Hostile Man elected President

M. Elltsoh
Staff Writer

It was history in the making on March 31, 1993. It was the day that Hostile Man was elected AS President. He is better known as the Top Seven front man. He was put into office by a vote of nearly three to one to the nearest competitor.

This marks the first time in the history of USD and AS that a cartoon character has been elected to such a high position. Dr. H. Istory said, "There have been many cartoon-like people that have held AS offices but never an actual cartoon character."

The new AS president-elect was very ecstatic yet hostile about his new office.

At a press conference he said, "The people have spoken and elected the right man for the job." He followed that with a Top Seven list. Number one was: Anybody can run for office but only idiots would elect me."

Analysts are not sure how to analyze the new president. He never made any promises, never campaigned and never attended the debates. In short, he had no platform. Hostile Man responded to these facts by saying, "Platform, shmatform."

Pauly Litical, the VISTA political analyst, said, "He seems to have gained the trust of the people by putting his face on paper and splattering it all across campus." Bill McGowan, resident Irish Clown, said, "Hostile Man is a bad ass. I'm telling you it was the switch to the eight teeth-grin that won it for him."

AS President Hostile Man on his way to beach

The AS president-elect released his first statement: "I like potato soup." He also released his first question: "Hey, where's the Doritos?" along with his first hostage, Nancy J. Clarke of Des Moines, Iowa. There is still a question of when he will release his first album.

He looks forward to taking over. He plans to tackle the tough issues first. The first is the installation of

Ego explodes

An unidentified sorority girl's ego exploded last Monday as she turned down her fourth consecutive possible date to the Spring Ball. "She really seemed to enjoy turning guys down. Her head seemed to swell and her eyes lit up with each turn down."

The explosion caused a small brush fire in Tecolote Canyon. The San Diego Fire Department handled the blaze with ease.

"A" found

Mike McGowan
Irish Clown's Brother

Like a lost dog finding its way home. Like a hostage being released. Like chicken noodle soup. The same feeling was echoed last week when the missing "A" from the Off Beat masthead finally returned to the VISTA office. "It is a great moment for Off Beat and the USD community," said Walter J. Middleton, Off Beat Wanna-be.

The "A" had been missing for five weeks. Its whereabouts were unknown until last week when Author Hughes, president of USD came into the office with the uninjured but frazzled "A."

He told sources close to Off Beat that he had to pay a high price to get the "A" back. It had been kidnapped by a secret underground terrorist organization that planned to use it as a bargaining chip for favorable party reviews in the Off Beat section. They also interrogated the "A" to get information on Bill McGowan. The "A" wouldn't tell them a thing.

The "A" said, "I never saw any faces and they changed their voices so I couldn't tell whether they were male or female." The "A" went on to say that when they spoke they used the word "like" much of the time and the expression, "Oh my God."

When questioned, Alpha Phi immediately denied the any involvement in the kidnapping. Missy St. Claire, an Alpha Phi, said in a deep husky voice, "Like oh my God. Like, why would we do something like as silly as that? Like, we could care less about the stupid Party Reviews."

Dunkin Winchells, head of USD security said, "Where was I when all this happened and why I wasn't I informed?" Officer Winchells was in his squad car and had just awoken from a cat nap at the Field House parking lot when asked about the missing "A."

Bill McGowan, Off Beat editor, said, "I really thought the A was gone forever, and the substitute A's I used weren't the same."

The "A's" triumphant return will be celebrated this Friday at the Off Beat "Ay the "A" is back" party.

AROUND THE WORLD

News you couldn't care less about ...

Take a good look at the above globe. Is that supposed to be Earth? If not, what world is it? Where did they get this world? Why is South America so much smaller than what is supposed to be North America?

The world celebrates April Fool's Day by having no wars, no starvation and no religious disputes. The UN president said, "It's a bummer we can't do this every day."

Scientists claim that the world is becoming flat. The hole in the ozone is causing the air to escape and the world is slowly going flat. I. M. Smart, a world-renowned scientist, said, "It's the same principle as when you have a hole in a basketball; it goes flat."

On this day in 1223, Nostradamus predicted that the world would explode great force that the universe has never seen before. He then turned to his wife, and said, "Now is that a great April Fool's Prank or what?"

Weather and Surf Forecast: April Fools

It could be rainy, or maybe not.
It could be sunny, or maybe not.
We might get a storm, but probably not.
We might get snow, but probably not.
There might be wind, but there might not.
There might be waves, but there might not.
There is a chance that the air could be warm, but it could also be cold.
There is a chance that i know and i don't want to tell, but most likely not.
Try looking outside this weekend.

