlook toward MBAs has changed that much. We look for good people who will stay around awhile, give them plenty of room to run and develop, which is just as important as the educational part. That is, now having it (the MBA) would not hold anyone back from advancing in the institution (bank)."

He cites the case of an MBA graduate from an Eastern university who entered the management training program and had to compete against those straight out of college with a Bachelor's in Finance and with those who had no degree. "He was evaluated on the same criteria as they were and had just as tough a time."

The harsh reality is that the MBA today needs more than coursework for an entrée to business.

La Jolla, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
La Jolla Light
(Cir. W. 9,293)

Feb 2, 1984

Lynn Schenk declares candidacy for supervisor

By JOE NABBETELD

La Jolla attorney Lynn Schenk announced her candidacy for the Third District County Board of Supervisors seat Tuesday morning at a gathering on the steps of the County Administration Center. The Third District includes La Jolla.

Schenk, 39, is the only formally declared candidate for the officially non-partisan seat, which is currently held by Patrick Boardman. Boardman was appointed last spring by the four other supervisors when Roger Hedgecock was elected mayor of San Diego. Boardman agreed not to run for the seat in this summer's election.

Schenk's top competitor is expected to be former San Diego City Councilwoman Susan Golding. Golding began an indefinite leave of absence Monday from her post as deputy secretary of the state Business, Transportation and Housing Agency.

City Councilmen Mike Gotch and Ed Struiksma each had been considered a potential candidate for the supervisorial seat, but each has said he would not seek the seat.

Candidates must file by March 8 to qualify for the June 5 primary election. If no candidate receives more than 50 percent of the votes cast, then the top two vote-getters face each other in a runoff election in November.

Schenk, a graduate of the University of San Diego School of Law, was state secretary of Business, Transportation and Housing under former Gov. Jerry Brown.

In an interview following her announcement, Schenk said she will run the same campaign — putting forward her ideas on the issues — no matter who else is in the campaign. She said her candidacy is a call for vigorous, creative, innovative leadership.

"People in this community not only want but deserve representatives that do the job with the same vigor with which they campaign," Schenk said.

She said a major theme in her campaign will be growth. "We have to take charge of our growth and not let it take charge of us," she said. She called for the county to take a more regional approach to growth, "particularly in our district where all the growth is supposed to occur. All of the county should help bear the burden of this growth."

"When will we begin to encourage growth in other areas of the county?"

Schenk said that issues central to La Jollans such as controlling development, BLOB, erosion, traffic and congestion are addressed by the supervisors. "There is a tendency to say, 'it's not my job,' but when it comes to La Jolla, I'm going to say, 'it is my job.'"

"I live in La Jolla, so I am intimately acquainted with this community. La Jolla is a special resource that we must take care of."

Schenk was the first woman ever to receive the San Diego Jaycee's Outstanding Young Citizen award, according to biographical information about her. She was also named Woman of the Year in San Diego in 1975, and she was the recipient of the Israeli Peace Medal, which is the highest civilian recognition given to a foreign citizen by that country.

Lynn Schenk

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 3 1984

New USD center nears completion

Construction is scheduled to be completed this month on the $1.6 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego.

The M.H. Golden Co. served as general contractor for the two-story, multipurpose building.

The center includes a 230-seat auditorium, four large conference rooms and office space for the university.

Plans call for the auditorium to be used as a lecture hall.

Architects Tucker, Sadler and Associates designed the 17,600-square-foot building to reflect the existing 15th century, Spanish-style architecture of the campus.

Special architectural details are being incorporated into the design of the building, including hand-crafted decorative moldings, arched windows and sculptured panels.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT
FEB 3 1984

SDU's Olin Hall

Structural steel framing has been completed on the $2.7 million Olin Hall for the University of San Diego's School of Business. The 45,000-square-foot facility, located on the west side of the campus, is scheduled for completion in July. M.H. Golden is the general contractor for the project designed by Tucker, Sadler & Associates.

El Cajon, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Daily Californian
(D. 100,271)

FEB 4 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

2955

Party will celebrate new title for East County's 1st female judge

There is going to be a party for the presiding judge of the El Cajon Municipal Court.

Judges, lawyers and others in the legal community will honor Judge Elizabeth Riggs at a no-host cocktail party Tuesday at the Singing Hills Country Club.

Anyone can attend the reception from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the club at 3007 Dehesa Road east of El Cajon.

"We're just really proud that she was elected to be the presiding judge, the only woman out of a bench of seven," said lawyer Eleanor Silvers of El Cajon, one of the people behind the party idea.

"No speeches have been planned, so if any happen it's going to be a totally spontaneous thing."

Riggs is the first and only woman judge at the El Cajon court. She became presiding judge for this year after the judges held their annual election.

Her duties include administration and coordination of the court calendar, assigning judges to court matters, coordinating the Ramona and El Cajon night courts, setting policy and acting as spokeswoman, as well as performing her duties as judge.

Riggs is a 1973 Rutgers School of Law graduate. Former Gov. Jerry Brown appointed her to the bench — the first black woman on any San Diego court — in November 1979.

At that time Riggs was a deputy attorney general for California. Before that she served as deputy district attorney for San Diego County.

Riggs is a faculty member at National University in San Diego and a faculty-seminar leader at Hastings School of Law Trial and Appellate Advocacy.

She is a judge at moot court and mock trial competitions for the University of San Diego School of Law and Western School of Law. She also is a board member of the El Cajon Girls Club and Soroptimist International.

Elizabeth Riggs

BLADE TRIBUNE

FEB 10 1984

Vatican collection on display

SAN DIEGO — "A Trip Through the Vatican" is a collection of watercolors and sepia drawings completed by Vernon Howe Bailey during a 1921-22 stay at the Vatican. He was the first artist ever to receive papal permission to paint the private quarters of the pontiff.

Plans for the collection include an exhibit at the University of San Diego; an "Invisible University" course presented in homes throughout the county; a nationally broadcast film; and a folio of high quality reproductions.

The collection was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Edwards of Lomas Santa Fe.

"Invisible University" programs will be presented in La Costa on Feb. 14 and Oceanside, March 14.

Those interested in participating should call Dr. Gil Brown at USD, 293-4523.

La Jolla, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
La Jolla Light
(Cir. W. 9,293)

FEB 2 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

2955

Attorney will lecture on land use law

San Diego attorney Paul A. Peterson, a leading expert on land use law, is scheduled to deliver three public lectures on "Land Use Law in America: Its Past, Present, and Future" during February at UCSD.

Peterson, a senior member of the law firm of Peterson, Thelan & Price, has been appointed as a Regents' Lecturer in the Urban Studies and Planning Program at UCSD. His lectures will begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 6; Wednesday, Feb. 8 and Thursday, Feb. 9 in Room 1330 of the Humanities and Social Sciences Building on the Muir College campus.

Peterson, a native of California, graduated from UC Berkeley in 1953 with a degree in economics. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and the Order of the Golden Bear while at Berkeley. He received a J.D. degree from Berkeley in 1956, where he was elected to the Order of the Coif and the Board of Editors of the California Law Review. Peterson was admitted to the California Bar in 1956.

He has been active in a number of civic activities, bar association activities, and as a teacher during his career. He served as a member of the San Diego Stadium Board from 1973 to 1977 and as chairman of the board in 1974; as a member of the ad hoc committee studying the feasibility of a new law school for Southern California, and as a member of the Arbitration Panel of the San Diego Superior Court.

He is currently a member of the board of directors of the Economic Development Corporation, a member of San Diegans, Inc., an associate member of the Urban Land Institute, and a member of the San Diego County Water Authority.

Peterson has served as an instructor in law at the University of San Diego School of Law and the California Western University School of Law and as an instructor in real estate for UCSD Extension.

JEWISH PRESS
HERITAGE

FEB 3 1984

'Symposium in Judaica': 12 professors to lecture

Law, Buber among topics
Bureau sets

"Symposium in Judaica," to be presented by the Bureau of Jewish Education at San Diego State University on Sunday, March 11, will feature 12 professors offering seminars in their fields of expertise.

Among them will be Dr. Sheldon Krantz, dean of the University of San Diego School of Law, who will speak on "Criminal Justice in Israel."

He will discuss the state's police, the courts and corrective policies from his experiences with criminal justice practitioners in Israel and from written materials provided by Israeli experts.

Dr. Krantz was visiting professor to the Institute of Criminology at Hebrew University in 1978. He holds a B.S.L. and a J.D. cum laude from the University of Nebraska.

He has been dean of USD School of Law since July, 1981. Before that, he was professor of law at Boston University School of Law and director of its Center for Criminal Justice.

From 1967-70, Dean Krantz served as executive director for the Massachusetts Governor's Committee for the Enforcement and Administration of Justice. Offering a class on "Martin

DR. SHELDON KRANTZ

DR. MAURICE FRIEDMAN

Buber versus David Ben-Gurion" will be Dr. Maurice Friedman, professor of religious studies, philosophy and comparative literature at San Diego State University.

Prof. Friedman devotes a long chapter of his recently published book, "Martin Buber's Life and Work: The Later Years (1945 - 1965)," to the opposition between the great Jewish philosopher and the Israeli prime minister.

The conflict between Buber and Ben-Gurion was based in part upon their differing attitudes toward the Arab-Israeli question. The seminar will cover this divergence in the period before and after the creation of the state along with issues of contemporary concern.

Dr. Friedman has been at SDSU since 1973 in his present capacity.

"Symposium in Judaica" will begin at 10 a.m. with a keynote address on "Ritual and Cult in Judaism" by Jacob Milgrom, professor of Hebrew and Bible at the Department of Near Eastern Studies at UC Berkeley.

Session I (11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.) and Session II (2 to 3 p.m.) will each have six lectures from which to choose. For those who wish, a catered lunch will be served from 1 to 2 p.m.

General admission is $10 or $16 with lunch; admission for seniors and students with I.D. will be $8 or $14 with lunch.

For more information, call the Bureau office at 583-8532.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Downtown San Diego
(Cir. W.)

FEB 6 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

2955

The San Diego law firm of Duckor and Spradling has announced that Scott L. Metzger was admitted as a partner in the firm.

Metzger, a commercial litigator, has practiced with Duckor and Spradling since 1979 and obtained his law degree from the University of San Diego.

Fullerton, CA
(Orange Co.)
Daily News Tribune
(D. 24,430)

FEB 9 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

2955

Reception for parents of University of San Diego students, 7:30 p.m., home of the Deno Vachters, Fullerton.

F-26 The San Diego Union

Sunday, February 5, 1984

Olin Hall rises at USD: M.G. Golden Co. has completed steel framing at this business school building at the University of San Diego. Completion of the $2.7 million building is due in July. Its design by Tucker, Sadler & Associates will continue the Spanish Colonial theme of the rest of the campus.

She helps women develop their leadership skills

By Zenia Cleigh
Tribune Staff Writer

More and more women are entering management positions in business.

The trouble is, as a rule, women haven't been taught as children how to be leaders and how to be in control.

And the result, according to Johanna Hunsaker, associate professor of organizational behavior at the University of San Diego, is that women tend to make leadership mistakes that men do not.

"Women have been socialized to be accepting, compliant, sensitive," Hunsaker said. "All those are good things, and they're vital to being a good leader, but they're not the only things."

In her class, "Leadership Development for Women," being taught Monday evenings from 7 to 9:50 p.m. (it is still possible to pay a $297 non-credit fee and enroll in the class through the USD Extension), Hunsaker will outline some of the pitfalls successful career women must hurdle.

Here, according to Hunsaker, 34, who has a doctorate in business from the University of Wisconsin, are some blunders women in leadership roles tend to make:

● Acting like a stereotypical woman. "What the research indicates is that if women act like a stereotypical woman, they won't be accepted in leadership roles," Hunsaker said.

(Her class draws on the work of Yale psychologist Rosabeth Kanter, who has studied men and women in corporations; Jean Baker Miller, a Harvard psychiatry professor and author of "Towards a New Psychology of Women," and Washington, D.C., management consultant Alice Sargent, who has done research on the manager who combines both male and female characteristics.)

To be a stereotypical woman, Hunsaker said, means putting a major emphasis on being appreciated, praised and liked. When this happens, Hunsaker said, women become perceived as conflict avoiders or people who always want to maintain the peace, and they become ineffective leaders. On the other hand, another mistake is:

● Acting like a stereotypical man. Women who conform to male stereotypes, such as being too aggressive, too authoritarian, too goal-oriented, are often negatively perceived, Hunsaker said.

According to Hunsaker, in one study done at Yale University, the male and female business students were asked to evaluate the performance of managers in several different case studies. One discussed a manager who quickly reorganized a department. When given a male

Please see LEADERS, D-3

JOHANNA HUNSAKER
... women in leadership

Tribune photo by Tony Doubek

Fullerton, CA
(Orange Co.)
Daily News Tribune
(D. 24,430)

FEB 8 1984

Allen's P. C. B. Est. 1888

USD expansion: Mr. and Mrs. Deno Vaccher will be hosts in their Fullerton home for a 7:30 p.m. reception Thursday for parents of students at the University of San Diego. A videotape film about the university and its programs will include a segment on the recent campus expansion, which includes the construction of three new facilities. Administrators of the independent, Roman Catholic university also will attend. The Vacchers are parents of Deno Vaccher Jr., a junior at USD. 2955

*Leaders

Continued From Page D-1

name, the manager was given a high rating. When given a female name, the manager was perceived as pushy and bossy.

● Being bossy, petty, dictatorial or rigid about rules. Often, Hunsaker said, women in new leadership positions do not know what it means to wield effective power, and they resort to manipulation out of their insecurity.

Real power means furthering the organization's goals and making subordinates feel valued and strong, thereby increasing their productivity. "If you are effectively using power, you don't need the approval of others in the organization, nor do you need the trappings of power to heighten your own self-esteem," Hunsaker said.

"A lot of women don't recognize that power can grow if you give it away. They tend to hoard it. Many times, they are motivated by personal needs rather than the reality of the organization."

● Falling into the "social worker syndrome." "Too many women managers are always happy to talk about a subordinate's problems, pitch in at the last minute to save things," Hunsaker said. "They keep the Girl Scout vow of service to others even if it's inappropriate."

"No one denies being unselfish isn't a good human quality, but I think a lot of women trust that over all others. They don't see that they can jeopardize their careers and lose sight of their leadership goals."

Often, co-workers expect a woman leader to keep her office door open at all times and put up with interruptions and grant extensions on projects — indulgences they would never expect from a male leader.

This attitude — "Of course, a woman will understand" — subverts a legitimate authority relationship, Hunsaker said. Women need to learn how to be flexible, but not to be trapped into making allowances for poor work.

● Failing to ask for help. "Women want to be appreciated, praised and liked. Because we want to be known as competent, we're afraid to ask for help and appear as weak," Hunsaker said.

In addition, she said, many women fool themselves into thinking they're "too good" to make deals, make a lot of money, or be political. They too often settle for nurturing positions that have low pay and low prestige.

Some things women leaders should learn how to do, according to Hunsaker, are:

● Become "more androgynous." "Probably the best leadership style a woman can develop is one that combines stereotypical male and female qualities," Hunsaker said, such as being skilled at working with people and skilled at program analysis as well.

"Women need to be good at decision-making. They need to develop expertise at whatever field they're in. They need to be able to bring out the best in people who work for them, optimizing human resources. They need to be able to take risks also. A lot of women don't want to look at the long-term consequences of the actions they take. They're very short-term-oriented."

● Learn how to speak up more. "Research shows that men talk more than women, they initiate more conversations," Hunsaker said. "Communicating is an important action of leadership. Women with other women don't feel that hesitancy, but in the company of men, often they feel intimidated. There's also a Catch-22 situation because of the negative attitude that 'women talk too much.'"

Women need to risk loss of approval, Hunsaker said, and they need to learn to hold back some of their need to be accepted by the group. "They have to first become task-oriented and then become more oriented toward people."

● Make careers in organizations which decentralize power.

Women searching for careers would do best to accept positions in companies where leadership is delegated, where communication skills are valued, and where there is a flexible promotion policy towards women.

Make sure that your job is located in a department that is integral to what the organization is trying to do. For example, move into the long-range planning or finance offices, not into personnel.

"I would recommend turning down a promotion that you think is a dead end," Hunsaker said. "That is an example of a short-term strategy that may really pay off in the long term."

Increasingly, Hunsaker said, male and female management styles are converging.

"There is going to come a day when both men and women will be free to strike balances between their own personalities and expectations other people have for them."

"Women are going to find their own strengths instead of trying to do it the man's way. We're starting to recognize that women have something to contribute to organizations, that their styles are effective, that they can be nurturing as well as competent and motivate people in positive ways."

Pacific Beach, CA
(San Diego Co.)
North City Edition
(2xM. 18,500)

FEB 8 1984

Allen's P. C. B. Est. 1888

JERRY CARPENTER of University City has been named vice president of real estate loans and investments at Imperial Savings and Loan. He will be working in the commercial and industrial loan production areas.

Prior to joining Imperial Savings, Carpenter was an assistant vice president at Great American Federal Savings. He also worked as an appraiser at Security Pacific Bank and Far West Savings.

Carpenter, who is a senior real property appraiser for the Society of Real Estate Appraisers, received a bachelor of science degree in business from Cal Western and a M.B.A. from the University of San Diego.

Jerry Carpenter

MISSION VALLEY NEWS

FEB 7 1984

M.H. Golden Company has completed steel framing on Olin Hall, a three-story facility for the University of San Diego's School of Business. Located adjacent to Manchester Executive Center (right), also under construction by Golden, the $2.7 million building will be completed in July 1984. Both educational facilities will feature arched openings and sculptured panels reflective of the 15th Century Spanish architecture of the campus. Tucker, Sadler & Associates served as architect for both projects.

Rancho Bernardo, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Rancho Bernardo Journal
(Cir. W. 2,500)

FEB 9 1984

Allen's P. C. B. Est. 1888

'Trip Through Vatican' lands at USD

A major donation of 91 Vatican paintings to the University of San Diego will touch both San Diegans and the rest of the country in a variety of ways.

"A Trip Through The Vatican" is a collection of watercolors and sepia drawings completed by Vernon Howe Bailey during a 1921-22 stay at the Vatican.

Bailey was the first artist ever to receive papal permission to paint the private quarters of the pontiff.

After Bailey completed the series, though, it acquired a history of mystery and intrigue. Individuals who sought to profit from the paintings met sudden death.

After repeated difficulties in promoting them, the paintings were finally permanently stored ... until now.

Plans for the collection include an exhibit at USD, an "Invisible University" course presented in homes throughout the county, a nationally broadcast film, and a folio of high quality reproductions.

The collection was donated by Roy Edwards of Lomas Santa Fe, who acquired the paintings more than 20 years ago from one of Howe's original underwriters.

The collection will first reach the public through a series of USD-sponsored "Invisible University" courses.

Georgie Stillman, a nationally recognized appraiser who became an expert on Bailey's career while assessing the collection will present a lecture and slide show about the artist and collection in neighborhoods throughout the county during February and March.

Programs will be presented at: La Costa, Feb. 14; Rancho Bernardo, Feb. 15; La Jolla, Feb. 21; Point Loma, Feb. 22; Coronado, March 1; and Oceanside, March 14.

Those interested in participating should call Dr. Gil Brown at 293-4523.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
S.D. Jewish Press
Heritage
(Cir. 6,150)

FEB 10 1984

Allen's P. C. B. Est. 1888

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Schenk for supervisor; a rabbi from Shanghai

Former state official declares candidacy

Former California Secretary of Business, Transportation and Housing Lynn Schenk announced her candidacy for the San Diego County Board of Supervisors District 3 on Jan. 31 on the steps of the county Administration Center.

A graduate of the University of San Diego School of Law, Schenk has long been active in San Diego.

She was the first woman to receive the San Diego Jaycee's Outstanding Young Citizen award and was named Woman of the Year in San Diego in 1975.

She was also the recipient of the Israeli Peace Medal, the highest civilian recognition given to a foreign citizen by the state.

LYNN SCHENK

Chula Vista, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Star News
(Cir. 2xW. 12,544)
(Cir. S. 12,739)

FEB 9 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tapia-Iglesias

The engagement of Carolina Tapia and Michael Iglesias and their July 21 wedding date have been announced.

The future bride is the daughter of Herminio and Mary Tapia, 524 E. 3rd St., National City. She was graduated in 1982 from Sweetwater High School and is attending San Diego City College. She is employed in the office of hearings and appeals in San Diego.

Her fiancé is the son of Rudy and Shirley Iglesias of San Diego. He was graduated in 1972 from Madison High School and in 1978 from University of San Diego. He has worked for the National City police department since 1979.

The wedding is planned at St. Mary's Catholic Church in National City, and a reception is planned following the wedding in the Cafe Del Rey Moro ballroom.

Carolina Tapia, Michael Iglesias

Del Mar, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
Del Mar Surfer

FEB 15 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Do you dig archaeology?

The Stratford Center for Education and the Arts in Del Mar will present speakers in the fields of anthropology and archaeology in three upcoming classes set for next week.

Ken Hedges, curator of ethnology and archaeology at the San Diego Museum of Man, will discuss cryptic rock art found as a legacy from the early Indian residents. The class will meet Tuesday, Feb. 21 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Dr. Alana Cordy-Collins, assistant professor in the USD department of anthropology and curator of the Latin-American Collection of the Museum of Man, will speak on "The Maya: A New Look at an Ancient Mystery" on Wednesday, Feb. 22 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Dr. Corday-Collins will present new theories regarding the antiquity of the Maya and their abrupt decline in the tenth century.

Dr. Corrie Ott, anthropology instructor affiliated with the Museum of Man, will talk on "Agriculture and the Beginnings of Civilization" on Thursday, Feb. 23 from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. She will examine the idea that civilization only becomes possible through the presence of intensive agriculture.

Fee for each program in the series is $12. Call 481-8896 for information.

In March, The Stratford Center will sponsor an archaeological tour of Mayan Mexico and two Peruvian Evenings. Part one will concentrate on the Tamara Indians of Peru and part two will deal with the Peruvian culture in the present.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 12 1984

Nearing completion—Construction worker for M. H. Golden puts finishing touches on the exterior of the Conference Center at the University of San Diego. The $1.6-million, 17,600-square-foot facility was designed by Tucker, Sadler & Associates to reflect the 15th Century Spanish-style architecture of the campus.

Pacific Beach, CA
(San Diego Co.)
North Shores Edition
(2xM. 18,500)

FEB 15 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

USD's executive center is nearing completion

Construction is nearing completion on the $1.6 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego.

The M.H. Golden Co. is serving as general contractor for the two-story, multi-purpose building. Scheduled for completion in February 1984, the center will include a 230-seat auditorium, four large conference rooms and office space for the university.

Plans call for the auditorium to be used as a lecture hall. The conference rooms, intended primarily as instruction areas, will also be available for business groups in the summer months to generate funds for the university, according to Dr. Arthur Hughes, president of the university.

Architects Tucker, Sadler and Associates, designed the 17,600-square-foot building to reflect the existing 15th Century Spanish-style architecture of the campus.

Special architectural details are being incorporated into the design of the building, including hand-crafted decorative moldings, arched windows and sculptured panels.

The M.H. Golden Co. is also serving as general contractor for Olin Hall, a $2.7 million facility under construction for the University of San Diego's School of Business.

Los Angeles, Calif.
(Los Angeles Co.)
Los Angeles Daily Journal
(Cir. 5xW. 21,287)

FEB 16 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Briefcase

The San Diego County Bar Association and Barristers Club will present its annual Bar Sports Banquet and awards ceremony Feb. 21, featuring former UCLA basketball coach John Wooden as guest speaker.

The Bar Sports Association sponsors intramural leagues in several sports for some 1,200 athletic San Diego County lawyers, with the largest participation in the basketball and softball leagues. "There's a lot of tradition here — some teams have been around for 10 or 15 years" says chairman Mark Adelman. "The competition gets pretty heated, but it's fun."

Prior to the talk by coaching great Wooden, there will be an awards presentation honoring the best teams. The Ernie Wideman Award, named for the San Diego lawyer who died in a plane crash five years ago, will be presented to the participant who has exhibited significant "athletic skill and good sportsmanlike conduct." A number of local professional sports figures are expected to attend, and a prize drawing will conclude the evening.

Contact Leo Papas, for information at (619) 231-3575.

Century City lawyer Alan R. Block has been appointed to the advisory board of the Senate Select Committee on Small Business Enterprises.

Mostly making "recommendations on various legislative bills pending" for the statewide organization, Block said he will provide "input concerning loans and administration, and helping small businesses get started."

Block's own firm specializes in administrative law, which grew out of his experience as a deputy attorney general for the California Coastal Commission. At one point, Block was representing almost 25 percent of the cases before the Coastal Commission, he recalls. Block is a graduate of University of San Diego School of Law. He was appointed to the advisory board by Sen. David Roberti, D-Hollywood, committee chairman.

The Marin County Bar Association recently selected its new president, Michael Duffey of San Rafael. Other newly installed officers are Marshall Krause, president-elect; Verna Adams, secretary; and David Freitas, treasurer. The 1984 directors include Bram Bevis, Oak Dowling, Ken MacDonald, Mary Pougiales, and Charles Coyne. J. Ralph Thomas is the past president.

A special one-day mini-trial seminar will be presented by the Los Angeles Trial Lawyers' Association March 3.

Entitled "Ready for Plaintiff?" the all-day seminar will emphasize opening and closing statements, and direct and cross examination. The mock trial format features 12 prominent Los Angeles plaintiff and defense attorneys in the adversarial roles they assume in the courtroom, according to event chairman and LATLA Secretary Lawrence Grassini.

The LATLA's number is 487-1212.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
San Diego Business News
(Cir. 2xM. 3,500)

FEB 13 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

University of San Diego, M.H. Golden Company has completed steel framing on Olin Hall, a three-story facility for the U.S.D. School of Business. Located adjacent to Manchester Executive Center (right), also under construction by Golden, the $2.7 million building will be completed in July 1984. Tucker, Sadler & Associates served as architect for both projects.

La Jolla, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
LA JOLLA LIGHT
(Cir. M. 9,233)

FEB 16 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Clyde Greco Jr. becomes a partner

Clyde C. Greco Jr. has recently become a partner in the La Jolla law firm of Wiles, Circuit & Tremblay. He joined the firm as an associate in 1979 and currently practices general civil litigation and business law.

Greco graduated magna cum laude from the University of San Diego School of Law. He attended Duquesne University and graduated with honors from St. Vincent College.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 17 1984

USD Gallery — "The Indignant Artist," an exhibit that includes visual expression of artists' protest and social comment from the 17th to the 20th centuries in the form of prints, will be on view from Thursday, Feb. 23, through Tuesday, March 27, at the University of San Diego Founders Gallery. The gallery will be open weekdays from noon to 5 p.m. On Wednesdays the gallery will remain open until 7 p.m. Call 291-6480.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

FEB 17 1984

University of San Diego's School of Law, Graduate Tax Program, has a major two-day corporate tax conference planned April 26 and 27 in the Islandia Hyatt Hotel in San Diego.

"A fundamental change in taxation of corporate income" will be the theme for the conference, which will feature 23 law school professors and tax attorneys from across the U.S.

Fee Details are available through the university's continuing education office.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 17 1984

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park): "The Indignant Artist," an exhibition of 45 prints by artists such as William Hogarth, Thomas Nast, Käthe Kollwitz, Reginald Marsh, John Sloan and Gabor Peterdi, will open with a reception from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday. The works, which express the artists' social and political protest and comment, will be on display through March 27. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and until 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Escondido, CA
Daily Times Advocate
(Cir. D. 31,495)
(Cir. S. 33,159)

FEB 16 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Concert scheduled in SD

Serge Kerval, international recording artist and member of l'Academie du Disque Français, will perform at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Hahn School of Nursing, University of San Diego. Mr. Kerval's program will include a selection of songs and anecdotes performed in French with guitar accompaniment. Alliance Francaise is a non-profit organization dedicated to the promotion of French language and culture. Annual membership is $15 a person or $20 a couple. Admission is free to members; $5 for non-members and $1 for students. For more information, call Jeanne Rigby at 279-5188.

6 — Saturday, February 11, 1984 Carlsbad Journal

One of 91 paintings in show

'Trip to Vatican' comes to La Costa

A major donation of 91 Vatican paintings to the University of San Diego will touch both San Diegans and the rest of the country in a variety of ways.

"A Trip Through the Vatican" is a collection of watercolors and sepia drawings completed by Vernon Howe Bailey during a 1921-22 stay at the Vatican. He was the first artist ever to receive papal permission to paint the private quarters of the pontiff. After Bailey completed the series, it acquired a history of mystery and intrigue. Individuals who sought to profit from the paintings met sudden death. After repeated difficulties in promoting them, the paintings were finally permanently stored... until now.

Plans for the collection include an exhibit at the University; an "Invisible University" course presented in homes throughout the country; a nationally broadcast film; and a folio of high quality reproductions.

The collection was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Edwards of Lomas Santa Fe, who acquired the paintings more than 20 years ago from one of Howe's original underwriters.

The collection will first reach the public through a series of USD-sponsored "Invisible University" courses. Georgie Stillman, a nationally recognized appraiser, became an expert on Bailey's career while assessing the collection. She will present a lecture and slide show about the artist and collection in neighborhoods throughout the county during February and March. Programs will be presented in La Costa on Tuesday and in Oceanside on March 14.

Those interested in participating should call Dr. Gil Brown at USD, 293-4523.

An exhibit of selected pieces from the collection is scheduled at the university in March, but exact dates have not yet been set.

Born in 1874, artist Vernon Howe Bailey was familiar to newspaper and magazine readers across the country in his day. His indisputable forte was the illustration of great architecture; he was highly regarded for his light hand in capturing the mood and feeling of famous buildings. Commissioned by the New York Sun to do 340 drawings entitled "Intimate Sketches of New York," Bailey also worked for The Philadelphia Times, Boston Herald, Harper's, Scribner's, and Collier's. In 1917, Bailey was the first artist authorized by the U.S. Navy to make drawings of the navy yards and other war work centers. His works are now included in collections across the world, including the Smithsonian Institution, the National Library Museum in Madrid, the French War Museum in Paris, and the Vatican Library.

When Georgie Stillman began her appraisal of the collection, collectors' and curators' recollections of the artist were hazy; little of his work had passed hands during recent years. But — partially as a result of Stillman's sleuthing, partly as a result of the USD donation, and partly as a result of the collection of art from the Vatican now touring the United States — interest in Bailey has surged.

Some of that attention came from Algernon Walker, an award-winning filmmaker who has begun a film on the Vatican and Bailey's work there that will be nationally broadcast when finished.

Chula Vista, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Star News
(Cir. 2xW. 12,544)
(Cir. S. 12,739)

FEB 9 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Tapia-Iglesias

The engagement of Carolina Tapia and Michael Iglesias and their July 21 wedding date have been announced.

The future bride is the daughter of Herminio and Mary Tapia, 524 E. 3rd St., National City. She was graduated in 1982 from Sweetwater High School and is attending San Diego City College. She is employed in the office of hearings and appeals in San Diego.

Her fiancé is the son of Rudy and Shirley Iglesias of San Diego. He was graduated in 1972 from Madison High School and in 1978 from University of San Diego. He has worked for the National City police department since 1979.

The wedding is planned at St. Mary's Catholic Church in National City, and a reception is planned following the wedding in the Cafe Del Rey Moro ballroom.

Carolina Tapia, Michael Iglesias

Del Mar, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
Del Mar Surfer

FEB 15 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Do you dig archaeology?

The Stratford Center for Education and the Arts in Del Mar will present speakers in the fields of anthropology and archaeology in three upcoming classes set for next week.

Ken Hedges, curator of ethnology and archaeology at the San Diego Museum of Man, will discuss cryptic rock art found as a legacy from the early Indian residents. The class will meet Tuesday, Feb. 21 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Dr. Alana Cordy-Collins, assistant professor in the USD department of anthropology and curator of the Latin-American Collection of the Museum of Man, will speak on "The Maya: A New Look at an Ancient Mystery" on Wednesday, Feb. 22 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Dr. Cordy-Collins will present new theories regarding the antiquity of the Maya and their abrupt decline in the tenth century.

Dr. Corrie Ott, anthropology instructor affiliated with the Museum of Man, will talk on "Agriculture and the Beginnings of Civilization" on Thursday, Feb. 23 from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. She will examine the idea that civilization only becomes possible through the presence of intensive agriculture.

Fee for each program in the series is $12. Call 481-8896 for information.

In March, The Stratford Center will sponsor an archaeological tour of Mayan Mexico and two Peruvian Evenings. Part one will concentrate on the Inca Indians of Peru and part two will deal with the Peruvian culture in the present.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 12 1984

Nearing completion—Construction worker for M. H. Golden puts finishing touches on the exterior of the Conference Center at the University of San Diego. The $1.6-million, 17,600-square-foot facility was designed by Tucker, Sadler & Associates to reflect the 15th Century Spanish-style architecture of the campus.

SENTINEL

FEB 15 1984

USD's executive center is nearing completion

Construction is nearing completion on the $1.6 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego.

The M.H. Golden Co. is serving as general contractor for the two-story, multi-purpose building. Scheduled for completion in February 1984, the center will include a 230-seat auditorium, four large conference rooms and office space for the university.

Plans call for the auditorium to be used as a lecture hall. The conference rooms, intended primarily as instruction areas, will also be available for business groups in the summer months to generate funds for the university, according to Dr. Arthur Hughes, president of the university.

Architects Tucker, Sadler and Associates, designed the 17,600-square-foot building to reflect the existing 15th Century Spanish-style architecture of the campus.

Special architectural details are being incorporated into the design of the building, including hand-crafted decorative moldings, arched windows and sculptured panels.

The M.H. Golden Co. is also serving as general contractor for Olin Hall, a $2.7 million facility under construction for the University of San Diego's School of Business.

Los Angeles, Calif.
(Los Angeles Co.)
Los Angeles Daily Journal
(Cir. 5xM 21,287)

FEB 16 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Briefcase

The San Diego County Bar Association and Barristers Club will present its annual Bar Sports Banquet and awards ceremony Feb. 21, featuring former UCLA basketball coach John Wooden as guest speaker.

The Bar Sports Association sponsors intramural leagues in several sports for some 1,200 athletic San Diego County lawyers, with the largest participation in the basketball and softball leagues. "There's a lot of tradition here—some teams have been around for 10 or 15 years," says chairman Mark Adelman. "The competition gets pretty heated, but it's fun."

Prior to the talk by coaching great Wooden, there will be an awards presentation honoring the best teams. The Ernie Wideman Award, named for the San Diego lawyer who died in a plane crash five years ago, will be presented to the participant who has exhibited significant "athletic skill and good sportsmanlike conduct." A number of local professional sports figures are expected to attend, and a prize drawing will conclude the evening.

Contact Leo Papas, for information at (619) 231-3575.

Century City lawyer Alan R. Block has been appointed to the advisory board of the Senate Select Committee on Small Business Enterprises.

Mostly making "recommendations on various legislative bills pending" for the statewide organization, Block said he will provide "input concerning loans and administration, and helping small businesses get started." Block's own firm specializes in administrative law, which grew out of his experience as a deputy attorney general for the California Coastal Commission. At one point, Block was representing almost 25 percent of the cases before the Coastal Commission, he recalls. Block is a graduate of University of San Diego School of Law. He was appointed to the advisory board by Sen. David Roberti, D-Hollywood, committee chairman.

The Marin County Bar Association recently selected its new president, Michael Dufficy of San Rafael. Other newly installed officers are Marshall Krause, president-elect; Verna Adams, secretary; and David Freitas, treasurer. The 1984 directors include Bram Bevis, Oak Dowling, Ken MacDonald, Mary Fougales, and Charles Coyne. J. Ralph Thomas is the past president.

A special one-day mini-trial seminar will be presented by the Los Angeles Trial Lawyers' Association March 3.

Entitled "Ready for Plaintiff?" the all-day seminar will emphasize opening and closing statements, and direct and cross examination. The mock trial format features 12 prominent Los Angeles plaintiff and defense attorneys in the adversarial roles they assume in the courtroom, according to event chairman and LATLA Secretary Lawrence Grassini.

The LATLA's number is 487-1212.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
San Diego Business News
(Cir. 2xM. 3,500)

FEB 13 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

University of San Diego, M.H. Golden Company has completed steel framing on Olin Hall, a three-story facility for the U.S.D. School of Business. Located adjacent to Manchester Executive Center (right), also under construction by Golden, the $2.7 million building will be completed in July 1984. Tucker, Sadler & Associates served as architect for both projects.

La Jolla, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
LA JOLLA LIGHT
(Cir. W. 9,293)

FEB 16 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Clyde Greco Jr.
Greco a partner

Clyde C. Greco Jr. has recently become a partner in the La Jolla law firm of Wiles, Circuit & Tremblay. He joined the firm as an associate in 1979 and currently practices general civil litigation and business law.

Greco graduated magna cum laude from the University of San Diego School of Law. He attended Duquesne University and graduated with honors from St. Vincent College.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

FEB 17 1984

USD Gallery—"The Indignant Artist," an exhibit that includes visual expression of artists' protest and social comment from the 17th to the 20th centuries in the form of prints, will be on view from Thursday, Feb. 23, through Tuesday, March 27, at the University of San Diego Founders Gallery. The gallery will be open weekdays from noon to 5 p.m. On Wednesdays the gallery will remain open until 7 p.m. Call 291-6460.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

FEB 17 1984

University of San Diego's School of Law, Graduate Tax Program, has a major two-day corporate tax conference planned April 26 and 27 in the Islandia Hyatt Hotel in San Diego.

"A fundamental change in taxation of corporate income" will be the theme for the conference, which will feature 23 law school professors and tax attorneys from across the U.S.

Fee Details are available through the university's continuing education office.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 17 1984

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park). "The Indignant Artist," an exhibition of 45 prints by artists such as William Hogarth, Thomas Nast, Kathe Kollwitz, Reginald Marsh, John Sloan and Gabor Peterdi, will open with a reception from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday. The works, which express the artists' social and political protest and comment, will be on display through March 27. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and until 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Escondido, CA
Daily Times Advocate
(Cir. D. 31,495)
(Cir. S. 33,159)

FEB 16 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Concert scheduled in SD

Serge Kerval, international recording artist and member of l'Academie du Disque Français, will perform at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Hahn School of Nursing, University of San Diego. Mr. Kerval's program will include a selection of songs and anecdotes performed in French with guitar accompaniment. Alliance Française is a non-profit organization dedicated to the promotion of French language and culture. Annual membership is $15 a person or $20 a couple. Admission is free to members; $5 for non-members and $1 for students. For more information, call Jeanne Rigby at 279-5158.

6—Saturday, February 11, 1984 Carlsbad Journal

One of 91 paintings in show

'Trip to Vatican' comes to La Costa

A major donation of 91 Vatican paintings to the University of San Diego will touch both San Diegans and the rest of the country in a variety of ways.

"A Trip Through the Vatican" is a collection of watercolors and sepia drawings completed by Vernon Howe Bailey during a 1921-22 stay at the Vatican. He was the first artist ever to receive papal permission to paint the private quarters of the pontiff. After Bailey completed the series, it acquired a history of mystery and intrigue. Individuals who sought to profit from the paintings met sudden death. After repeated difficulties in promoting them, the paintings were finally permanently stored... until now.

Plans for the collection include an exhibit at the University; an "Invisible University" course presented in homes throughout the country; a nationally broadcast film; and a folio of high quality reproductions.

The collection was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Edwards of Lomas Santa Fe, who acquired the paintings more than 20 years ago from one of Howe's original underwriters.

The collection will first reach the public through a series of USD-sponsored "Invisible University" courses. Georgie Stillman, a nationally recognized appraiser, became an expert on Bailey's career while assessing the collection. She will present a lecture and slide show about the artist and collection in neighborhoods throughout the county during February and March. Programs will be presented in La Costa on Tuesday and in Oceanside on March 14.

Those interested in participating should call Dr. Gil Brown at USD, 293-4523.

An exhibit of selected pieces from the collection is scheduled at the university in March, but exact dates have not yet been set.

Born in 1874, artist Vernon Howe Bailey was familiar to newspaper and magazine readers across the country in his day. His indisputable forte was the illustration of great architecture; he was highly regarded for his light hand in capturing the mood and feeling of famous buildings. Commissioned by the New York Sun to do 340 drawings entitled "Intimate Sketches of New York," Bailey also worked for The Philadelphia Times, Boston Herald, Harper's, Scribner's, and Collier's. In 1917, Bailey was the first artist authorized by the U.S. Navy to make drawings of the navy yards and other war work centers. His works are now included in collections across the world, including the Smithsonian Institution, the National Library Museum in Madrid, the French War Museum in Paris, and the Vatican Library.

When Georgie Stillman began her appraisal of the collection, collectors' and curators' recollections of the artist were hazy; little of his work had passed hands during recent years. But—partially as a result of Stillman's sleuthing, partly as a result of the USD donation, and partly as a result of the collection of art from the Vatican now touring the United States—interest in Bailey has surged.

Some of that attention came from Algernon Walker, an award-winning filmmaker who has begun a film on the Vatican and Bailey's work there that will be nationally broadcast when finished.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(D. 127,454)

FEB 21 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

USD, Mexico university plan academic ties

Academic and cultural ties will be established between the University of San Diego and the National Autonomous University of Mexico.

USD President Arthur Hughes announced yesterday that an agreement between the two universities will be signed Friday at USD with Dr. Octavio Rivero Serrano, rector of the Mexico City university. The ceremony will take place in the Joseph P. Grace Courtroom in the USD School of Law.

It will be the first such pact between the schools, Hughes said.

Hughes said the accord was initiated by Dr. Jorge Vargas, director of USD's Mexico-U.S. Law Institute.

Faculty and students will be exchanged, and information will be shared, Hughes said.

Initially, it will affect only programs in the USD School of Law, but in time it will extend to other academic units of the university, Hughes said.

The Mexico City university was founded in 1551. In 1933, Mexico's Congress passed a law recognizing its autonomy. It has 23 campuses in Mexico City and others scattered throughout Mexico.

Imperial Beach, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Imperial Star
Beach News
(Cir. 2xW. 2,087)

FEB 16 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

The San Diego Union/Don Bartlett

Golden Hill mediator Anne Reidman looks on as Matthew Liedle, left, and Robert Baca engage in a mock dispute.

Mediators patch rifts in Golden Hill

By Scott LaFee

The woman was angry and confused. It's one thing to be upset with a neighbor. That happens all the time. It's quite another to find dog droppings on your doorstep.

Something like that flies in the face of common decency. Especially if it isn't even your dog's doings.

Matthew Liedle smiles at the recollection. The Golden Hill Mediation Center doesn't often handle cases involving something as personal as dog droppings. Residents usually take care of that themselves.

Mostly, Liedle sees ordinary disputes: tenants with leaking apartment pipes and apathetic landlords, unhappy owners of crippled cars that supposedly had been recently repaired. The stuff of commonplace conflict.

It's been nine months since Liedle and fellow director Arlene Kirsch opened the mediation center on the second floor of a Victorian building at 1004 24th St. At the time it opened, it was the first privately funded neighborhood mediation center in San Diego. Now there are centers in Mira Mesa and Santee.

The point of a mediation center is to resolve disputes before they end up in court or at the police station. Golden Hill was chosen because it is a diverse community of Filipinos, blacks, whites and Hispanics living close together.

That diversity is represented in the center's 15 volunteer mediators. "They come in all races, ages, occupations and languages," says Liedle. "The youngest is 28, the oldest in her early 50s. They are husbands, housewives, contractors, religion teachers and court reporters. They all have some connection to the neighborhood."

Though Liedle and Kirsch screen requests for services, the bulk of the work is done in confidential sessions by mediators like Jim Wermers Jr. Wermers, a building contractor, says the secret is simply finding the middle ground. Still, it doesn't always work, says Liedle. "Some people would rather live with the conflict, but we do have an 89 percent success rate."

Consider the case of Jerry and Rick, a couple of would-be electronics entrepreneurs, who were trying to market a video editing machine. Their business was failing and so was the friendship. Jerry, the company's owner, was selling very few machines and paying Rick only part of his salary and commission.

"The tensions began building and there was a lot of arguing about silly things. Mostly reasons why we weren't making money," said Jerry. "Then we had a very severe row. I realized something had to be done. I didn't want to be fighting a friend."

Someone suggested they try the mediation center. The men were doubtful, but they went. Each was convinced the other was too steadfast to compromise.

Wermers was the mediator. "I made some ground rules and tried to get them to be clear about the dispute. I tried to find points of agreement that they didn't see and what they really disagreed upon."

Apparently, it wasn't much. "In three hours," said Rick, "we found we could agree on a lot." Jerry agreed to a

'The place is fantastic. It's too bad our legal system doesn't function as well as the center.'

fixed repayment schedule. Rick agreed to drop some of his demands. Both agreed to speak to one another.

And they agreed about the center.

"The place is fantastic," says Jerry. "It's too bad our legal system doesn't function as well as the center. There are no winners and losers. The process just keeps pounding for a common ground."

It was common ground, or more precisely a common fence, that helped push a dispute between an elderly widow and her handicapped neighbor to a rock-throwing climax.

The story, as Liedle tells it: One day, the widow found her neighbor's laundry hanging over the chain-link fence dividing their property. The widow's husband had built the fence and, in a way, it represented him. She didn't appreciate the laundry draped over her husband's work or the children playing alongside the fence and interrupting her afternoon naps.

Her solution was to hose the kids down. Their answer was to throw a rock at her door. She responded by returning the rock through one of her neighbor's windows.

Both parties were willing to accept a mediated solution but neither could come down to the center. Liedle set up a table on the woman's lawn and they got down to business.

"The family spoke only Spanish and the woman had trouble communicating," Liedle recalls. "It all came down to the laundry. The neighbor agreed not to put laundry on the fence and the woman agreed to give more clothesline space."

Arguments, it seems, always come down to something else. For Jerry and Rick, it wasn't so much the money as the frustration of a failing business and not knowing what would happen next. For the elderly widow, it was the memory of her husband. For the woman with dog droppings on her porch, it was a case of hurt feelings.

"The woman was very upset about the situation and she wanted us to stop it," said Liedle. "I asked her if she knew why her neighbor might have placed dog droppings on her doorstep. She said the neighbor thought her dog was running around too much. I asked, kind of embarrassingly, 'Well, do you know if the stuff belongs to your dog?' And she said, 'No, that's why I'm so mad. It's her dog's.'"

"So I called the other woman and she said the reason was the dog was running around too much. I said, 'The way your neighbor explains it, the droppings are your dog's and not hers.'"

"You're damn right it was my dog's," she said. "I couldn't get any of her dog's. It was running around so much."

The women agreed to discuss the problem with a mediator. Liedle says it soon became clear the women had once been good friends. They used to meet in the morning for coffee and talk. Then one woman's work schedule changed and when she didn't show up for a week, the other woman started getting aggravated about the dog. Before that, there had been no problem.

Eventually, the women agreed to build a communal dog run. And they agreed to get together for coffee again.

LaFee is a free-lance writer.

10 here seek board seats for utility consumer group

Is your utility bill too high?

If you were one of many San Diegans who recently answered "yes" to this question asked by the newly formed Utility Consumers Action Network, chances are you've already mailed in your $4 per adult membership fee and become one of 52,000 ratepayers who have joined this advocacy group working for lower utility bills.

With over $270,000 collected thus far, UCAN will hire lawyers, rate experts, and accountants to represent the interests of consumers before the state Public Utilities Commission (PUC), which sets rates and regulates the electric, gas and telephone services.

UCAN was first initiated by Michael Shames, a student who monitored the activities of the PUC as an intern. Shames knew of a similar consumer group called the Wisconsin Consumer Utility Board and thought the idea would serve San Diegans well.

The organization surpassed its fellow acronym agencies scrambling for grants and public recognition last April when PUC commissioners granted the still fledgling group the right to send its pitch for funds and membership through monthly bills, a move which not only saves UCAN thousands of dollars, but ensures that the message is hitting consumers at the right time — as get a look at the size of their gas and electric bill.

"You're mad, Mr. President!" cried Eddie. Without thinking, he seized the watch and dashed from the Oval Office.

Behind him, a gray hair popped out of the president's left temple and the shadow of a crow's foot darkened his right eye. He sank weakly into his chair and pushed a button. "Secret Service?" he said, a crack in his voice. "Find Eddie Hocknager. He stole my watch."

A magnificent chase ensued through the corridors of the White House. But the Secret Service never did find Eddie Hocknager. They did, however, locate the missing watch. A baby boy was playing with it in the Lincoln Bedroom.

Indeed, the baby cried lustily when the president smilingly removed the watch from his pudgy little fingers.

"Sorry about all the disturbance, Mr. President," said the head of the Secret Service detail. "Think the culprit may have been in the pay of your enemies — like Patton, a retired Marines Corps officer and now president of a gold mine leasing firm; and Joseph W. Egan of El Cajon, executive vice president of University Energy, a co-generation corporation.

According to Gayle Takahashi, spokeswoman for UCAN, voters must select their candidates based on the information included in the voting packets. Each packet will contain each individual's background and statements regarding the issues.

"I suspect some of them will campaign by calling on the phone," she added. "But it will really be low key."

Those elected to the board are volunteering their time, she said. They will not receive compensation. UCAN is, however, currently accepting applications for a full-time executive director, which is a salaried position.

Attorneys and other staff members are also paid out of the funds provided by membership fees.

"By the time we have a new board, we should have a working budget of $200,000," Takahashi said.

"Over the years, the PUC has welcomed non-interested parties such as UCAN to help present a balanced and alternative perspective in dealing with the issues," said Kevin Cahill, staff member for PUC. "The process is so complex, there are so many issues, that one small pricing issue gone unnoticed can affect the utility's whole pricing system. The more ears we have, the better."

It's never too late to become a member of UCAN, Takahashi noted. SDGE customers who would like to join are urged to join by mailing their name, address, and $4 contribution fee to: UCAN, P.O. Box 112423, San Diego, Calif., 92111. For more information, call 293-4806 or 291-6480, ext. 4383.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(D. 127,454)

FEB 22 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Candidate, 21, urges help for seniors

By Elizabeth Wong
Tribune Staff Writer

A 21-year-old Del Mar City Council candidate says the city should be doing more for its senior citizens.

Scott Barnett, the youngest of eight people seeking three council seats in the April 10 election, has asked the city to allow seniors to use the council chambers at 1050 Camino del Mar as a temporary meeting place.

He also has suggested that the Del

Mar Shores School site, presently used by MiraCosta College as a satellite campus, might accommodate a senior center.

"Obviously, there is no senior center in Del Mar, and there is a need in the community for such a center," Barnett said. "Hopefully, there will be a simple, inexpensive answer for the interim. That is, until the Powerhouse (Park) site or a permanent senior center could be built."

According to the 1980 census, 760 of the city's 5,127 residents — or nearly 15 percent — are 55 or older.

Councilman Lou Terrell has asked Barnett, who made his request during a council meeting this week, to investigate the matter further.

Barnett, who says he has attended every council meeting since January 1982, is a political science student at the University of San Diego and a member of the city Traffic Advisory Commission.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(D. 127,454)

FEB 23 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

USD, Mexican university delay pact

The signing of an agreement between the National Autonomous University of Mexico City and the University of San Diego, scheduled for tomorrow, will be rescheduled.

The postponement does not affect the agreement, which will establish academic and cultural ties between the two universities, Sara Finn, USD public-relations director, said yesterday.

Dr. Octavio Rivero Serrano, president of the Mexican university, and his aides notified USD officials that they would be unable to attend the ceremony.

"There was some emergency which necessitated their being on campus in Mexico City," Finn said.

LA JOLLA LIGHT
FEB 23 1984

USD — "The Indignant Artist," an exhibition, that includes visual expression of artists' protest and social comment from the 17th to the 20th century, will be on display at the Founders Gallery through March 27. 291-6480.

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 23 1984

USD, Mexican university delay pact

The signing of an agreement between the National Autonomous University of Mexico City and the University of San Diego, scheduled for tomorrow, will be rescheduled.

The postponement does not affect the agreement, which will establish academic and cultural ties between the two universities, Sara Finn, USD public-relations director, said yesterday.

Dr. Octavio Rivero Serrano, president of the Mexican university, and his aides notified USD officials that they would be unable to attend the ceremony.

"There was some emergency which necessitated their being on campus in Mexico City," Finn said.

PB site of a dispute mediator?

Center could help resolve problems in neighborhoods

By DAVID HARPSTER

Sentinel Staff

James Zito couldn't have timed his announcement better. The same week that U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger urged Americans to quit suing each other so much, Zito urged the Pacific Beach Town Council to accept his proposal to establish a legal dispute center in the community.

Needless to say, Zito's plan — which would give locals a means to solve their neighborhood arguments without going before a judge — was met with enthusiasm.

"If you can reach a solution over your neighbor's barking dog without having to hire an expensive lawyer and go to court, why not have the means to do so?" the 30-year-old attorney said.

A Pacific Beach resident for the last five years, Zito said clinic would help locals iron out problems with their neighbors and businesses quickly and at no cost.

If his plan is materialized — and Zito says several people have already volunteered to help out — the center would utilize a mediator, who would bring the parties at odds face-to-face and "get to the root of their disputes."

"It's actually better than going to court because here you'd resolve problems rather than have a judge determine mere liability or guilt," he said. "It gets at the causes of disputes and brings about an agreement."

"You also don't have to go out and hire a lawyer for $1,500 to get your neighbor to turn down his stereo."

More than 90 percent of the cases mediated in similar centers in the city have been resolved successfully, noted Zito, who said he will volunteer his time as a mediator if his plan gets off the ground.

Zito, who is trying to drum up financial support and neighborhood acceptance of the settlement center, said Pacific Beach is an ideal place for it because of its community identity. People will tend to be more sincere in keeping their half of the bargain once a dispute is resolved, he said.

The center would probably be staffed with volunteer mediators and, once the scope of the agency is formalized, a secretary and a director.

"We'll also need a space to operate out of and a phone," he added.

Profile 2955

In a typical day, Long Beach Municipal Court Commissioner Ralph Randall Olson handles between 80 and 90 criminal misdemeanor cases set for pretrial disposition.

As a steady stream of defendants come before the bench, Olson must make sure they understand their rights. He tries to work out a settlement between the prosecutor and the defense attorney so the case will not have to go to trial.

Olson, who had been a public defender for almost 10 years before taking the bench in December, remembers when he used to be the person making the offers to the judge.

"This is a terrific change, there's no doubt about that," said Olson late one afternoon on a day when he had handled more than 100 cases and was showing visible signs of weariness. "You get to preside over the disposition of cases that are going to have dispositions," he added. "Sometimes there'll be a difference of opinion on details. I try to suggest some medium or happy resolution to resolve the case without having to have it go to trial."

"The pretrial court is easier than some other courts because I get to preside over a disposition that's already worked out be-

Los Angeles, Calif.
(Los Angeles Co.)
Los Angeles Daily Journal
(Cir. 5xN 21,287)

FEB 17 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Profile 2955

Continued from Page 1

usually do, although I might have some questions about certain aspects and have ended up not taking a plea because of that."

After almost a decade spent representing hundreds of defendants, Olson adds it is difficult sometimes to retain his objectivity.

"The one thing that is hard is to not start telling everybody 'Well, have you not done this, that, and the other?' It's hard to not want to start looking into things and representing people and trying to tell them what to do and what not to do. I have to hold off on that and try not to do that," he said.

Olson was selected to be a commissioner from a field of 39 applicants. In a press release issued last November, Thomas Simpson, then-presiding judge of the Long Beach Municipal Court, explained Olson was elected by the judges because his "background, experience, and familiarity with the Long Beach Municipal Court made him an excellent choice."

Simpson added the judges created a new commissioner's position because the state Legislature in 1982 failed to approve a measure that would have added three judgeships to the court. With the appointment of Olson, the court has seven judges and three commissioners.

Olson said he sought the commissioner's position because "I thought I could do a good job at it. I felt like I could help expedite cases quickly. I felt my experience in handling cases would give me a good basis to be fair in handling cases."

Although all of his experience as a public defender has been in criminal cases, Olson said he looks forward to tackling small claims and unlawful detainer matters that are assigned to commissioners in the Long Beach court.

"Those cases may not have a high monetary value involved but they're very important cases because they touch so many people," he said. "That's the thing about municipal court — it is the people's court. There's a lot of people who find themselves charged with some minor offense and all of a sudden they find that they're in the criminal justice system and it's for a real."

Olson, 35, was born in Grand Forks, N.D., and his family moved to the Los Angeles area when he was a year old. The family settled in San Pedro in 1959 and Olson graduated from high school there.

Public Defender's Office

He decided he wanted to be an attorney after he graduated from high school. Olson received his bachelor's degree in political science from the University of California, Santa Barbara in 1970 and his law degree from the University of San Diego in 1973. He worked as a law clerk in the public defender's office in Los Angeles County during the summer of 1972 and became an attorney there after he graduated from law school.

"I felt the public defender's office was a good place to be able to help people, especially people that certainly in the public view weren't very popular," said Olson about his reasons for accepting the job. "I was delighted to be given the chance to be able to do that. To represent somebody who's accused and nobody else is too thrilled with it, I think, an American tradition of helping the underdog. Anyone accused of a crime is an underdog, because the case is usually presented to the prosecutor and all

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(D. 127,454)

FEB 21 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

2 Democrats in running for Lowery's Congress seat

By Vicki Torres
Tribune Staff Writer

Two Democrats have announced their candidacy for the 41st Congressional District seat now held by Rep. Bill Lowery, R-San Diego.

Robert Simmons, a University of San Diego law professor, and Norman Mann, an orthodontist and real estate broker, will run in the June 5 Democratic primary for the right to face Lowery in the November general election.

The district includes a coastal strip extending from Mission Beach through Leucadia, plus Rancho Penasquitos, Mira Mesa, Kearny Mesa, Clairemont, Poway, Santee and La Mesa. Lowery is in his fourth year in Congress.

Simmons, 56, a San Carlos resident, said Lowery has voted for legislation which has "promoted escalation of the arms race and the threat of nuclear confrontation, sent the budget deficit soaring to new heights, crippled the Environmental Protection Agency and killed the Equal Rights Amendment."

Mann, 62, said he believes Lowery must share responsibility for the huge federal budget deficit.

"I'm calling for all candidates and congressmen who talk of a balanced budget amendment to pledge to not increase the national debt ceiling," Mann said. "There's no need for a balanced budget amendment because the same result can be achieved by a refusal to raise the debt ceiling."

Simmons, a professor of law at USD since 1972, is the cofounder of UCAN, the first consumer group to obtain permission from the state Public Utilities Commission to represent utility customers.

He said his supporters include state Sen. Wadie Deddeh, D-Bonita; Assemblywoman

Secondary Mortgage Market Grows Huge

By BILL BURRIS
SAN DIEGO DAILY TRANSCRIPT Staff Writer

The U.S. government's three agencies financing the secondary home mortgage market — Freddie Mac, Fannie Mae and Ginnie Mae — provided more than $100 billion in funding last year.

"That dollar total represents a substantial amount of money flowing back to lenders, back to homebuyers, back to housing," Dr. Kenneth J. Thygeson, president of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac) said yesterday at dedication ceremonies for the Ed and Mary Fletcher Lecture Center at the University of San Diego School of Law.

Thygeson, who has headed Freddie Mac since 1982 and previously was executive vice president of Western Federal Savings & Loan Assn. of Colorado, was guest speaker at the dedication.

The new 5,000-square-foot lecture center with 193 theater-style seats is a gift to the university from the Ed and Mary Fletcher Foundation, the Willis and Jane Fletcher Foundation and members of the Fletcher family.

Dr. Sheldon Krantz of the law school welcomed guests to the ceremonies. Dr. Author E. Hughes, university president, gave an invocation. Remarks on behalf of the Fletcher family were given by Charles K. "Kim" Fletcher, chairman of the board of Home Federal Savings & Loan Assn., who serves as a member of the university board and chairs its San Diego Corporate Associates program.

Thygeson, in his presentation on "Secondary Mortgage Market: (Continued on Page 12A)

TIMES-ADVOCATE

FEB 23 1984

History of social comment on exhibit

"The Indignant Artist," an art exhibition that includes visual expression of artists' protest and social comment from the 17th to the 20th centuries in the form of prints, will open at the University of San Diego Founders Gallery on Feb. 23.

Open free of charge to the public through March 27, the 45-work exhibition includes works by such artists as William Hogarth, Thomas Nast, Kathe Kollwitz, Jose Clement Orozco, Honore Daumier, Ron Cobb, Otoo Dix, William Gropper, Reginald Marsh, Gabor Peterdi and John Sloan. Topics are politics, social change, human rights and anti-war protest.

Founders Gallery is open weekdays from noon to 5 p.m. and on Wednesdays from noon to 7 p.m. An opening reception will be held from 7 to 9 p.m., Feb. 22. For information call Professor Therese Whitcomb, gallery director, 291-6480, ext. 4261.

LA JOLLA LIGHT

A14 Thursday, February 23, 1984

Manchester Center at USD to be dedicated

The $2.4 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego will be dedicated Sunday.

The conference center is named after La Jolla Manchester, founder of Torrey Enterprises and USD's youngest trustee, who donated the first $500,000 to fund the center, according to USD spokeswoman Sara Finn.

The 15,658-square-foot center contains a 226-seat auditorium, two classrooms, three seminar rooms, offices and a board of trustees room, Finn said. The design is 17th century Spanish Renaissance, matching the rest of the campus, Finn said.

Located on the west end of the campus, the conference center will be used primarily by Continuing Education, which is directed by La Jolla Malachi Rafferty, Finn said.

The conference center was paid for entirely with private money, Finn said. Other La Jollans making donations were Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Alessio, Joan B. Kroc, the William K. Warren Foundation, Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Woltman and The Signal Companies, said Finn. She said other individuals and corporations also made donations.

The 3 p.m. dedication ceremony will feature Manchester's 2-year-old daughter Ann Marie cutting the ribbon, the Marine Corps Recruit Depot Band, the USD chorus and the traditional presentation of a symbolic key to the building to the USD Board of Trustees, according to a news release.

Speakers at the dedication will be Dr. Ruben F. Mettler, chairman of the board of TRW, Inc.; Author E. Hughes, USD president; Bishop Leo T. Maher, chairman of the USD Board of Trustees, and Manchester.

"The Manchester Conference Center symbolizes the link between the university and the community. It will serve as the setting for top-level conferences and many of the university's community service programs," says the news release.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Daily Transcript
(Cir. D. 7,415)

FEB 16 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Mortgage Market —

(Continued from Page 1A)

On the Move," said one reason for tremendous growth of the secondary home mortgage market — aside from deregulation, increased competition and volatile interest rates — is the simple fact of Freddie Mac's existence.

"It was Freddie Mac that helped to organize a conventional mortgage market by developing uniform documents, in cooperation with Fannie Mae, by establishing standards for private mortgage insurance and by creating nationally accepted underwriting standards where previously only confusion and redundancy had reigned," he said.

"It was Freddie Mac that developed and introduced in 1971 its mortgage participation certificate. The PC grew to surpass everyone's expectations. As of today, we have issued more than $60 billion worth."

"It was also Freddie Mac that introduced the first collateralized mortgage obligation in June of 1983," he added.

"This innovative bond-type instrument totaled $1 billion, sold out in one week and attracted in a big way the long-term investors such as pension funds."

"Investors in the CMO found they could choose from three classes of bonds, depending on their investment strategies. They also found that the yield and payback schedules were more predictable than with traditional mortgage-backed securities."

Thygeson noted that there is a "new but thriving private secondary market" — including institutions such as the Residential Funding Corp., General Electric Mortgage Securities Corp. and Sears Mortgage Securities Corp. — now purchasing mortgages larger than the $114,000 congressionally mandated ceiling for Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae.

"They are good at what they do," he said. "And because the secondary market is expanding, there are indications others will soon be joining them."

Thygeson said it is estimated that 42 million U.S. residents will become 30 years of age in this decade. "That is the prime age for first-time homebuyers," he said. "In the 1970s, a very good decade for housing, only about 32 million Americans turned 30."

In a news conference prior to his address, Thygeson said Freddie Mac had $23 billion in secondary mortgages in its portfolio last year, all administered by local savings institutions. That was up from $7 billion in 1978.

He said a recent survey of 750 lending agencies showed 82% now offering adjustable-rate mortgages, with 50% of all mortgages being issued being of that type.

"We have found the adjustable-rate mortgages very popular among the public," Thygeson commented. "For one thing, a young couple can qualify easier for that type of mortgage than for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage."

Thygeson said Freddie Mac on Feb. 1 instituted new one, three and five-year adjustable-rate mortgages tied to comparable treasury rates. An option is available to exercise a "payment cap" to limit annual payment increases to 7 1/2% in the event interest rates escalate more rapidly. The mortgages also may be structured so they may be assumed by a new buyer.

He said savings and loan associations were passing about 5% of their home mortgages into secondary markets when Freddie Mac was established in 1971. Now about 50% of their mortgages are passed on to the secondary market organizations.

"It's an enormous growth industry," he commented.

Thygeson said Freddie Mac is "committed to assisting the thrift industry's return to viability" and is doing so through its guarantor, adjustable-rate mortgage and purchase of below-market loans programs.

"The financial constraints on thrifts have been lifted," he said. "Price controls are going and will disappear entirely. This corporation (Freddie Mac) is being used more effectively and to a greater extent than ever before."

He said Freddie Mac is buying, pooling and selling mortgages in the form of securities at a rate "far greater than anyone could have imagined just a few short years ago."

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(Cir. D. 123,422)

FEB 24 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Dedication for USD center Sunday

The $2.4 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center will be dedicated at 3 p.m. Sunday at the University of San Diego.

The two-story conference center is next to the new Olin Hall School of Business Administration, which is expected to be completed in the fall. The center contains an auditorium with a seating capacity of 226, two classrooms, three seminar rooms and a board of trustees' room.

Participating in the dedication will be Ruben F. Mettler, board chairman and chief executive officer of TRW Inc.; USD President Author Hughes; Bishop Leo T. Maher of the San Diego Roman Catholic Diocese, who is chairman of USD's board; and Manchester, a San Diego businessman who contributed $500,000 to construction of the center.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(Cir. D. 123,422)

FEB 25 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Religion professor to give talk

Dr. George W. Forell, professor of religion at the University of Iowa, will speak at an interfaith meeting at 7 p.m. Friday at Christ Lutheran Church, 4761 Cass St.

Forell also will lecture at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. the next day as part of a seminar on peace, ethics and interpersonal relationships.

Among the workshop leaders will be the Rev. Joseph Weiss, San Diego State University Lutheran campus minister, the Rev. Margaret Suiter of Reconciliation Lutheran Church, and the Rev. Jack E. Lindquist, professor in the religious studies department at the University of San Diego.

Forell also will preach at the 8:15 a.m. and 10:45 a.m. services and at the 9:30 a.m. adult forum March 4 at Christ Lutheran.

He is the author of "A History of Christian Ethics, Volume 1," "Ethics of Decision" and other books.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 24 1984

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park): "The Indignant Artist," an exhibition of 45 prints by artists such as William Hogarth, Thomas Nast, Kathe Kollwitz, Reginald Marsh, John Sloan and Gabor Peterdi, will show through March 27. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and until 7 p.m. Wednesday.

ROBERT SIMMONS
USD law professor

FEB 22 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

A graceful queen will give up her crown

Olivia DeCastro Austria steps down in ceremonies on Sunday

By DON NORTON
Mirror Staff

There's nothing personal, you understand, but Olivia DeCastro Austria would have just as soon see the month of February go right on by.

Olivia is the reigning Miss Mira Mesa and doesn't especially relish having to surrender the crown Sunday when this year's queen is crowned in the pageant at Mira Mesa High School.

"It was funny how I became involved," explained the soft-spoken, dark-haired Filipino American. "I had gone to John Nicholson's newly opened Maranatha Photography Studio to have a portrait done. I had been out of school since 1980 and hadn't had one since I was a senior at Mira Mesa High School."

It was then that Nicholson asked her if she'd be interested in entering the pageant with the studio as her sponsor.

Austria said at that time she wasn't all that anxious "because most of the other girls involved were still in high school." She, in turn, was a junior at USD and had been out of high school for three years. "I thought I was really old," she laughed.

She thanked Nicholson for the offer and told him she "was really flattered" but "no, I didn't think so." But Nicholson and Darlene Schlemmer, pageant coordinator and member of the Mira Mesa Junior Women's Club, persisted and Austria finally agreed.

Olivia wasn't all that confident about her chances. "I had absolutely no idea that I'd win. It came as a real surprise when they called me up to be crowned," she said.

Shocked would have been a more accurate description.

"There was this total silence as we all waited for the pageant winner to be announced," recalled Austria. "Then, I heard my brother, Marlon, call my name. I remember promising myself to kill him, he's embarrassing me so. "I was numb," recalled the USD student. "After being crowned, I was supposed to walk around. I could hardly control my legs. On the way back to the stage, I tripped and the crown fell off. I was afraid I'd broken it. I didn't care how it all looked or if the audience was laughing at me. I was in tears of ecstasy."

Besides Nicholson and Schlemmer, Austria credits her aunt, Josefina Ron, as being instrumental in her success. Her aunt, that is, and 16-year-old Marlon. "He's my toughest critic," said Olivia, "and would tell me I was fat and should go on a diet."

The diet was probably the toughest part of her preparation, she said. Eating is a kind of hobby, she said. "I like to eat. Besides, I didn't think I was that fat."

She said her aunt was fully behind the whole pageant idea from the start. She had been crowned queen herself in the Philippines a few years back and was more excited than Olivia. She took control of the girl's whole Miss Mira Mesa schedule: Keeping her calm, helping her to control the spasms of stage fright, dieting and shaping her self confidence.

Austria says that she didn't really get her self confidence entirely together until the May "Fairest of the Fair" in El Cajon. She admits to doing "all right" in that competition but still wasn't adequately prepared because it's so much larger than the Mira Mesa pageant.

One interesting part about the El Cajon competition is how close you become with the other girls in the pageant, she said. It's almost as if you're sisters, you're working together that closely. Sometimes it's as if you're not really competing at all... until the night of the judging "when you're all nervous and scared to death together."

Besides the "Fairest of the Fair," Austria put in guest appearances at several other San Diego pageants and participated in the Pacific Beach Christmas Day parade, the Mira Mesa Blvd. extension opening, inauguration ceremonies of the Mira Mesa DART service, the Mira Mesa Fourth of July parade, Los Penasquitos Canyon Awareness Day and the Seventh annual Hookbill Hobbyists Parrot and McCaw show at the Mira Mesa Mall.

"The truth is that Olivia has been really wonderful about making herself available to the community," said mall promotion director Susan Matern. "No matter what or where we asked of her, she was always eager and happy to help." That effort is especially noteworthy considering that she's now in what she calls her "hectic senior year" at USD and holds down two jobs to support her education. Upon graduation from USD, she hopes to go into computer programming.

Despite it all, Austria said she'd be eager to go through it all again at anytime. She admits she hasn't run across any pageants that strike her fancy of late but she still has several years left to qualify. The age limit is usually about 25 or 26, she said.

"The most memorable thing about the whole experience, of course, is being crowned," she laughed. "I mean the thrill of the exact moment of being crowned. My dad was as surprised as I was. I tried to get him to wear a suit to the coronation ceremony because the father of the winner is supposed to escort her on stage for the traditional crowning. But he wouldn't wear one.

"But he was as delightfully happy and proud as I was," said Austria. "He had tears in his eyes."

Olivia DeCastro Austria always had a friendly wave and a big smile for her fans during her reign as Miss Mira Mesa. She gives up the crown at Sunday night's pageant.

Photo by Dennis C. Uhl

FEB 22 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

RSF resident Dominelli's woes shock San Diego, Del Mar

While the financial woes of Rancho Santa Fe resident J. David "Jerry" Dominelli's investment firm are sending shock waves through San Diego, Del Mar — a city with close ties to J. David — is also feeling the impact.

The most visible effect may be the sudden financial troubles of Vittorio's, the popular Camino del Mar restaurant owned by seven partners.

The partners include former Del Mar Mayor Nancy Hoover, a J. David partner and close personal and professional associate of Dominelli, and Del Mar resident George Mitrovich, former J. David community affairs spokesman.

Although rumors surfaced last week that Vittorio's would be shutting down, Del Mar attorney Carlo Coppo, another partner in the restaurant, said Friday the rumors are false.

Coppo said attempts are currently being made to restructure the ownership of the restaurant and find new partners. But he added, "It would be untrue to say the restaurant is closing."

The restaurant, which has been closed for a month for remodeling and was scheduled to open Saturday, will now re-open at a later date, he said.

Last Monday, J. David & Co. was slapped with a lawsuit by a group of investors in an attempt to force the La Jolla-based firm into bankruptcy. The action seeks the liquidation of the assets of Dominelli and his foreign exchange and investment group.

The FBI is also discussing possible investigations into alleged criminal complaints.

A number of key J. David employees have strong ties to the city and many are current or former Del Mar residents.

former city official, former City Clerk Stephanie Malkiewicz, and former Del Mar Days coordinator Betsy Milich, are employed by J. David.

Malkiewicz is involved with the firm's legal department and Milich is in community relations.

Mitrovich, J. David's community affairs spokesman, resigned from the firm Feb. 10. He has reportedly moved from the spacious Ninth Street home owned by Hoover and Dominelli, and is living elsewhere. Mitrovich could not be reached for comment.

Dominelli and Hoover have made numerous contributions to civic activities in Del Mar and maintain many close personal and professional contacts in the city.

In addition to serving as a councilwoman for eight years, Hoover was a member of the Del Mar Foundation, the city fund-raising arm which sponsors Del Mar Days, the Seagrove Park summer concerts and other community events.

Dominelli and Hoover were the initial financial sponsors of Del Mar Days, contributing $30,000 to $50,000 over two or three years, according to Councilman Harvey Shapiro, a close friend and ally of Hoover.

Hoover also made significant contributions to the Camino del Mar landscaping project, the Lifeguard Department and other city projects, including the repainting of City Hall.

"You can bet nine times out of 10 that when you see the name 'anonymous' on a list of contributions, it was Nancy Hoover," Shapiro said. "Whenever there was a call for money, she was there."

San Diego sports and cultural organizations have also relied, to varying degrees, on contributions from J. David and its associates.

Among the beneficiaries were the San Diego Symphony, the Crew Classic, an international auto racing team and the USD basketball team.

The firm also backed an internationally acclaimed group of triathletes, Team J. David, and made hefty contributions to a number of political candidates, including San Diego Mayor Roger Hedgecock, a former Del Mar city attorney.

FEB 23 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Manchester Center at USD to be dedicated

The $2.4 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego will be dedicated Sunday.

The conference center is named after La Jolla's Manchester, founder of Torrey Enterprises and USD's youngest trustee, who donated the first $500,000 to fund the center, according to USD spokeswoman Sara Finn.

The 15,658-square-foot center contains a 226-seat auditorium, two classrooms, three seminar rooms, offices and a board of trustees room, Finn said. The design is 17th century Spanish Renaissance, matching the rest of the campus, Finn said.

Located on the west end of the campus, the conference center will be used primarily by Continuing Education, which is directed by La Jolla's Malachi Rafferty, Finn said.

The conference center was paid for entirely with private money, Finn said. Other La Jollans making donations were Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Alessio, Joan B. Kroe, the William K. Warren Foundation, Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Woltman and The Signal Companies, said Finn. She said other individuals and corporations also made donations.

The 3 p.m. dedication ceremony will feature Manchester's 2-year-old daughter Ann Marie cutting the ribbon, the Marine Corps Recruit Depot Band, the USD chorus and the traditional presentation of a symbolic key to the building to the USD Board of Trustees, according to a news release.

Speakers at the dedication will be Dr. Ruben F. Mettler, chairman of the board of TRW, Inc.; Author E. Hughes, USD president; Bishop Leo T. Maher, chairman of the USD Board of Trustees, and Manchester.

"The Manchester Conference Center symbolizes the link between the university and the community. It will serve as the setting for top-level conferences and many of the university's community service programs," says the news release.

TIMES-ADVOCATE
FEB 22 1984

Thomas E. Polakiewicz of Jones, Hatfield and Penfield, Escondido, was elected treasurer of the Law Alumni Association, University of San Diego School of Law, at a recent association meeting.

La Jolla, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
LA JOLLA LIGHT
(Cir. W. 9,293)

FEB 23 1984

USD's "The Indignant Artist," an exhibition that includes visual expression of artists' protest and social comment from the 17th to the 20th century, will be on display at the Founders Gallery through March 27. 291-6480.

La Jolla, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
LA JOLLA LIGHT
(Cir. W. 9,293)

FEB 23 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Democrats

Members of La Jolla Democratic Club will hear former judge Bob Simmons at a meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Cooking School, La Jolla Village Square. Simmons is a professor of law at the University of San Diego, running for congressman for the 41st District.

Costa Mesa, CA
(Orange Co.)
Daily Pilot
Street Sales Edition
(Cir. D. 42,195)

FEB 18 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

UCI team advances in tourney

The doubles team of Bruce Man Son Hing and Ken Derr were the lone UC Irvine survivors Friday in the San Diego Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament at the University of San Diego.

Man Son Hing and Derr rallied to defeat a team from Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, 6-7, 6-3, 6-3.

In singles, Man Son Hing, Derr and Stephen Aniston were beaten after each had won the first set of their matches, while Neil Amor and Steve Rockowitz also fell in doubles after taking a one-set advantage.

Meanwhile, in Tucson, Ariz., the UCI women were beaten by Oklahoma State in the second day of the University of Arizona Invitational in Tucson, 7-2, as Lola Trenwith and Colleen Patton registered the lone Anteater victories in singles.

UCI, now 7-5 overall, is gunning for fourth place in the event with another singles match on tap today.

In community college action, Orange Coast College opened its season with a 5½-3½ victory over LA Pierce. Jeff Ewing, a product of Corona del Mar High, won in singles and teamed with Mike Bonfa in doubles for a victory.