Tides for the weekend:

	LOW TIDE	HIGH TIDE
F	kind of low	pretty high
Sa	downright low	not that high
Su	almost too low	almost medium

The forecast from other USD students:

[This week i decided to interview people who don't surf, but would like to try.]

Rob Naif: "Find surf within [stumbling] distance from the Pennant because that way during lulls you can down a couple."

Andy Prock: "Dark brooding storm clouds will roll in from the northwest. At 8:17 Saturday evening the clouds will part and an angel of mercy will shine benevolence and good fortune on all."

Nikki Igielski: "Waves will reach 10 feet in the morning, eight feet by mid-afternoon. Lots of white wash and plenty of sun. It will be that way from Friday to Sunday."

ABOUT THE NATION

News you couldn't care less about ...

Bill Clinton pulled the biggest April Fools in the history of the United States. After running and being elected as a Democrat on a platform of change, he openly admitted today that he was a Republican and that you can expect the same policies of George Bush and Reagan to be followed in the coming years.

Bill Clinton announced that as part of his new economic plan he will have to begin closing down entire states. The first states slated to go are Maine, Wyoming, Oregon, Montana and parts of Idaho. He is asking all residents to leave within one month. No one will be allowed in the states.

The state of Iowa was officially declared an anomaly by the State department and the Department of the Interior last Wednesday. The announcement came after an extensive 10 year study of the state and its people. "The state is just a figment of our imaginations," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

tanning booths in the library. Then he'd like to get more rights for cartoon characters. He said, "Just because the cartoonists draw us, doesn't mean they can play God with us." Another idea he had would be to move the entire law school into the Dog Patch so the undergrads wouldn't have to deal with the attitudes of the law students. He also wants an official week long Hostile Man holiday. And finally would like to see USD become a public college under his reign. "That way people will know that USD exists."

Of the coming year, Hostile Man said he looked forward to it. And he said that next year he would be going after Art Hughes' job!

ACROSS THE STATE

This news may interest you ...

California accidentally wiped off the map. The Thomas brothers, famous map makers, accidentally wiped off the entire state of California while working on a new set of maps. The new maps will tell drivers which freeways they will need live ammo for.

Los Angeles was officially declared California's closest cousin to hell. Yes, the state representatives voted and in a landslide victory, LA won. "I truly believe the devil makes his home there," said one representative from Waco, Texas.

Orange County will be made liberal-free. Anybody living in or moving to Orange County will be screened to make sure they conservative and/or Republican. The screening will begin as soon as possible. Anyone who is found to have any Clinton/Gore paraphernalia will be asked to leave the county.

Geologists openly admit that the idea of California falling into ocean due to an earthquake is a hoax. The state government forced geologists to fake documents with these claims. The hoax was set up to discourage people from moving to California. Governor Pete Wilson said, "The 'Welcome to California, now go home,' campaign will continue."

Letters to the Editor

McGowan hater

Dear Editor,
Bill McGowan has obviously gone too far. He is constantly putting down the Alpha Phi sorority or referring to it in derogatory ways. Who does he think he is?

I've been in Alpha Phi for two years and I must say it is a great organization. The humor Bill McGowan uses in his Off Beat section is totally uncalled for. He rips on almost the entire Greek system (A D Pi excepted).

His ego is way to large and he must be stopped. he is totally out of control. His comments about Alpha Phi are completely false and totally childish. Off Beat should not be used as an anti-Greek forum. It should strive for humor in nice, good wholesome manner. Alpha Phi should not bear the brunt of his name calling. Mr. McGowan has some latent desire to be in the Greek system; but, he is not close to being cool enough to make the grade. He shouldn't take it out on Alpha Phi.

Or maybe its because he lets his sexual tensions get to him and the quickest release is to make Alpha Phi and the Greek system the brunt of his inept jokes.

Perhaps Mr. McGowan takes pleasure at poking fun at the fact that Alpha Phi are too good for him and wouldn't touch him.

I believe in myself, my sorority and all these words written here.

NAME WITHHELD UPON REQUEST

McGowan or Satan!

Dear Editor,
Bill McGowan is Satan incarnate. He is evil and wicked. And he has some sort of, you know, problem that makes him, like, mean and unfeeling. I say this in all seriousness. I'm an Alpha Phi.

Change Opinion

Dear Editor,
Your Opinion section is way to right wing and conservative. I get sick of the weekly barrage against Bill Clinton. Don't you guys have anything to do with your lives? I mean, c'mon. Breathe and relax. You must have the courage to change.

I'm specifically referring to the articles by Mario H. Lopez and Michael Ward.