El Cajon, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Daily Californian
(D. 100,271)

FEB 24 1984

Allen's P. C. B. Est. 1888

Democrats to oppose area congressmen

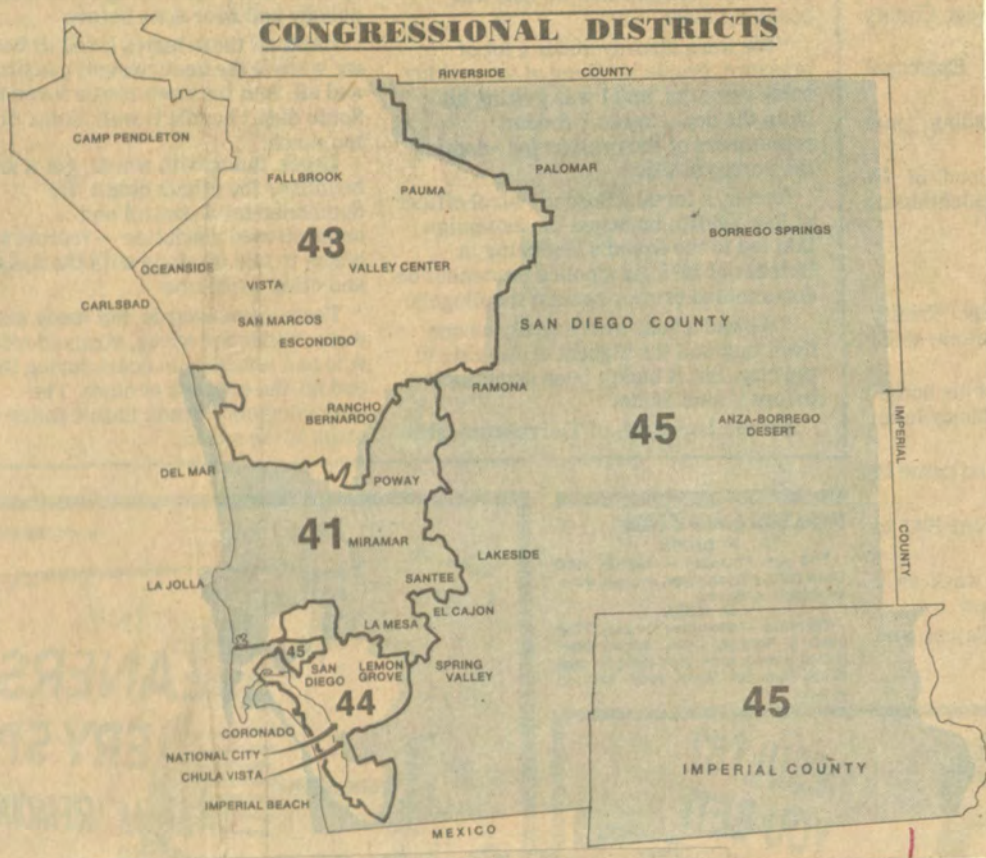

Three Democrats have announced their intention to seek election to the congressional seats currently held by Republican incumbents Duncan Hunter and Bill Lowery, whose districts cover most of the East County.

Norman Mann, an orthodontist and real estate broker, and University of San Diego law professor Robert Simmons will compete for the Democratic nomination June 5 in the 41st Congressional District.

The 41st District extends from the San Diego coastline inland to La Mesa and Santee. It includes Leucadia, Encinitas, Solana Beach, Del Mar, La Jolla, Pacific Beach, Mission Beach, Clairemont, Mira Mesa, Rancho Santa Fe, Grantville, San Carlos and Poway.

Lowery, a former San Diego councilman, has represented the district for the last 3 1/2 years.

□ Candidates 4A

Escondido, CA
Daily Times Advocate
(Cir. D. 31,495)
(Cir. S. 33,159)

FEB 22 1984

Allen's P. C. B. Est. 1888

Thomas E. Polakiewicz of Jones, Hatfield and Penfield, Escondido, was elected treasurer of the Law Alumni Association, University of San Diego School of Law, at a recent association meeting.

SENTINEL

FEB 29 1984

Art

"THE INDIGNANT ARTIST," an art exhibition that includes visual expression of artists' protest and social comment from the 17th to the 20th centuries in the form of prints, is now open at the USD Founders Gallery.

TIMES-ADVOCATE

FEB 28 1984

University of San Diego Auxiliary

The University of San Diego Auxiliary will meet at 10 a.m. Thursday in the Fairbanks Ranch Club House. A representative from the university will give a slide presentation of the art works of Vernon Howe Bailey. For more information, call Marty Rower at 560-1596.

La Jolla, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
LA JOLLA LIGHT
(Cir. W. 9,293)

FEB 23 1984

Allen's P. C. B. Est. 1888

Michael Stucky-Patricia David

Patricia David became the bride of Michael Stucky in a ceremony Feb. 10 at Mary, Star of the Sea Catholic Church. Monsignor James Gilfillan officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Peter Hobart David of La Jolla and the late Mr. David. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Milo Stucky of La Jolla. Paul David gave his sister in marriage. Bridal attendants included Joene David, matron of honor, and Kathleen, Peter and Dennis David. Martin Blair served as best man and ushers were Joe utschig, John Fritzenkotter, Jim Kelley and Harley Sefton.

Following a reception at the Admiral Kidd Club, the couple honeymooned in Mexico and are making their home in San Diego.

The bride, a graduate of La Jolla Country Day School, attended the University of San Diego and graduated from Seattle University. She is employed as a paralegal. Her husband is a graduate of UCSD and of the USD school of law. He is an attorney.

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 29 1984

It's down to just 3 in the WCAC

Realistically, only three teams have a chance to win the West Coast Athletic Conference basketball title — USD and St. Mary's, each with 6-3 league records, and Gonzaga, with a 5-4 record.

The Toreros, with three games remaining — at Portland tomorrow night, at Gonzaga Saturday and at home March 8 to St. Mary's — control their own destiny. If they win all three, they will win the conference title and receive an automatic berth in next month's NCAA tournament. St. Mary's is in the same position.

If USD and St. Mary's tie for the title, there will be a playoff game to determine the champion at a neutral Southern California site — probably Loyola Marymount — on a date to be determined. If USD or St. Mary's tie with Gonzaga for the title, a playoff game will be played at a neutral Northern California site — perhaps Santa Clara — on a date to be determined.

In case of a three-way tie, there would be a playoff, but one of the teams would draw a bye.

CANDIDATES

From 1A

David Guthrie, a computer consultant and real estate broker, will run in the Democratic primary in the 45th Congressional District, which Hunter has represented since 1980.

The 45th District stretches from El Cajon and Lakeside east to the Imperial County line. It includes Ramona, Jamul, Dulzura, Alpine, Pine Valley, Borrego Springs, Campo, Jacumba and Chula Vista.

Mann, 62, who lives in the San Diego State University area, said he is opposed to a balanced budget amendment because the same effect can be accomplished by refusing to increase the national debt ceiling.

He said Lowery, the incumbent, must share the blame for the large federal budget deficit. He favors government-sponsored efforts to combat heart disease, cancer and smoking. He also supports registration of women for military service. Mann is a 10-year Navy veteran who served during World War II and the Korean War.

Simmons, 56, who lives in San Carlos, co-founded UCAN, the Utility Consumer Action Network, which represents consumers before the state Public Utilities Commission. He blames Lowery for supporting legislation that defeated the Equal Rights Amendment, promoted escalation of the arms race and federal budget deficit. He has been at USD for 14 years.

Guthrie, 36, a San Diego resident seeking Hunter's seat, said he opposes Hunter's conservative political philosophy "which does not serve the real needs of the ignored middle class."

"People today want the assurance of a future free from nuclear disaster and financial chaos," he said.

Since the 45th District is on the international border, he said, it has a special responsibility to provide leadership in establishing joint U.S.-Mexican economic policies to resolve such complex issues as sewage treatment and illegal alien traffic.

USD marks Mexican link

Mexico's largest university is sending 5,000 law books to the University of San Diego in the first stage of a wide-ranging agreement establishing academic links between the institutions, a USD official said yesterday.

The National Autonomous University of Mexico will also help USD create a complete data bank on Mexican law, said Dr. Jorge Vargas, director of USD's Mexico-U.S. Law Institute. Eventually, Vargas said, the agreement will extend to history, business, linguistics and other disciplines, and lead to an exchange of students and scholars.

The accord was scheduled to be signed yesterday in a USD ceremony. The event was canceled, however, when scheduling difficulties prevented UNAM officials from traveling to San Diego, a USD spokeswoman said.

Vargas said USD officials went ahead with signing the agreement anyway and will send the document on to Mexico City for signing by UNAM representatives.

About 300,000 students are enrolled at UNAM, about 4,200 at the University of San Diego. Vargas, a UNAM alumnus who taught law there before coming to San Diego two years ago, said he was the catalyst in getting the universities together.

Discussions on the program began last fall, Vargas said, with implementation set for next month. Vargas said the 5,000 law books from UNAM will give USD the most comprehensive library in this area on Mexican legal matters.

Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Coronado, exterior shown, and St. Agnes Catholic Church in Point Loma, interior pictured, were two structures renovated recently by Trepte Construction Co. The projects presented special challenges.

Restoration — two churches, two challenges

Redesigning or rehabilitating an existing structure always poses its own set of challenges and, when the building is a Catholic church with a rich and vital tradition, preserving the original mood and atmosphere becomes just as important as restoring the original architecture.

Trepte Construction Co. Inc., a local 87-year-old firm, has given "face lifts" to two churches in the Catholic Diocese of San Diego this year: St. Agnes Church (above) at 1140 Evergreen St. in Point Loma (1933), and Sacred Heart Church (below) at 672 B Ave. in Coronado (1922).

Bill Gabrielson, Trepte contract manager, oversaw both restoration jobs and explained that even though St. Agnes and Sacred Heart were both Catholic churches built in the same era, the nature of each project was entirely different.

"The changes made at St. Agnes were mainly restricted to the interior and were mostly aesthetic," he said. "On the other hand, Sacred Heart had developed a lot of structural problems over the years, and the work we did there was more rehabilitative."

Trepte coordinated the improvements on both churches with Dr. Therese Truitt Whitcomb, who heads the University of San Diego art department and also acts as the school's director of design.

The new interior of St. Agnes was designed to replicate as closely as possible the 17th century Mediterranean architectural style of the church. Many articles of the original interior were returned, like the tile sanctuary and vestibule and four of the original art-glass windows. The contemporary altar, lectern, pedestals, light fixtures and doors were removed and replaced with baroque pieces more appropriate to the period.

Trepte began restoration work on Sacred Heart Church in late 1982. The 60-year-old church was showing its age, according to Gabrielson. Leaks were repaired and walls were patched. Trepte had to remove the entire 8,000-square-foot floorfill and replace it with a concrete mixture.

Because Sacred Heart was designated a historical landmark by the Coronado Historical Association in 1980, it was important to follow certain guidelines in the restoration. Color schemes were adhered to and the features of the original architecture — repetitive arches, white plaster and roof openings — were preserved.

Three original skylights had been painted over, so they were uncovered, providing natural light in darker areas of the church.

The interior walls were repainted, the flooring and carpeting replaced and the pews refinished.

Outside the years had taken their toll on two of Sacred Heart's crosses. Some of the tiles had been lost from the gold leaf cross which rests on the blue dome tower, so they were replaced. The large wooden cross covered in gold leaf tiles that hung above the entryway was damaged beyond repair.

The construction company created an exact replica by using molded concrete which was then covered in gold leaf. According to Gabrielson, the concrete was chosen for the new cross because "it won't deteriorate as easily and should last much longer than its predecessor."

— Connie A. Salamy

SAN DIEGO UNION*

FEB 2 6 1984

Founders Gallery: "The Indignant Artist," through March 27. University of San Diego. Weekdays, noon to 5 p.m.

The San Diego Union/Russ Gilbert

O.K.? Ann-Marie Manchester gets a hand from sisters Sally, left, and Molly, and her father, Douglas, after cutting the ribbon for the Douglas Manchester Executive Conference Center at University of San Diego. (Story, A-10)

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Union
(D. 217,324)
(S. 339,788)

FEB 19 1984

Allen's P. C. B. Est. 1888

Homes Market's revival tied to changes

By Clyde V. Smith

Deregulation and removal of controls in the market place of housing finance have played a key role in the current recovery of the nation's housing industry.

And the secondary mortgage market is a "major element" in making the funds available that are not only necessary, but also essential to support this strengthened housing position.

This was the message delivered last week by Kenneth J. Thygeson, president and chief executive officer of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac for short) to a San Diego audience composed mostly of lending institution representatives, developers, real estate brokers and others involved in housing finance development.

The speaker was basically optimistic. "Financial constraints on thrifts have been lifted," he said. "Price controls are going, and will disappear entirely. This corporation is being used, and being used more effectively and to a greater extent than ever before. Freddie Mac is buying, pooling and selling mortgages in the form of securities at a rate far greater than anyone could have imagined just a few short years ago."

In a talk entitled "Secondary Mortgage Market: On the Move," Thygeson first explained the functions of Freddie Mac and how and why the secondary mortgage market has emerged as a significant financial tool in the housing industry. Freddie Mac was organized in 1970, the youngest of three agencies chartered by the government to generate support for the mortgage market. The others are the Federal National Mortgage Association (known as Fannie Mae and the oldest of the three) and Government National Mortgage Association, (also known as Ginnie Mae.) All three are engaged in secondary finance operations, but Freddie Mac was organized specifically to bulwark the conventional mortgage market. The others, in the beginning, were limited to buying and selling only those mortgages insured or guaranteed by the government — that is, FHA and VA loans.

The secondary market does not originate loans, Thygeson explained, but buys the mortgages originated by savings and loan firms, banks and other lending institutions, the so-called primary lenders, and thus pumps more funds back into the housing finance market.

Freddie Mac and the other agencies pool the mortgages they buy, issue securities with the mortgages as collateral, and sell these securities to other investors. The securities are more negotiable than the long-term mortgages, and thus more attractive to investors.

"The contemporary secondary market has acted to expand the potential — in fact the real — investor base," said Thygeson. "Freddie Mac has helped to bring insurance companies back into housing finance. We have reinstated pension funds in the potential of investment in housing. In short, we have remade the lowly conventional mortgage into an extremely attractive investment. It is attracting institutional investors, even foreign investors."

Thygeson said that in the less-regulated environment of this decade, the thrift and savings firms have become more flexible in designing their asset structures, and through the secondary market system, they avoid the interest-rate risk of former practices.

The speaker said that in 1983 the total participation of Freddie Mac, Fannie Mae and Ginnie Mae in the secondary market amounted to more than $100 billion, a substantial increase over past years.

"That dollar total represents a substantial amount of money flowing back to lenders, back to home buyers, back to housing," he said.

Thygeson's appearance was in the newly-opened Fletcher Lecture Center in the School of Law building on the University of San Diego campus. The occasion marked the dedication of this hall, which was equipped and furnished by contributions from the Ed and Mary Fletcher Foundation and members of the Fletcher family, several of whom attended the ceremonies.

At a press conference, Thygeson predicted relative stability in the mortgage money markets through the rest of this year. He said interest rates on long-term, fixed-rate mortgages should hold in the range of 12.5 to 14 percent, and for adjustable rate mortgages, he foresees a 10 to 12 percent range.

Thygeson prepared a 19-page text for his address, but he moved it aside and spoke extemporaneously from the podium, although he emphasized most of the same points he made in the text.

Among his other observations:

- Not only is deregulation helping to bring an end to the nation's worst housing slump since World War II, "but it is also unleashing more creative entrepreneurial energy than has ever been available to our country's housing finance system."

- Private sector secondary market conduits, finding the opportunities so attractive, are emerging at a pace never before seen. Among them are General Electric, Sears and other large institutions, and "because the secondary market is expanding, there are indications others will soon be joining them." Thygeson said he not only supports but also welcomes growth of the private secondary market because there is room for both the private as well as the government-chartered agencies.

The agencies, he noted, are limited to buying mortgages amounting to not more than $114,000 each. He said the private sector could help meet the demand for higher-valued mortgages in the secondary market.

The speaker paid tribute to the system of the past, the 30-year fixed-rate mortgage which the primary lender held in a portfolio.

"For years this system worked," said Thygeson, "and worked quite well. After all, Americans in the 20th century have achieved a level of homeownership that is envied around the world. In 1900, approximately 47 percent of Americans owned their own homes. By 1980, that figure had grown to 66 percent."

"But as good as it was, that traditional system of housing finance came dangerously close to extinction through a combination of inflexible government control, increasing inflation and higher interest rates."

As for the future, he believes the housing demand will remain very large, noting that during this decade, there will be 42 million Americans reaching the 30 age bracket, "the home buying age," contrasted with 32 million in the 1970s.

Thygeson, who became president of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. in August 1982, was introduced by Bernard H. Siegan, professor of law at USD. Both were members of the President's Commission on Housing during that group's 10-month life through April, 1982.

FEB 27 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

TRW says East, West may not meet, but high and low tech must

By Donald C. Bauder, Financial Editor

East is East and West is West, and the Industrial Snowbelt and High-Tech Sunbelt may be quite different sociologically, but high tech and low tech are in the process of getting married.

That's the view of Ruben F. Mettler, chairman and chief executive of Cleveland-based TRW Inc., a company that represents an harmonious — some say idyllic — marriage between Eastern low tech and Western high tech.

Mettler was in San Diego yesterday afternoon to address guests at the dedication of the $2.4 million Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego. Manchester, a local real estate entrepreneur, has contributed $500,000 toward the center, which will serve as a setting for top-level conferences and the university's community service programs.

In an interview prior to his speech, Mettler said that "many people miss the important distinction" between low tech and high tech. Low-tech industries, he said, will be around as long as there are markets that need them — "but the companies that survive" will be the ones that utilize their high-tech expertise to modernize their low-tech operations.

"We're doing this better than our competitors," said Mettler — and few would dispute the point. TRW is a corporate hybrid, split geographically and economically between high tech and low tech.

TRW gets 32 percent of its more than $5 billion in sales from low-tech car and truck components: steering, engine, hydraulic, chassis and electronic parts. It gets another 30 percent from low-tech industrial and energy markets: fasteners, tools, bearings, pumps, valves, power cables, drilling tools and the like.

And it gets 38 percent of sales from its quintessentially high-tech electronics and space-systems operations: capacitors, connectors, printed circuit boards, semiconductors, spacecraft and the like.

Most of the high-tech operations are headquartered in Southern California. The auto and industrial products — the "blacksmith" operations, as executives often joke — are in Cleveland. TRW stock is a favorite of security analysts because the company has used its high-tech expertise in virtually all of its low-tech operations.

"The automotive industry is not a low-tech industry any more," said Mettler, citing the many electronic products in autos, and the use of robotics and highly sophisticated equipment in manufacturing and maintenance of vehicles.

"I just went through our valve plant in Cleveland, where we're using new laser holography for inspections," he said. "These were processes that were formerly done laboriously by hand. They have committed themselves to increasing manufacturing efficiency by 25 percent in five years" through use of such innovations.

The low-tech companies that do not utilize high-tech expertise, he said, "will not survive."

Mettler, who got his doctorate in electrical and aeronautical engineering at California Institute of Technology in 1949, today is vice chairman of Caltech and a board member of BankAmerica and Merck. He is also chairman of the prestigious Business Roundtable and is a member of President Reagan's National Productivity Advisory Committee.

In U.S. industries' gray days after World War II, the low-tech industries in many ways did themselves in, noted Mettler. Labor unions hammered out juicy contracts industry by industry, not company by company — and as wages got higher and higher, it soon provided an opening for countries such as Japan to come in with lower-cost labor and hence lower-priced vehicles.

In those halcyon days, individual companies had a "false sense of security bordering on delusions of omnipotence," he said. Management got "top-heavy" and wages soared. Auto industry salaries zoomed to double the average rate for manufacturing.

Even today, he said, average factory wages in Michigan are $100 higher per week than in most other parts of the United States.

Also, "too often management was content with superficial product changes; product innovation was neglected and product quality declined," he said. It was the same in the steel industry.

Now, he said, so-called scholars who believe in a National Industrial Policy (NIP) would give us more of the disease that got us sick: protection.

Noting that this kind of thinking leads the alcoholic to take a nip of the hair of the dog in the morning, Mettler said: "I don't understand how the cure can be the same thing that gave you the disease. It is difficult for me to think of a plan less likely to be successful."

Most NIP plans have three components: 1. a joint business-labor-government board that would try to steer U.S. industry toward strategies that would succeed; 2. a federally financed bank that would steer capital into the industries it identified as the industries of the future; and 3. a super-agency that would try to sort out the winners from the losers.

At the Roundtable, he said, "we have studied all such boards and banks that have been set up before, and we have not found one that succeeded at all except for brief periods during wars." Once the war — which focused all objectives on one thing, victory — was over, the joint boards and banks disintegrated, "often in scandal," he added.

Any joint public sector-private sector board or bank inevitably starts mixing politics and economics — "and they don't mix," Mettler said.

The people pushing for NIP have a mistaken notion about Japan, he said. "Japan is succeeding not because of quality circles, group sprints, having a government agency called MITI (Ministry of International Trade & Investment) picking certain industries, trade barriers, etc. These are mostly the results of something greater," he said. "Japan's secret weapon is the total commitment of its people and government to economic growth and trade and competitiveness in world markets as guiding principles for their society. In Japan, growth and competitiveness are given top priority."

The United States cannot slavishly follow Japan, but can adopt some of its innovations, such as permitting companies to fund research and development jointly. Some such barriers are coming down in this country on a case-by-case basis, but the law still sets up barriers to such sharing, he said.

In San Diego, TRW has its LSI Products semiconductor operation with about 400 employees, and its newly emerging Military Electronics Division that moved its headquarters to North County from Redondo Beach. The division has about 450 employees but will eventually have several thousand.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

JAN 27 1984

Toreros need to buck these Broncos Saturday night

The University of San Diego men's basketball team isn't exactly in a do-or-die situation yet. But a win Saturday night would definitely keep the Toreros one giant step away from the grave.

USD hosts Santa Clara University Saturday evening at 7:30 in the Sports Center as the Toreros get back into West Coast Athletic Conference action. The Toreros had a bye Thursday night. The Broncos were whipped by St. Mary's 81-64 Thursday. Pepperdine nipped Gonzaga 57-56 and Loyola-Marymount beat Portland 55-51.

St. Mary's leads the pack at 3-0. Santa Clara is 2-1. USD, Loyola-Marymount and Pepperdine are 1-1. Gonzaga is 1-2. Portland is 0-3.

After Saturday's contest the Toreros hit the road for six of their final nine games of the year. USD is 9-2 at home and 1-5 on the road.

Six-foot-11 Torero center Scott Thompson broke his toe two days ago. It is not known whether he will play Saturday.

"We've got to win this game," Whitmarsh said. "It's not life or death, but 2-1 and near first place looks awful better than 1-2 and in the bottom of the pack. Hopefully we will come to play both halves."

"Everyone in the conference is about same. All the games will go down to the wire. Not just ours, but everybody's."

Of the seven individual categories in the WCAC statistics, Whitmarsh is in the top 10 in six of them. He is No. 3 in scoring (18.5 a game), assists (6.2), rebounding (7.9) and steals (1.8). He is also eighth in field goal percentage (.532) and free throw percentage (.705).

"Thus far Mike has done everything we have expected him to do and more," said Toreros coach Jim Brovelli. "He is the most complete player we have ever had in our program."

USD's Anthony Reuss is the league's leading shooter from the floor with a .658 average. He is popping in 11.6 points (tie 11th) and grabbing 5.6 rebounds (10th) a game.

In 17 games Reuss has connected on 79 of his 120 floor attempts.

Santa Clara is led by 7-1 center Nick Vanos and 6-3 guard Harold Keeling. Both are juniors. Vanos was the WCAC player of the week last week for his play in the Broncos' first two league games. He had 42 points and 19 rebounds in the pair of wins. Vanos is second in the league in rebounding (7.9), fifth in scoring (16.6), and seventh in field goal percentage (.537).

"They try to get the ball to him on the low post," Whitmarsh said of Vanos. "When he does get the ball we have to drop a guard and double team him and try to get him kick it back out. We are going to pressure them all over court."

Keeling, like Whitmarsh and Vanos, is an all-America candidate. Keeling is second in the conference in steals (2.6) and free throw percentage (.772), and fourth in scoring (17.2).

— Mike Mathison

Sports

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 1 1984

Steve Moser Will Enroll at USD

Normally, this is the time of year when high school football players are making commitments to college programs or exploring their options before signing national letters of intent on Feb. 8.

But Ocean View High School basketball forward Steve Moser decided to go out of season on Tuesday by announcing he is committing to the University of San Diego to continue his career next fall. Moser, a 6-5 senior, is a two-year starter who is averaging 17.3 points per game for the Seahawks.

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 4 1984

WHITMARSH SPARKS WIN — Mike Whitmarsh hit a jump shot from the foul line with five seconds left last night to give USD a 75-73 overtime victory on the road over Loyola-Marymount in West Coast Athletic Conference play game at Los Angeles.

Whitmarsh, who hit 12 of 17 shots from the field and finished with 28 points, helped the Toreros improve their overall record to 12-7 and their conference mark to 3-1. Loyola-Marymount, which received 24 points from Rick Sharp and 21 from Forrest McKenzie, fell to 8-11 and 1-3.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 3 1984

Toreros attain high scores on and off the court

By Bill Center, Staff Writer

WESTCHESTER — Jim Brovelli paused a moment yesterday to gloat about the improvement his University of San Diego basketball team has made this year.

"Eight," Brovelli said. "Up one from a year ago, and we came very close to double figures."

Victories, right Jim? No, that can't be it. The Toreros already have 11 of those, which is within one of their all-time high as a Division I "major."

"No," Brovelli said. "Three point zeroes."

He wasn't talking scoring averages or shooting percentages. In the midst of USD's first-ever run at the West Coast Athletic Conference lead, on the eve of a most important road trip, and when the rest of Alcala Park was buzzing about basketball for one of the few times in memory, Brovelli was talking grades.

At USD some things never change. When grades were posted this week, eight Toreros were B-average students or better at an institution renowned for its academics. Two others just missed. As a whole, the basketball team graded out above the university average.

More than ranking third in the WCAC in scoring (18.4 points a game), rebounds (7.9) and assists (6.2) and fourth in steals, forward Mike Whitmarsh has already qualified for the all-WCAC academics team. Runningmate Anthony Reuss, an 11.7 scorer, has made it for a third straight season.

"Each day, in every way, we get a little better and better," Brovelli said.

This weekend, another set of grades are awaiting USD's basketball team. Tonight against Loyola-Marymount here and tomorrow against defending WCAC champ Pepperdine at Malibu, USD will discover if it can pass as a legitimate contender to the WCAC title.

The Toreros are 11-7 overall — their best record yet at this stage of the season in five campaigns in the WCAC. At 2-1 in the conference, the Toreros begin the weekend tied for second and within a game of WCAC-leading St.

See USD on Page C-2

USD: Scoring high

Continued from C-1

Mary's.

"I don't think North Carolina has anything to worry about yet," Brovelli said. "We're not there, but we're a lot closer than we were five years ago... we've built ourselves an identity... it's just been a pleasure to be on campus the last couple of days and listen to the students talking about the game."

There is where Brovelli would like to think the Toreros are headed — a WCAC title; if not this year, then next or the year, after Scott Thompson reaches 7 feet and matures into the offensive force everyone expects him to be.

The game is USD's 69-62 victory over Santa Clara last Saturday before a capacity USD Sports Center turnout of some 2,400. More games will get USD there faster. Basketball Weekly ranks USD among the nation's 10 most improved teams.

"Now we've got to get serious," Brovelli said. "We've shown what we can do. Now we have to do it consistently."

After averaging just over 20 victories a season in three previous campaigns as a Division II power, USD found the transition to Division I status difficult. Progress was slow — 6-19, 10-16, 11-15 and 12-14 last year. Along the way there were some milestones: a triumph at Stanford, a double overtime loss at San Francisco and a triumph earlier this season over UC-Irvine.

A split this weekend would assure USD of matching their best previous Division I mark.

"That's not a major accomplishment," Brovelli said. "In reality, we could have won every game we played this year. The most important thing we've done is become a factor. The players must believe we can beat people. For the first time, we've got a positive mental feeling that can be sustained from one game to the next, even through setbacks. We could be 3-0 right now if we hadn't lost that one game at the buzzer... it's been that type of a year."

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 4 1984

Whitmarsh's Jumper Beats Loyola in OT

By ALAN DROOZ, Times Staff Writer

Forward Mike Whitmarsh hit a 15-foot jump shot with four seconds left in overtime to give the University of San Diego a 75-73 West Coast Athletic Conference victory over Loyola Marymount Friday night before a crowd of 1,438 at Loyola.

The Lions had tied the score at 67-67 with 15 seconds left in regulation on a jumper by walk-on guard Jeff Hill — his first basket of the year. Loyola tied the game at 73-73 on a baseline shot by Forrest McKenzie with 16 seconds left in overtime to set up Whitmarsh's winning jumper from the foul line.

Loyola had scored the last 11 points of the first half to take a 42-32 lead, but San Diego scored 10 straight to open the second half, with Whitmarsh hitting the first two baskets. The lead seesawed the rest of the way.

Whitmarsh finished with a game-high 28 points, 18 in the second half, plus eight rebounds and seven assists. Forward Anthony Reuss added 16 points and five assists.

Guard Rick Sharp led Loyola with 24 points, tying his career high. McKenzie had 21 points, eight rebounds and five assists and guard Keith Smith added 19 points and seven assists.

The victory improved San Diego's record to 3-1 in the WCAC and 12-7 overall. Loyola fell to 1-3 and 8-11. The Lions host league-leading St. Mary's tonight while San Diego travels to Pepperdine.

Toreros reach new plateau

By BRAD EIGEN
Sentinel Correspondent

The USD Toreros this week are preparing for the first roadtrip of their West Coast Athletic Conference season. But no one would blame them if, as they try to focus their attention on two crucial weekend games, they look back, just a bit.

After all, the Toreros have never before stood over the 500 mark after three WCAC games. Always by this point in the past four years the team was already sinking into the cellar.

The Toreros gained their second victory in grand fashion Saturday, by upsetting visiting Santa Clara 69-62 before a standing room only crowd of 1,830 at the USD Sports Center.

Forward Mike Whitmarsh, USD's leading scorer, paced his side with 16 points, as four Toreros reached double figures in scoring.

"I give credit to the whole team. They played great," USD coach Jim Brovelli said afterward. He pointed in particular to outstanding performances from Whitmarsh, forward Anthony Reuss (who scored 12 points) and guards Chris Carr (10 points) and Mark Bostick (12 points). "This is the first time we've been 2-1 in the conference," Brovelli said. "Now we've got to now continue to be consistent."

Santa Clara entered the game as one of the favorites to win the WCAC crown, but the Broncos left with a 2-2 conference record and a 14-6 overall mark.

The Toreros whoop it up on the sideline in celebration after last weekend's upset win over vaunted Santa Clara.

USD, meanwhile, improved its overall record to 11-7. The Toreros now face three straight road games, starting with contests Friday at Loyola Marymount and Saturday at defending WCAC champion Pepperdine.

The Toreros trailed throughout most of the first half of Saturday's game, but never by more than seven points. With 46 seconds left in the half, USD pulled ahead for the first time at 37-36 on a steal and layup by Al Moscatel.

(Continued on page B-3)

Toreros triumph

(Continued from page B-1)

The Toreros then held on stubbornly to their lead for most of the second half.

With 1:39 left in the game Bronco Michael Norman made a layup to tie the score at 62. Bostick was fouled with 57 seconds left and made two free throws to put USD back in the lead.

Santa Clara's Harold Keeling was fouled with 27 seconds left, but missed the free throw. Just one second later, Reuss went to the line and calmly sank both pressure-packed shots to make it 66-62.

A key to USD's win was a stall that the Toreros started when they had a two-point lead with 4:00 left. The Broncos reacted by fouling; the Toreros converted the free throws.

"We were a little overanxious early in the game, which accounts for the slow start. Then we relaxed and took some good shots," Brovelli said.

Said Torero Dave McIver, "Throughout the season, we've only played half of the defense. If we get it going we'll be unbeatable."

"The crowd really helped tonight," he added.

USD outshot the Broncos in the first half 57-46 percent and also in the second half 45-43 percent.

Top rebounders for the game were Reuss and Bronco Scott Lamson, with 12 apiece, and Whitmarsh, with nine.

John Prunty of USD skies over Santa Clara's Steve Kenilvort for a basket Saturday.

USD on bullish road trip

If the University of San Diego men's basketball team ever needed a turnover, tonight's the night.

The Toreros are in a crucial West Coast Athletic Conference (WCAC) road trip tonight and Saturday. USD visits the Loyola-Marymount Lions den this evening, then crash in on the Pepperdine Waves Saturday. Both contests are slated for 7:30 p.m. tipoffs.

USD is 11-7 on the year. They are 10-2 on their own hardwood. Away from the friendly confines of the Sports Complex the Toreros are just 1-5. That's where they must change their ways.

St. Mary's leads the WCAC race at 3-0. The Toreros and Pepperdine are tied for second at 2-1. Gonzaga and Santa Clara are 2-2. Loyola-Marymount is 1-2 and Portland 0-4.

Head coach Jim Brovelli and his crew haven't been on the road since a Jan. 5 game against San Diego State at the Sports Arena, if you can call that traveling. USD was last out of San Diego County Dec. 28 and 29 in the Wolfpack Classic in Reno, Nev. where it finished second. The Toreros have won four of their last five entering tonight's contest.

Six-foot-7 senior forward Mike

USD 3B

USD From 1B

Whitmarsh leads USD with 18.4 points and 7.9 rebounds per contest. He is third in the league in scoring, rebounding and assists (6.2); fourth in steals (1.8); and sixth in field goal percentage (.526).

Anthony Reuss, a 6-7 junior forward, is second in the conference in field goal percentage (.646); ninth in rebounding (6.0) and 10th in scoring (11.7).

USD leads the WCAC in winning margins. It is outscoring its oppositions by 9.1 points per outing. The Lions are last in the league, being outscored by 2.5 points a contest.

Loyola-Marymount, which is 8-10 overall, is paced by Forrest McKenzie. He is tops in the conference in free throw shooting (.850); second in scoring (19.5); sixth in rebounding (6.6); and 10th in steals (1.3). McKenzie is a 6-7 junior forward.

Saturday night in Malibu the Toreros will face a physical Wave team. But facing a physical team is nothing new to USD. It has already played teams like Santa Clara, San Diego State and Idaho State.

Pepperdine has a balanced starting lineup. Its fifth starter is averaging 9.3 points a game. Guard Grant Gondrezick leads the club at a 14.2 clip. Six-8 Victor Anger and 6-9 Scott McCollum control the backboards. Both are seniors. McCollum averages 7.4 boards a game and Anger 7.2. Anger was last week's WCAC player of the week for scoring 31 points and wiping the glass 20 times in a pair of road wins.

Both McCollum and Anger are scoring 11.4 a night. Dwayne Polee, a 6-5 sophomore forward, is hitting 11.6 points and snaring 4.1 carsoms a game.

Pepperdine is the league's best offensive team. It is scoring 72.5 points an outing. But the Waves have also given up the most points a contest at 74.4.

Costa Mesa, CA
(Orange Co.)
Daily Pilot
(Cir. D. 44,747)
(Cir. S. 44,773)

FEB 4 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Top-ranked Tar Heels romp

Pepperdine, Loyola handed setbacks in WCAC action

From AP dispatches

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Michael Jordan scored 21 points and Brad Daugherty added 15 Friday night as top-ranked and unbeaten North Carolina romped to an 83-48 college basketball victory over Furman.

North Carolina won its 19th straight game in the nightcap of the 26th annual North-South double-header. In the opener, North Carolina State squeezed out a 50-49 victory over The Citadel.

Constant defensive pressure by the Tar Heels forced 18 Paladins turnovers in the first half. Meanwhile, North Carolina was building a 42-21 edge as Jordan scored 15 points on six of 10 from the floor.

North Carolina hit 15 of 25 shots in the period for 60 percent. The Tar Heels finished at 58.6 percent on 34 of 58 field goal attempts.

Furman hit 10 of 24 shots for 41.7 percent in the first half and finished at 35.5 percent on 22 of 62 shots. The Paladins also committed 29 turnovers.

Meanwhile, in the West Coast Athletic Conference:

St. Mary's 76, Pepperdine 68
MALIBU — Forward David Boone scored 22 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead hot-shooting St. Mary's.

The win left the Gaels as the WCAC's only unbeaten team in conference play with a 4-0 record.

St. Mary's is 9-11 overall after winning its first road game of the season. The Gaels had lost their previous seven road games.

Victor Anger led Pepperdine with a game-high 26 points, all but nine of them in the first half. The Waves fell to 2-2 in league action and 11-9 overall.

U. San Diego 75, Loyola Marymount 73

LOS ANGELES — Mike Whitmarsh made two free throws with five seconds remaining in an overtime period to give the University of San Diego the victory.

Loyola failed to get a shot off after Whitmarsh's game-winning foul shot.

Whitmarsh led all scorers with 28 points and also had eight rebounds.

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

TOREROS WIN/ Mike Whitmarsh made two free throws with five seconds remaining in overtime Friday night to give the University of San Diego a 75-73 West Coast Athletic Conference basketball victory over Loyola Marymount. Loyola failed to get a shot off after Whitmarsh's game-winning foul shot. Whitmarsh led all scorers with 28 points and also had eight rebounds and seven assists as the Toreros raised their WCAC record to 3-1 and their overall mark to 12-7. Anthony Reuss added 16 points and had 10 rebounds and five assists for San Diego. Guard Rick Sharp led Loyola, which fell to 1-3 in league play and 8-11 overall, with 24 points, six rebounds and five assists. Forward Forrest McKenzie added 21 points and had eight rebounds for the Lions. The Lions were ahead through most of the first half and held a 42-32 advantage at the intermission. However, the Toreros scored the first 10 points of the second half and the game was close the rest of the way. Loyola's Jeff Hill forced the overtime by making an 18-foot jump shot with eight seconds remaining in regulation to tie the contest at 67-all. The points were the first of the year for Hill.

USD beats Loyola in overtime

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mike Whitmarsh made two free throws with five seconds remaining in an overtime period Friday night to give the University of San Diego a 75-73 West Coast Athletic Conference basketball victory over Loyola Marymount.

Loyola failed to get a shot off after Whitmarsh's game-winning foul shot.

Whitmarsh led all scorers with 28 points and also had eight rebounds and seven assists as the Toreros raised their WCAC record to 3-1 and their overall mark to 12-7.

Anthony Reuss added 16 points and had 10 rebounds and five assists for San Diego.

Guard Rick Sharp led Loyola, which fell to 1-3 in league play and 8-11 overall, with 24 points.

Pepperdine 67, USD 64

MALIBU — Grant Gondrezick scored a career-high 22 points and pulled down nine rebounds to lead Pepperdine to victory over the University of San Diego in a West Coast Athletic Association game.

Gondrezick made 11 of 15 field goal attempts as Pepperdine improved its overall record to 12-9 and its WCAC mark to 3-2.

San Diego, which dropped to 12-8 and 3-2, was led by Anthony Reuss, who scored 15 points.

Pepperdine made 54 percent of its field goal attempts and outrebounded San Diego by a 36-22 margin.

The Waves led 36-31 at halftime and stretched the advantage to 50-40 with 14:38 to play before San Diego rallied to cut the deficit to 66-64 with 24 seconds left on Al Moscatel's 18-foot jumper.

The Waves clinched the win when Scott McCollum hit a free throw with 15 seconds remaining.

Whitmarsh's shot lifts USD

By Bill Center, Staff Writer

WESTCHESTER — It didn't take any coaching magic on Jim Brovelli's part last night.

With 11 seconds to play in overtime of a 73-73 stalemate, everyone in Gersten Pavilion knew what the University of San Diego's strategy would be as the Toreros prepared to put the ball in play from a timeout.

"If Mike Whitmarsh wants the ball in that situation, I'm smart enough to give him the ball," said Brovelli.

Whitmarsh wanted it.

"I'm getting tired," the Torero forward said as he marched back onto the floor. "Let's get this game over with."

Eight seconds later, he did.

With defender Fred Bradford hanging on his arm, the 6-foot-7 Whitmarsh sank a soft jumper from the top of the foul lane to cap a USD rally and give the Toreros a 75-73 victory over Loyola-Marymount.

On the strength of Whitmarsh's shot, USD reached another plateau. The Toreros equaled their previous high for wins (12) in five seasons in Division I and, for the first time, are now in sole possession of second in the West Coast Athletic Conference as they head into tonight's game at Pepperdine against the defending champs.

"It was really a lucky shot," said Whitmarsh, who proved in ways other than his 28 points why he is the key ingredient in USD's sudden rise this season.

"I was off balance when I took it, the defender (Bradford) was right there. It wasn't that good a shot. It wasn't even clean. I didn't exactly drill it."

Actually two full seconds ticked off the game clock between the time Whitmarsh went up for his final attempt and when the ball settled through the net. In between, it bounced around the rim.

"But it always looked good," said Whitmarsh. "It wasn't a brick. It was put up there softly with hope."

"I knew Mike was going to get the basket," said Brovelli. "I've seen enough of him to know when he's got

See USD on Page C-6

USD: Wins OT on Whitmarsh shot

Continued from C-1
that X factor of confidence. When we went back onto the floor, I could see Mike was going to score somehow."

Whitmarsh's basket capped one of USD's stranger games of the season.

When USD was good, the Toreros were very good. Whitmarsh's forward running mate Anthony Reuss played one of his best games with 16 points, 10 rebounds and five assists; center Scott Thompson scored 12 points, despite playing with a broken toe, to give the frontline a net of 56, and guard Mark Bostic showed signs of snapping out of a prolonged shooting slump.

But there were times during the game when the 12-7 Toreros (3-1 in WCAC play) struggled against a Loyola-Marymount team that is 1-3 in conference and 8-11 overall.

After USD jumped out to a 9-2 lead, the Lions outscored the Toreros 40-23 over the final 17 minutes of the first half and had an 11-0 run with Whitmarsh out of the lineup the last 5:53 of the half.

Whitmarsh was out because he had drawn a second personal foul. He is so important to USD that Brovelli feels he cannot run the risk of keeping Whitmarsh in a game after he draws his second foul of a half.

"We had two games this year where Mike got his third foul just before the end of the first half and his fourth in the first minutes of the second half. He eventually fouled out of both." And USD lost both.

The visitors led 67-63 with 1:16 to go before Lion guard Keith Smith hit his second straight 20-foot bomb, followed by guard Jeff Hill's first-ever basket, an 18-foot prayer that forced overtime. In between, USD's John Prunty missed the front end of a 1-on-1.

Excellent passes by Prunty and Bostic gave USD a pair of lay-in baskets by Thompson and Reuss to give the Toreros a 73-71 lead in the overtime. But Whitmarsh missed a free throw that could have sealed the decision and with 20 seconds to go, Loyola-Marymount's all-WCAC forward, Forrest McKenzie, hit a 13-foot baseline jumper to tie it.

It took USD only one pass to get the ball into Whitmarsh's hands. He faked to his right, dribbled left through the top of the lane, turned and fired, capping nicely another Whitmarshian effort — 12-for-17 from the floor, eight rebounds and seven assists.

Waves outdistance charging Toreros

By Bill Center
Staff Writer

MALIBU — Defeat no longer comes easy for the University of San Diego. That might be the Toreros' biggest step forward of all this season.

Defending West Coast Athletic Conference champion Pepperdine last night snapped the Toreros' three-game winning streak to drop USD into a third-place tie with the Waves in a league race that is becoming a war.

But while the 12-9 Waves had run over the Toreros in recent meetings, Pepperdine's eighth straight victory in the series was in doubt to the final seconds.

Pepperdine won by three, 67-64, after leading by nine with two minutes to play and holding a 66-60 edge with only 56 seconds to go.

USD, now 12-8 and 3-2 in conference play, pulled to within two on a pair of outside jumpers by reserve guards John Prunty and Al Moscatel (who had eight points in the final three minutes) and was grappling under its basket for a possible three-point opportunity when the gun sounded.

"We made a great run tonight," said USD coach Jim Brovelli. "I'm really proud of the way we played."

"When you go on the road and get a split (the Toreros won at Loyola-Marymount Friday night) you're usually happy. But we were a little greedy this time. I thought we might sweep."

"We've come that far. We're in the hunt." Both Brovelli and Pepperdine coach Jim Harrick called both last night's physical match and the overall WCAC race a "dog-fight."

Because Loyola-Marymount upset league-leading St. Mary's 57-54 last night, the Toreros will be playing for a share of the WCAC lead when they travel to Moraga Saturday.

"It's really nice to be here," said Brovelli of the WCAC race. "Top to bottom there's not an easy out in this league."

Last night the Waves — who lost to eventual champ North Carolina State by two points in the first round of last year's NCAA tournament — did an outstanding job of denying USD some of its better plays.

Mike Whitmarsh scored only six points in the first half and took only two shots from the floor. The USD frontline of Whitmarsh, Anthony Reuss and Scott Thompson had only nine shots between them in the first half.

Paced by Grant Gondrezick, who scored 16 of his 22 points in the first half, Pepperdine shot out to a 36-31 lead.

Guards Mark Bostic and Chris Carr kept the Toreros alive in the first half, getting 18 points between them. But with forward Victor Anger hitting the boards to help Gondrezick, the Waves moved to a 50-40 lead with 14:38 to play.

It was still 60-51 with 3:12 to go when Moscatel, a sophomore transfer from Mesa College, got the Toreros' offense moving with a pair of baseline jumpers and two free throws. Before Moscatel hit, the Toreros had gone more than four minutes without scoring and had only two points in eight minutes. USD missed 6 of 7 shots in a stretch where Pepperdine, up by five, had turned the ball over four times.

Although USD didn't move any closer on Moscatel's shooting, the Toreros seemed to come alive when he stole the ball and passed it to Bostic for a slam that made it 64-59. Prunty sank a technical foul that brought the Toreros to within four at 64-60 with 1:23 to play.

Toreros face crucial WCAC weekend

By Mike Mathison
of The Daily Californian

The Toreros aren't looking at that "must-win" situation yet, but a victory would sure make things a lot easier for the next couple of weeks.

Jim Brovelli's University of San Diego men's basketball team is sitting in the West Coast Athletic Conference rocking chair that can just as easily go forward as it can go backward. The Toreros are looking at a nice thrust in the positive direction Saturday night.

USD travels north to Moraga to take on WCAC leader St. Mary's for a 7:30 p.m. tipoff. The Gaels are 4-1 in conference contests. Santa Clara is in second at 4-2. Pepperdine and the Toreros are tied at 3-2. A loss would not give USD the brightest of futures.

The Toreros have had their share of troubles away from home. They are 2-6 wearing the blue uniform. The second of their two road wins came last week at Loyola-Marymount 75-73 in overtime. The Lions then went and upset St. Mary's the following evening.

"They're basically the same team they had last year," USD's Mike Whitmarsh said about the Gaels. "They're big and strong, can jump and like to run. They're more like a Portland team than a Pepperdine."

Earlier in the year the Gaels lost to highly-overs," Whitmarsh said of the Gaels. "We're going to keep pressure on them all the time."

St. Mary's turns the ball over 18 times a game. The Gaels are also leading the conference in field goal shooting (.526).

The Gaels are paced by 6-foot-5 sophomore forward David Boone, the WCAC's leading rebounder (11.0). He's also scoring 15 points per game.

Rebounding has not been a Torero strong suit. They are being outrebounded by seven a game through five league contests. Whitmarsh leads the team at 7.2 an outing. Anthony Reuss is right behind at 6.8. Whitmarsh is third in the league in scoring at 17.6. Reuss is netting 13.4 a game. Whitmarsh is also second in the league averaging seven assists.

Rebounding hurt USD in its 67-64 loss to Pepperdine last week.

"Nobody really had a good game," Whitmarsh said. "I didn't play well personally. Scott (6-11 center Scott Thompson) got one point and two rebounds. We need Scott to come back. He's been a little timid lately with that broken toe. He needs to get a little more aggressive for us."

"I'm looking forward to next week when we get Pepperdine and Loyola in our gym. They're talking about basketball around here these days."

"They are leading the conference in turnovers," Whitmarsh said of the Gaels. "We're going to keep pressure on them all the time."

St. Mary's turns the ball over 18 times a game. The Gaels are also leading the conference in field goal shooting (.526).

The Gaels are paced by 6-foot-5 sophomore forward David Boone, the WCAC's leading rebounder (11.0). He's also scoring 15 points per game.

Rebounding has not been a Torero strong suit. They are being outrebounded by seven a game through five league contests. Whitmarsh leads the team at 7.2 an outing. Anthony Reuss is right behind at 6.8. Whitmarsh is third in the league in scoring at 17.6. Reuss is netting 13.4 a game. Whitmarsh is also second in the league averaging seven assists.

Rebounding hurt USD in its 67-64 loss to Pepperdine last week.

"Nobody really had a good game," Whitmarsh said. "I didn't play well personally. Scott (6-11 center Scott Thompson) got one point and two rebounds. We need Scott to come back. He's been a little timid lately with that broken toe. He needs to get a little more aggressive for us."

"I'm looking forward to next week when we get Pepperdine and Loyola in our gym. They're talking about basketball around here these days."

"They are leading the conference in turn-

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

USD LOSES/ The University of San Diego men's basketball team was left high and dry Saturday night in Malibu. The Pepperdine Waves drowned the Toreros 67-64 in a West Coast Athletic Conference game. USD and Pepperdine are in a third-place tie at 3-2. Santa Clara is in second at 4-2. St. Mary's is leading the pack at 4-1. The Gaels lost to Loyola-Marymount 57-54 Saturday. The Toreros lost to Pepperdine because the Waves outrebounded them 36-22. The Waves held a 19-8 advantage in the second half. Mike Whitmarsh led USD with six rebounds. The Toreros had four players in double figures. Anthony Reuss led the point production with 15. Whitmarsh, Chris Carr and Mark Bostic all totaled 12. Pepperdine's Grant Gondrezick led all scorers with 22. USD didn't help itself with its floor shooting, either. The Toreros connected on 45 percent (25 of 55) from the field, while Pepperdine was 27 of 50 (54 percent). USD hits the road again next week for a showdown with St. Mary's Saturday night in Moraga. The Toreros are 12-8 overall, 2-6 on the road.

WOMEN

U. of San Diego 72, UC-Santa Barbara 57 — Mary Godfrey came off the bench to spark USD (10-12) past the Gauchos (2-22) at the Sports Center. Godfrey scored 16 points, including nine when the Toreros ran off 16 straight early in the first half. Michelle Dykstra led all scorers as she scored 22 for USD.

At USD, Escondido resident John Cunningham began his 21st season this afternoon as head coach of the Toreros.

USD hosted Pt. Loma today, hosts UC San Diego on Wednesday and hosts Los Angeles State in a noon doubleheader on Saturday.

USD was 17-27-1 overall last season and 10-18-1 in their conference, the Southern California Baseball Association.

This year's pitching staff will revolve around senior Russ Applegate, a former Palomar College and San Pasqual High School standout. A right-hander, Applegate was 5-9 with a 4.37 ERA last year.

"Barring injury, we'll be stronger than last year overall," said Cunningham. "We have more depth in the infield and more and better players in the outfield. I definitely think we have more punch in the lineup than we've had in recent seasons."

USD's schedule includes non-conference games against Fresno State, Arizona and Army. Pepperdine, Long Beach State, Loyola, UC Santa Barbara, UC Irvine, Fullerton State and Nevada-Las Vegas are the members of the conference.

San Diego State and USD play twice this season — Feb. 14 at 2:30 p.m. at USD and March 1 at 2:30 p.m. at SDSU.

Pepperdine Edges San Diego Behind Gondrezick's 22 Points

Grant Gondrezick scored a career-high 22 points and Pepperdine escaped with a hard-fought, 67-64 win over the University of San Diego Saturday night before 1,677 fans at Firestone Fieldhouse in Malibu.

Anthony Reuss led the Toreros with 15 points, but San Diego scoring leader Mike Whitmarsh was held to 12 points.

The victory turned the West Coast Athletic Conference race into a dogfight. First-place St. Mary's, beaten by Loyola Marymount, is 4-1. Santa Clara is 4-2, and Pepperdine and San Diego are both 3-2.

Pepperdine had a 64-55 lead with 2:07 left to play, but the Toreros scrambled back and cut the lead to two, 66-64, on a 15-foot jumper by San Diego's Al Moscatel with 24 seconds remaining.

However, with 16 seconds left, Pepperdine's Scott McCollum was fouled in the back court and hit the front end of a one-and-one. Neither team scored after that.

—RAY RIPTON

USD Toreros' Statistics

PLAYER	G	MIN	FG	FGP	FT	FTP	R	PGP	A	PF	ST	TO	BL	PTS	PPG
Mike Whitmarsh	20	34.7	128-259	.533	94-134	.702	157	7.9	123	55	22	46	9	271	13.6
Anthony Reuss	20	36.1	85-189	.450	51-81	.630	122	6.1	43	39	28	25	7	241	12.1
Mark Bostic	20	32.1	88-190	.464	48-70	.686	57	2.9	66	34	39	41	5	224	11.2
Scott Thompson	20	27.7	65-126	.516	15-28	.536	99	4.8	26	27	13	25	25	145	7.3
Chris Carr	20	24.0	53-115	.461	35-45	.778	21	1.1	42	37	24	25	1	138	6.9
Al Moscatel	19	14.7	41-87	.500	13-24	.500	20	1.1	30	29	12	22	1	94	5.0
John Prunty	20	14.4	24-45	.533	25-38	.658	17	0.9	26	24	11	14	0	72	3.6
Dave McIver	20	11.3	20-44	.455	26-43	.605	28	1.9	14	31	10	14	2	72	3.6
Eric Musselman	9	24	7-11	.636	5-11	.455	2	0.2	6	1	3	4	0	22	2.4
Mark Caronado	14	9.4	10-17	.588	12	14.5	14	1.1	6	20	4	4	4	21	1.5
Randy Briskley	9	2.8	6-11	.545	1-2	.500	3	0.3	4	8	1	1	1	13	1.4
Bill Penfield	4	2.5	2-3	.667	0-0	.000	0	0.0	0	2	1	1	0	4	1.0
Walt Madden	8	2.3	2-3	.667	1-2	.500	11	1.4	2	7	1	5	0	5	0.6
Joe Fish	3	1.7	0-0	.000	0-0	.000	3	1.0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
Steve Kridlman	7	2.6	0-1	.000	0-1	.000	6	0.9	2	7	1	0	0	0	0.0
TOROS (12-8)	20	48.8	561	516	228-488	.467	645	32.3	485	368	179	260	56	1443	72.1
Opponents	20	48.8	522	474	242-379	.629	683	34.2	221	414	123	326	32	1289	64.5

Abbreviations: G: Games; MIN: Minutes per game; FG: Field Goals; FGP: Field Goal Percentage; FT: Free Throws; FTP: Free Throw Percentage; R: Rebounds; PPG: Points Per Game; A: Assists; PF: Personal Fouls; ST: Steals; TO: Turnovers; BL: Shots Blocked; PTS: Points; PPG: Points Per Game.

ANTHONY REUSS
Torero Standout

Bertrand Leads USD to Baseball Win

SAN DIEGO — Greg Bertrand threw a one-hit shutout for six innings to lead the University of San Diego to a 6-0 win Wednesday against the UC San Diego at USD.

Mike Fazekas pitched the seventh inning and Russ Applegate pitched the final two innings. USD catcher Eric Bennett hit a solo home run and Andre Jacas added a two-run double in the fourth inning to supply the offense. USD improves its record to 2-0. UCSD drops to 0-4.

LEMON GROVE REVIEW

Toreros Eye League Lead

The U. of S.D. Toreros, currently tied for third place with Pepperdine U. at 3-2, will take on first place St. Mary's College Saturday in Moraga. St. Mary's and San Diego are traveling partners so this is their only game of the week.

Santa Clara at 4-2 has a WCAC bye this week, so a Torero win could make for a 3-way WCAC tie for 1st place at the halfway point.

A Torero win paired with a Pepperdine victory over Loyola Marymount would mean a 4-way tie for first place.

A St. Mary's victory would leave the Gaels in sole possession of first place while the Toreros would be in third place at the midway mark of the WCAC race.

DAVE GATLEY / Los Angeles Times
Mike Whitmarsh leads USD in scoring with an 18.6 average.

He's a Dangerous Player, Even Before He Gets His Hands on the Basketball USD's Whitmarsh Is Always Thinking

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—Jack Avina, the basketball coach at the University of Portland, did not really consider it a laughing matter, when asked what his team had done defensively to try to contain the University of San Diego's Mike Whitmarsh. Nevertheless, he couldn't hold back a chuckle.

"We put our best defensive man on him and we couldn't handle him," Avina said. "Whitmarsh just drove us crazy."

Whitmarsh, a 6-7, 200-pound forward, scored 22 points and had eight rebounds in a 65-63 Toreros win last month. But, as Avina said, it is not what Whitmarsh does with the ball as much as what he does without it.

"He creates a situation before he gets the ball," he said. "He is always thinking and always thinking ahead. The whole San Diego team is well put together. They feature him then exploit any things we might do to try to cheat on him."

Avina's respect for Whitmarsh has been echoed by other West Coast Athletic Conference coaches since last season, when the Whitmarsh was an all-WCAC first-team selection. Last year, Whitmarsh averaged 15.3 points and 5.3 rebounds per game. This season, Whitmarsh is shooting 52% from the floor and is averaging 18.6 points and 7.9 rebounds per game.

The Toreros (12-8) are 3-2 in conference play, their best start since joining the WCAC for the 1979-80 season. The WCAC record includes a 69-62 upset win over Santa Clara two weeks ago. St. Mary's will get its chance against Whitmarsh and the rest of the Toreros Saturday at Moraga.

"One of my strengths is making something happen," Whitmarsh said. "I think aggressive play is one of the secrets of my game. I think if I didn't drive to the basket I would just be another average player."

That's an opinion shared by other Whitmarsh observers.

"Mike's not afraid to drive and gamble," said Grossmont Junior College's Rick Wilkerson, who coached Whitmarsh at Monte Vista High School and for two years at Grossmont. "Mike's a driver. He penetrates. He's imaginative in his play."

Whitmarsh had a weak freshman season at Grossmont, but averaged 18.6 points and 7.9 rebounds per game. Please see WHITMARSH, Page 12

WHITMARSH

Continued from Page 1

Grossmont, but averaged 18 points and seven rebounds per game as a sophomore. The improvement was partly because of his development of a perimeter jump shot. Whitmarsh, who played point guard, finished second behind Orange Coast College's Chris Beasley (now Arizona State's leading scorer) in voting for the top player at that position.

"Mike is the most complete player we have in the program," USD Coach Jim Brovelli said. "He has that exceptional first step. He can hit the open shot, and defensively he has great anticipation."

Though Whitmarsh improved greatly in junior college, he shunned the attention of the University of California and New Mexico to take a scholarship at USD. Whitmarsh was persuaded to stay in San Diego because his older brother, Rusty, had played guard for the Toreros.

"He had nothing but fine things to say about the school and the coaches," Whitmarsh said.

But Whitmarsh says he does not model Rusty, who is two years older.

"He was the type of player who stayed outside and hit the 25-foot jump shot," he said. "I don't think I got my style of play from my brother."

Even before Rusty reached high school, the brothers played basketball together on a court their parents built behind their La Mesa home.

"That is the best investment my parents ever made, putting that basketball court out in back," Whitmarsh said. "We would go out there after school and play for hours and hours. He used to just crush me. That was the best thing in the world for me, I think. I don't know if I would have played or practiced much without that court out in back."

Whitmarsh is sorry his collegiate basketball career must end with this season.

"I shouldn't have played my freshman year at Grossmont," he said. "The team was in shambles and the coaching situation was up in the air. I really didn't do anything that year. I just kind of played. I wish I had taken that year off and lifted weights and worked on my game."

When Whitmarsh leaves, Brovelli will miss his silent leadership, just as Wilkerson did two years ago.

"I like to think I am a leader out there," Whitmarsh said, "not necessarily vocally but by actions. I wanted to come here and help this program become competitive. Vocally, we have leaders like John Prunty. He is definitely one of the stabilizing forces on the team. I have never been a leader by voice. I am just kind of a quiet player out there."

Like so many college basketball players, Whitmarsh would like to move on to the NBA, but that prospect seems remote. He could play in pro ball Europe and eventually get into the NBA.

"Mike would be an excellent player in Europe," Brovelli said.

Said Whitmarsh: "The best bet is playing over in Europe now. But who knows, maybe I will get a shot with an NBA team and they will really like what I can do. It would really be a dream come true."

SAN DIEGO UNION
FEB 12 1984

first eludes USD Gaels hold off Toreros, 79-71

By Bill Center
Staff Writer

MORAGA — The University of San Diego's bid for first place in the West Coast Athletic Conference last night was less than spectacular.

The Toreros took a run at conference-leader St. Mary's midway through the second half, but it was too little, too late, and the Gaels held on for a 79-71 victory.

St. Mary's improved to 5-1 to retain sole possession of the WCAC lead. The Toreros dropped into a four-way tie for third at 3-3 — a victory would have given USD a share of first place with the Gaels.

But it wasn't the eight-point loss that bothered USD coach Jim Brovelli as much as the numbers 54-49.

After a slow start to open the second half, the Toreros made a 10-2 run at the Gaels to pull within five points.

The Gaels, leading 54-49, continued to struggle and went five more trips downcourt without scoring. The only problem for the Toreros was that they also went cold just as opportunity knocked.

"We made two mistakes tonight," said Brovelli. "One, the first five minutes of the second half hurt us. We did not play well."

"Two, at 54-49, after we made a run, we took a couple bad shots, turned the ball over once or twice and missed some free throws."

Toreros: Gaels hold off USD, 79-71

Continued from H-1

The pause in USD's rally — which included blown layins by typically dependable Mike Whitmarsh (who still managed game-high totals of 29 points, nine rebounds and eight assists) and Mark Bostic, and a blown 1-and-1 free-throw opportunity by Chris Carr — gave St. Mary's an opening.

An opening was all Paul Pickett needed. The junior guard ignited a 13-2 Gael run by throwing in two from opposite corners and assisting on two layins. St. Mary's ran the score to 67-51 with 4½ minutes to play.

Rather than surrender, however, USD fought. And fought is the perfect word. In the last four minutes, the visitors committed 13 fouls. St. Mary's responded by missing 11 of its 21 attempts — including the front ends of five straight one-and-ones.

USD crept back to within five points before forward David Boone finally connected on two free throws in a row with 24 seconds to play to make it 76-69. Gael guard Gerry Karczewski, who had missed seven of nine previous tries, also sank his final two.

"I've got no complaints with the strategy of fouling," said Coach Bill Oates, whose St. Mary's team climbed to 5-1 in league play and 10-12 overall. "The best way to stop that is to hit a few free throws."

Some of the Torero fouls were comical in nature. Others were physical enough to draw two-shot penalties and bring the crowd to its feet.

"It's different here than it's ever been before," said Brovelli. "We're fighting for everything."

The Toreros got another yeoman effort from forward Whitmarsh, who hit 13-of-20 from the floor while playing all 40 minutes on a tender ankle. Running mate Anthony Reuss scored 13 and had nine rebounds.

But the 12-9 Toreros turned the ball over 19 times and lost the battle of the boards at the most crucial moments. The physical Gaels got 27 points (11-for-16 shooting) and eight rebounds from Pickett, who was 7-for-8 from the floor.

St. Mary's shot 56.6 percent from the floor — and only 55.9 percent from the line. But the Gaels went to the line 34 times to USD's 12.

SAN DIEGO UNION
FEB 11 1984

USD has shot at WCAC lead vs. St. Mary's

By Bill Center, Staff Writer

MORAGA — This is an historic occasion for the University of San Diego. Tonight, for the first time, the Toreros will be playing for a share of the West Coast Athletic Conference lead when they visit St. Mary's.

If only Mike Whitmarsh were healthy.

The Toreros' most valuable player turned his ankle Tuesday during practice. He didn't work out Wednesday or Thursday and trained lightly yesterday.

"He won't be 100 percent, but he'll play," USD coach Jim Brovelli said of his leading scorer, rebounder and assist man. "We can't win without him, it's that simple."

Adding up his 18.6-point and 6.2-assist average, the 6-foot-7 Whitmarsh has had a hand in 31 of the 72 points USD has averaged a game. He's also averaging 7.9 rebounds, nearly one-fourth of the Toreros' 32.3 per game.

"I'll be OK," Whitmarsh said yesterday. "I've had some of my best games when I haven't been 100 percent during the week."

The Toreros need a 100 percent Whitmarsh against the WCAC-leading Gaels.

Although only 9-12 overall against the toughest non-conference schedule of any WCAC team, St. Mary's is 4-1 in the league chase. Santa Clara, which is idle this week, is 4-2, and USD is tied with Pepperdine (which hosts Loyola-Marymount tonight) for third at 3-2.

St. Mary's, a club that has had narrow losses to UCLA, DePaul and Washington, has an 8-4 record at home, including a season-opening overtime loss to San Diego State.

In its five years as a Division I school, USD has not played a game with first place on the line. This is the first time USD has ever had a winning WCAC record. Now it goes up against a physical team on the road. If the Toreros have an Achilles' heel, it is rebounding.

"St. Mary's has some great jumpers," Brovelli said. "They are a physical team even in this conference. They can climb all over the boards. We have to find some rebounds. In the past, we've always pushed, grabbed and bitten people inside to get our share. This year we haven't been doing that."

USD is down to 25 rebounds a game in five WCAC matches. St. Mary's is averaging 37 rebounds an outing. If the averages hold, USD will get killed on the boards. And those averages don't include Whitmarsh playing on a sprained ankle or 6-foot-11 freshman center Scott Thompson playing on a broken toe.

St. Mary's is led by 6-foot-5 sophomore forward David Boone, who is averaging 13.3 points and 10.3 rebounds a game. Boone is averaging nearly 18 points a game in WCAC play. Guard Paul Pickett is averaging 12.7 points a game.

"Boone and Pickett are all-conference players," Brovelli said. "This team is a different team now than the one that opened the season against San Diego State."

LOS ANGELES TIMES
FEB 11 1984

University of San Diego Playing for First Place

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego basketball team will be playing for a share of first place in the West Coast Athletic Conference tonight when the Toreros travel to St. Mary's at Moraga.

Since joining the WCAC in 1979, the Toreros highest finish in the seven-team league has been a tie for fourth. Tonight, however, a win against the Gaels (9-12, 4-1) would put the Toreros (12-8, 3-2) into a tie for first with Santa Clara, which is idle this weekend.

If Pepperdine should beat Loyola Marymount, it would also be part of the first-place tie with a 4-2 league record. If St. Mary's wins, the Gaels will be alone in first place.

USD has never been in first place in the WCAC.

The Toreros have relied heavily upon leading scorer and rebounder 6-7, 200-pound senior forward Mike Whitmarsh (18.6 points, 7.9 rebounds). Last season, Whitmarsh was the first Torero to make first team all-WCAC.

Scheduled starters along with Whitmarsh are: 6-7 junior forward Anthony Reuss, 6-11 freshman center Scott Thompson, 6-3 junior guard Chris Carr and 6-3 junior guard Mark Bostic.

Bostic averages 11.2 points per game and Reuss 12.1. St. Mary's will counter with 6-5 sophomore forward David Boone, averaging 13.3 points and 6-1 junior guard Paul Pickett (12.7).

Rounding out the probable starters for the Gaels are 6-7 junior forward David Cook, 6-6 junior center Ken Jones and 6-3 junior guard Billy Knox.

The Pickett-Knox backcourt combination is one of the Gaels' strengths.

Last year, San Diego beat St. Mary's at Moraga but lost the meeting at San Diego.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 11 1984

WOMEN

USD 84, UCSD 72 — The Toreros hit 10 of their first 12 shots and rolled to a non-conference victory over UCSD at the USD Sports Center. Mary Stanbra led all scorers with 25 points for USD (11-12). Junior Teik Francis, a 6-4 center, set career highs of 21 points and 13 rebounds for the Tritons (10-11).

THE TRIBUNE
FEB 11 1984

San Diego Notepad

USD shoots for WCAC lead against St. Mary's

It'll be a new experience for the University of San Diego basketball team tonight in Moraga. The Toreros for the first time will be fighting for the lead in the West Coast Athletic Conference when they take the court against the Gaels of St. Mary's.

USD is tied with Pepperdine for third in the conference at 3-2. St. Mary's leads with a 4-1 mark, despite just a 9-12 overall record. Santa Clara, which is off this week, is 4-2.

Top player Mike Whitmarsh is a concern for USD. The Monte Vista High and Grossmont College product turned his ankle in practice this week. Whitmarsh won't be 100 percent, but he's expected to play, according to Torero coach Jim Brovelli. Whitmarsh, a 6-7 senior, averages 18.6 points, 7.9 rebounds and 6.2 assists a game.

USD Falls Into Four-Way Tie for Third WCAC-Leading St. Mary's Holds Off Toreros, 79-71, in Moraga

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

MORAGA, Calif. — The University of San Diego men's basketball team didn't play badly here Saturday night at McKee Pavilion, but it simply couldn't halt Pickett's charge.

Paul Pickett, a 6-1 junior guard, spurred St. Mary's by hitting 7 of 8 field goals as the Gaels took a 13-point, second-half lead and held on to win, 79-71, Saturday night in front of 2,525.

The loss puts San Diego (12-9, 3-3) into a four-way tie for third in the seven-team West Coast Athletic Conference. A win would have moved the Toreros into a three-way tie for first, where they have never been since joining the WCAC in the 1979-80 season.

St. Mary's (10-12, 5-1) is alone atop the standings. This is the midway point of the conference season.

"It would have been a great win for us," USD Coach Jim Brovelli said. "We did two things that killed us. For the first five minutes of the second half we played badly. Then, when we had a chance with the score 54-49 (with 7:56 remaining) we didn't capitalize four times down the floor."

The second-half charge came from Pickett, a first-team all-WCAC player last year. "We hit the boards hard in the second half," he said. "Then we get our fast break going and that does it."

Pickett, although only a guard, had eight rebounds to go with his 18 points and five assists. Teammate David Boone, a 6-5 sophomore forward, had a game-high 12 rebounds and 27 points for St. Mary's, which shot 57% from the floor.

USD, usually a poor rebounding team, had a 15-13 edge in the first half, but St. Mary's outrebounded the Toreros, 33-31, for the game.

But despite that, USD did fight back to a five-point margin with 7:56 remaining on a field goal by forward Mike Whitmarsh.

"The team didn't give up and came scrapping back," Brovelli said.

But that's when the boo-boo bug hit USD, and the Toreros did not score four consecutive times down the floor, until forward Anthony Reuss hit a field goal two and a half minutes later. By that time it was St. Mary's 63-51.

At that point Pickett left the game because a bandage on his hyperextended left knee had come undone. But he came back in with 3:20 left to help finish off the visitors.

Brovelli tried intentional fouls late in the game and with 29 seconds remaining the margin was only 74-69 after a Whitmarsh field goal. But it was all too little too late.

The intentionals got so rough that USD guard Al Moscatel was ejected with 17 seconds left for tackling guard Gerry Karczewski of St. Mary's. Karczewski was an obvious target; he shot 4 of 11 from the line.

"They were legitimate fouls," Brovelli said. USD had its good points. Whitmarsh, who made first team all-WCAC last year, finished with a game-high 29 points, 9 rebounds and 8 assists.

Forward Anthony Reuss, who fouled out with 54 seconds left, had 13 points, 9 rebounds and was 5 of 7 from the floor.

USD plays its next two games at home, starting with Pepperdine on Thursday.

FEB 14 1984

JOHN PRUNTY
.893 at foul line

Toreros' Statistics

PLAYER	G	MIN	FG	FPG	FT	FTP	R	RPG	A	PF	ST	TO	BL	PTS	PPG
Mike Whitmarsh	21	35.1	151-279	.541	67-127	.708	166	7.9	131	58	33	23	9	400	19.0
Anthony Reuss	21	30.2	100-157	.643	54-87	.620	131	6.2	44	44	28	26	7	254	12.1
Mark Boett	21	32.3	95-210	.452	48-70	.686	59	2.8	48	37	31	43	5	234	11.1
Scott Thompson	21	27.8	67-131	.511	16-32	.500	98	4.7	27	41	13	21	29	130	7.1
Chris Carr	21	23.2	159-179	.888	22-46	.479	22	1.1	44	41	25	40	1	142	6.8
Al Moscatel	20	15.1	45-90	.500	15-26	.577	42	2.1	11	36	43	12	25	102	5.1
John Prunty	21	14.4	25-49	.510	25-28	.893	17	0.8	37	28	12	14	0	95	4.5
Dave Mciver	20	11.7	28-44	.636	26-43	.605	38	1.9	14	21	10	14	2	71	3.6
Eric Musselman	19	2.3	7-11	.636	8-11	.727	2	0.2	6	3	3	4	0	22	2.3
Mario Coronado	15	8.9	10-17	.588	1-7	.143	14	1.1	6	29	4	6	4	21	1.4
Stanley Briskley	9	2.8	6-11	.545	1-2	.500	3	0.3	4	8	1	1	1	13	1.4
Bill Penfold	4	2.5	2-2	1.000	0-0	.000	2	0.5	2	2	1	3	0	4	1.0
Vin Madden	3	1.7	0-0	.000	1-2	.500	11	1.4	2	7	0	5	1	5	0.6
Joe Fish	3	1.7	0-0	.000	0-0	.000	3	1.0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
Steve Kralman	7	2.6	0-1	.000	0-1	.000	6	0.9	2	7	1	8	0	0	0.0
TOREROS (12-9)	21	40.8	993	.517	327-492	.665	674	32.2	424	397	174	279	40	1521	72.4
Opponents	21	40.8	953	.478	261-413	.632	716	34.1	334	428	126	244	54	1339	64.7

Abbreviations: G: Games; MIN: Average minutes per game; FG: Field Goals; FPG: Field Goal Percentage; FT: Free Throws; FTP: Free Throw Percentage; R: Rebounds; RPG: Rebounds Per Game; A: Assists; PF: Personal Fouls; ST: Steals; TO: Turnovers; BL: Shots Blocked; PTS: Points; PPG: Points Per Game.

FEB 14 1984

San Diego Notepad

Aztec shortstop quite a hit with record seven RBI

San Diego State shortstop Flavio Alfaro is likely to remember last night's performance against Point Loma Nazarene for some time. Alfaro went 4-for-4 with seven runs batted in (a school record), including a grand slam home run, as the Aztecs topped the Crusaders 17-3 in a non-conference game played at SDSU's Smith Field.

The Aztecs scored in each of their last six innings as they improved their record to 7-0. Point Loma Nazarene fell to 0-3.

SDSU is scheduled to take on USD this afternoon at 5 at Smith Field.

FEB 15 1984

San Diego Invitational field has everyone who is anyone

The San Diego Intercollegiate Invitational tennis tournament beginning tomorrow and continuing through Saturday at the University of San Diego is Ed Collins' pride and joy.

Collins, USD's bright and witty tennis coach as well as being one of the better teachers in the game, has put together this prestigious college event for a good many years.

This year, all of the top tennis schools in this area are involved, including USC, UCLA, Pepperdine and Arizona State.

The others are UC-Irvine, Chapman, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, Long Beach State, Bakersfield State, UC-Santa Barbara, Brigham Young and Redlands — along with the local schools, San Diego State, U.S. International University, UCSD and the host school.

Some of the brightest, young collegiate players are involved in this event, which requires a melange of logistics on Collins' part.

Each of the 16 teams with a minimum of six players

Elson Irwin
TENNIS
NOTEPAD

must be housed and fed during the tournament's three days.

Each team seeds its players into the various flights, and schedules must be worked out and matches kept moving from morning until night.

There are individual as well as team championships. Kelly Jones, the former Point Loma High star now in his second season with the Waves of Pepperdine, will be back to defend the title he won in the top-flight category in 1983.

Jones had to fight hard to defeat his Pepperdine teammate, Jerome Jones, in the Flight One finals 7-5, 7-5. Pepperdine's Brad Ackerman, in Flight Two, had to come from behind to down USC's Jim Agate 2-6, 7-5, 7-5, and UCLA's Mark Basham took Flight Three over USC's Brad Cherry 6-1, 6-2.

USC, ranked No. 1 in the nation this season, won the team title here in 1983, followed by UCLA, Pepperdine and UC-Irvine in that order.

In the doubles this year, USC's No. 1-ranked pair of Tim Pawsat and Ricky Leach is expected to take the title. Last year, Pawsat, a former Tribune Tournament winner, teamed with Gary Lemon to defeat UC-Irvine's Mark Ramos and Eric Quade 6-3, 7-5.

FEB 15 1984

Aztecs nip USD with run in 9th

Rob Knowles hit a sacrifice fly with the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth to lift San Diego State to an 8-7 win over USD last night.

Third-ranked SDSU used six pitchers at Smith Field to keep its perfect 8-0 record.

USD, down 7-5 in the top of the ninth, scored two runs on a single and a sacrifice before winning pitcher Phil Torres came in to strike out the last two batters with the bases loaded.

Flavio Alfaro opened the scoring with a solo home run in the first. USD came back on an RBI single by David Jacas after Tom Seyler doubled to start the second inning.

SDSU came back and scored three runs in the bottom of the third and one more in the fourth to lead 5-1. The Toreros tied it with a four-run scoring spree in the fifth, going through the entire lineup. The Aztecs recaptured the lead with a run in the bottom of the inning, then one more in the eighth, giving SDSU the lead 7-5 into the ninth.

The loss drops USD to 3-2.

FEB 12 1984

Toreros rip Gulls by 74-61

USD's Toreros outscored the visiting Gulls 13-1 in the closing minutes of the first half to pull away from a 22-all tie to down USIU 74-61 at the Sports Center last night.

Mary Stanbra hit 9 of 11 field-goal tries, scoring 18 points to lead five Toreros (12-12) in double figures. Jill Bradley, one of three USD players with 10 points, led with 12 rebounds.

FEB 13 1984

GAELS PREVAIL — The University of San Diego, with an opportunity to tie for first in the West Coast Athletic Conference, instead lost a 79-71 decision to St. Mary's Saturday.

The Gaels thus took over the WCAC lead with a 5-1 record while the Toreros dropped into a four-way tie for second with a 3-3 record. Mike Whitmarsh led the USD attack with 29 points and also collected eight rebounds.

USD plays its next WCAC game Thursday night against Pepperdine at 7:30 in the Torero Sports Center.

USD was only five points down at 54-49 early in the second half, but the Gaels went on an 11-2 spree with guard Paul Pickett leading the way, and the Toreros could never again threaten. David Boone led St. Mary's with 27 points while Pickett had 18.

FEB 12 1984

St. Mary's 79, USD 71 — David Boone scored a career-high 27 points to lead St. Mary's to victory over San Diego in West Coast Athletic Conference action.

St. Mary's also 18 points from Paul Pickett and 13 from reserve forward Erick Cooks.

St. Mary's had a 30-29 edge at the half, but Boone scored 17 of his points to help the Gaels pull away from San Diego. Senior forward Mike Whitmarsh scored a game-high 29 points.

St. Mary's moved up to 5-1 in the conference and 10-12 overall. San Diego moved to 3-3 in the conference and 12-9 overall.

USD 5-0, CAL STATE LOS ANGELES 4-1 — Eric Bennett's one-out, bases-loaded single in the bottom of the 13th inning broke up the first game for the host Toreros (3-1). Cal State L.A. took the nightcap in a game shortened by darkness to five innings.

FEB 13 1984

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

USD LOSES — The University of San Diego men's basketball team now has a tough road ahead if it is going to do anything in the West Coast Athletic Conference. The Toreros were handed a 79-71 loss by league-leading St. Mary's Saturday evening in Moraga. The Gaels moved to 5-1 in the conference and 10-12 overall. USD fell to 3-3 and 12-9. A win would have given the Toreros a share of the league lead. USD trailed 54-49 in the second half. St. Mary's began to have trouble on offense and it didn't score for five trips down court. But the Toreros were also cold with their offensive production during that time and gained no headway. The Gaels then went on a spurt to give them a 67-51 lead with 44 minutes played. It was too little, too late for the Toreros after that. Mike Whitmarsh led USD with 29 points, nine rebounds and eight assists. Whitmarsh hit 13 of 20 from the floor while playing 40 minutes. Anthony Reuss chipped in with 13 points and nine rebounds. The Toreros need to win the rest of their WCAC contest to have a shot at the NCAA Division I playoffs. They'll start their quest Thursday night at 7:30 when Pepperdine visits the Sports Center.