Mr. Lopez's articles tip him off as a typical rich, white boy USD student that has everything handed to him, is part of some fraternity and dates some stuck-up little (Alpha Phi) sorority girl. He'll probably graduate and work for daddy in a cushy job with a big office.

And as for Mikhail Wardski, he's part-Canadian. How can you trust those sneaky Canadians? Canada is really only the 51st state.

By the way, Off Beat is my favorite section.

Yours very truly,

BILL CLINTON

Go ahead make our day

What the hell?

I am of the opinion that USD campus security is a far cry for safety here on campus. Who are we kidding hiring illiterate, police academy drop outs. Let's face it, if it required more than checking off boxes, they would have a hard time writing tickets. So they finally get a clue as to how to do something, and they exploit it to no end.

Obviously, we haven't found the importance to enact a fitness program for our poor, overaged health nuts. I have to give credit to their feeble attempt at fitness via bicycles, but I would expect mounted posses from this school.

Which gets me to what they do use as transportation. Those little wind up matchboxes. Truthfully though, I would feel more threatened being chased by the tram.

Erik Hennings

Especially with the drivers they hire these days. They must be requiring a Malibu Grand Prix license to be able to operate the tram. Getting back to the highly designed, aerodynamic matchbox, I like the new hostess lunch dispensers in the dash. Why is it that I see these keystone cops sitting in the corner of the Vista parking lot mac'n out on their fast food? Who ever said our over-worked campus security are malnourished? They've got a meal plan at Nico's.

Looking at the more positive changes they have made within our campus.....

Anyways, I must comment on the elapsed time between an emergency call and their response to the scene. I think it has something to do with the state of panic that spreads across the precinct as to who will respond. After all, the most action they ever get is watching "Chips" re-runs on their patrol car portables. If I wanted to hear from these clowns a couple days after, I would have invited them to dinner. (Never in a million years) And when they do get to the scene, if I haven't forgotten why I even called in the first place, why not bother to write down what I have to say? Not that I'm asking too much or anything, just get a damn clue!

THE SECTION THAT NOBODY IN THEIR RIGHT MIND WOULD READ

Have you ever wondered what the therapeutic uses of manure could be? This little story is dedicated to all of you who have wondered that.

One day Johnny was playing with mud. He had a lot of fun with it. He made mud pies and mud balls. He made a whole family just made out of mud. He called them the Mud Family. There was Mr. and Mrs. Mud and Johnny and Cindy Mud. They were the typical nuclear mud family. Johnny was very happy with his mud family ...

Darn, I was hoping to somehow make a segue way into the therapeutic uses of manure. But since this is Moo's Views, I'll talk about the beauty of cows. I mean, that's almost a therapeutic use of manure. Well, because cows make manure. So, let's begin again.

They line the countryside for miles sometimes. They stand on four legs and are covered with hair. They like to chew on cud. Some are brown and white and some are black and white. We get milk from them and if you live in the midwest you can get high on their farts ...

No, no, no, no. This isn't working. Farts really don't show the beauty of a cow. Of course, they come before the manure. And I assume it's a natural high. So, I guess in a way that is a therapeutic use of manure. But I was talking about the beauty of cows. But, then again, when you get high, many things can be beautiful. But I'm anti-drugs, so pretend I didn't say that.

I know, a poem. I'll express the beauty of cows through a poem.

The beauty of cows of infinite
Their color is exquisite
(nothing rhymes with exquisite)
Cows are everywhere
Here and there
They are of the species mammal
They almost look like a camel
Cows are pretty things
Wouldn't it be cool if they had wings
They chew on cud

and have names like Bill, Brad and Bud
Or sometimes even Bessy Sue
They sometimes sing when they moo
"Moo, moo, moo, moo."
The farmer takes their milk
so we can enjoy
Their hair is almost like silk.
Boy, this rhyme scheme is coy.

Well, there you have it. A beautiful poem on cows. I really don't know if it describes the beauty of a cow, but it's better than a poem describing the beauty of manure or its therapeutic uses.

Have you ever tried running naked with cows? The sensation of manure running through your toes is great. That's what a friend tells me. I don't know for sure. But running free, maybe even chewing a little cud. It might actually be a little.

Well, that's my column today. Next week I'll talk about the therapeutic uses of milk and maybe I'll analyze a song from "Mother's Milk" by the Red Hot Chili Peppers. Until then, keep mooing.

Moo

Gruesome details

Al Cala
College Life Editor

I changed the name of my section again. I figured it might attract my first reader, especially since no one really reads my section anyway. I know you read it for Moo's Views. I just can't be as philosophical as Moo. He's one of a kind. So, I have to go a different route.