San Diego, Wednesday, February 15, 1984

San Diego Notepad

Toreros hope to pass season's big test

Are they destined to finish in the upper half of the conference standings or the lower section? That question may be answered later this week when the University of San Diego basketball team faces two important tests in the West Coast Athletic Conference.

The Toreros, 3-3 in WCAC play and 12-9 overall, take on Pepperdine (3-3, 12-10) tomorrow night at the USD Sports Center. Tipoff is at 7:30. USD also has a home date coming up Saturday against Loyola Marymount.

But first things first.

"No question about it, Thursday night is the most important game of the season for us," said Torero coach Jim Brovelli. "I hope it's one of those barn burners like Santa Clara (a 69-62 USD win). Our place only holds 2,200, but it helped against Santa Clara."

In an earlier meeting between the two teams, Pepperdine held off a late USD rally to take a 67-64 decision in Malibu. Wave forward Grant Gondrezick hit 11 of 15 shots to finish with 22 points.

San Diego, Tuesday, February 14, 1984

TIMES-ADVOCATE, Escondido, Ca., Tuesday, Feb. 14, 1984 C3

College Notes

The best in SD? Aztecs, Toreros to slug it out

By Larry Weinbaum
The Times-Advocate

Today's the battle for San Diego college baseball supremacy when the University of San Diego Toreros of Coach John Cunningham visit the Jim Dietz-coached Aztecs of San Diego State.

Game time is 5 p.m. at Smith Field on the SDSU

Please see Notes, page C4

•Notes

Continued from page C3

campus.

The Aztecs bring a 7-0 record into the game. The Toreros are 3-1.

The Aztecs opened its season last week winning at Pt. Loma and UC Irvine, swept doubleheaders from Cal Lutheran and Cal Poly-Pomona and beat up Pt. Loma 17-3 on Monday.

USD opened with wins against Pt. Loma and UC San Diego, then split a doubleheader on Saturday against Los Angeles State.

"Over the years, the series with San Diego State has been a good one," said USD Coach John Cunningham, now in his 21st season.

"Please understand me, I'm not downplaying the game at all, but at one time — when we were an independent six years ago — this game was even bigger. We really looked forward to it then."

"But now, we're in a conference situation (Southern California Baseball Association) just like San Diego State (Western Athletic Conference Southern Division) and conference games obviously take on added importance."

Last year, San Diego State won the first game with USD, 7-6. Several attempts to play the second game were thwarted by wet weather.

Cunningham, who recently became an Escondido resident, has named right-hander Greg Bertrand (2-0) as his starting pitcher. Bertrand is a junior transfer from Delta College, J.C.

Dietz will counter with southpaw Bill Blount (1-0), a junior out of Hoover High School in San Diego.

Dietz downplays going against USD.

"We're one of five baseball-playing colleges in San Diego," said Dietz, owner of a 510-277 record and starting his 13th season with the Aztecs. "And we play them all — USD, UCSD, USIU and Pt. Loma. Everyone takes aim at us because we're the biggest school. But that's OK."

FEB 15 1984

Knowles Sacrifice Fly Helps No. 3 Aztecs to 8-7 Victory Over USD

SAN DIEGO—Rob Knowles' sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning Tuesday broke a 7-7 tie, allowing No. 3 San Diego State beat rival University of San Diego, 8-7, at Smith Field.

The Toreros (3-2) tied the game with two runs in the top of the ninth off Aztec pitcher Kevin Piper. Aztec shortstop Flavio Alfaro hit his fourth home run of the year in the first inning.

Phil Torres got the win for SDSU, which improved to 8-0. USD's Casey Morales took the loss.

With SDSU ahead, 5-1, in the fifth inning, USD came back with four runs to tie the score. SDSU retook the lead in the bottom of the fifth when catcher John Carlson hit a fly ball to right field that USD's Adre Jacas overran for an error. USD center fielder David Jacas threw the ball into the Aztec dugout on the play, allowing Carlson to come home. SDSU added another run in the eighth to make it 7-5.

With the bases loaded in the top of the ninth and one out, Torres struck out two batters to get out of the inning.

It's showdown time tonight for Toreros

The University of San Diego men's basketball is in a "must-win" situation. Another West Coast Athletic Conference loss and the Toreros can kiss the NCAA Division I playoffs and a WCAC championship goodbye.

USD is in a four-way tie with Pepperdine, Gonzaga and Loyola-Marymount in league activity at 3-3. St. Mary's leads the pack at 5-1. Santa Clara sits in second at 4-2.

The Toreros host Pepperdine tonight at 7:30 in the Sports Center as they try to climb the WCAC ladder. Loyola-Marymount — the only team to beat St. Mary's — visits Saturday.

The Toreros played the Waves and Lions on a road trip two weeks ago. USD slipped past Loyola-Marymount 77-75 in overtime and dropped a 67-64 decision to Pepperdine.

USD is led by 6-foot-7 all-anything forward Mike Whitmarsh. He is tops on the team in scoring (19.0), rebounding (7.9), assists (6.2) and steals (1.6). Running mate Anthony Reuss is second in scoring (12.1) and rebounding (6.2).

College netters bid today

The University of San Diego plays host to several of the nation's top collegiate men's tennis teams today through Sunday in the 11th annual San Diego Intercollegiate Invitational Tennis Tournament at USD and San Diego State University.

The format for the event, sponsored by The San Diego Union, calls for three separate elimination tournaments: one combining each team's No. 1 and No. 2 players, another for No. 3 and 4 players, and a third division for No. 5 and 6 players. Three ladder doubles tournaments also will be held.

The University of Southern California, last year's tournament champion, returns a strong team this year, with Pepperdine and UCLA offering a challenge. Also entered are USD, SDSU, USIU, UCSD, Arizona State, BYU, UC-Irvine, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, Long Beach State, Redlands, UC-Santa Barbara, Chapman and Cal State-Bakersfield.

Pepperdine's Kelly Jones, a graduate of Point Loma High, is back to defend the No. 1 singles crown he won in this tournament a year ago.

Play will be held all day today and tomorrow on the USD and SDSU courts, with Saturday's finals on USD's west courts. Admission is free.

Toreros Host Pepperdine Tonight

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego basketball team begins a critical two-game West Coast Athletic Conference home stand when it hosts Pepperdine tonight at 7:30 at the USD Sports Center.

Midway through the WCAC schedule, the Toreros (12-9, 3-3) are in a four-way tie for third place. Wins over the Waves tonight and Loyola Marymount on Saturday night would put USD in contention for the conference lead.

Two losses, however, would likely end the Toreros' chances of winning their first championship since joining the WCAC in 1979-80.

USD has done well at home. The Toreros are 10-2 at the Sports Center, but only 2-7 on the road. As usual, Whitmarsh, who averages 19.5 points per game. He is tied with Gonzaga's John Stockton for the conference scoring lead. Whitmarsh also leads the Toreros in rebounds (7.9) and assists (6.2).

Pepperdine (12-10, 3-3) has four players averaging in double figures. Guard Grant Gondrezick leads the Waves with a 14.4 scoring average.

Behnke won't be taking any taxis

Surely you've heard of Blab and Schrempf and Olajuwon by now. Maybe it's about time you get ready for Gunther.

The next big foreign catch for a college basketball team now is touted to be 7-foot-3, 245-pound Gunther Behnke. The West German is the latest in a recent flood of foreign players to dot college basketball rosters. He apparently has narrowed his choice to Texas-El Paso, Brigham Young, Wyoming, Kentucky and North Carolina.

The days of recruiting within the boundaries of the country quite possibly ended the day Jamaica-born Patrick Ewing came to the U.S. and wound up at Georgetown. John Thompson would have learned the Jamaican dialect had it been necessary.

And the days of the Guy Lewis attitude at Houston have ended, too. (When

Bill Pinella

COLLEGES NOTEPAD

Akeem Abdul Olajuwon arrived in Houston from Africa he called Lewis from the airport and was told by Guy, "Ya'll take a taxi."

Up the coast, Washington recruited a couple of West Germans and the Huskies are leading the Pac-10 mainly with the help of the Europeans. Detlef Schrempf is averaging 12.9 points and 8.4 rebounds per game, and Chris Welp is scoring 9.8 points per game and grabbing 5.9 rebounds.

They join fellow West Germans Uwe Blab, a part-time starter at Indiana, and Peter Schomers, a substitute at Rice. Indeed, there are players in the college ranks from Canada, Turkey, Liberia, the Virgin Islands, Trinidad, Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Israel, Greece, Finland, Norway, Sweden, Iceland, Senegal, Sudan and the Netherlands.

So much for recruiting Idaho.

DOIN' THE CURLY — Chapman College's basketball team pulled a Three Stooges routine over the weekend. Coach Walt Hazzard had just finished his pre-game speech, looked up at his team and said, "Let's go get 'em."

"The players rushed for the door," Hazzard said, "but the knob wouldn't turn from either side of our locker-room door."

While Chapman's opponent, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, and the fans waited, the Chapman players were pounding on the door waiting to be let out. It took three maintenance workers 33 minutes to open the door. The game started 45 minutes late and Chapman won its 17th straight game 69-64.

ZIG-ZAGS — If you'd like to get heart failure watching a college basketball team, you should pick Gonzaga. The Zags have played eight games this season that have been decided at the buzzer. They are 3-5 in those games, and 1-4 in games that have been decided by one point.

COURT BATTLE — No, it won't be basketball this time. But San Diego State and the University of San Diego will resume their athletic rivalry beginning at 2 p.m. Monday when the women's tennis teams meet at SDSU.

The Aztecs open their women's softball season the next day, entertaining Michigan. The Wolverines were 32-27 a year ago and the Aztecs 18-21. The Aztecs are led by Katie Murphy, who hit .242 last season.

SDSU's women's gymnastics team is 3-4 after beating New Mexico. Jeannie Clark, who had a 36.65 point total against UNM, will lead SDSU against Minnesota and Arizona State at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at Peterson Gym.

PAC-10 UPDATE — With 11 games down and seven to go, the Washington Huskies are leading the conference with a 10-1 record. But that lead over both Oregon schools is not safe, according to Oregon State coach Ralph Miller. "I don't think anything has been settled in the conference race yet," Miller said. "Right now Washington is in the driver's seat, but if you look at it systematically, the Huskies are one game up and have a lot of tough road games to go yet."

The Huskies are about as comfortable in the driver's seat as Ricky Rudd was last weekend at Daytona. They have seven Pac-10 games left, five on the road, including a difficult trip to Oregon State tonight. Don't laugh, but remember not to count out UCLA.

AND THE WINNER IS... — USC is the choice of The Sporting News as the winner in college football's annual signing derby.

USC signed eight players on The Sporting News' list of the top 100 high school football recruits in the country.

Among the highly regarded players signing with the Trojans were running back Ryan Knight of Riverside, tight end Martin Chesley of Washington, D.C., and quarterback Rodney Peete of Overland Park, Kan.

Notre Dame signed six of the players on The Sporting News' elite list and Alabama signed five.

NOTES — Under the Most Improved Teams in the nation category, Basketball Weekly lists San Diego State as the No. 11 team in the country. Pan American is No. 1. Other teams in the West include UC-Irvine (No. 4), Oregon (No. 8) and Santa Clara (No. 10). ... The leader in the clubhouse, or at least the first team in the hopper with an All-America candidate, is Brigham Young, which has come out with a four-page pamphlet espousing the virtues of Devin Durrant.

... So they don't like basketball in the South, right? Wrong. When Auburn played the University of Alabama at Birmingham there were 16,803 watching, which was the largest crowd in the history of that state for a game between two in-state schools. ... And the beat goes on. Two former West Virginia University football players — John Adams and Kerry Marbury — have been added to the ranks of those connected in some way with a drug scandal. They were among 39 people recently indicted in connection with a West Virginia drug ring that is accused of conducting transactions from Florida to California.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK — "I'm from the old school when it comes to the rest of the season. We'll just take them one at a time from here and hope to develop some consistency."

Kansas State coach Jack Hartman

(Bill Pinella's College Notepad appears every Thursday in The Tribune.)

Whitmarsh, both 'big' and 'small,' does it all

By Bill Center
Staff Writer

The popular trend in basketball today is to classify forwards as "big" or "power" players, those who bang away on the inside, or as "small" forwards, who shoot from the corners and drive the baseline.

Mike Whitmarsh of the University of San Diego is neither. He is both. He is also one of San Diego's best-kept basketball secrets today, playing away from radio, television and large crowds.

He also is playing splendidly.

"He can do anything you would want a college forward to do," said his coach, Jim Brovelli, of his all-conference senior. "I guess that just about says it all."

On offense, Whitmarsh, blessed "with the best first step" Brovelli has seen, is an excellent driver who has honed a medium-range jumper into an offensive weapon that leaves rivals defenseless. In a recent game at Loyola-Marymount, he scored three three-point plays in a half, and four in the game.

Although smaller than most of his peers, at 6-foot-7 and 200 pounds, Whitmarsh has been the leading rebounder in nine of the 21 games he has played this season. Quick? He ranks among the leaders in steals in the West Coast Athletic Conference.

"Mike Whitmarsh is the best all-around player we've ever had in this program," said Brovelli.

Statistics would bear Brovelli out. Whitmarsh is third in all three of the WCAC's key statistical categories: scoring, rebounding and assists. But statistics alone aren't enough.

"If you let him," said St. Mary's coach Bill Oates, "Whitmarsh will throw a game out of kilter. He's a great driver and he moves excellently without the ball. Defenders tend to get caught up with what he can do offensively, which makes him more dangerous because of his ability to find the open man."

"Whitmarsh is everything a coach could want in a well-rounded player," said Loyola-Marymount coach Ed Gorgian. "He's smart and aggressive. He can drive, but he can also pull up and hit the short jumper. The keys I've seen is that he seldom forces a shot ... he'll hit the open man, and he moves without the ball."

Entering a crucial weekend series at home against Pepperdine (tonight, 7:30, USD Sports Center) and Loyola-Marymount (Saturday), the Toreros find themselves in a four-way tie for third in the WCAC and two games off St. Mary's 5-1 pace. Pepperdine, Loyola-Marymount and Gonzaga also are 3-3.

USD is 12-9. The Toreros never before played this well as a Division I combatant. They've never before been party to a WCAC race.

"Everything comes to a point this weekend," says Brovelli. "Are we a contender, or will we play the role of a spoiler again?"

Much eventually comes down to Whitmarsh, who is averaging 19.0 points, 7.9 rebounds and 6.2 assists per game. He is shooting 53 percent from the floor (fourth in the WCAC) and 71 percent from the foul line (10th).

"The word is out," Whitmarsh says. "I'm going to drive. So as long as I can pull up and shoot for a high percentage, I'll score."

But perhaps the most arresting statistic is that the one-time self-proclaimed "classroom goof-off" this year has cracked the 3.0 grade-point barrier at USD. "That," said Whitmarsh, "might be the surprise stat of the season."

As good as he is, however, Whitmarsh has never been a sought-after talent. Although coaches speak highly of Whitmarsh today, no one, not even USD's Brovelli, had an inkling of Whitmarsh's skill when he played at Monte Vista High and Grossmont College — this despite his being an all-star at every level.

"Recruited?" Whitmarsh said. "I sent a lot of letters, got some invitations out of them to visit places like California, Utah and Hawaii. But no one at the next level has looked at me the whole of my career. I haven't heard from a pro team yet, but I didn't hear from a team at this level, either."

"I'd love to play professionally, but I know I'm not high on anyone's list ... I never have been. So it's going to be going out, proving myself again to someone and making the grade. Maybe it's because I've done it before that I feel my best basketball is still ahead of me."

Whitmarsh admits being puzzled about why more coaches didn't spot his basketball talent as he was maturing.

"It could have had a lot to do with where and who I played for," he said. "All along, I have played for disciplined coaches. I learned a lot and the teams were always successful, but the individual sometimes got lost."

Whitmarsh was an All-CIF player at Monte Vista High for Pete Colonelli, where he averaged 15 points and eight rebounds a game. "He was the most disciplined coach I played for, and it had advantages and disadvantages," Whitmarsh said. "We'd stall and make a game close when I would have preferred to go for the blowout."

"We'd be tentative. I saw it watching my brother (Rusty) play. He was so afraid of making a mistake that he was scared to try to make anything happen."

Unrecruited out of high school by anyone larger than Point Loma College, the "skinny" Whitmarsh went to Grossmont College and fared poorly in his freshman season. "The coaching situation was in transition, and the team was a shambles," he said. He tried to transfer to USD to join his older brother after his freshman season but didn't have the grades. "I went out a little too often when I should have been studying."

Coached by Colonelli-disciple Richard Wilkerson as a sophomore at Grossmont College, Whitmarsh, playing guard, averaged 18 points and seven rebounds and made the All-South Coast Conference team. Still, the recruiters weren't lined up at his door.

"I wrote some letters and got some invitations, but I came to USD because Brovelli was interested in me, and Rusty really liked playing for him. I had also learned a lot at Brovelli's camp after my freshman year in college. I didn't even shoot properly until then."

Whitmarsh averaged 15.3 points and 5.3 rebounds last year at USD, but it wasn't until the final six games of the season that he turned it on. He averaged 24.8 points down the stretch. "The last six games of last season gave me all the confidence in the world," he said. "It told me 'You can do it, why hold back?'"

USD Beats Waves for First Time in Four Years, 56-55

By MARC APPLEMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—When the University of San Diego called timeout with 50 seconds to play in Thursday night's West Coast Athletic Conference game against Pepperdine, guard John Prunty was told to try to get the ball to his backcourt partner Al Moscatel.

After all, Moscatel had hit 7 of 11 long range jump shots to keep the Toreros in the game against Pepperdine. Prunty had missed his only shot of the night.

So what happened?

The Toreros worked the ball around the perimeter and finally got the ball to Moscatel with 10 seconds to play. The 6-2 sophomore went up in the air and found himself double teamed.

At the very last moment, he passed to Prunty, who made a 20-footer from the left side of the foul line to give the Toreros a 56-55 lead with eight seconds to play. When Pepperdine guard Mark Wilson missed the front end of a one-and-one with two seconds to play, a crowd of 1,600 at the Sports Center went wild and USD had its first win over the Waves in four years with a 56-55 victory.

"It's been a long time coming," USD Coach Jim Brovelli said. "I kept telling the kids to stay up and remain confident and our turn would come."

It came after the Toreros had dropped eight straight to the Waves, including a 67-64 decision at Malibu earlier this season.

Three of those losses came on last second shots in games played at the Sports Center. Pepperdine won 61-58 last year, 63-61 in 1982 and 64-63 in 1981.

And when Pepperdine forward Dwayne Poles made both ends of a one-and-one to give the Waves a 55-52 lead with 1:30 to play, Brovelli envisioned another heart-breaking ending to what has become a familiar script.

However, Moscatel, who came off the bench to score a team high 16 points, hit a long jumper from the right side of the key to cut the Waves lead to 55-54.

Pepperdine guard Grant Gondrezick dribbled the ball off his foot when he was double teamed in the backcourt and Mike Whitmarsh recovered the loose ball to give the Toreros possession with 50 seconds to play.

"It was at that point that I told the team to take its time," Brovelli said. "I wanted to go for the last shot to win the game unless we had a wide open shot."

"Fortunately, Moscatel had enough insight to make the pass to Prunty."

Moscatel: "That was probably the highest I've ever jumped when I got that pass off. John and I have good court sense between us and I knew where he'd be."

Prunty, the only four-year player on the team, said it was definitely his most exciting moment in college.

The 6-0 guard had an opportunity to make the final shot because his team took a first half lead and then maintained its poise when Pepperdine retook the lead in the second half.

Moscatel and Whitmarsh, who finished with 14 points, scored 10 apiece in the first half to give USD a 34-31 lead at halftime. The Toreros made 59% of their shots from the floor, whereas Pepperdine, led by Victor Anger's 14 points, shot only 41%.

Pepperdine made 10 free throws to USD's two to stay close at the half.

The Waves took a four point lead on several occasions in the second half, but USD forward Anthony Reuss, who hit all six of his field goal attempts, scored 10 points on inside moves to pace the Toreros.

Reuss finished with 14 points and Mark Bostic added eight for USD. Anger scored 20 and Wilson had 14 for Pepperdine.

San Diego Notepad

Toreras take step toward winning year

If the University of San Diego women's basketball team manages a winning record this season, it will may point to last night's game against UC-Irvine as the key.

Behind most of the game, the Toreros took the lead with five minutes to play and went on to a 63-58 victory at the USD Sports Center. USD was led by Lori Morris and Jill Bradley, who each had 14 points. It was Bradley's basket from short range that put San Diego up for good.

USD, which never has compiled a winning mark in Division I play, improved its record to 13-12. Irvine dropped to 18-6.

USD plays Nevada-Las Vegas tonight at 7:30 in the USD Sports Center.

USD Women Upset UC Irvine, 63-58

Guard Lori Morris and forward Jill Bradley scored 14 points apiece Thursday night to lead the University of San Diego to a 63-58 upset victory over UC Irvine in a nonconference basketball game in San Diego.

The victory improved the Toreros record to 13-12. Sophomore center Cheri Graham scored 21 points and added 16 rebounds and 10 blocked shots for the Anteaters (18-6).

FEB 17 1984

Toreros turn tide against Waves

Tribune Staff Report

It was strictly the law of averages. After dropping last-second decisions to Pepperdine at home in each of the last three seasons, you had to figure the University of San Diego's basketball team finally was due to turn things around.

It did. And, ironically, it took a little bit of last-second heroics for USD to do so.

Torero guard John Prunty fired home a 20-foot jump shot with eight seconds remaining, before Pepperdine guard Mark Wilson missed the front end of a one-and-one with two seconds left as USD escaped with a 56-55 victory over the Waves last night in front of 1,600 fans at the USD Sports Center.

The victory gave the Toreros a 4-3 mark in West Coast Athletic Conference play and a 13-9 record overall. More importantly, perhaps, it snapped an eight-game losing streak to Pepperdine.

"It's been a long time comin'," said USD coach Jim Brovelli, whose team moved into a second-place tie with Santa Clara and Loyola Marymount, a game behind front-running St. Mary's. "We waited a long time for this."

It almost didn't come, especially after Pepperdine's Dwayne Polee converted two free throws to give his side a 55-52 lead with 1:30 remaining. But Al Moscatel subsequently hit two of his team-high 16 points to put the Toreros in striking distance, before Prunty connected with the game winner.

That's how close USD's season came to ending last night. Instead, the Toreros have put themselves in legitimate contention to claim the conference championship in only their fifth season of Division I competition.

The Toreros are back in action Saturday night at 7:30 when they take on Loyola Marymount at the Sports Center and it figures to be another close one. USD defeated the Lions 75-73 in overtime earlier this season in Los Angeles.

FEB 17 1984

Bruins loom as team to beat in tennis tourney

By Elson Irwin

Tribune Sportswriter

With defending titlist USC sending its troops to the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association tournament in Iowa, UCLA emerged the heavy team favorite to capture the 11th annual San Diego Intercollegiate Invitational, which got under way yesterday at the University of San Diego.

But even with the No. 1-ranked Trojans competing elsewhere, 16 of the Southland's major tennis powers gathered yesterday and, as expected, the Bruins emerged the team leader after two rounds of singles.

Chuck Willenborg, UCLA's No. 1 player, and Craig Venter, No. 2, swept two matches each in the top-flight division to lead the way.

No. 3-seeded Willenborg easily disposed of Carlsbad's Eric Basart, playing for U.S. International University, in the second round 6-0, 6-1. Willenborg, appears to be a solid threat to No. 1 seed Colombian Carlos DiLaura, who heads a strong Pepperdine sextet in this event.

Venter knocked off Peter Smith, a former Torrey Pines standout who plays for Long Beach State, in the second round 6-3, 6-2.

DiLaura, a clay-court specialist with an outstanding backhand, advanced to the third round with convincing victories over Jeff Karp of Arizona State (6-3, 6-3) and Mark Sieving of UC-Santa Barbara (6-3, 6-3).

Former Point Loma star Kelly Jones, Pepperdine's best player and the defending individual champion, also was at the ITCA tournament in Iowa, a national event catering to the elite of collegiate tennis.

With two points awarded each win in the main draw, UCLA came away with 22 points after two rounds, followed by Long Beach with 20 and Pepperdine with 18. In fourth place was host USD with 16. Three schools, San Diego State, Brigham Young and UC-Irvine were tied for fifth with 12 apiece. Trailing were Chapman College, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo and UCSD with eight points each; then Bakersfield State with two points. UC-Santa Barbara, Redlands and Fullerton State, the proxy team for USC, failed to win a match on opening day.

Instead of six flights, each of the teams placed two players in each of three 32-man draws, forming three singles tournaments. There will also be three flights of doubles.

BLADE TRIBUNE

FEB 17 1984

USD edges Pepperdine

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — John Prunty hit a 15-foot jump shot with eight seconds remaining Thursday night to lift the University of San Diego to a 56-55 victory over Pepperdine in a West Coast Athletic Conference game.

Mark Wilson had a chance to win the game for Pepperdine. He was fouled by Prunty with two seconds left but missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw situation.

It was San Diego's first victory over the Waves in five seasons and moved the Toreros within one game of the conference lead.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 18 1984

Intercollegiate Tennis Finals Today

SAN DIEGO—Ed Nagel of Pepperdine University will face teammate Carlos DiLaura at 11 a.m. today in one of three championship matches in the 11th Annual San Diego Intercollegiate men's tennis tournament at the University of San Diego.

The tournament groups No. 1 and No. 2 two players from college teams in one division, No. 3 and No. 4 players in another division and No. 5 and No. 6 players in a third.

Nagel and DiLaura will compete in the top division. USD's Alejandro Ramos will take on UCLA's David Livingston at 9:30 a.m. in the second division and Brett Greenwood of UCLA will face Fabio Mion-Bet at 8 a.m. in the third division.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 18 1984

WOMEN

Nevada-Las Vegas 73, USD 52 — Donya Monroe tossed in 18 points and had 11 rebounds as the Runnin' Rebels broke the University of San Diego's four-game winning streak at the Sports Center. Michelle Dykstra scored 17 points and Debbie Theroux added 16 for the Toreros (12-13). UNLV (18-5) shot a sizzling 58 percent from the field.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 18 1984

UCLA pads lead in Intercollegiate

Though its top two players were defeated, favored UCLA stretched its lead in the San Diego Intercollegiate Tennis Invitational at USD and SDSU yesterday to eight points over Cal State Long Beach.

Chuck Willenborg, UCLA's No. 1 player, was downed in the quarterfinals by Kevin McClintic of Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo 6-3, 1-6, 6-1, and the Bruins' No. 2 player, Craig Venter, dropped a semifinal match to Ed Nagel of Pepperdine 7-6, 6-4.

After four rounds of play UCLA leads with 46 points, followed by Cal State Long Beach at 36, and Pepperdine at 28. San Diego State is in fourth place with 23 points and the University of San Diego and UC-Irvine are tied at fifth with 22.

FEB 18 1984

San Diego Notepad

UCLA leads net event; Chargers fire a coach

UCLA maintained its lead in the 11th annual San Diego Intercollegiate Invitational tennis tournament yesterday at the University of San Diego, despite losing its two top players via the upset route.

Craig Willenborg, the Bruins' No. 1 player, was beaten by Kevin McClintic of Long Beach State 6-3, 1-6, 6-1 in the third round, while Craig Venter was ousted by Pepperdine's Ed Nagel 7-6, 6-4 in the semifinals.

That set up an all-Pepperdine final in top-flight competition between Nagel and top-seeded Carlos DiLaura, who got by McClintic in the semis 2-6, 7-6, 6-2.

Team standings had UCLA with 46 points, followed by Long Beach State with 38, Pepperdine 28, and San Diego State 23. Host USD and UC-Irvine were tied for fifth with 22. There are 16 schools in the tournament, which ends today.

El Cajon, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Daily Californian
(D. 100,271)

FEB 17 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Ex-Hiller finds there's no place like home . . . plate

By Dennis Wynne
of The Daily Californian

Steve Barnard has discovered there is no place like home — whether it is the place you live or the plate you work behind.

Barnard is one of two players sharing the catching duties for San Diego State baseball team this year. It took him four years and three schools to get the job, but now that he is there he is enjoying it.

"I'm a walk-on," the senior said. "I decided that I wanted to be somewhere close to home, so I didn't consider anywhere else but San Diego State."

Barnard, a 1979 graduate of Grossmont High, spent two years at Grossmont College before receiving a scholarship to UC Irvine. He was the Anteaters' starting catcher in 1982, but a combination of poor grades and homesickness led him to leave the school.

"The programs are a lot different," said Barnard. "The school (Irvine) has a quarter system. San Diego State has a semester system. If you miss a day or two under the quarter system, you are missing a lot of class time. If you miss a day or two here (SDSU), you can make it up."

"The way it is set up at Irvine, you go to

"I used to catch batting practice, kind of fiddling around with it. The catcher we had my freshman year graduated. I thought I'd give it a try. I found I liked the activity, being in there for every play."

— Steve Barnard

classes in the morning and play games in the afternoon. Here, the field has lights, so there are more night games. That give you a chance to change your thoughts from classes to baseball. At Irvine you go straight from one to the other."

Barnard added that SDSU had a more high-powered program. He said Irvine plays pretty good competition — it is in the same league as Fullerton State and the University of San Diego — but that Aztec coach Jim Dietz and his staff spend more time scouting the opposition and preparing for games.

The Aztecs, rated the No. 3 team in the nation, are undefeated in eight games. They played at Loyola Marymount today at 2:30. The Lions and Aztecs play a double-header Saturday at noon.

While redshirting last year Barnard worked as an assistant varsity coach at Grossmont High. He also spent the summer in Clarinda, Iowa playing semipro baseball.

"It's real good baseball," he said. "I was there for two months and we played every night but two — once we were on a bus for a game in Rapid City; and the other night we didn't play we were on the way back from a game."

"There was a team in Red Oak, which is about 20 miles from Clarinda. There were some other (SDSU) players on that team, so we got a pretty good rivalry with them."

Barnard said the team traveled from Rapid City, S.D. to Fort Smith, Ark. for games. It had a 46-18 record, finishing fifth in the national playoffs.

The Clarinda team was owned by the city. Each player is provided with transportation from his home town, a place to live and a job.

"I worked on a farm," said Barnard. "I spent all day baling hay. The nice thing was that I was living with the man who owned the team, so I got to sleep in a bit longer than everyone else after we played a night game."

This year Barnard and senior John Carlson alternate behind the plate for the Aztecs. In a preseason prospectus, Aztec coach Jim Dietz rated Barnard as a better offensive player, with Carlson the better defensive player.

Barnard said so far things have been reversed. He is off to a slow start offensively with a .182 average (two for 11) in five games, but he has played well defensively. Carlson is off to a strong start with the bat with a .333 average.

Barnard didn't play catcher until his sophomore year at Grossmont College. He was a third baseman in high school and during his first year with the Griffins.

"I used to catch batting practice, kind of fiddling around with it," he said. "The catcher we had my freshman year (Helix) Jim Oxe graduated, so we needed to replace him. I thought I'd give it a try."

"I didn't know what it would be like to get in there. I had never done it in a game situation. But I found I liked the activity, being in there for every play."

Barnard said he most enjoys working with the pitchers, helping them set up the batters. He added he enjoys the games base runners, pitchers and catchers go through prior to base stealing. And there is nothing quite like gunning down a runner at second base.

Almost as much as he enjoys being close to home.

2B The Daily Californian □ East San Diego County, California □ Friday, February 17, 1984

Toreros rock WCAC standings by rolling the Waves

By Mike Mathison
of The Daily Californian

Just when it looked like the University of San Diego men's basketball team was down and out of the West Coast Athletic Conference race, the Toreros began riding a few WCAC undulations.

The latest in the series of swells came Thursday in San Diego, Moraga, Calif., and Portland, Ore. Not only did USD beach the Pepperdine Waves 56-55 in front of 1,600 at the Sports Center, but first-place St. Mary's lost at home to Loyola Marymount 94-76 and last-place and winless Portland University surprised visiting Santa Clara 70-68.

St. Mary's still leads the WCAC at 5-2. USD, Santa Clara and Loyola are tied for second at 4-3. Gonzaga is 3-3 and Pepperdine is all but out of it at 3-4. The Toreros host the Loyola-Marymount Lions Saturday night at 7:30. The Lions have won three straight conference contests — two coming against St. Mary's and the other against Pepperdine.

perdine. Loyola's last loss was 75-73 to USD in overtime. "They're hot," said Torero senior forward Mike Whitmarsh, "but so are we."

"Loyola is tough and they play well," USD coach Jim Brovelli said. "They have as good of athletes as any team in this league."

Whitmarsh, USD's 6-foot-7 all-everything player, was held in check most of the evening by the Waves. He scored 14 points (six below his average), grabbed four rebounds (four below) and handed out two assists (three below).

"They (the Waves) knew where I was all the time," Whitmarsh said. "They stopped me, but it was nice to see others pick up the slack."

The others were guards Al Moscatel and John Prunty. Moscatel came off the bench to net seven of 11 from the floor and two of two from the free throw line for 16 points. But it was a shot he didn't take that gave the Toreros the win.

Moscatel hit a 16-foot jumper with 1:00 left in the game for a 55-54 USD deficit. Five seconds later Prunty bumped the Waves' Grant Gondrezick and forced a turnover. With 50 seconds left the Toreros called a timeout.

"During the time out I told the players I didn't want them to hurry a shot," said Brovelli. "I wanted a shot with about 10 seconds left. I said if we had a wide open lay up we would take it. They (the Waves) shot Mike down on the baseline. Al had enough insight to give the ball to John, who is an excellent shooter, for the 15-footer and he put it down."

Prunty's only two points of the contest put USD on top 56-55. Eight seconds remained when Pepperdine called a timeout. Afterward guard Mark Wilson received the inbound pass and dribbled the length of the court and was fouled by Prunty with two seconds left. Wilson, a 76 percent shooter, missed the front end of the one-and-one. USD's first WCAC win in history came in the Toreros' first year of conference competition at Pepperdine five years ago. Brovelli's clubs hadn't beaten the Waves since.

The Toreros got into a position to win when they started getting the ball inside to Anthony Reuss to go along with Moscatel's bombs. Reuss scored 14 points, 10 in the second half, and grabbed a team-high seven rebounds. He was a perfect six-for-six from the floor and two-for-two from the line.

"I wasn't active enough in the first half," Reuss said. "I wasn't working hard enough to get open. In the first half I was concentrating too much on playing defense and not thinking about anything on offense. I knew I had to take it to the hoop in the second half."

"When Anthony got the ball inside in the second half he was either going to get fouled or put it in," Whitmarsh said. "They (the Waves) made some silly mistakes at the end. It's nice to win a close game like this. I've seen past USD teams lose too many close ones."

El Cajon, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Daily Californian
(D. 100,271)

FEB 23 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

USD ON ROAD/ It's on to a place which has not been kind to the University of San Diego men's basketball team. The road. The Toreros are 14-9 overall going into tonight's crucial West Coast Athletic Conference contest at Santa Clara University. USD is 12-2 at home and 2-7 on the road. Coach Jim Brovelli's Toreros are in second place in the WCAC at 5-3. Front-running St. Mary's is 6-2. Santa Clara and Loyola-Marymount are tied for fourth at 4-4. A USD win would put the Toreros one-half game behind St. Mary's, which is idle tonight. USD defeated Santa Clara 68-62 in the first round. "If we are going to be a factor in the league we have to win on the road," Brovelli said.

FEB 18 1984

'Giddy' Toreros face another key test

In years past, the University of San Diego basketball team would have taken a moment — "probably hours," said Coach Jim Brovelli — to savor Thursday night's 56-55 victory over Pepperdine.

This season, however, no game is as big as the next one for USD, which finds itself in the thick of a six-team West Coast Athletic Conference basketball race.

The next game is a very big one. Loyola-Marymount visits the Toreros tonight at 7:30 at the USD Sports Center.

"We are absolutely giddy over what is happening," Brovelli said of the Toreros' best season in five as an NCAA Division I team.

"Everyone is playing a big role. This is going down to the wire, and I wouldn't be surprised if the fightin' Toreros are there."

USD beat Pepperdine for the first time in eight WCAC meetings Thursday, even though all-conference forward Mike Whitmarsh was being held in check by Pepperdine's collapsing defense.

Forward Anthony Reuss, already the most accurate field-goal shooter in the WCAC with a percentage of 65 percent, responded by getting 14 points off 6-for-6 shooting from the floor, plus seven rebounds, while guard Al Moscatel came off the bench to down 7 of 11 jumpers over the Pepperdine zone. Finally, there was the winning shot by John Prunty with eight seconds to play.

"It's one of the most rewarding things for a coach, seeing players pick up other players like that," said Brovelli.

On all fronts, Thursday was a perfect night for USD's title hopes. Portland upset Santa Clara in Oregon while Loyola-Marymount was beating WCAC front-runner St. Mary's for the second time in three weeks, 84-76.

St. Mary's is still a game on top at 5-2 while Santa Clara, USD and Loyola-Marymount are 4-3. Gonzaga is 3-3 and defending champ Pepperdine is 3-4. Pepperdine is at St. Mary's tonight while Santa Clara visits Gonzaga.

Loyola-Marymount has won three straight since the Toreros beat them at Westchester 75-73 on Whitmarsh's basket with five seconds left in overtime.

After tonight's game, the Toreros play three straight on the road at Santa Clara, Gonzaga and Portland before finishing the season at home against St. Mary's.

"Anything can happen," said Brovelli.

FEB 18 1984

USD to Play Loyola Marymount Tonight in a Key WCAC Contest

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego could take another step towards its first West Coast Athletic Conference basketball championship tonight when it plays host to Loyola Marymount at 7:30 at the USD Sports Center.

The Toreros (13-9, 4-3), coming off a 56-55 win over Pepperdine Thursday night, are in a three-way tie for second place. Since joining the WCAC in 1979, USD's best finish has been a fourth-place tie last season.

Loyola Marymount (11-11, 4-3) has played well lately, including an upset victory over league-leading St. Mary's at Moraga Thursday night.

USD beat Loyola Marymount, 75-73, in overtime in Los Angeles Feb. 3.

The Lions most productive players are 6-7 junior forward Forrest McKenzie and 6-4 sophomore guard Keith Smith. McKenzie is averaging 19 points per game and Smith 16.

FEB 19 1984

FRESNO STATE 13-3, USD 10-7 — After blowing a 9-2 lead to lose the opener, the visiting Toreros (4-4) snapped Fresno's six-game winning streak in the nightcap. Dave Jacas stroked a two-run homer and his brother, Andre, slapped two doubles and a triple in the second game. Casey Morales got the win and Matt Francis earned a save.

Los Angeles Times

USD Beats Loyola Marymount to Take Sole Possession of Second in WCAC

By TIM GILLMAN, Times Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO—It was a Rolls that drove the University of San Diego basketball team into sole possession of second place in the West Coast Athletic Conference Saturday night.

Anthony 'Rolls' Reuss, a 6-7 forward, made a key offensive rebound and two free throws late in the game to lift USD to a come-from-behind 60-56 WCAC victory over Loyola Marymount Saturday night at the Sports Center.

The win put USD (14-9, 5-3) a game behind St. Mary's (11-13, 6-2). USD will host the Gaels in the final game of the season. Since joining the WCAC for the 1979-80 season, the Toreros highest finish has been a tie for fourth place last year in the seven-team league.

USD trailed, 38-25, with 16:07 remaining and slowly cut the margin with a full-court pressing defense to set up the heroics of Reuss, who had a game-high 19 points.

San Diego led, 55-54, when Loyola's Rick Sharp fouled John Prunty with 34 seconds remaining. Prunty missed the first shot of the one-and-one, but Reuss grabbed the offensive rebound and was fouled.

With 31 seconds left, Reuss made both free throws to put USD ahead, 57-54.

"The ball just bounced away off and I went straight up and grabbed it," Reuss said. "I kind of like those situations, when it comes down to me at the end."

"Anthony's a great rebounder," USD Coach Jim Brovelli said. "He has exceptionally long arms and great timing."

Reuss got the nickname 'Rolls' at El Cajon's Christian

High School because he is smooth and efficient. Saturday night, he grabbed a season-high 13 rebounds and shot 6 of 10 from the floor and 7 of 8 from the line. He is averaging 12.5 points and is shooting 65% from the floor.

After Reuss' free throws, USD got one more from guard Al Moscatel. Loyola countered with a field goal by Keith Smith and Mike Whitmarsh of USD hit two free throws to complete the scoring.

USD didn't take the second-half lead until Moscatel hit a 20-foot jump shot for a 55-54 advantage with 3:05 remaining.

Loyola led, 31-23, at halftime.

On hot outside shooting, the Lions ran to a 19-9 lead midway through the first half. Then Brovelli put in his own long shooters, Moscatel and Prunty, and used a three-guard offense. They whittled the lead to four points, 27-23, with 3:56 left.

Loyola got another field goal from Forrest McKenzie with 2:15 remaining to make it 29-23.

USD elected to play for the final shot. With 15 seconds remaining, USD moved in, but the best it could get was an off-balance jump shot by Whitmarsh with about five seconds remaining. The ball hit the edge of the backboard, was rebounded by Loyola and a quick pass to Keith Smith got a fast break dunk at the buzzer for the eight-point margin. Moscatel finished with 13 points and Whitmarsh had 12.

Smith had 18 points and Sharp 17 for Loyola.

J Sunday, February 19, 1984/Part III 9

Sunday, February 19, 1984

The San Diego Union H-3

USD holds off Loyola, 60-56, to keep WCAC crown in sight

By Bill Zavestoski, Special to The Union

If the rest of the West Coast Athletic Conference doesn't know it by now, yes, the University of San Diego is a legitimate contender for the league crown. And no, the Toreros don't rely only on Mike Whitmarsh. Loyola Marymount discovered that last night at the USD Sports Center.

The Lions effectively shut down USD's high-scoring senior forward, limiting Whitmarsh to 12 points on a 4-for-13 shooting night, but the Toreros rallied from a 13-point deficit in the second half to pull out a 60-56 triumph and remain just a game behind conference leader St. Mary's. The Gaels topped Pepperdine last night for a 6-2 record in league. USD is alone in second at 5-3, and Gonzaga (4-3), who beat Santa Clara (4-4), is third.

"Every game has been this way, every single game," said Torero coach Jim Brovelli. "At this stage of the season, it feels great to be where we are. First, second, either one is fine. When we started (in the WCAC) four years ago, I said it would take five years, and here we are."

In the game's final five minutes, five different USD players, Whitmarsh included, had a hand in the victory that improved the Toreros' home record to 12-2. Their overall mark is 14-9, assuring USD of a winning season for the first time at the Division I level.

Loyola (4-4, 11-12) appeared to be on its way to a fourth straight win — including two over St. Mary's — when a 13-2 spurt midway through the first half gave the Lions a 19-9 lead. At that point, USD reserve guard Al Moscatel made his first important contribution, hitting three long jumpers to account for six of the next 12 USD points, bringing the Toreros within 25-21.

But Loyola pulled away to a 31-23 halftime advantage and scored seven of the second half's first nine points to lead 38-25 with 16 minutes to play. The Lions were up 42-31 with 13:40 left when USD started its march back.

Moscatel hit two 20-footers to trim the deficit to five. Thompson added a 6-footer to trim the deficit to five. Forward Anthony Reuss, who finished with game-high marks of 19 points and 13 rebounds, countered a Loyola basket with two free throws, and Whitmarsh hit a driving layup to cut the Lions' lead to 44-41 with 10:40 to go.

Keith Smith, who led Loyola with 18 points, converted two free throws at the 6:52 mark to increase his team's advantage to 52-45, but the Toreros ran off 13 of the next 15 points in front of 2,245 screaming fans, including several busloads of Loyola students.

Reuss drove for a lay-in, then hit both ends of a one-and-one after grabbing an offensive rebound and being fouled at 4:53.

Thompson made USD's lone block of the night, and the ball caromed to Whitmarsh, who fed Mark Bostic for a slam to cut the Loyola lead to 52-51. After Rick Sharp scored two of his 17 points on free throws to put Loyola up by three, Whitmarsh canned an 8-footer at 3:58, then got the ball back for USD with a sideline dive for a loose ball, which he managed to bounce off a Loyola player just before it went out of bounds.

"That's pretty uncharacteristic of me," Whitmarsh said. "I'm not used to being down on the floor. But I'm not used to having problems scoring against this team, either." He scored 28 points in the Toreros' 75-73 victory

Feb. 3 in Los Angeles.

But not to worry. Moscatel, who finished with 13 points, hit another 20-footer at 3:07 to give the Toreros their first lead of the half, 55-54. Loyola missed at the other end, USD turned the ball over on an inbound pass after its own timeout, and Forrest McKenzie was off on a second attempt by Loyola to regain the lead at 1:18.

John Prunty, the hero of USD's win over Pepperdine Thursday, missed a one-and-one opportunity with 34 seconds remaining, but Reuss grabbed the rebound, was fouled on the play, and converted both free throws for a 57-54 lead. Loyola threw the ball away, and Moscatel hit one of two free throws with 17 seconds left.

With 10 seconds to go, Smith drove for the Lions' lone field goal in the final eight minutes to cut the USD lead to 58-56, but charged on the play. Whitmarsh hit both free throws for the final margin.

The Toreros must play three of their remaining four games on the road (where they are 1-7), beginning Thursday at Santa Clara. Their final game of the season comes March 8 at home against St. Mary's.

2B The Daily Californian □ East San Diego County, California □ Monday, February 20, 1984

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 20 1984

San Diego Notepad

USD will hit the road high

The University of San Diego's basketball team has pulled to within a game of the West Coast Athletic Conference lead. And it took a come-from-behind effort Saturday night to get there.

The Toreros defeated Loyola Marymount 60-56 in a WCAC game played at the USD Sports Center. Trailing by as much as 15 in the second half, USD scored 15 of the game's final 19 points to improve its conference mark to 5-3, a game behind front-running St. Mary's (6-2).

While USD's All-Conference forward Mike Whitmarsh was being held to 12 points (seven below his average), the Toreros received a much-needed boost from junior Anthony Reuss. The former first-team All-Conference player from Christian High led both teams with 19 points and 13 rebounds.

The Toreros go on the road for a Thursday night contest at Santa Clara and must play three of their final four regular season games away from home. USD is just 1-7 on the road this season.

USD roars past Lions and into second place

By Mike Mathison
of The Daily Californian

Mike Whitmarsh called it probably the biggest rebound of Anthony Reuss' career.

Reuss agreed of his 13th rebound of the night. That rebound propelled the University of San Diego to a come-from-behind 60-56 West Coast Athletic Conference victory over Loyola-Marymount Saturday night in the Sports Center.

With 34 seconds left USD reserve guard John Prunty was at the free throw line shooting a one-and-one. The Toreros held a 55-54 lead.

Prunty, an 89 percent free throw shooter, missed the front end. The ball bounced long and to the right of the basket. Reuss played volleyball with it before grabbing the offensive rebound. He was fouled three seconds later and calmly sank both ends of the one-and-one much to the delight of most of the 2,245 in attendance. It was the largest crowd ever to see a Toreros basketball game in the Sports Center.

"No doubt," Reuss said about that rebound being the biggest of his career. He was six of 10 from the floor and seven of eight from the line. In the wins Thursday and Saturday Reuss scored 33 points and grabbed 20 boards. For his efforts he was named co-WCAC player of the week Sunday with Gonzaga guard Jeff Condill.

"All I was thinking about was getting the ball. First of all, I didn't think I was going to have to rebound because John was at the line and he doesn't miss. It wasn't over the back. I went straight up and caught it. I kind of like those situations, when it comes down to me at the end."

"That was a great offensive rebound," USD coach Jim Brovelli said. "Anthony has long arms. He's deceptive. They (opponents) have keyed on Mike the last couple of game and Anthony has taken a load off him. He's really played super."

The Lions went down and committed a turnover. With 17 seconds showing USD reserve guard Al Moscatel, who for the second straight game lit a fire on the offensive end with 13 points, was fouled and hit one-of-two for a 58-54 advantage.

With 10 seconds left Loyola's Keith Smith hit a lay-up

"All I was thinking about was getting the ball. First of all, I didn't think I was going to have to rebound because John was at the line and he doesn't miss. It wasn't over the back. I went straight up and caught it. I kind of like those situations, when it comes down to me at the end."

— Anthony Reuss

and then charged into Whitmarsh after scoring. The referee whistled Smith for a foul and counted the basket. Whitmarsh, who did not have one of his better games of the season, sealed the victory by netted both ends of the one-and-one for the 60-56 win.

St. Mary's is in first place in the WCAC at 6-2. USD is alone in second at 5-3. Gonzaga is third at 4-3. Loyola and Santa Clara are 4-4.

"This game reminded me of the (San Diego) State game personally," said Whitmarsh, who had 12 points, seven assists, six rebounds and three steals. He was only four of 13 from the floor. "I just had to hustle out there. I was trying to make things happen whether they were good or bad. That team (Loyola) is pretty good. They have three players who can drive, shoot, pass and pull-up."

Loyola's three helped give the Lions a 38-25 lead with 16:10 remaining in the contest. USD was sluggish on both ends of the court and was in jeopardy of getting blown out.

"It was the same when we played Loyola up there," Whitmarsh said. "We were stagnant on offense. No one was making anything happen. I think what we need is Brovelli to come in and yell at us at halftime to wake us up."

"We had no intensity," Reuss said. "Our intensity picked up. We went to the press, started going all out and got our fast break going."

A Moscatel jumper with 3:07 unplayed gave the Toreros that 55-54 lead. It was USD's first lead of the game since it was up 7-6. The Toreros outscored the Lions 35-18 in the game's final 16 minutes and 15-4 in the last 6:52. USD outrebounded Loyola 20-7 in the second half.

The Toreros came back when Reuss started going. He scored 14 points in the second half, all from the inside.

"We talked about that at halftime," Reuss said. "I could do pretty much what I wanted to do inside. In the second half that (scoring) was all I was thinking about. I would like to win one game easily. This is getting to me."

"I'm getting too old for this," Whitmarsh quipped.

"I don't know if I'm going to survive," Brovelli said. "Every game has been like this. Every one."

USD now plays three straight on the road. Thursday the Toreros travel to Santa Clara.

"On the road we don't have the same intensity we do here," Reuss said. "Our first half play tonight (Saturday) is how we typically play on the road. We have to play on the road like we did in the second half."

The Toreros are 14-9 overall. They are 12-2 at home and 2-7 on the road.

FEB 20 1984

USD to Play Loyola Marymount Tonight in a Key WCAC Contest

SAN DIEGO—The University of San Diego could take another step toward its first West Coast Athletic Conference basketball championship tonight when it plays host to Loyola Marymount at 7:30 at the USD Sports Center.

The Toreros (13-9, 4-3), coming off a 56-55 win over Pepperdine Thursday night, are in a three-way tie for second place. Since joining the WCAC in 1979, USD's best finish has been a fourth-place tie last season.

Loyola Marymount (11-11, 4-3) has played well lately, including an upset victory over league-leading St. Mary's at Moraga Thursday night.

USD beat Loyola Marymount, 75-73, in overtime in Los Angeles Feb. 3.

The Lions most productive players are 6-7 junior forward Forrest McKenzie and 6-4 sophomore guard Keith Smith. McKenzie is averaging 19 points per game and Smith 16.

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 20 1984

WCAC honors Toreros' forward Anthony Reuss

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — University of San Diego forward Anthony Reuss and Gonzaga guard Jeff Condill have been named West Coast Athletic Conference basketball players of the week.

Reuss, a 6-foot-7 junior, scored 33 points and grabbed 20 points to lead USD to a 56-55 victory over Pepperdine and a 60-56 victory over Loyola Marymount over the weekend.

Condill, a 6-foot-3 sophomore, scored 29 points and had nine rebounds in Gonzaga's 73-63 victory over Santa Clara. He scored 13 of his points during an eight-minute Gonzaga scoring spree that captured the lead in the second half.

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 23 1984

You might make it a point to check this list twice

Here we are, a fortnight and a day away from the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament, so what better time to take a deep breath and assemble some lists before we get too deep into first-round losers, consolation games and sub-regional?

Lists like:

Four schools that have gone from the "thrill of victory" on the gridiron to the "agony of defeat" on the basketball court: 1) Air Force — 10-2-0 to 7-16; 2) Baylor — 7-4-1 to 5-19; 3) Penn State — 8-4-1 to 5-17; and 4) Texas — 11-1-0 to 7-17.

One man's vote for this year's All-American and assorted other honors: Guards — Michael Jordan (North Carolina) and Leon Wood (Fullerton State). Center — Patrick Ewing (Georgetown). Forwards — Michael Cage (San Diego State) and Sam Perkins (North Carolina). Player of the Year — Jordan. Coach of the Year — Lou Henson (Illinois).

Four teams that might surprise you at NCAA tournament time: 1) Syracuse; 2) Arkansas; 3) Illinois State; and 4) Virginia Commonwealth.

Three coaches (one is a former coach) who probably would have been great breakdancers in their youth: 1) Lou Carnesecca (St. John's); 2) Al McGuire (formerly of Marquette); and 3) John Thompson (Georgetown).

The five best local college basketball players: 1) Cage (San Diego State); 2) Mike Whitmarsh (USD); 3) Anthony Watson (SDSU); 4) Anthony Reuss (USD); 5) Tina Hutchinson (SDSU).

BREAK UP THE TOREROS — The University of San Diego keeps conquering one goal after another this season. Already at 14-9, the Toreros have assured themselves of their first winning record at the Division I level. Now, although it might be tough, USD coach Jim Brovelli's team is aiming at the West Coast Athletic Conference crown.

Bill Pinella
COLLEGES
NOTEPAD

USD has been named as one of the more improved teams in the country by one basketball publication. The Toreros have four games left in the regular season — three of those on the road starting tonight at Santa Clara. The Toreros will be at Portland (March 1) and Gonzaga (March 3) before returning home for the finale March 8 against WCAC-leading St. Mary's.

That's the good news. The bad news is that the Toreros are 1-7 on the road.

AZTECS' UPDATE — The men's basketball team is headed for Hawaii and a Saturday night date with the Rainbows. The women's swimming team will be in the

FEB 20 1984

Men's Basketball:

Torero honored

University of San Diego forward Anthony Reuss and Gonzaga guard Jeff Condill have been named West Coast Athletic Conference basketball players of the week. Reuss, a 6-foot-7 junior, scored 33 points and grabbed 20 rebounds to lead the Toreros to a 56-55 victory over Pepperdine and a 60-56 victory over Loyola Marymount this weekend. Condill, a 6-foot-3 sophomore, scored 29 points and had nine rebounds in Gonzaga's 73-63 victory over Santa Clara.

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 20 1984

BRUINS TAKE TENNIS TITLE — Ed Nagel knocked off No. 1 seed Carlos Dillaura 7-6 (7-5), 6-1 in a weekend battle of Pepperdine stars in the top flight finals of the 11th annual San Diego Intercollegiate Invitation Tournament at USD.

UCLA won the team championship of the 16-school tournament with 56 points. Long Beach State was second with 42 points, while Pepperdine and UC-Irvine were tied for third with 30 points each.

San Diego State's duo of Graham Espinosa and Jim Kellogg defeated Long Beach State's Kevin McClinton and Steve Schultz 5-7, 6-4, 6-3 in the first flight doubles final. The Aztecs finished fifth in the team standings with 27 points, followed by USD's 22.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 21 1984

USD Women Beat USIU in Overtime

Debbie Theroux had 15 points and a school-record 19 rebounds to lead the University of San Diego to an 82-78 overtime win over United States International University Monday night at Mira Mesa High.

The Toreros were 5 of 6 from the free-throw line and 3 of 4 from the field in the overtime period after ending regulation in a 71-71 tie. Michelle Dykstra contributed 15 points for San Diego (14-13). Jamie Glassford and Tanya DeCree had 18 points each to lead USIU (14-11).

FEB 21 1984

MIKE WHITMARSH
Tops USD categories

Toreros' Statistics

PLAYER	G	MIN	FG	FGP	FT	FTP	R	RPG	A	PF	ST	TO	BL	PTS	PPG
Mike Whitmarsh	23	35.4	163-204	.333	101-141	.716	176	7.7	140	61	26	57	9	425	18.5
Anthony Reuss	23	30.7	112-173	.647	45-67	.672	101	4.4	46	48	29	29	8	287	12.5
Mark Bieble	23	32.4	100-225	.444	48-70	.686	62	2.7	76	44	35	48	5	248	10.8
Scott Thompson	23	27.9	75-141	.532	16-29	.552	105	4.6	31	45	13	23	31	156	6.8
Chris Carr	23	23.4	57-108	.527	14-28	.500	25	1.1	40	46	14	27	2	131	5.7
Al Moscatel	23	22.4	51-108	.472	12-46	.260	34	1.5	18	47	49	26	44	146	6.3
John Prunty	23	16.4	37-73	.507	25-29	.862	18	0.8	42	20	12	16	8	99	4.3
Eric Mueselmann	21	11.1	29-44	.659	9-24	.375	39	1.9	14	31	10	15	2	71	3.4
Dave McVey	19	23	7-11	.636	8-11	.727	2	0.2	5	7	3	4	8	21	1.3
Eric Mueselmann	17	14.3	16-17	.941	1-2	.500	3	0.2	4	8	1	1	1	13	1.4
Marlo Coronado	16	8.6	6-11	.545	1-2	.500	3	0.2	4	8	1	1	1	13	1.4
Randy Brickley	9	2.8	6-11	.545	1-2	.500	3	0.2	4	8	1	1	1	13	1.4
Bill Perfield	4	2.5	2-2	1.000	0-0	.000	0	0.0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
Nick Madden	8	3.3	2-5	.400	1-2	.500	1	0.1	1	2	1	1	0	4	0.5
Steve Hoffman	8	2.6	0-1	.000	0-1	.000	0	0.0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
Joe Fish	3	1.7	0-0	.000	0-0	.000	0	0.0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
TOREROS (14-9)	23	40.0	643	.518	343-511	.671	731	21.8	431	430	187	302	64	1437	71.3
Opponents	23	40.0	595	.478	284-448	.638	744	32.3	364	434	134	349	57	1479	64.3

Abbreviations: G: Games; MIN: Average minutes per game; FG: Field Goals; FGP: Field Goal Percentage; FT: Free Throws; FTP: Free Throw Percentage; R: Rebounds; RPG: Rebounds Per Game; A: Assists; PF: Personal Fouls; ST: Steals; TO: Turnovers; BL: Shots Blocked; PTS: Points; PPG: Points Per Game.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 21 1984

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 21 1984

Reuss Is WCAC Co-Player of Week

SAN DIEGO—Anthony Reuss, a 6-7 junior forward for the University of San Diego, was selected co-West Coast Athletic Conference Player of the Week.

Reuss, who helped USD move into second place in the WCAC, shared the honor with Gonzaga's Jeff Condill. Reuss had 33 points, 20 rebounds and shot 12 of 16 from the floor as USD beat Pepperdine and Loyola Marymount. Reuss leads the WCAC in field goal percentage (64.7%).

Condill scored 29 points in Gonzaga's win over Santa Clara.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 23 1984

Improved USD faces Broncos

By Bill Center, Staff Writer

It's not just Mike Whitmarsh anymore. And it's more than two or three players.

"All of a sudden, we're a complete team," Coach Jim Brovelli said of his University of San Diego Toreros. "We complement each other. Let someone get bottled up and someone else will jump in there."

The someone of the first part, of course, is Whitmarsh, USD's leading scorer. As the Toreros have gone from West Coast Athletic Conference pretenders to strong contenders, rival teams have ganged up on the 6-7 forward.

Enter Toreros like forward Anthony Reuss and reserve guard Al Moscatel.

Last week, Pepperdine and Loyola Marymount opened their dates with USD by collapsing their zones on top of Whitmarsh and Reuss.

Sharpshooting Moscatel came in to hit seven of 11 field goal shots against Pepperdine and six of nine against Loyola Marymount. Most were from the 18- to 20-foot range, forcing the defenses to come out — if not completely.

Both Pepperdine and Loyola Marymount continued to play Whitmarsh tight. That gave Reuss a shot. And Reuss is the best shot in the WCAC.

The 6-7 junior is hitting 64.7 percent of his field goal attempts — the No. 1 mark in the WCAC and good enough to rank third in the NCAA if he had three more field goals to qualify for the national champs. Reuss is averaging 14.1 points and 7.9 rebounds a game in WCAC action and 12.5 points and 6.6 rebounds overall. As a sophomore regular a year ago, Reuss averaged just 4.5 points and 3.7 rebounds, although he shot 51.2 percent from the floor.

"Anthony has really come into his own this season, and that is one of the major reasons we are where we are," said Brovelli, whose second-place Toreros play a crucial game at Santa Clara tonight in their race to catch St. Mary's.

"He's done it throughout the conference season. Not just with his shooting, but with his rebounding and inside play. We knew he had the capabilities, but you never know when someone will come into their own."

Reuss couldn't have picked a better time. Off last week's effort, the Broncos will have to think twice before isolating on Whitmarsh.

In USD's two games last week, Reuss hit 12 of 18 shots from the floor and nine of 10 free throws to score 33 points. He also pulled down 20 rebounds and earned co-WCAC player of the week honors.

"I think it was a natural thing for Anthony to break out like this," said Brovelli. "With Moscatel hitting like he has been to keep the zones honest, rival defenses have had to choose between Whitmarsh and Reuss. It's difficult to handle both."

Now rivals are finding it hard to handle either.

"We've gotten so much better as a team that a lot of individuals have jumped forward because of it," Reuss said. "I don't feel as much pressure about making a shot or a mistake as I did last year. If the ball comes to me in traffic, I know if it's moved around, the open man will score."

A product of El Cajon Christian High, where he was the Grossmont League Player of the Year and an All-CIF pick in 1980-81, Reuss until recently had been better known for his grades at USD than his basketball. The political science major is shooting 100 percent on the dean's list and averaging 3.45 in grades. He is not the only basketball or scholastic talent in the family. Sister Mary Beth, a senior at Christian High, is currently one of the best female players in the county and will join him at USD next September.

He sees a combination of things behind his sudden change in basketball fortunes.

"Over the last summer I worked hard with the weights and developed more strength and stamina in addition to just getting bigger," said the 210-pounder.

"This has made it easier to set up inside, but the biggest thing the weights gave me was confidence. I know I can get the ball down low, hold my position, turn and shoot the short jumper, which I never did last year. When I get a rebound underneath the basket, I have the confidence and the strength to take the ball right back up."

"But the biggest thing is the team. It's so much better mentally and physically than it was a year ago that it's hard to compare what we did then to what we're doing now."

"Last year it would have been stupid for us to be talking about winning the conference title, but I honestly think we have as good a chance as anyone, and if we win two of our next three games on the road, we'll do it by beating St. Mary's in the last game of the season at home."

Going into the final third of the WCAC season, USD is all alone in second with a 5-3 record, a game behind 6-2 St. Mary's. Gonzaga is 4-3, and Santa Clara and Loyola Marymount are 4-4.

But Santa Clara is 17-8 overall and 13-1 at home, where the Toreros have never won. One of USD's 12 home victories (against two losses) this season came at the expense of Santa Clara, 69-62. Reuss had 12 points and as many rebounds, and Whitmarsh had 16 points and nine rebounds. The Toreros are 14-9 overall but only 2-7 on the road.

Santa Clara is led by 7-foot-1 junior center Nick Vanos, who is averaging 16.7 points and 9.6 rebounds this season but was neutralized by 6-11 USD freshman Scott Thompson in the first meeting. Santa Clara's Harold Keeling, a 6-3 junior guard, is averaging 16.9 points, and 6-5 sixth man Scott Lamson is averaging 10.2 points.

Santa Clara lost last week at Gonzaga and Portland and will play two of its last four games on the road. St. Mary's closes with four on the road, and USD has three of its last four away before closing with St. Mary's at home.

"We've got to win on the road," Brovelli said. "If we do, it could come down to that final game at home."

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 23 1984

San Diego Notepad

Torero quintet eyes top spot in game against tough Broncos

Playing more as a team despite ever-present all-star forward Mike Whitmarsh, the University of San Diego Toreros shoot for a share of first place in the Western Collegiate Athletic Conference tonight when they play the Santa Clara Broncos in Santa Clara.

But it won't be easy. The Broncos are 17-8 overall and 13-1 in Santa Clara, where the Toreros never have won.

Although the Broncos are 4-4 in the WCAC compared to the 5-3 Toreros, they will be out to knock off the Jim Brovelli-coached invaders, who can climb even with St. Mary's (6-2) by week's end.

Thursday, February 23, 1984

The San Diego Union C-7

GCC runs past USD nine, 4-0

Darryll Higgs threw a four-hitter as Grand Canyon College (8-2) stole a 4-0 victory from the University of San Diego (4-5) yesterday. The Antelopes stole seven bases, including one that set up the game winner. In the fifth inning George Gutierrez walked, stole second and came home on Daryl Reid's single. Higgs (3-0) picked up the win for GCC.

REDLANDS 14, UCSD 2 — The Bulldogs scored seven runs in the bottom of the seventh inning and pitcher Rob Williams picked up the victory for the hosts. John Rosness went 3-for-4 and drove in both UCSD runs.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 23 1984

USD Falls to Grand Canyon, 4-0

SAN DIEGO—Behind the pitching of Darrell Higgs and the hitting and base-running of Daryl Reid, Grand Canyon College defeated the University of San Diego, 4-0, in a non-conference baseball game Wednesday afternoon.

Higgs threw a four-hitter, striking out five and walking one, while Reid had two hits, two stolen bases and drove in the game-winning run in the fifth inning. Reid's RBI came on a single to right-centerfield, scoring George Gutierrez from second base.

FEB 23 1984

DIGEST

LOCAL NEWS

USD ON ROAD/ It's on to a place which has not been kind to the University of San Diego men's basketball team. The road. The Toreros are 14-9 overall going into tonight's crucial West Coast Athletic Conference contest at Santa Clara University. USD is 12-2 at home and 2-7 on the road. Coach Jim Brovelli's Toreros are in second place in the WCAC at 5-3. Front-running St. Mary's is 6-2. Santa Clara and Loyola-Marymount are tied for fourth at 4-4. A USD win would put the Toreros one-half game behind St. Mary's, which is idle tonight. USD defeated Santa Clara 69-62 in the first round. "If we are going to be a factor in the league we have to win on the road," Brovelli said.

Toreros take Broncos by the horn

From Tribune Wire Services

SANTA CLARA — The USD Toreros turned what Santa Clara coach Carroll Williams called his team's "self-destruct time" into their own self-improvement time last night. And freshman center Scott Thompson was the catalyst. USD won 63-61 and moved to within a half-game of league-leading St. Mary's.

"Scott had a great second half for us, just great," said USD coach Jim Brovelli. "Mike (Whitmarsh) is the guy that makes us go, but we needed a good game from Scott tonight."

Whitmarsh scored a game-high 25 points, but Thompson's 11 all came in the second half, including three in the last three minutes. And his defense against Santa Clara's leading scorer, center Nick Vanos, prevented a game-tying basket in the final seconds.

Santa Clara led from the start and was up 29-

24 at halftime. USD took the lead for the first time when Anthony Reuss scored on a 10-foot jumper with 12:01 remaining in the game.

The win improved the Toreros' record to a best-ever 15-9 overall and 6-3 in the West Coast Athletic Conference. St. Mary's plays at Santa Clara tomorrow night. USD plays next Thursday at Portland. After a game at Gonzaga next Saturday, USD closes out its season at home with a March 8 game against St. Mary's.

MIKE WHITMARSH

LOS ANGELES TIMES

FEB 25 1984

BARBARA MARTIN / Los Angeles Times

USD crowds have grown since this sparse turnout for January game against Mt. Marty College.

San Diego SportsScene

U. Who May Get Chance to Raise NCAA Eyebrows

By DAVE DISTEL, Times Staff Writer

I love a Cinderella story, though I despise the "Cinderella" cliché. I love underdogs or unknowns who surpass what is expected of them, and come to demand attention.

I was covering Cal State Fullerton a few years back when it surprised San Diego State, among other folks, and qualified for the NCAA Western Regional basketball tournament.

In those regionals, the team called Cal State Who? was supposed to make a cameo appearance. The Titans were up against a New Mexico team with a 24-3 record in Round One, and that figured to be it. What's more, UCLA, USF, North Carolina and Arkansas were in the same regional.

In fact, it was planned that I would cover Fullerton until it lost and then help a colleague with the UCLA coverage. It turned out to be the other way around.

Fullerton overcame 18-point deficits to beat both New Mexico and USF, and fell three points short after another furious rally in the final against Arkansas.

I flashback to Cal State Who? because another

Please see SPORTSCENE, Page 8

BARBARA MARTIN / Los Angeles Times

Anthony Reuss (34) and USD teammates have solid chance for an NCAA tournament berth.

8 Part III/Saturday, February 25, 1984 J

SPORTSCENE

Continued from Page 1

Cinderella is getting into her ball gown here in San Diego.

Coach Jim Brovelli's University of San Diego Toreros are near first place in the West Coast Athletic Conference. They are one-half game out of first place, and would move into a tie for the top spot if Santa Clara beats front-runner St. Mary's tonight.

What it all means, to be precise, is that USD could quietly sneak into the NCAA Tournament.

USD? Which NCAA Tournament?

I mentioned USD's tournament possibilities to a couple of people this week, and they shrugged their shoulders. They figured USD was Division II or Division III, and would be up against someone like Augustana, Otterbein or Albion.

Not so. If USD makes the NCAA field, it'll play the big boys. It goes into the same pot with North Carolina, Kentucky and Georgetown.

And it would get its share of arched eyebrows. Al McGuire, for example, probably doesn't know the University of San Diego from the University of South Dakota. And there will be those who suspect that San Diego State is trying to slip in under an assumed name.

And, the truth is that USD is anonymous in its own hometown.

When folks hereabouts think of college basketball, they think of San Diego State. USD is a little bowl of alphabet soup the Aztecs consume each January in a crostown matchup of little interest.

Everyone wonders when the Aztecs will finally make the NCAA tournament, which probation and a lackluster record will deny them once again this season.

No one wonders when USD will make the NCAA tournament. It's like wondering when Liechtenstein will win an Olympic gold medal or Bill Shoemaker will win the heavyweight championship. I don't think it has ever occurred to anyone that USD is eligible for collegiate athletics' biggest post-season party.

The populace perceives USD as a sleepy collection of pastel buildings on the bluff overlooking Mission Bay. Like the other buildings, the gym looks like it was designed by a cake decorator rather than an architect.

USD's gym—capacity 2,400—might well fit in the North Carolina locker room. And the usual USD crowd would fit onto a bus—or maybe a van.

I sent a photographer to USD this year to take some crowd shots, and she called and said the game must have been cancelled. I assured her that the players would show up. I also told her to take a head-shot of each fan and let me know if she used up a roll of film.

In all fairness to USD, interest has increased. Last week's games against Pepperdine and Loyola Marymount drew 1,600 and 2,245, respectively. We're not talking Torero fever, but there is an awakening of sorts.

However, I thought USD's little run for glory would come to a crushing conclusion Thursday night. It went to Santa Clara, where the home side was waiting with a 13-1 record in its own gym. What's more, USD had never won at Santa Clara.

My conclusion, naturally, was that Santa Clara would win and USD would do a neat little tumble back into the middle of the pack.

What happened, of course, was that USD won, 63-61.

And then I looked at the numbers and scratched my head. Santa Clara had a 34-19 rebounding advantage and a 57.4% to 51.1% advantage in shooting. A team out-shot and out-rebounded on the road is usually hoping only that the bus doesn't break down on the way back to the hotel.

On this occasion, given a game it could not win, USD simply refused to lose. It could not take the game, but it would not give it away. It committed only 11 turnovers, forced 21 and won by a basket.

Obviously, it takes unlikely wins to get an unlikely team to the top.

By the stroke of midnight tonight, USD may well be dancing with St. Mary's in a first-place tie.

Of course, there is still work to be done. USD will be on the road next week, playing at Portland on Thursday and at Gonzaga on Saturday. St. Mary's gets no break, however, because it plays the same teams in the same places on opposite nights.

After all those years settling for being better rather than being good, USD is finally in a position to make it all happen. It could come down to its final regular season game, a March 8 date at home against St. Mary's.

If it all comes down to such a conclusion, I suspect a lot of gas station attendants on the hill down below will be badgered by the same question.

"I can see the USD campus," motorists will say, "but I can't for the life of me figure out how to get there. Can you help?"

That is the way it has always been for the basketball team. It has always known where it wanted to go, but never known quite how to get there.

Now, however, USD has tip-toed to the fringes of collegiate basketball's brightest spotlight. It can see where it is going, and it is simply a matter of getting there.

It should be a rather hectic and electric stretch run, but don't bother trying to find USD's games on your radio. No one broadcasts USD games.

That, to be sure, is what life is like for The Other Team in a town which doesn't seem to care if it has any.

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 25 1984

PRESSURE'S ON — The heat will be on the St. Mary's Gaels tonight when they play Santa Clara with first place in the West Coast Athletic Conference basketball race on the line.

Should the Gaels become victim, they will fall into a first-place deadlock with the University of San Diego Toreros, who defeated the Broncos 63-61 Thursday night at Santa Clara. But victory over the Broncos would give the Gaels a 7-2 mark and almost a certain bid to the post-season NCAA basketball tournament.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 26 1984

UC-Santa Barbara 65, USD 58 — Susan Coupland scored 17 points to lead the Gauchos over the Toreros, who turned the ball over 14 times in the second half. Debbie Theroux led USD (14-14) with 16 points and 14 rebounds.

SD BUSINESS NEWS

FEB 27 1984

Webster Burke Kinnaird of the San Diego Court of Appeals became the new president of the Law Alumni Association, University of San Diego School of Law. □

LOS ANGELES TIMES

16 Part III/Friday, February 24, 1984 J

USD Edges Toward First Place With Win

Special to The Times

SANTA CLARA — The University of San Diego basketball team made another bid to move into first place for the first time in the West Coast Athletic Conference with a 63-61 victory over Santa Clara Thursday night at Toso Pavilion.

The win put USD (15-9, 6-3) a half game behind league-leading St. Mary's College, which plays Santa Clara here Saturday night. A St. Mary's loss would move USD into a tie for first in the WCAC. USD hasn't been in first in the WCAC since joining the league for the 1979-80 season.

Thursday night's loss was only the second at home this season for Santa Clara (17-9, 4-5) and was the first win there for USD.

Santa Clara jumped out to a 29-24 halftime advantage with the help of 59% field goal shooting. But the Toreros moved back into contention quickly in the second half and took the lead for the first time, 41-39, on two free throws by forward Anthony Reuss with 12:01 remaining.

"We were five down at half," USD Coach Jim Brovelli said, "but I thought we played fairly well. We controlled the tempo. I told the players if we could keep the lid on we could win on the road."

USD increased its margin and was in the lead throughout the final minutes. USD was aided by sloppy ball handling by Santa Clara, which had 21 turnovers to only 11 for the Toreros.

Whitmarsh was the game's high scorer with 25 points and one rebound.

Vanos led Santa Clara with 20 points, 17 rebounds and 5 blocked shots.

USD is idle this weekend but plays at the University of Portland Thursday and at Gonzaga University March 3. The Toreros finish their regular season schedule by hosting St. Mary's College on March 8.

Thompson, the 6-11 freshman from Citrus Heights, scored all 11 of his points in the second half, including a free throw and a layup in the final three minutes to help the Toreros move within a half-game of St. Mary's in the West Coast Athletic Conference race.

More importantly though, he both-tered Santa Clara center Nick Vanos enough in the final five seconds to prevent the Bronco post man from tipping in what could have been the game-tying basket. Terry Davis had missed two free throws to set up those tips, but Vanos never got a clear shot at any of them.

"The ball was just rolling around up there," Thompson said. "What'd they do, miss three in a row there right at the end? Boy, that was the longest five seconds I ever saw."

Those five seconds, however, improved the Toreros' conference position. USD is 6-3 and does not play until Thursday night in Portland. St. Mary's, 6-2, plays the Broncos here tomorrow night.

See USD on Page D-3

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 24 1984

USD 4, POINT LOMA NAZARENE 4 — The Toreros and Crusaders battled to a tie, giving way to darkness after 9½ innings at Point Loma. USD picked up the game-saver with a single run in the top of the ninth. PLNC had scored four runs in the bottom of the eighth to take the lead.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 24 1984

USD rally produces 63-61 win

By Ray Ratto
Special to The Union

SANTA CLARA — Mike Whitmarsh had the highest numbers, but Scott Thompson provided the decisive plays in the University of San Diego's 63-61 victory here last night over Santa Clara.

Thompson, the 6-11 freshman from Citrus Heights, scored all 11 of his points in the second half, including a free throw and a layup in the final three minutes to help the Toreros move within a half-game of St. Mary's in the West Coast Athletic Conference race.

More importantly though, he both-tered Santa Clara center Nick Vanos enough in the final five seconds to prevent the Bronco post man from tipping in what could have been the game-tying basket. Terry Davis had missed two free throws to set up those tips, but Vanos never got a clear shot at any of them.

"The ball was just rolling around up there," Thompson said. "What'd they do, miss three in a row there right at the end? Boy, that was the longest five seconds I ever saw."

Those five seconds, however, improved the Toreros' conference position. USD is 6-3 and does not play until Thursday night in Portland. St. Mary's, 6-2, plays the Broncos here tomorrow night.

See USD on Page D-3

ry 24, 1984

①

The San Diego Union D-3

USD: Rally trips Broncos

Continued from D-1

"Scott had a great second half for us, just great," raved Coach Jim Brovelli. "He really came on for us after the half. Mike's the guy that makes us go, but we needed a good game from Scott tonight."

Whitmarsh, who finished with a game-high 25 points, sparked a 14-2 run midway through the second half to enable USD to erase a 29-24 halftime deficit. The lead grew as large as seven with six minutes to play, but the Broncos, who needed this game to remain in contention for a post-season bid, trimmed the lead to four, three and finally two, all on baskets by senior guard Harold Keel. Keel scored 14 of his team-high 22 points in the second half in a singular but vain attempt to rally the Broncos.

Santa Clara started quickly enough, taking a seven-point lead midway through the half. Vanos, who finished with 20 points and 17 rebounds, scored 12 of his points before the break, and Thompson struggled in allowing him those 12.

Brovelli professed he wasn't concerned by the halftime deficit, however.

"We were five down at the half, but I thought we were playing fairly well," Brovelli said. "I thought we were controlling the tempo, so I wasn't overly concerned."

The Toreros tied the game at 33 on a free throw line jumper by Thompson, but three quick Bronco baskets pushed the lead back to six.

Then came an eight-minute run Santa Clara coach Carroll Williams called "self-destruct time." USD outscored the Broncos 18-4, during which time Santa Clara turned the ball over seven times in 12 possessions.

SAN DIEGO UNION

FEB 27 1984

WCAC honors USD's Whitmarsh

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Mike Whitmarsh of the University of San Diego was chosen the West Coast Athletic Conference's player of the week yesterday for his 25 points in a 63-61 victory over Santa Clara Thursday. Whitmarsh, a 6-foot-7 senior, also had three assists and two steals as he led San Diego into a first-place tie in the WCAC with St. Mary's at 6-3.

THE TRIBUNE

FEB 27 1984

BASKETBALL HONORS — Mike Whitmarsh of USD was selected the West Coast Athletic Conference player of the week yesterday. Whitmarsh, who joined the Toreros from Monte Vista High via Grossmont Community College, scored 25 points in USD's 63-61 road victory over Santa Clara last week. The 6-foot-7 senior forward also had three assists and two steals against the Broncos.