I gave it the title of Gruesome details because I subscribed to this magazine. I waited for my first issue, and wouldn't you know it, Playboy has a section called Campus Chronicles. It's a bimonthly section and answers all the questions about sexuality for the people our age. I would go into the gruesome details (my wit kills me), but we go to a Catholic school and I don't want to be censored. Its funny, but it seems whenever I get a good title for my column I have to change it. I hope now I won't have to. I'll just stop subscribing to magazines.

Today I wanted to talk about something really relevant. Something that really affects us in college. Something that hits home. But I couldn't think of anything, so I'm going to talk about my family.

It seems people in this world are weird. Take my brother for instance. He's a great guy and he's a good brother. But one day he and I went out for fast food. We both decided on In 'n' Out burgers.

We get there and the lady asks what we want. The menu at In 'n' Out is not all that large. I quickly order and anxiously await my brother's order. He, though, can never make up his mind. So, by the time he orders I'm really hungry and we have a line of cars behind us. And then he only orders a small Coke. I don't know sometimes I really wonder about my brother.

This article had no point, but boy, did it fill space. Next week, I'll talk about the Green-house effect and how it affects my family.

Clinton keeps promise to students

Special "Short on Copy" to the VISTA

President Clinton kept a campaign promise when he unveiled his proposal for students to pay back college loans through public service in a speech at Rutgers University.

The plan would allow students to work in community service projects or serve as teachers or police officers after graduation in order to defray debts incurred by soaring tuition fees.

Clinton described the concept as sort of a national Peace Corps, a program created exactly 32 years to the day before his speech. The new President urged young people to "answer the call to service" and said that national service "is nothing less than the American way to change America."

The program will begin this summer with an eight-week pilot project involving 1,000 students, and will expand to include 100,000 students by 1997. Clinton said that the initiative could be shaped by state and local authorities in order to avoid an unwieldy federal bureaucracy.

'Let the Children Play' gets off the ground

Meredith "I Luv" Lucey
Staff Writer

In the tradition of such overwhelming successful events as the Mural of Hope and The Giving Tree, Associated Students is now turning to the USD community for its support and participation to help save the parks of San Diego and "Let the Children Play".

With the support of the San Diego Community Foundation, USD is beginning as extensive fundraising campaign to refurbish the first park before the school year quickly comes to an end. Because of these strict time constraints, UCSD and SDSU will not be participating this year as originally intended. The program this year is beginning as a pilot program with the hopes of growing and expanding with the other universities next year and during the years to come.

USD students, faculty and staff can become directly involved in this program in a number of ways and help create an all new Mission Point Park this spring. Firstly, in conjunction with the revenue from the sold-out Sample concert occurring on April 1 will go directly to the "Let the Children Play" fund. AS Concert Series will also be providing finances for bands and entertainment at the Parks Grand Opening celebration on May 8. "By simply attending an outstanding concert, students are contributing to this worthwhile program," said AS President Shane Bohart.

Secondly, the most important way the students can help is by participating in the extensive letter campaign. A letter containing detailed explanation of the "Let the Children Play" program has been written and will be sent to as many people as possible who may be able to contribute to the fund. Students are being asked to read the letter to find out more about the program, sign it and then simply mail it to family members, friends or loved ones who may be able to help. AS will incur mailing expenses as well as provide pre-addressed envelopes for donations to the San Diego Community Foundation.

A committee of 25 students has been formed in order to reach all faculty, staff and students at USD. Committee members will be distributing the letters to all the clubs and organizations and letters will be available in the AS office for anyone to pick up. According to committee member Doug Meier, "This program will not be able to work without the help of the majority of the students."

The San Diego Community Foundation, the leading foundation in San Diego County, will be administering the funds and assisting with the programing and community relations. The Foundation feels this program will show that the younger generation is willing to help community-related activities. USD hopes to show the city of San Diego that college students are if fact willing to give something back to their community.

No amount of participation or contribution to this program too small. If you are interested in helping with the "Let the Children Play" project in any way, please come by the AS office in UC225.

It's Thursday, April 1, do you know where your car is?

Car thieves prey on campus

Chris "Dan" Marino
Staff Writer

Auto theft is the third-highest crime on campus. Between 1989 and 1991, USD had 52 vehicles reported stolen. The stolen vehicles belonged to students or faculty, according to a pamphlet mailed out by the USD Public Safety office.