The Toreros are 6-3 in the WCAC and tied with St. Mary's for first place. USD has three regular-season games left as the team continues its bid for a conference title and automatic berth in the NCAA Tournament.

Sports

Comics

USD knocking on NCAA playoff door

By Nick Canepa
Tribune Sports Writer

LET'S not have another sickening rendition of the theme from Rocky I, II or III. And, please, keep Sylvester Stallone away from Jim Brovelli. Bring in someone who speaks English to play the part. This is a Cinderella story, all right, enough to break up Horatio Alger, but let's not get too dramatic.

We're talking USD basketball here. That's the University of San Diego. The school on the hill. Not South Dakota. Or even San Diego State. And now that the initials are in order, let it be known that the USD men's Division I basketball program, at the tender age of five, has arrived. On schedule.

The road ahead for USD, D-12

On coach Brovelli's schedule, anyway. True, timetables are the latest fad in coaching copouts. "I see us at least three years away," they will say, most of them hoping a better job will come along by then. But in Brovelli's defense, he was right.

Five years ago, when USD tore itself away from a successful run in Division II, college basketball's minor leagues, Brovelli said it would take five years for his team to be a contender in Division I and the West Coast Athletic Conference. How prophetic of the guy. Five years later, his program is a success.

As they prepare to meet conference foe Portland tomorrow night in Oregon, the Toreros are 15-9 overall, and their 6-3 record in the WCAC ties them with St. Mary's for first place in the conference. The latter mark is of particular significance.

USD has three games remaining in conference play — at Portland, at Gonzaga Saturday and at home March 8 with St. Mary's. Victories in all three will mean a conference title and an automatic bid to compete in next month's NCAA basketball tour-namment, which may have the biggest effect on campus since the First Ecumenical Council. Even if they don't win all three, they still have a chance.

This, one might imagine, is rather heady stuff for a university that seemingly has been taking its athletic lumps in this city since Cabrillo first dribbled a basketball on Point Loma. But San Diego State, perhaps a bit too comfortable after all these years, may have to make a bit more room in the front seat.

"It's great for seniors like (backup guard) John Prunty," Brovelli said yesterday. "We've lost so many close games during his time here. Time and again he's heard me say, 'It's tough losing these one-point games, but our turn will come.' Well, our turn has come."

And in a good league. Last year, for instance, WCAC champion Pepperdine, a team USD once lost to by three points, went two overtimes in Coming together

When Jim Brovelli (left) guided the USD basketball program into Division I five years ago, he said it would take five years for his team to be a contender. The Toreros are right on schedule. With a 15-9 overall record and a 6-3 mark in the West Coast Athletic Conference, USD has a chance to make the NCAA basketball playoffs. Three of the keys for the team are, from left above: 6-11 freshman center Scott Thompson, 6-7 senior forward Mike Whitmarsh and JC transfer guard Chris Carr.

this. "It's really personally satisfying to see this program come as far as it has in so short a time," Brovelli said. "To make it to the NCAA tournament would be even more so. But I can't worry about those things. All I'm concerned about is Portland. We control our own destiny."

"We've come a long way. I pushed the administration into getting into the WCAC. At the time, we were the only Catholic school on the West Coast not in the conference. I really believed it would help the university directly and indirectly, and it has. And the administration has supported me all the way. This has given us an identity and exposure as a university, not just a basketball team."

Jim Brovelli is no dreamer, but even he has to concede that what he has put together is something special, for this bunch is not totally dry behind the ears.

Please see USD, D-12

*USD

Continued From Page D-1

He has one player — 6-foot-7 senior forward Mike Whitmarsh — who could be of professional timber. His center is a 6-11 freshman named Scott Thompson. Anthony Reuss is a 6-7 junior forward who only now seems to believe that he's fully capable of playing at this level. His guards — Chris Carr and Mark Bostic — are JC transfers, and Bostic made the transition from forward. Al Moscatelli, his top reserve, is a sophomore transfer from Mesa College by way of Mercer Island High in Washington. And then there's Prunty, the only senior other than Whitmarsh (another JC transfer) who plays at all. Eight of the 15 student-athletes have grade point averages of 3.0 or better. What gives?

"We expected to be winning after five years, but in all honesty, I don't know if we expected to be challenging for the conference title at this time," said John Cosentino, Brovelli's assistant for the past six seasons. "This is a team that responds well to coaching, but it's done a lot of things on its own. There's great chemistry here. It's a cliché, I know, but these players really have a legitimate concern for each other. And the players brought it on themselves."

Chemistry. Everyone in the vicinity of Alcala Park seems to discuss it. Even those outside the lab classes.

"Since we started conference play, the chemistry has been there," Brovelli said. "Every kid has played his role perfectly in conference play. What great poise this team has. We're down by four to Pepperdine late in the game and win... we're down by 13 to Loyola and win. We win because the team plays as one. It's something to see. They'll make the perfect pass... be patient enough for the right shot... I'm just sitting there watching it. It's a terrific team to watch. I'm afraid to call timeouts."

Whitmarsh, who averages 18.8 points, 7.4 rebounds and six assists a game, is the catalyst — "A guy we can go to at the end," said Prunty.

"At the start of the season, I thought third place would be a realistic goal, but we've been playing so well as a team for the past four weeks," Whitmarsh said. "When my brother (Rusty) was playing here, I used to watch USD lose so many close games. Last year, we'd go against a good team and just hope to stay close. This year, we go against them with the attitude that we're going to win. It's such a great atmosphere. People I don't even know come up to me on campus and say, 'good game.' Too bad I'm a senior."

Prunty called the progress he has seen over four years "amazing." In reality, considering USD's high academic standards, what has happened must be considered a phenomenon of sorts.

"In my eyes, I've seen the strength of this program," Brovelli said. "I knew we could do it at this level. If you work hard and have good people, you will be a success... in time."

That's USD. Better basketball, through chemistry.

THE TRIBUNE
FEB 28 1984ANTHONY REUSS
.623 from field

Toreros' Statistics
PLAYER	G	MIN	FG	FGP	FT	FTP	R	PF	A	ST	TO	BL	PTS	PPG
Mike Whitmarsh	24	35.6	176-317	.556	116-154	.754	177	74	142	61	48	39	451	18.8
Anthony Reuss	24	31.1	114-183	.623	65-99	.657	157	45	49	72	31	29	293	12.2
Mark Bostic	24	25.5	104-220	.473	49-72	.681	63	28	77	47	36	32	225	9.4
Scott Thompson	24	28.0	75-149	.503	17-36	.472	108	45	22	47	13	35	167	7.0
Chris Carr	24	22.7	55-126	.437	25-46	.543	54	19	47	50	26	44	146	6.1
Al Moscatelli	24	15.9	29-113	.252	14-29	.483	25	11	40	47	16	27	122	5.1
John Prunty	24	16.5	26-77	.338	27-51	.529	29	19	14	31	10	15	71	2.9
Eric Moscatelli	21	11.1	28-44	.636	6-11	.545	24	11	27	2	6	1	72	3.4
Donna McIver	19	2.3	7-11	.636	1-2	.500	2	6	4	8	1	1	13	1.4
Eric Moscatelli	9	2.8	6-11	.545	1-2	.500	2	6	4	8	1	1	13	1.4
Randy Brickley	7	8.3	10-18	.555	3-4	.750	16	6	9	3	4	9	4	1.0
Marko Caranado	4	2.5	3-2	.600	0-0	.000	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
Bill Peckold	4	2.5	3-2	.600	0-0	.000	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
Nita Madden	3	1.7	1-2	.500	0-1	.000	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
Steve Krollman	3	1.7	0-0	.000	0-0	.000	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
Joe Fish	3	1.7	0-0	.000	0-0	.000	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0.0
TOREROS (15-9)	24	48.8	644-1156	.557	348-527	.662	578	253	323	471	195	143	1031	42.8
OPPONENTS	24	48.8	422-841	.481	291-441	.660	378	193	323	471	195	143	1031	42.8

Abbreviations: G: Games, MIN: Average minutes per game, FG: Field Goals, FGP: Field Goal Percentage, FT: Free Throws, FTP: Free Throw Percentage, R: Rebounds, RPG: Rebounds Per Game, A: Assists, PF: Personal Fouls, ST: Steals, TO: Turnovers, BL: Shots Blocked, PTS: Points, PPG: Points Per Game.

SAN DIEGO UNION
FEB 29 1984

USD has three games standing in way of title

By Bill Center
Staff Writer

University of San Diego basketball coach Jim Brovelli was singing a broken record yesterday.

"We've got our most important game of the year Thursday," said Brovelli, who added, "It's been the same thing for three straight weeks now. The Pepperdine game was our most important ever, then the Santa Clara game was, now it's Portland."

And after that Gonzaga, then St. Mary's and... maybe, just maybe, the NCAA playoffs.

That would be the "Miracle of Alcala Park." USD, which never before has had a winner at the Division I level, is today atop the West Coast Athletic Conference for the first time. The Toreros also control their own destiny. If they win their last three games, USD wins the WCAC title — no one else could catch them in a tight race that still has six contending teams.

Should they slip somewhere along the line, almost anything could happen.

The stakes are high. Only the WCAC winner appears headed for the NCAA playoffs, although the second-place team could get an National Invitation Tournament berth. A two-way tie for the title would result in a one-game playoff March 10 at the University of San Francisco or Santa Clara, with the winner going to the NCAA tourney.

Going into the final two weeks of the season, USD and St. Mary's are tied for first with 6-3 WCAC marks. Gonzaga is a game back at 5-4 while defending champ Pepperdine, Santa Clara and Loyola-Marymount are 5-5. USD is on the road for two of its last three games; St. Mary's is away for all three, including the finale at USD on March 8. Gonzaga, meanwhile, hosts both USD and St. Mary's this weekend.

Were USD to defeat 1-8 Portland (a 74-51 winner over USD last season in Oregon) and a participant in seven overtime games this season) and Gonzaga (the only WCAC to beat the Toreros at USD this season) coupled with a Gonzaga defeat of St. Mary's tomorrow night, the Toreros would win the WCAC title.

"But this has always been a tough road trip for us," said Brovelli.

Here is how the six teams in the WCAC title chase finish their season:

USD: at Portland tomorrow, at Gonzaga Saturday, home to St. Mary's March 8.

St. Mary's: at Gonzaga tomorrow, at Portland Saturday, at USD March 8.

Gonzaga: home to St. Mary's tomorrow, home to USD Saturday, at Portland March 8.

Santa Clara: at Loyola-Marymount tomorrow, at Pepperdine Saturday.

Pepperdine: home to Santa Clara Saturday, at Loyola-Marymount March 8.

Loyola-Marymount: home to St. Clara tomorrow; home to Pepperdine March 8.

The league has not determined what it would do in the event of a three-way tie.

FEB 23 1984

Allen's P. C. B. Est. 1888

Californian photos

Former East County stars Anthony Reuss (left) and Mike Whitmarsh are two reasons the University of San Diego basketball team is enjoying such a good season.

²⁹⁵⁵Toreros could be talking NCAA Tournament if...

By Mike Mathison
of The Daily Californian

Each West Coast Athletic Conference contest has been crucial for the University of San Diego men's basketball team.

"All the games were the most important at that time," Toreros coach Jim Brovelli said. "Now we're coming down to the end. We can determine our own destiny."

The Toreros will face Portland University Thursday night and Gonzaga University Saturday night in what is the most important weekend in USD men's basketball history.

Two wins and the Toreros will be in the driver's seat to win the league title and a spot in the 64-team NCAA Division I Tournament. Even if that fails, USD also has a shot at a National Invitational Tournament (NIT) bid.

"The Northwest trip is the toughest you have to take," Brovelli said.

The Toreros and St. Mary's are tied for the WCAC lead at 6-3. USD is 15-9 overall. St. Mary's 11-14. Gonzaga sits in third at 5-4. It is 16-9 on the season. Portland is 1-8 and 10-15.

What makes this weekend interesting is that the Toreros and the Gaels are making the same Northwest trip. St. Mary's plays Gonzaga Thursday and Portland Saturday.

If both clubs come away with two wins they will remain in a first-place tie at 8-3. The Toreros and Gaels meet in the USD Sports Center on March 8 in the final league contest of the season.

The Toreros split with Portland and Gonzaga when the teams made the trip to San Diego. USD lost to Gonzaga on a last-second shot in the conference opener, then beat Portland by two.

"Portland is a good ballclub," Brovelli said. "They've had seven of their (overall) games go into overtime. We really don't concern ourselves with the other team. If we do the things we have to do offensively and defensively, play with confidence and poise, everything will take care of itself. That's the way we approach it mentally. Portland beat Santa Clara, so you know they're a good team."

USD hasn't exactly had success on the road this year. The Toreros are 3-7 away from home. They are 12-2 at home. USD did go to Santa Clara last week and buck the Broncos 63-61 in Toso Pavilion.

"We're to the point now where every guy plays their role perfectly," Brovelli said. "The chemistry is good, which is what you have to have on the road. The guys kept their poise through the game. The second half we had the game well under control."

"The guys never have panicked when they have gotten behind. The last three games they have come from behind and won. It's a credit to the team. If you panic when you get behind it gets worse before it gets better."

The Toreros are paced by 6-foot-7 senior forward Mike Whitmarsh. He was named the WCAC's player of the week for his 25-point performance against Santa Clara. Anthony Reuss, Whitmarsh's 6-7 running mate at forward, have combined forces to make up the East County connection for the Toreros.

"If Mike has had a four-for-13 (shooting) night (like he did against Loyola-Marymount Feb. 18) Anthony has come in and picked up the slack," Brovelli said. "At Santa Clara Anthony didn't score like he has (Reuss had six points as opposed to his 11-point average) and Mike came in and scored 25. It's been that type of team. One guy has an off-night and another guy picks up. The guys really compliment each other."

March 1984

READER

MAR 1 1984

String Recital, the students of the Academy of Strings will offer music by Haydn, Bach, Massenet, Corelli, and others, Sunday, March 4, 2 p.m., Camino Theatre, USD, Linda Vista Road, Alcala Park. Free. 450-9477.

La Jolla, Calif.
(San Diego Co.)
LA JOLLA LIGHT
(Cir. W. 9,293)

MAR 1 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Leaders cited

Marylin Howe, Joan Schultz and David Tompkins have been named 1983 sales leaders for Anchor Realty at 1101 Wall St., with sales of more than $6 million generated by the three La Jolla

Schultz, a USD graduate with a master's degree in special education, joined Anchor Realty four years ago.

Tompkins is a trustee of La Jollans Inc. and a member of the La Jolla Town Council. He holds a BA from Columbia University and a doctor of law degree from California Western School of Law.

S.D. HOME & GARDEN

MAR 1984

BATHERS AND SUBWAYS

Local photographer and USD teacher Duncan McCosker is showing his Bathers series in the smaller gallery at the Museum of Photographic Arts this month. His photographs describe the recreational fervor, the lifestyle familiar to Americans living on the Southern California coast and Hawaii. "Every photographer makes a deal with his subject matter. Photography is magic—it reveals a world that is totally invisible." He likes a continuous seamless print, not the high contrast of someone like Eugene Smith. Bathers is calm, serene... and humorous.

Bruce Davidson's recent photographic series Subways (he rode the New York subways for a year with his camera) is featured in the larger gallery. He will be in San Diego for a public lecture and workshops. Call for details.

Exhibits March 6 through April 29. Museum of Photographic Arts, Casa de Balboa, Balboa Park, 239-5262.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAR 4 1984

William Sullivan

An afternoon ribbon-cutting (by 2-year-old Ann Marie Manchester) and a dinner for major contributors were highlights of the dedication of the Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center at the University of San Diego. The turnout included the Ruben Mettlers (he is board chairman and chief executive officer of TRW), who were guests of the Ernest Hahns, resort owner Jim Colachis, Gene and Celeste Trepte, the Josiah Neepers, the Frank Alessio, the Linc Wards (his company is Pacific Telesis Group), and university curator Teresa Whitcomb, who determined the historic design of the center's board room, the only totally authentic Spanish Renaissance room in California.

HILL COURIER

MAR 1984

A TRIP THROUGH THE VATICAN LANDS AT USD

A major donation of 91 Vatican paintings to the University of San Diego will touch both San Diegans and the rest of the country in a variety of ways. "A Trip Through the Vatican" is a collection of watercolors and sepia drawings completed by Vernon Howe Bailey during a 1921-22 stay at the Vatican. He was the first artist ever to receive papal permission to paint the private quarters of the pontiff. After Bailey completed the series, though, it acquired a history of mystery and intrigue. Individuals who sought to profit from the paintings met sudden death!! After repeated difficulties in promoting them, the paintings were finally, permanently stored... until now.

The collection will first reach the public through a series of USD-sponsored "Invisible University" courses. Georgia Stillman will present a lecture and slide show about the artist and collection in neighborhoods throughout the county during March. Those interested in participating should call Dr. Gil Brown at USD, 293-4523.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
San Diego Union
(Cir. D. 207,415)
(Cir. S. 332,920)

MAR 2 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

20,000 cast ballots for UCAN board

About 20,000 members of a new utility ratepayers' group have cast mail-in ballots in an election for the group's first board of directors.

The election ended at 5 p.m. yesterday, officials said, and winners of the nine board positions at the Utility Consumer Action Network will be announced March 9.

UCAN has contracted with the county registrar of voters to count the votes and to ascertain the validity of the mail ballots. About 40,000 dues-paying UCAN members were entitled to vote.

A total of 26 candidates ran for the board, which will begin with a budget of about $300,000. The board will hire a professional staff and select a permanent headquarters. The group has been temporarily housed at the Center for Public Interest Law at the University of San Diego.

The organization was founded to represent the interests of gas and electricity customers before the state Public Utilities Commission and other regulatory agencies.

UCAN solicits memberships with fliers enclosed in San Diego Gas and Electric Co. billing envelopes with the authorization of the Public Utilities Commission. So far, about 60,000 SDG&E ratepayers have mailed in at least $4 as annual membership dues. Only those who entered their memberships early were entitled to vote in the current election.

Three UCAN board members will represent each district, South, Central and North, and there will be a board election in one of the UCAN districts each year.

The new board will convene for its first meeting soon after the election results are announced.

Burbank, CA
(Los Angeles Co.)
Daily Review
(D. 10,100)

MAR 5 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Colleges swallow 8% of state money

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — California's more than 225 colleges and universities are a $30-billion-a-year industry that accounts for 8 percent of the state's annual gross product, a study shows.

The economic impacts of higher education in the nation's most populous state were outlined in a 16-page publication released Friday by leaders of California's independent and public education institutions, who comprise the California Round Table on Educational Opportunity.

The $30 billion annual impact of the higher education institutions — universities, state colleges and junior colleges — was based on 1981-82 data compiled by the California Postsecondary Education Commission.

The figure represents 8 percent of the total gross state product of more than $360 billion.

Among the conclusions of the study, released at a Round Table news conference, were:

—Higher education institutions annually add $3.8 billion to the state's economy through their expenditures for utilities, equipment, supplies and other day-to-day purchases.

—Faculty and staff spend $4 billion, which circulates into the economy via payments for groceries, rentals, gasoline and other goods and services.

—California students, including those from out of state and other countries, pay millions of dollars in tuitions and fees, and spend millions more for supplies, books and recreation. The total expenditures amount to approximately $3.8 billion.

—California's colleges and universities add at least $17.3 billion to the economies of surrounding communities.

The report said California's prosperity in the 1980s will depend on higher skill levels, and estimated that more than 60 percent of the 1.7 million new jobs expected to be created between 1980 and 1985 will require some post-secondary education.

"We must give education full support to meet California's growing need for a technologically trained work force," Gerald Hayward, chancellor of California Community Colleges system, told reporters.

David Gardner, the president of the University of California system, said the study was "a self-introspection" that grew out of curiosity about the economic impact of the state's higher education system.

He denied that the report — which will be distributed to business, industry, labor and government groups throughout the state — was "an economic justification" report.

Budget constraints forced Gov. George Deukmejian to increase fees for UC and CSU students this year and forced the Legislature to institute first-ever fees at community colleges.

But the improved economy has allowed Deukmejian to promise more money will be available in the 1984-85 budget for colleges and universities. Education leaders predict the allocation will be the most generous in more than a decade.

Participants in the round table were Gardner, Hayward, Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds, of the California State University system; University of San Diego President Author Hughes, representing the association of Independent Colleges and Universities; Patrick Callan, director of the California Postsecondary Education Commission, and Bill Honig, state Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The 19 California State University campuses have 315,000 students; the 9-campus University of California system, 140,000; and the 106 community colleges, 1.2 million.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAR 1 1984

Burl Stiff

Continued from Page D-1

And she had just two words of advice for fans who'll attend the regatta April 7: "Watch Navy!"

Lee Radziwill flew back to the sleets of New York Tuesday after three days of tennis lessons and sun worship in La Jolla.

The noted interior designer stayed in her favorite room (905) at La Valencia — a hotel she likes as much as Claridge's in London — and played at La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club. She lunched there Sunday with Alice Dutton and Dorene Whitney, then chose the Gustaf Anders restaurant in Pacific Beach for a quiet dinner. (Caviar and blini, sole touched with tarragon, white-chocolate ice cream, a glass of champagne, lots of Perrier water.) After dinner she popped in for another Perrier at Alice and Dick Cramer's oceanfront house.

Lee — who is witty, candid, and blessed with the world's most seductive voice — wore a little black dress by Geoffrey Beene, sparsely flowered, covered to the chin in front, slashed to the waist in back.

Next night she joined publisher Helen Copley for dinner (sole again) and some lively conversation at La Valencia's Whaling Bar. Talk ranged from world affairs and books ("Stones for Ibarra") to clothes, smoking, mutual friends, and the perils of freeway navigation. (Driving a Hertz car back from an antique shop in Newport Beach, Lee missed the La Jolla off-ramp and stopped just short of Tijuana.)

In the Kennedy/Camelot years, when she was the wife of Prince Stanislaus Radziwill, the press rarely missed a chance to call her Princess Lee.

Does she ever use that title nowadays? "I," she bristled, "never did."

Marge and USD President Author Hughes were hosts the other night to friends of the university at a black-tie dinner celebrating the dedication of the $2.4 million Douglas Manchester Executive Conference Center.

The Manchesters, Betsy and Doug, shared the spotlight with other donors like Linda and Frank Alessio, Dee and Dr. Wilson Baugh, Pat and Dan Derbes (representing the Signal Companies), Lu and Ray Harmon, and Elaine and Walter Steidle (they represented the May Department Stores).

Others at the dinner on the second floor of the new building — it's designed in the style of the Spanish Renaissance — included Jean and Sherman Manchester (Doug's parents), Allan Cunningham (Betsy's father), Bishop Leo Maher, Monsignor I.B. Eagen, Monsignor William Elliott, Jean and Ernest Hahn, Mary and Hal Sadler, Doris and Peter Hughes, Ann and Kenneth Poovey, Celeste and Gene Trepte, Ann and Ray Silliman, Nancy and Dr. Arthur Johnson, and Therese and William Whitcomb. (Therese Whitcomb is the USD curator who coordinates the design of campus buildings.)

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

MAR 5 1984

A panel discussion on "Immigration in the '80s: Legal and Social Issues" has been scheduled by the San Diego Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union at 4:30 p.m. March 10 in More Hall at the USD School of Law.

Moderator is to be Dr. Leo R. Chavez, a post-doctoral fellow at the Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies at UCSD. Atty. Rosemary Eparza is to discuss recent Supreme Court decisions affecting alien rights. Atty. George Schultz is to address problems of health care for undocumented immigrants based on his experience in indigent medical care in the case of Bay General Hospital v. County of San Diego.

Atty. Linda Wong is to cover constitutional restraints on Immigration and Naturalization Service detention and Atty. Robert Gustafson his experience on a panel of attorneys for defense of indigents in the federal court.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAR 2 1984

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcala Park): "The Indignant Artist," an exhibition of 45 prints by artists such as William Hogarth, Thomas Nast, Kathe Kollwitz, Reginald Marsh, John Sloan and Gabor Peterdi, will show through March 27. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and until 7 p.m. Wednesday.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAR 2 1984

THE ACADEMY OF STRINGS (Camino Theater, University of San Diego): A chamber ensemble of students in the musical education program directed by Isaac Malkin will present works by Vivaldi, Corelli, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven and Paganini at 2 p.m. Sunday.

MAR 5 - 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Higher education is big business for state

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — California's more than 225 colleges and universities are a $30 billion-a-year industry that accounts for 8 percent of the state's annual gross product, a study shows.

The economic impacts of higher education in the nation's most populous state were outlined in a 16-page publication released Friday by leaders of California's independent and public education institutions, who comprise the California Round Table on Educational Opportunity.

The $30 billion annual impact of the higher education institutions — universities, state colleges and junior colleges — was based on 1981-82 data compiled by the California Postsecondary Education Commission.

The figure represents 8 percent of the total gross state product of more than $360 billion.

Among the conclusions of the study, released at a Round Table news conference, were:

—Higher education institutions annually add $3.8 billion to the state's economy through their expenditures for utilities, equipment, supplies and other day-to-day purchases.

—Faculty and staff spend $4 billion, which circulates into the economy via payments for groceries, rentals, gasoline and other goods and services.

—California students, including those from out of state and other countries, pay millions of dollars in tuitions and fees, and spend millions more for supplies, books and recreation. The total expenditures amount to approximately $3.8 billion.

—California's colleges and universities add at least $17.3 billion to the economies of surrounding communities.

The report said California's prosperity in the 1980s will depend on higher skill levels, and estimated that more than 60 percent of the 1.7 million new jobs expected to be created between 1980 and 1985 will require some post-secondary education.

"We must give education full support to meet California's growing need for a technologically trained work force," Gerald Hayward, chancellor of California Community Colleges system, told reporters.

David Gardner, the president of the University of California system, said the study was "a self-inspection" that grew out of curiosity about the economic impact of the state's higher education system.

He denied that the report — which will be distributed to business, industry, labor and government groups throughout the state — was "an economic justification" report.

Budget constraints forced Gov. George Deukmejian to increase fees for UC and CSU students this year and forced the Legislature to institute first-ever fees at community colleges.

But the improved economy has allowed Deukmejian to promise more money will be available in the 1984-85 budget for colleges and universities. Education leaders predict the allocation will be the most generous in more than a decade.

Participants in the round table were Gardner, Hayward, Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds, of the California State University system; University of San Diego President Arthur Hughes, representing the association of independent colleges and universities; Patrick Callan, director of the California Postsecondary Education Commission; and Bill Honig, state superintendent of public instruction.

The 19 California State University campuses have 315,000 students, the nine University of California campuses have 140,000 students, and the 106 community colleges have 1.2 million students.

MAR 5 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Among those supporting Democrat Bob Simmons, the USD law professor, to unseat Rep. Bill Lowery, R-San Diego, are Paul Peterson, Lionel Van Deerlin, Mike Gotch, Don Weckstein, Paula Siegel, Harvey Shapiro, Paul Saltman, Hamilton Marston, Wadie Deddeh, Bob Fellmeth, Si Casady, Lucy Killea, Robert Livingston and Dick Roe.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT

MAR 5 1984

Walter Burke Kinnaird, a senior research attorney with the Fourth District Court of Appeal, has been elected president of the Law Alumni Assn. of the University of San Diego School of Law.

Other officers are Robert P. Coffin, vice president; Shelley A. Weinstein, vice president; Judith S. Foley, secretary; and Thomas E. Polakiewicz, treasurer.

MAR 6 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

T-A Editorial Society's fabric torn

Is there no end to the assault on the basic rights of the people of California? Can your life, liberty and pursuit of happiness be safe when the Legislature threatens to abolish the California Board of Fabric Care?

We are here to sound the clarion, to take the midnight ride to warn the weary citizenry that such a move is afoot. State Sen. Leroy Greene, a Democrat from Sacramento, has filed a bill that would do away with an agency that has since 1945 been dedicated to protecting consumers from the ravages of inadequate dry cleaning. And here we thought the Democrats were the party of the people.

In the glorious history of the august fabric board are such fine episodes as its attempt to protect consumers by assuring that they would be charged no less than a dollar for any item to be cleaned. It maintains the purity of the profession by allowing only 41 percent of those it tests to pass into the dry cleaning ranks, to serve the masses hankering for clean shirts. It further enforces the pristine nature of its flock by weeding out those not proficient in leather cleaning, hat blocking and fur restoration.

There is cause for concern. Only two states — California and Oklahoma — show enough concern for the well-being of their citizens to regulate dry cleaners. Our fair state is clearly one of the last bastions against the onslaught of the unkempt.

This attack against the Board of Fabric Care is not a new one. In 1967 the Little Hoover Commission, seeking ways to streamline the California government, recommended that the board be done away with. So, too, in 1971 did then Gov. Ronald Reagan. So, too, in 1979 did the state Department of Consumer Affairs.

The Center for Public Interest Law, an adjunct of the University of San Diego School of Law, has been doggedly pursuing the beleaguered board. One of the center's operatives, after observing the board at some length, had the audacity to suggest that the Board of Fabric Care is simply a useless and self-perpetuating body whose only real function is to limit competition in the cleaning business. The operative goes so far as to suggest the laughable, that because dry cleaners depend so greatly on repeat business, they need no regulation.

This person is obviously bent on the destruction of society as we know it today. There can be no world order without the California Board of Fabric Care.

The Center for Public Interest Law, acting upon the conclusions of its agent's report, last year sought a legislator to carry forward its conspiracy. But none would respond, not "traditional consumer-oriented liberals" or "traditional anti-regulation conservative Republicans," the center reported.

For a time, then, democracy remained safe in the hands of the California Legislature, another body whose wisdom has been proven again and again. Until Sen. Greene of Sacramento. He has been led down the primrose path by the fatuous arguments of those who would rend the fabric of our state's most basic institutions.

And what are those arguments? That the Board of Fabric Care has revoked but one license in the past decade? That it has initiated no disciplinary actions in recent years and intends to initiate none in the next year? That aggrieved customers may find redress through other means, like the small claims courts or the Better Business Bureaus? Can you find among these any compelling reason for the abolition of the Board of Fabric Care?

In a position paper on Greene's bill the Center for Public Interest Law reveals a hidden agenda. Abolishing the fabric care board, it says, will "facilitate future efforts at abolishing California's other unnecessary licensing boards."

Here is ample cause to take to the ramparts. The Board of Fabric Care is the Fort Sumter of this coming internecine struggle. It marks but the opening salvo.

And what is to follow? The state Board of Registration of Geologists and Geophysicists? The Board of Landscape Architects? The Bureau of Home Furnishings? The Board of Behavioral Science Examiners? After the Board of Fabric Care, can the Board of Certified Short-hand Reporters be far behind?

Californians, we implore you. Make your feelings known to your legislators. You must immediately heed the call, or anarchy will surely follow.

ANDREW F. KAY

'About four or five sales people left us, and I'm not worried. They saved us the trouble of letting them go'

— Andrew F. Kay

Kaypro cuts price of computer

By Donald Coleman
Tribune Financial Writer

The Kaypro Corp. has reduced the price of its Kaypro II microcomputer to $1,295, hoping to capture a broader market share, according to Andrew F. Kay, president and chairman.

The reduction is from $1,595 and is the second price cut since the product first came on the market in June 1983 at $1,795.

The Kaypro II was the company's first computer product in a line which now includes the Kaypro 4, the Robic and the top priced Kaypro 10 at $2,795. The company also is planning to market a Japanese-made computer by summer that will retail upward of $5,000.

"We hope to get into a price bracket closer to $1,000 (with the Kaypro II price drop)," Kay said.

Kay announced the cut at a forum held yesterday at the University of San Diego.

He also said a deal struck with the Mitsui Co. of Tokyo to market a lap-sized computer through Kaypro's dealer network will continue as planned, despite the departure over the weekend of the company's new marketing director.

Kay said Blair Newman, who had been with Kaypro for two months, made the arrangements with Mitsui. Kay said he has subsequently talked with officials of Mitsui and Bellevue-based Microsoft, which also is involved in the deal as a software maker, and "everything will go ahead as planned."

Newman's resignation was offered and Kay said he accepted it. "There was a problem of miscommunications," Kay said. "He did not understand me, and I did not understand him."

Kay said he has no plans to replace Newman, who worked under Kay's son, David, vice president for marketing and sales.

The executive said a published report that 20 former Kaypro employees have defected to the Seequa Computer Corp., based in Maryland, was inaccurate. He said the writer of the story did not verify the numbers with him.

"Actually about four or five sales people left us, and I'm not worried," Kay told the USD gathering. "We had earmarked them to leave because they were not meeting their quotas. They saved us the trouble of letting them go."

(David Gardner, Seequa president, told The Tribune that "over the past several months" about six Kaypro sales personnel left their positions to join Seequa "at about the same pay package" because they felt "the opportunity was greater.")

Kay said the price break on the Kaypro was made in hopes of increasing sales of the model, which at one time was the top seller. Although 50,000 Kaypro IIs have been sold since June 1983, Kay said the newer model Kaypro 4 at $1,995 retail currently outsells the II. The more expensive model, however, offers double density disc drives, among other features.

Any price drop, Kay said, would be absorbed by the higher priced units. At $1,295, Kay said, the company would need to sell 2,500 Kaypro IIs per month to break even on the model.

Kay was asked at the USD gathering about the disadvantages and advantages of going public with a stock offering, which the company did last August at $10 per share.

He said the Kay family controls 86 percent of outstanding shares, with 63 percent held by Kay. The Kay family, he said, dislikes public disclosures of their financial and personal information.

As to advantages of going public: "We're more liquid. The banks now are eager to loan us money. At least one or two banks came in to us each week to offer us loans of money."

The discounted market price of shares ($8 currently versus the $10 offering price in August) is not causing Kaypro financial problems, Kay said.

"Kaypro does not have a problem (because of price drop)," Kay said. "But the people who bought it do."

BIO Thursday, March 8, 1984 LA JOLLA LIGHT

Social Sketches

Author Hughes expresses thanks to Doug and Betsy Manchester with presentation of Torrey Pines traditional basket.

Manchester center dedicated

La Jollans Doug and Betsy Manchester were the center of festivities on the University of San Diego campus recently when formal ceremonies dedicated the Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center.

The afternoon event was followed by a black tie dinner in the center, and preceded an address by Dr. Ruben F. Mettler, chairman and chief executive officer of TRW, Inc.

Highlights of the dedication included ribbon-cutting by Manchester's youngest daughter, Anne-Marie, who attended with her sisters, Sally, Molly and Katy. Others who were present included Frank and Linda Alessio and John and Judy Comito.

Carlsbad, CA
(San Diego Co.)
La Costan
(W. 5,000)

MAR 8 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Group elects first board

An estimated 20,000 members of the Utility Consumers' Action Network (UCAN) cast their votes for the watchdog group's first permanent board of directors.

The votes, representing about half of the group's membership, are being counted by the county Registrar of Voters. The results of the voting for the nine-person board will be made public Friday.

Three members will represent residents of each of three geographical areas of the county: north, central and south. The new board will begin with about $300,000, will hire a permanent staff and will find a headquarters for the group.

UCAN now has no permanent employees and is temporarily housed at the University of San Diego's Center for Public Interest Law.

A total of 26 candidates sought the nine seats on the board including five from the North County: M.A. "Mike" Hesse, a Rancho Bernardo retiree; Robert M. Spanjian, a Rancho Santa Fe sportswear manufacturer; Mary Melido, a Carlsbad real estate agent; Jerry Butkiewicz, a Vista community services representative; and Tania Bowman, a paralegal with the Legal Aid Society.

All the North County candidates were nominated by the temporary board since none received the 500 nominating signatures required under the organization rules.

The new board is expected to convene a meeting soon after the election results are announced.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Union
(D. 217,324)
(S. 339,788)

MAR 11 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

USD ORCHESTRA — The University of San Diego Orchestra, conducted by Henry Kolar, will perform works by Bach, Mendelssohn, Handel and others, with organist Janice Feher, at 3:30 p.m. next Sunday in the Blessed Sacrament Church, 4540 El Cerrito Drive.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAR 9 1984

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park): "The Indignant Artist," an exhibition of 45 prints by artists such as William Hogarth, Thomas Nast, Käthe Kollwitz, Reginald Marsh, John Sloan and Gabeo Peterdi, will show through March 27. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and until 7 p.m. Wednesday.

DAILY TRANSCRIPT
MAR 5 1984

Lester B. Snyder, director of the Graduate Tax Program at the University of San Diego School of Law, will discuss "Proposed changes in the corporate tax structure" at a noon meeting Tuesday of the Taxation Law Section of the local Bar. The meeting is to be in the University Club.

Snyder is editor of the Journal of Real Estate Taxation, an authority in the field of tax law and co-chairman of a corporate tax conference to be held in April in San Diego.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Union
(D. 217,324)
(S. 339,788)

MAR 10 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Four personal growth seminars will be held at the University of San Diego at 7:30 p.m. Monday evenings beginning this week through April 2 in the Serra Hall faculty lounge.

The program is sponsored by the USD Alumnae of the Sacred Heart and is offered free. Speakers will include the Rev. Michael Gallagher, pastor of the Immaculate; Sister Agnes Murphy, director of adult education at Our Lady of Grace Church; the Rev. Ronald Pachence, chairman of USD's Department of Religious Studies; and Sister Betsy Walsh, USD professor of English. For reservations call 293-4808.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(D. 127,454)

MAR 10 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Utility users' lobbying group elects 9 to board of directors

More than 22,000 members of the new Utility Consumer Action Network voted in the consumer group's first election and chose nine directors to serve on a permanent board, said UCAN staff member Jeanne Lott.

The organizer of the watchdog group — Robert Fellmeth, director of the University of San Diego Law School's Center for Public Interest Law — was one of those elected when mailed ballots were counted yesterday.

Also elected were Robert Span-jian, Tania Bowman, Mike Hesse, Susan Wood, James Jacobson, Jay Powell, Fred Nagel and Mary Conn.

The group raised $255,000, mostly from $4 annual dues, in 1983 and says it will hire a staff of rate and managerial experts to speak for customers of San Diego Gas & Electric Co. on rate increases and other regulatory issues.

The group enclosed a membership solicitation in SDG&E billings in August and December. Lott said 50,166 ballots were mailed to members and 45 percent, or 22,668, were cast.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAR 11 1984

USD ORCHESTRA — The University of San Diego Orchestra, conducted by Henry Kolar, will perform works by Bach, Mendelssohn, Handel and others, with organist Janice Feher, at 3:30 p.m. next Sunday in the Blessed Sacrament Church, 4540 El Cerrito Drive.

SAN DIEGO
CLIPPING SERVICE

S.D. BUSINESS
JOURNAL

MAR 12 1984

Charles K. Fletcher, Jr. has accepted the chairmanship of the University of San Diego Corporate Associates program.

San Bernardino, CA
(San Bernardino Co.)
The Sun
(D. 81,870)
(S. 88,143)

MAR 10 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Mary inspires devotion, debate

By STEVE COOPER

Sun Staff Writer

There may be a revival coming among American Roman Catholics.

No, not the kind where preachers in three-piece suits arrive in their Winnebagos for a week of nightly meetings.

This is a revival of the Virgin Mary as a unique mediatrix within the faith.

There actually appear to be two opposing trains of thought developing among the numerous new views of Mary — a liberal Mariology and a fundamentalist Mariology.

The parting of the ways has come from what many on both sides call a misunderstanding of the meaning of the Second Vatican Council in 1965.

Ronald Pachence, chairman of the Department of Religious Studies at the University of San Diego, said changes brought into the church by the Vatican council were not meant to demote Mary.

"A lot of spiritual energy that had been going into the devotion of Mary was suddenly going into the liturgy of the mass. But she is a powerful symbol of the place of women in God's plan. Because of this there is a devotional renaissance coming for her," he said.

For Ted Parker, there is no need for a revival. As president of the Diocese of San Bernardino division of the Blue Army, his regard for Mary was secured 18 years ago when he began studying the message of Our Lady of Fatima, which warns of a rising tide of communism bent on enslaving the church and the free world.

The Blue Army is a worldwide organization of between 22 and 25 million people promoting adherence to the message of Fatima. There are 1800 members in the San Bernardino diocese.

This is the story of Fatima, as described in the book, "The Sun Danced at Fatima," by the Reverend Joseph Pelletier.

On May 13, 1917, three peasant children in the small village of Fatima, Portugal, were tending their sheep when they saw what appeared to be a lady, unlike anyone they had ever seen.

She was youthful and appeared to be dressed in white light. She glowed like the sun. Her face was lovely, yet serious and grave.

The children asked her where she was from.

(Please see Mary, B-9)

Mary

(Continued from B-7)

"I am from heaven," she said.

On the same day of the month for the next six months, she appeared. As the story spread, the crowds grew.

On October 13, 1917, the miraculous appearances reached a climax.

A crowd of 70,000, including newspaper reporters, skeptics, the faithful and the curious, gathered to see the promised supernatural appearance.

At noon, she appeared. Again, a blaze of light. After speaking with the children, she began ascending toward heaven again. But stopped.

She turned her hand upward and a beam of light shot toward the sun. There was a dazzling display of color and, in the sky with her, there appeared Saint Joseph and the Baby Jesus.

After a short time, they disappeared and the sun began to dance. Illogically, it was leaping and spinning across the sky.

With the children, she left a message for the world. It continues to be carried by Sister Lucia, who still lives in Portugal.

The essence of the message was a warning about Russia and a call to devotion.

Sister Lucia quoted Mary as saying, "If my requests are granted, Russia will be converted and there will be peace. If my requests are not granted, Russia will spread its errors throughout the world, raising up wars and persecutions against the Church. Mary will be martyred, the Holy Father will have much to suffer — several nations will be annihilated."

To avert this disaster, the faithful must:

— Offer daily sacrifices in communion, prayer and devotion to the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

— Say part of the rosary five times daily while meditating on the mysteries of the life of Christ.

— Wear the scapular (special pieces of cloth) of Mt. Carmel as an act of devotion.

— Pray for the conversion of Russia, particularly during masses the first Saturday of each month.

Pope John Paul II went to Fatima on May 13, 1982, the anniversary of the first appearance and one year to the day after he was shot by a would-be assassin.

There the Pope said the message of Fatima "is still more relevant than it was 65 years ago. It is still more urgent."

The Pope has requested Catholic bishops throughout the world to join him in 1984 in praying for peace and the conversion of Russia in accordance with the message at Fatima.

Ted Parker, of San Bernardino, responded to the message of Fatima because he saw no other way to peace.

"I had tried to find a way through politics, but it just gets worse and worse and worse if you go that direction. Then I began studying Fatima and became convinced it was true," he said.

In the past three years, Parker said there has been a significant increase of interest in the message.

"We used to see 15 or 20 at our masses the first Saturday of the month. Now it's 125 to 150. The people are coming back to their devotion," he said.

By devotion, Catholics interviewed this week repeatedly wanted to make it clear they do not mean worship.

"I'm sure you have a picture of your mother on your piano or wherever," said the Reverend Alfred Geimer of San Bernardino. "That isn't to worship her. But to honor her, of course. She's your mother. She has a special place in your life. It is the same with Mary."

In the honored place of mother to Jesus, Catholics believe she has access to Jesus in a way no other individual could possibly have. Not to honor the mother is to insult the son.

"Much of the bigotry is disappearing and we are all — Catholics and Protestants — finding we have much more in common than we thought. Even in this country, we are learning that in our early years, Mary was held in high regard. The first president, Washington, wrote many beautiful and eloquent prayers to Mary," said Geimer.

The priest has been a student of the Fatima appearances for years. Like countless others he finds the evidence of the miraculous overwhelming in the apparitions of Fatima, as well as Lourdes (in France) and Guadalupe (in Mexico).

He believes Portugal is a free, predominantly Catholic nation today because of its devotion to the Virgin after 1917.

"If you examine what was happening at that time, you'll see it could have easily become a Marxist country. But it was protected... and it was the only European country left pretty much unscathed by World War II," he said.

Like other priests, Geimer believes there has been a move away from Mary by U.S. Catholics in recent years. But he believes the pendulum may be swinging back toward the Blessed Virgin once again.

College professor Pachence said Mary's place may shift somewhat with the times, but her place of importance in Catholic theology is secure.

Only twice has a pope spoken with the claim of infallibility and both instances involved Mary.

"With the two-pronged pronouncement of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin and her Immaculate Conception, her place was secured in Catholic doctrine. We may differ in our interpretation of those statements, but the doctrines themselves will stand," Pachence said.

The professor called continuing interest in messages such as Fatima and concerns with devotion to Mary part of "the Catholic brand of fundamentalism."

There does seem to be an interesting parallel between the "end of the world" scenarios attributed to these apparitions and those scenarios drawn from Bible prophecies by evangelists like Hal Lindsey.

"You have fundamentalists in Protestant circles who are apocalyptic and looking for the end of the world. The same thing here. The most extreme groups generally believe they have some form of special revelation. So, if you don't belong to the group they belong to, you don't belong," he said.

While he did not lump everyone who believes in the Fatima message in this exclusivist group, Pachence would include such groups as the followers Veronica Lueken, the seer of Bayside, N.Y., and those connected with St. Joseph's Hill of Hope in east San Bernardino County.

Lueken is a woman in her 50s who claims to have been visited by the Virgin Mary since 1970. Speaking through Lueken, the heavenly visitor tells of the coming end of the world in nuclear holocaust and earthquakes.

Lueken's followers have been touring cities in Southern California off and on for the past few months. They play tape recordings of Mary's messages through Lueken and show slides of the meetings in Bayside, N.Y.

The bishop of the diocese where Bayside is located dismisses Lueken as a seer with "no credibility."

Likewise, the Hill of Hope messages have been condemned by the bishops of San Bernardino and Los Angeles.

At the Hill of Hope development near Chino, a former Placentia housewife, Frances Klug, claims the saints speak through her.

Since the early 1970s, Klug's followers have been trying to gain approval for their plan to build a huge religious-medical complex. But little has been accomplished over the years.

There are countless other unproven miracles and divine messages, often similar in content to the Fatima message. In recent years in the U.S. Southwest, reports have been made of several statues crying and the face of Jesus appearing in such unlikely places as on a garage door and on a tortilla shell.

Several Catholics interviewed for this story were angered and embarrassed when the subject of bogus apparitions was raised.

"Don't go into what those kooks are doing. Isn't there something else to talk about?" one priest asked.

But one woman who believes in the Bayside doom and gloom messages dismissed the official dismissal of Lueken.

"Those priests who condemn us don't even come to hear. To see the evidence. It is because they are blinded by the devil himself. And there will be a terrible price for that," the woman said.

MAR 14 1984

Terry Whitcomb in the board room of the Manchester Conference Center at USD.

She parlayed illness into career

USD curator Terry Whitcomb found her calling as a bedridden 7-year-old recovering from polio

By Jan Jennings
Tribune Staff Writer

When she was 7 years old, USD's versatile Terry Whitcomb — architectural designer, historian, art professor, painter, lecturer, curator — suffered a setback: polio.

She was bedridden, in pain. She couldn't go to school.

What she could do was create with her hands, and listen to her mother, Grace Truitt, read to her about art and history.

By the end of two years of slow recuperation, Whitcomb had designed the interior of a huge bedside dollhouse — each room in a different period of historical design.

Today, as curator of USD, Whitcomb's architectural and interior design challenges — nourished so early in life — are carried many steps further. Her style not only makes an impact at USD but goes beyond the university to public lecture halls and to the redesign and restoration of historic churches, and more.

Whitcomb is now working on finishing touches for USD's Helen K. and James S. Copley Library, scheduled for dedication April 8. And on the drawing board are interior designs of the university's Olin Hall, currently under construction, and renovation of Harmon Hall, both scheduled for dedications in the fall.

Whitcomb recently completed interior design in 16th century Spanish Renaissance style of the newly opened Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center at USD. The center is expected to become a community gathering place, available for conferences, seminars, public lectures and continuing education classes.

This is just the beginning of cohesive design, redesign and renovation on the campus.

The long-term plan of the university,

"My work is my enjoyment. I'm restless when I'm not working."

ty, according to its president, Dr. Arthur E. Hughes, is both to build and renovate in Spanish Renaissance motifs all university structures according to orderly guidelines.

Spanish Renaissance is the architectural hallmark of the campus.

Already a showplace, the clean, off-white buildings of the campus complex appear as an historic citadel, perhaps a labyrinth of castles, nestled atop the hills overlooking Mission Bay and Mission Valley.

In the midst of all this is Whitcomb, who clearly loves her role as curator, which includes coordinating the interior design of the buildings. And she's a perfectionist when it comes to detail.

For example, at first, it may seem she is joking when she says she has a deadline to meet to order wastebaskets for the under-construction Olin Hall.

Or that she has to rush off to measure a space for plants that must be exactly the right size.

Or that she made a special trip to select color-coordinated candles for the board of trustees room.

But she's not joking.

"If I don't pick out and order wastebaskets, who knows what kind of chrome or plastic monstrosity we'll end up with," said Whitcomb. "I expect my students to be meticulous to detail. Yes, every quote needs a footnote. I expect the same of myself."

Another example? The list of contributors to Manchester Center at the entrance of the building.

"We couldn't have a slick bronze plaque from a trophy shop," said Whitcomb.

Instead, the tribute is a beautifully hand-lettered scroll in keeping, naturally, with period history of the building.

Please see WHITCOMB C-3

★Whitcomb

Continued From Page C-5

In addition to these projects for the university, Whitcomb, having received two grants this year, has other artistic irons in the fire:

● A grant from the state to oversee historical exterior restoration of Mission San Luis Rey, an architectural structure designed by Irving Gill.

● A grant from the county to restore the chapel interior at Rancho Guahome, a Victorian structure east of Oceanside.

Between these activities, Whitcomb teaches USD courses in exhibition design and museum internship as well as art history.

A particular source of pride to her thus far is the new Manchester Center's Board of Trustees room — an example of the elegance she hopes to thread throughout the campus.

Opening the door to the spacious room, Whitcomb proudly says: "Welcome to my dollhouse" — with almost blushing embarrassment, as she in no way wishes to diminish the importance of the room and of her strongly felt duties and commitment to historical design.

"The design for this room goes back to 1937," said Whitcomb, "when I was so involved designing miniature rooms."

"With the conference room, I wanted to make a definitive period statement of 16th century Spanish Renaissance, and at the same time, assure a functional, comfortable and pleasing setting for the trustees."

A key to cohesiveness here is a 19th century copy of a 16th century petit point tapestry of a nativity scene which sets the color scheme for the room — Renaissance blue and flax.

Again, Whitcomb's attention to detail prevails:

● "Renaissance blue is the color an original royal blue of 200 years ago would have faded to today," said Whitcomb. "The flax color is what the off white would have faded to today."

● Invitations to the dedication of the center were in flax and Renaissance blue.

● The board room's 20-by-30-foot rug — which she designed in Hispanic-Moorish style — carefully complements tapestry colorings.

● Within the rug, each color and each image has meaning relative to the Catholic-oriented university. For example, oak represents strength; blue is piety; grapes, the eucharist.

Whitcomb designed the rug from motifs studied at the Victoria and Albert Museum in London and at the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

● The conference room's wood-burning fireplace is meticulously adorned with designs in relief characteristic of Spanish Renaissance.

"It's not more expensive to design these rooms this way," Whitcomb stressed. "It just takes more attention — more time and effort."

"Because of the university's historical theme to begin with, these projects have been easier to do. With many of the buildings, it will be a sprucing up, fluffing them back to the original historical design."

Whitcomb's own history with the university goes back to 1952 when she transferred there from Rosemont College in Pennsylvania. In 1953, she became the first graduate of the College for Women.

She went on to study painting in New York and later returned to San Diego for a master's degree from SDSU. She has been coordinator of the art program at USD since 1970 and is the originator and director of Founders' Gallery, the exhibition gallery of the university.

Whitcomb has raised six children from her first marriage, ranging in age from 18 to 30.

Hope Hanfin, 30, is a New York costume designer. Paul, 28, is with the Department of Defense in the Middle East. Hilary, 26, is a clinical psychologist in Los Angeles. Jim, 25, is a Los Angeles interior designer. Heather, 20, is a student at Occidental in Los Angeles, and Holly, 18, is a student at UC-Santa Barbara.

Whitcomb has been married to William Whitcomb for the last 12 years. They live in San Diego, near the Old Mission, another structure for which Whitcomb coordinated restoration in 1970.

"My work is my enjoyment," said Whitcomb. "I'm restless when I'm not working."

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAR 14 1984

Attempt to Improve Image

Legal Profession Gets an Earful at Meeting on Results of Surveys

"The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers."

Henry IV, Part IV
Shakespeare

By MARJORIE MILLER, Times Staff Writer

From the Old Testament to Carl Sandburg, literature has shown that lawyers have not fared well in the public eye. In Leviticus, it is suggested that all lawyers be tossed on the dung heap, and Sandburg asks why The Hearse Horse snickers when carting away lawyers.

But enough of these centuries of bad-mouthing and bad press, says a group of San Diego attorneys. The time has come to improve the image of lawyers — "the public's attitude," they call it.

And, they add, it's time to improve the public's access to legal services.

To that end, the San Diego County Bar Association and the University of San Diego School of Law took a random telephone survey last year of 376 San Diego residents and a random mail survey of 357 members of the Bar Association to find out exactly how people feel about lawyers, and how lawyers think people feel about them. (Questionnaires were sent to 550 lawyers, 65% of whom responded.)

Frustrations, Suggestions

Armed with the results, they held a five-hour seminar for invited guests Saturday to talk to and, moreover, listen to people who have used lawyers. What they heard was much frustration and a number of suggestions. And they offered some ideas of their own for getting better service from a lawyer.

Lawyers earned mixed ratings in the survey, which found that the public's attitude toward lawyers is not as bad in general as lawyers think.

While 75% of the lawyers polled believed the public thinks badly of them, only 42% of non-lawyers said they believed the public dislikes lawyers.

But when it came to specific issues, the public was more negative. Forty-seven percent said the legal system favors the rich and that lawyers charge more for their services than they are worth.

Fifty percent said lawyers are out for money and personal gain, and 59% said lawyers use language that is hard to understand.

At the same time, however, 66% said lawyers are competent, and 65% said lawyers are helpful and protect the interests of those they serve.

Sixty-six percent of those polled said they had used a lawyer once or not at all; 80% said they had used a lawyer twice or less.

Lack of Communication

A majority of lawyers and non-lawyers alike agreed that people who do not seek a lawyer when they need one do not know how to find one, or believe they cannot afford legal fees. Many also said it is because people are afraid a lawyer will get them into a lawsuit, or do not know how a lawyer can help them.

Fifty-one percent of the public believes people don't go to lawyers because they have heard of bad experiences, while only you don't have it in the beginning, you may never have it."

Patricia Roach, a high school guidance counselor, said that sounds good but it is difficult to get to know the lawyer on first meeting.

There should be a Better Business Bureau for lawyers, Roach said, where consumer complaints are filed like they are against shoe stores and car lots.

"There is no place I can call to find out how rotten a lawyer is before I get involved. They speak so well, are such gentlemen, dress so well..." Roach said.

She said she went to an attorney for what should have been a simple legal problem and was quoted a price. Three and a half years later the case was settled, and the lawyer charged her five times his originally stated fee, she said.

She was so overwhelmed by the experience that she is afraid to have a will drawn up.

Attorney's fees was a big issue for people at the seminar. According to the survey taken last year, 57 percent of the attorneys polled planned to charge more than $90 an hour in 1983-84.

That level is out of reach for many women, handicapped and elderly, said Sheila Kietzky McCoy, chairwoman of the Community Service Center for the Disabled. Cheryl Robinson of the downtown Women's Center asked who can afford to switch once a person has invested two to three months and several thousand dollars on an attorney.

Plus, they asked, how do you know the attorney is really spending the time on your case for which he or she bills you? It isn't like a doctor, who lists each test, or an auto mechanic who lists each spare part, they said.

Grauer suggested that clients secure a fee contract from an attorney stating just that — the hourly rate and the cost of other expenses. He said a client can let an attorney know how much he or she can afford to spend, and the attorney can let the client know what kind of service is available for the price.

The problem for the attorney, added Sheldon Krantz, dean of the law school, is that not all clients want the same level of service.

To some, the fee is not so important as exhausting every possible avenue toward victory. To others, while they do want good service, money is important.

Grauer said the county Bar Association offers arbitration in fee disputes. But, he said, if a client feels an attorney is stealing money or abusing a trust, the first thing to do is to stop the abuse. Let the attorney go, and then take action through the district attorney, he said.

Some complained that attorneys do not return their telephone calls, and Grauer said the Bar Association has a client relations committee that will intervene to get information for the client.

Grauer said the Bar Association has a free lawyer referral service which gives the public a half-hour consultation with an attorney to help people find out if they need an attorney and to locate one.

But the participants did not seem to feel that was enough. They wanted pamphlets on clients' rights, similar to medical pamphlets on patients' rights, to tell them what they could expect from a lawyer.

As for increasing access to lawyers for people with little or no money, suggestions included: tax breaks for lawyers who donate time; young lawyers donating time in exchange for financial aid in college; and store-front legal clinics in neighborhoods with volunteer attorneys.

The non-lawyers opposed a mandatory program that would require lawyers to volunteer a portion of their time. They said no other professional is required to volunteer time.

But Grauer disagreed, saying the law is different from other professions.

"Unlike other groups, attorneys become officers of the court and of justice, and all people are entitled to equal justice. But if they have no money... the system breaks down," he said.

At the end of the seminar, both lawyers and public members said it had been a productive exchange of ideas, although it was not clear that the image of lawyers had improved dramatically.

"I feel they have a lot to learn," said Jovishoff.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(D. 127,454)

MAR 14 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Nancy Scott Anderson
2955
1688
TRIBUNE SOCIETY EDITOR

SLIM, SMALL AND BLOND, Sally Thornton's well-chiseled beauty is relieved from perfection by the sense of irony that plays around her mouth. Though she's socially adept, stunningly dressed and impeccably groomed, the most obvious characteristic of Sally is her lively intelligence. She's also a hard nut of a businesswoman who scouts prospective recipients of money from the Thornton Foundation with dogged determination informed by intuition.

"As you move through life," she says, "you develop savvy for people's ability to operate effectively. You learn where to place your trust." It is imperative, she says, that she "feels good" about projects. "If it feels good to me, I'll look into it, and start a relatively exhaustive amount of investigative work."

What recently felt good to Sally Thornton was the San Diego Opera's plan for producing "Carmen." Sally and her husband John underwrote the production through their charitable foundation. John McBride Thornton, a Harvard business school graduate, is chairman and CEO of Wavetek, a 20-year-old high-tech San Diego business which was reported to have earned $4.7 million net income last year from $84 million sales.

He's also involved in the privately held Software Products International company which creates and sells software for personal computers. The Thornton Foundation, John Thornton says, has nothing to do with his business: "Sally is the administrator. She makes all the decisions. I really have nothing to do with it."

Sally's decision to fund "Carmen" was made because the opera "is a favorite of so many people. It sounded like a lot of fun." It also became a lot of work. One thing led to another and grew into a full-scale Thornton production which included chairing and underwriting a portion of the Opera Association's pre-performance dinner and throwing a follow-up black-tie supper dance two days later. It was a grand series of parties.

READER

MAR 15 1984

Organ Concert: Handel's Concerto No. 4 in F Major for Organ and Orchestra will be the featured work performed by the USD Orchestra with organist Janice Fehrer, Sunday, March 18, 3:30 p.m., Blessed Sacrament Church, 4530 El Cerrito Drive at El Cajon Boulevard, East San Diego. Free. 582-5722.

DAILY CALIFORNIAN

MAR 16 1984

USD Orchestra — Henry Kolar will conduct the 22-piece University of San Diego Orchestra in a program of works by Bach, Handel and Geminiani at 3:30 p.m. Sunday at the Blessed Sacrament Church, 4530 El Cerrito Drive, El Cajon. For details, call 291-6480, Ext. 4427.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

MAR 16 1984

FOUNDERS GALLERY (University of San Diego, Alcalá Park): "The Indignant Artist," an exhibition of 45 prints by artists such as William Hogarth, Thomas Nast, Kathie Kollwitz, Reginald Marsh, John Sloan and Gabor Peterdi, will show through March 27. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and until 7 p.m. Wednesday.

MAR 14 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Meese 'oversight' bared; new questioning slated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Edwin Meese, President Reagan's choice for attorney general, has admitted that he failed to include a personal interest-free loan of $15,000 on his government financial disclosure form, the White House said today.

A White House spokesman quoted Meese as saying in a letter that he "sincerely regretted the oversight" and that he would amend the form required of top officials.

In the letter, to Senate Judiciary Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Meese also agreed to participate in an unusual second round of questioning by the committee that is weighing his nomination as attorney general.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, who earlier had predicted Meese would be easily confirmed, now says the nomination

"could be in trouble."

Meese, currently the White House counselor, was asked to make a return appearance after Democrats yesterday demanded another chance to question him on 1980 Carter campaign memos that have been found in Meese's files and on some financial matters.

Recalling Meese for more questioning will delay the Judiciary Committee's vote on Meese's nomination to the nation's top law enforcement spot. A vote had been scheduled for tomorrow.

The White House spokesman said Meese admitted that his wife, Ursula, received the $15,000 interest-free loan in December 1980 from Edwin Thomas, a close friend who later served as Meese's aide in the White House.

Please see MESE, A-8

URSULA MESE
Figures in $15,000 interest-free loan agreement

★Meese

Continued From Page 1

Thomas, a former San Diegan, was associated with Edwin Meese at the Center for Criminal Justice at the University of San Diego from 1977 to 1980. Thomas now is a General Services Administration official in San Francisco.

The Meese letter to Thurmond said the loan was for Mrs. Meese to buy stock in Biotech for their children. The stock was sold in 1983 at a loss of $3,000 and the loan was repaid in full, Meese said.

Meese is expected to fly back to Washington from Florida and appear before the committee, perhaps tomorrow. "Meese has said that he will come," Thurmond spokesman Mark Goodin said after the chairman telephoned Meese in Florida.

Thomas, who described himself as a friend of Meese since 1967, when the two joined Reagan's administration in California, said, "I lent him money several times." The Washington Post reported.

The most recent loan was in December 1980, just before Reagan took office. Thomas said at first he gave the money to the Meese "family" but later said, "I didn't loan it to Ed. I gave it to Ursula." He said he believes the loan was repaid about two years ago, the Post reported.

The loan was not disclosed in Meese's statement to the Office of Government Ethics, although the law requires senior government officials to disclose all outstanding loans of more than $10,000, including loans to members of their families.

The controversy over Meese's nomination took a new twist last week with the disclosure that he was sent more than a dozen memos during the 1980 Reagan campaign containing inside information on President Carter's re-election strategy.

President Reagan, in an interview released yesterday, blasted committee Democrats and reaffirmed his support for Meese. "I trust him more than some of the senators that have been raising these issues," he said.

LA COSTAN

MAR 15 1984

Vatican painting collection at USD

A major donation of 91 Vatican paintings to the University of San Diego will touch both San Diegans and the rest of the country in a variety of ways.

"A Trip Through The Vatican" is a collection of watercolors and sepia drawings completed by Vernon Howe Bailey during a 1921-22 stay at the Vatican. He was the first artist ever to receive papal permission to paint the private quarters of the pontiff. After Bailey completed the series, though, it acquired a history of mystery and intrigue. Individuals who sought to profit from the paintings met sudden death. After repeated difficulties in promoting them, the paintings were finally permanently stored... until now.

The collection was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Edwards of Lomas Santa Fe, who acquired the paintings more than twenty years ago from one of Howe's original underwriters.

The collection will first reach the public through a series of USD-sponsored "Invisible University" courses. Georgie Stillman, a nationally recognized appraiser, became an expert on Bailey's career while assessing the collection. She will present a lecture and slide show about the artist and collection in neighborhoods throughout the country

MAR 15 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Commentary

An end to be desired

By ROD RIGGS

SAN DIEGO DAILY TRANSCRIPT Managing Editor

In this over-regulated state, there are specialty boards and commissions, some with licensing powers, which probably are totally unknown except to those who come within their regulatory authority.

One such, perhaps, is the State Board of Fabric Care, created in 1945 to license and regulate those who operate businesses involved in cleaning, dyeing and pressing clothing.

There were attempts to abolish the board, in 1967, 1968, 1971 and 1979. Now there is another effort, initiated in the State Senate.

Aside from the ideological position that government ought not to regulate business except in the face of severe abuse of the public interest, there are other reasons the bill ought to be passed and the board abolished.

It appears that it has abused both ends of its responsibility. It has revoked only one license in the last 10 years, according to research at the USD Center for Public Interest Law, and although it has the authority, through a 1980 legal opinion, it has not required dry cleaners to post prices.

On the other hand, it has created such severe requirements to applicants for new licenses that the pass rate on the Board exams as low as 40%.

Better that the business be regulated by the free market system than by a state board. Consumers who now may pay prices kept artificially high by lack of competition would benefit by the entry into the business of additional practitioners.

The board has an $831,000 budget, yet does not perform any important function. Better to get rid of it and at the same time send a signal to other unnecessary state regulators that they are at peril.

That may be unrealistic, but it's certainly desirable.

MAR 15 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

ACCOMPLISHMENTS QUESTIONED

Critics seek to abolish state fabric care panel

By Ron Roach

Tribune Capitol Correspondent

SACRAMENTO — The state Board of Fabric Care, which licenses more than 15,000 dry cleaners, is under fire from critics, who contend it neither protects consumers nor improves the industry.

As one San Diego dry cleaner put it, "If the board can't clean up its act, let's get rid of it."

A bill to eliminate the board and state regulation of the industry, sponsored by the Center for Public Interest Law at the University of San Diego, was introduced last month by Sen. Leroy Greene, D-Sacramento.

The seven-member board operates with an $800,000 annual budget and has built up a $1.1 million surplus for the year ending June 30. The money comes from $200 license fees paid every other year, and lesser operator fees.

But there are questions about what all that outlay is accomplishing.

The generous funding notwithstanding, the board has revoked only one license in the past decade.

Those promoting the repeal legislation say it would have an important side benefit — discouraging the proliferation of such boards, with their mixed blessings.

Pending bills would set up new panels to deal with such occupations as interior designers, recreational therapists, travel counselors and literary agents.

But there are others who believe the fabric care board should be maintained, if it reforms itself.

... There are so many rules and regulations that nobody enforces, so we have a lot of good cleaners and a lot of bad cleaners

Geraldine Hurley, a Los Angeles-area educator and two-term public member of the board appointed by ex-Gov. Jerry Brown, says there is a need for government to regulate an industry that uses toxic substances as cleaning solvent, as well as police the growing business of home or office carpet and drapery cleaning using the same chemicals. However, she said the board could do more to regulate the industry and should be abolished unless it changes course.

Henry Gelbart, owner of Town and Country Cleaners and president of the San Diego County Dry Cleaners Association Inc., says, "I don't think they do a good job. There are so many rules and regulations that nobody enforces, so we have a lot of good cleaners and a lot of bad cleaners."

Gelbart, whose association has about 140 members, said, "I'm in favor of abolishing it unless there are stricter controls."

Walter Palmer, owner of the Fabulous Inn in Mission Valley and a two-term former board member, said the board should be maintained because it regulates the industry and provides a forum for consumers. Volatile cleaning solvents can be deadly and should be regulated, he said.

But Gene Erbin, field director for the USD center, said abolishing the board would send a signal to the myriad licensing boards and commissions that they could suffer the same fate if they didn't shape up.

Palmer, who was named to the board by then-Gov. Ronald Reagan, dismisses the USD center as "an intellectual hippie organization."

Erbin said earlier efforts to abolish the fabric care board failed because legislators saw no point in jumping into a debate involving thousands of politically sacrosanct small businesses.

Only California and Oklahoma have state regulatory agencies for dry cleaners, and other states do quite well without them, Erbin said, adding, "Competition will eliminate the incompetent dry cleaner."

With or without a board, the consumer would have recourse to small claims court, he said. "Sophisticated transactions are not involved. Visual inspection of clothing readily enables the consumer to detect poor work. Irreparable or serious injury is not involved. Dissatisfied consumers will take their business elsewhere."

Gelbart said he doubts the cost of cleaning a shirt would change if the board were abolished, but Erbin said deregulation would increase competition and reduce consumer prices.

Gelbart said there already is intense competition within the industry and it has nothing to do with license requirements imposed by the board.

Tom Cecil, legislative liaison for the state Department of Consumer Affairs, said the Deukmejian administration's chief concern is that some agency of government should be responsible for safety in the cleaning industry's use of toxic substances if the Greene bill eliminates the board.

BLADE TRIBUNE

MAR 16 1984

Law workshops set

SAN DIEGO — The University of San Diego School of Law in cooperation with Certified Public Accountants Steres, Alpert, and Carne will hold a series of four workshops in March and April in The Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center.

For information and reservations call 293-4585. The schedule of workshops is:

Fridays, March 23 and 30: "Accounting Concepts for Lawyers," a two-part workshop to familiarize lawyers with accounting practices and provide them with a basic knowledge of generally accepted accounting principles and auditing standards as they apply in specific circumstances.

Friday, April 6: "Overview of Personal Injury, Wrongful Death, and Other Earnings Loss Situations," to assist the lawyer in evaluating lost earnings situations, calculating the damages, presenting the damages in court and questioning/evaluating the testimony of other experts.

Friday, April 13: "Examination of Questioned Documents," including methods to detect forged initials on wills, incorrect dating, additions and alterations, forged holographic wills, cut-and-paste photocopies, and forged signatures.

SAN DIEGO UNION

MAR 18 1984

Uniformly popular

Lt. Robert O. Goodman, the U.S. Navy flier who was held captive in Syria as a POW, will be the honored guest here March 31 at the Military Ball. The Navy ROTC of San Diego State University and the University of San Diego will host the third annual ball at the Sheraton Harbor Island. Sponsored by the two universities, and the Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC programs of both, the event will begin with cocktails at 7 p.m., dinner at 8 p.m., followed by dancing to the Navy Band San Diego. Military dress or black tie is the requested attire. Other special guests will be Thomas B. Day.

Spindrift

SDSU president; Author Hughes, USD president; and Merrill J. Lessley, acting dean of SDSU's College of Professional Studies and Fine Arts. Donations for the ball are $25 per person or $40 per couple, with proceeds going to the ROTC programs and the military scholarship fund. To make reservations, call the Navy ROTC office at USD.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(D. 127,454)

MAR 2 9 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Olympic flame slated to warm 41 major cities

By Vicki Torres
Tribune Staff Writer

Runners will carry the Olympic torch through 41 of America's largest cities, including San Diego, and more than 1,000 smaller communities, organizers said yesterday in announcing a preliminary route for the 9,000-mile relay.

Detailed plans for the route will not be available for a few weeks, Richard Levin, an assistant press secretary for the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said in Los Angeles.

He said the initial route is a zigzag through 33 states, 41 of the nation's largest cities and more than 1,000 other communities.

The relay plan had drawn criticism from the Greeks, traditional keepers of the Olympic flame, because U.S. organizers asked runners, or their sponsors, for $3,000 per kilometer (0.62 of a mile).

The Greeks objected to what they termed commercialization of the relay, but withdrew their objections after a compromise was reached last week.

The committee has sold 4,000 kilometers, and the remaining 15,000 kilometers will be run by employees of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., sponsor of the relay.

Levin said the relay is expected to yield $12 million in donations, which will be returned to the communities through which the torch is carried. The money will be distributed to organizations sponsoring youth sports.

Said Joel Fishman, director of the relay: "The route was designed to go

Please see TORCH, B-3

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(D. 127,454)

MAR 2 7 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Senate panel rejects move to abolish state fabric board

By Ron Roach
Tribune Capitol Correspondent

SACRAMENTO — The 40-year-old state board that regulates the dry cleaning industry — a frequent target of both Republican and Democratic administrations — has dodged another effort to abolish it.

The Senate Business and Professions Committee yesterday rejected a bill, sponsored by the Center for Public Interest Law at the University of San Diego, that would put the board out of business. The bill died on a 2-2 vote of the nine-member panel.

Gov. Deukmejian's Department of Consumer Affairs joined the USD center and the Consumers Union to urge abolition of the seven-member Board of Fabric Care.

Sen. Leroy Greene, D-Sacramento, author of the bill, said the board has acted to revoke only one license in the past decade. "There are 48 states that survive without regulating dry cleaners," Greene said. "We haven't found people dying in the streets or clothes falling off their backs."

"There is no public protection here; there is industry protection here," Greene said of the board that licenses 2,692 shops, 7,060 operators, 3,053 plants and six schools.

The board was defended by Sen. William Craven, R-Oceanside, who said the fact that only one license has been revoked in some 10 years "speaks well for the efficacy of what they do in policing the industry."

*Torch

Continued from B-1

where people indicated they had interest in participating in the Olympic torch relay and where it was logistically feasible."

San Diego County's 200-kilometer portion of the run will start on Interstate 15 near Rainbow and weave through Vista, San Marcos, Escondido, Poway, Santee, El Cajon, La Mesa, Lemon Grove, National City and Chula Vista.

From the Mexican border, the route will turn northward through Imperial Beach, Coronado, San Diego, Del Mar, Carlsbad and Oceanside, where Marines will pick up the torch for the run to the Orange County line.

Levin said San Diego's section of the run, already sold out at $3,000 a kilometer, will begin July 24 and end the next day.

Although details of the route are not available, he said the run will pass the University of San Diego on Linda Vista Road.

Torch-bearing runners in San Diego include Mayor Hedgecock,

MAP SHOWS ROUTE OF OLYMPIC TORCH RELAY
Runners will carry flame 19,000 kilometers through 33 states

Tribune map by Kris Lindblad

Sen. Pete Wilson, Supervisor Leon Williams, Pacific Bell employees, Navy personnel from the carrier

Kitty Hawk and schoolchildren. Each runner will be allowed to keep his individual torch, a cast aluminum object weighing 22 pounds and containing a propane-filled cylinder. Its total cost is about $130.

Oceanside, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Blade Tribune
(D. 28,548)
(S. 29,914)

MAR 1 6 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Law workshops set

SAN DIEGO — The University of San Diego School of Law in cooperation with Certified Public Accountants Steres, Alpert, and Carne will hold a series of four workshops in March and April in the Douglas F. Manchester Executive Conference Center.

For information and reservations call 233-4585. The schedule of workshops is:
Fridays, March 23 and 30: "Accounting Concepts for Lawyers," a two-part workshop to familiarize lawyers with accounting practices and provide them with a basic knowledge of generally accepted accounting principles and auditing standards as they apply in specific circumstances.

Friday, April 6: "Overview of Personal Injury, Wrongful Death, and Other Earnings Loss Situations," to assist the lawyer in evaluating lost earnings situations, calculating the damages, presenting the damages in court and questioning/evaluating the testimony of other experts.

Friday, April 13: "Examination of Questioned Documents," including methods to detect forged initials on wills, incorrect dating, additions and alterations, forged holographic wills, cut-and-paste photocopies, and forged signatures.

San Diego, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Evening Tribune
(D. 127,454)

MAR 3 1 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

A statue of San Diego de Alcala by sculptor Jesus Dominguez of La Mesa will be installed Thursday and unveiled at 3 p.m. April 8 at the Helen K. and James S. Copley Library at the University of San Diego.

Oceanside, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Blade Tribune
(D. 28,548)
(S. 29,914)

MAR 3 0 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

All Hallows hosts santos art exhibit

LA JOLLA — "Todos Santos," an exhibition of santos, statues of saints, of the Southwest and Mexico, will be held from April 1-15 at All Hallows Catholic Church, 6802 La Jolla Village Drive South.

The exhibition will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. There is no admission charge. Group tours with docents may be arranged by calling 459-2975.

Reservations may be made for the opening reception on Saturday, March 31, by calling the number above. Tickets are $15.

The exhibition is part of the 25th anniversary of All Hallows parish. Richard and Diana Young are chairing the exhibition committee; Ann Gottfredson chairs the reception.

Martha Longenecker, president and curator of the Mingie International Museum of World Folk Art in La Jolla, is curator of the exhibition, which features santos from private collections, California Missions and the Southwest Museum in Los Angeles.

"Each person in a family had a name-saint, so there was a demand for religious images," said Longenecker.

El Cajon, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Daily Californian
(D. 100,271)

MAR 1 9 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Miss Lemon Grove

Beth Frenken, 22, a junior at the University of San Diego, was selected as Miss Lemon Grove in a pageant held Saturday night. She is studying political science and journalism, and is currently working as a student intern at KGTV-Channel 10. She hopes to start a career as a political news correspondent to the Middle East or Latin America after graduation. Frenken, a native of El Cajon, is a graduate of Valhalla High School where she was named most likely to succeed by the Future Homemakers of America. She is the daughter of William and Marcella Frenken of El Cajon.

Jimmy Dorantes for The Californian

La Mesa, CA
(San Diego Co.)
La Mesa Courier
(Cir. W. 5,500)

MAR 2 2 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Beth Frenken Is Miss Lemon Grove

Beth Frenken, an intern at KGTV Channel 10, was named Miss

Lemon Grove 1984 at the pageant on March 17.

The pageant was sponsored by the Lemon Grove Rotary Club and Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the Fairest of the Fair department.

Frenken will be one of 27 finalists for the title of 1984 Fairest of the Fair.

As Miss Lemon Grove, Frenken will represent her community this year for a variety of activities. As a junior at the University of San Diego, she is studying political science and journalism. She is a native of El Cajon.

Lemon Grove, CA
(San Diego Co.)
Lemon Grove Review
(Cir. W. 7,004)

MAR 2 2 1984

Allen's P.C.B. Est. 1888

Judge Littlejohn Seeks Reelection

SAN DIEGO Municipal Court Judge Joe Littlejohn has announced he will seek reelection to the seat he currently holds on the San Diego Municipal Court bench.

Appointed to the post in April, 1981, Littlejohn was unanimously elected as Presiding Judge of the Municipal Court for the year of 1983 and was unanimously reelected to the same position in 1984.

Littlejohn, a 1972 graduate of the U. of San Diego School of Law, was previously elected as a member of the San Diego Unified School District Board of Education in November of 1979.

Professional memberships include the California Judges' Assn., the Criminal Justice Council of S.D. County, and the Earl B. Gilliam Bar Assn., Judicial Section. He previously served on the Board of Directors of Michael's House, Headstart Program, and the Elementary Institute of Science.

Hats Off To ...

Hats off to University of San Diego basketball coach Jim Brovelli, who, in five years as the coach of the USD men's basketball team, moved the team from last place in the West Coast Athletic Conference to first place and a spot in the NCAA playoffs. The Toreros lost in the first round, but the fact that the team made it that far is a feather in Brovelli's cap. For Brovelli's efforts, he was named the WCAC "Coach of the Year." Unfortunately for San Diego, Brovelli's alma mater, the University of San Francisco, has returned to big-time basketball, after dropping out a season or so ago, and Brovelli may return home to coach the team next season. However, for all he has done for the USD basketball program, we salute Jim Brovelli.

Do you know someone who deserves recognition for an outstanding contribution in the area of sports, civic involvement, family, work or other special activities? We'd like to know them too. Write a brief paragraph telling us why that person is special, send it along with their photograph to TUNED IN Magazine, 6867 Nancy Ridge Drive, Suite A, San Diego, CA 92121, and they may appear in TUNED IN on our "Hats Off To ..." page.

TUNED IN * 1
MAR 3 1 1984