On average about 17 cars are stolen at USD each year. By comparison, SDSU Security Officer Mike Bruntello reports that between 9 and 17 cars are stolen per month on that campus. USD's average is significant because it has less than one-third the total population that SDSU has.

Statistics published in a recent article of European Car magazine show that it takes the average thief 34 seconds to break into and drive a vehicle away. With thefts of this financial magnitude occurring this quickly, students must guard against the possibility of their cars being stolen.

Although there are various safety devices available to car owners, do not be fooled by the Club, a bar that lacks across the steering wheel, or other manufactures' vehicle-security alarms. These devices greatly enhance the probability that your car will not be stolen, but alarms and steering-wheel bars can both be circumvented.

According to USD Security Officer Martez, "Your car can be Fort Knox, and I guarantee you that thieves will find a way to break into and steal your car."

When a thief breaks into a car protected by a steering-wheel bar, he may remove the bar by taking a miniature hacksaw to either side of the steering wheel around the bar. By cutting off an inch or two of the steering wheel, the club is removed, the car's steering wheel is then operable, and the car can easily be stolen. Although this may be a bit time-consuming for the thief, it is a method that is widely used, according to Martez.

A steering wheel bar may also fall victim to liquid nitrogen, or lox, which is obtained cheaply through pharmaceutical firms. The temperature of lox is hundreds of degrees below freezing. The application of lox makes the bar shatter like an ice cube under a hammer.

Just because your car is equipped with an expensive alarm does not mean that you are exempt from vehicle theft. Some thieves today are experts in electrical systems and can disable an alarm and steal the car as easily as if the car had no alarm.

What can you do to protect your car at USD? There are a couple of effective methods for protecting your car, according to Martez. First, he said, "Just parking your car in a lighted or heavily traveled area decreases the probability that your car will be taken." Just because thieves are fast does not mean that they are willing to expose themselves to getting caught.

AROUND THE WORLD

• Russian President Boris Yeltsin and Russian Parliament chairman Ruslan I. Khasbulatov both defeated a Parliamentary vote to have them removed from power.

Khasbulatov survived 339-558 and Yeltsin who narrowly survived the two-thirds confidence vote 617-228. Khasbulatov has been working vigorously the past few weeks to oust Yeltsin, and possibly re-organize the quasi-free market currently existing in Russia.

President Clinton will be meeting with Yeltsin next week at a summit in Canada. He is expected to propose new economic and political support for Yeltsin's continuing attempts at reform.

• The United Nations Security Council voted Friday to establish the largest and most powerful peacekeeping force in U.N. history.

The force has been authorized to use whatever force necessary to maintain peace, disarm warring factions and protect relief workers in the ravaged country of Somalia. The force will be made up of 28,000 troops from around the world and will be under the control of Turkish Lt. General Cevik Bir. A support contingent of American troops will most likely remain under U.S. command.

The action is being initiated in accordance with Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter which allows force to be used when international peace and security are threatened.

ABOUT THE NATION

• Louis V. Gerstner, the head of RJR Nabisco Holdings, has been appointed by IBM to be its new chairman and chief executive.

Gerstner is the first outsider in the history of the company to be in a major leadership position. It is the hope of IBM that he will be able to reverse the company's continuing steep decline.

The selection of Gerstner marked the end of a two month search by the company, that reviewed over 100 names including former presidential candidate Ross Perot. His reputation for decisiveness, strategic thinking and ability to make change were cited as the main reasons for his appointment.

• White House officials attempted Monday to quiet rumors that the Clinton family was having problems with their current Secret Service agency.

Apparently, some agents have been leaking stories about marital arguments in the White House. Dee Dee Myers, Clinton's press secretary, said the stories of fights are "bizarre" and unfounded. A senior Treasury Department official said the rumors are "offensive as hell," but insisted that they untrue.

If the activities continue, the Treasury has announced it will seek a new Secret Service to protect the First Family.

ACROSS THE STATE

• A drug raid last fall that left a Malibu millionaire dead has been found to have been illegally conducted.

Ventura County District Attorney Michael D. Bradbury announced that the raid was held, in part, because of a desire by authorities to seize the $5-million ranch belonging to Donald P. Scott.

A Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy was held responsible for the death of Scott. It has been determined, though, the deputy was acting out of self-defense when Scott approached the officer with a shotgun. Bradbury has concluded, however, that the sheriff should not have been there in the first place, and that that search warrant issued to a joint task force of Los Angeles officers and U.S. Drug Enforcement Agents was unfounded. Bradbury reasoned that it would have been impossible to identify a marijuana plant from a helicopter at 1000 feet without binoculars, as claimed by a drug agent. This evidence was apparently used by a court in issuing a search warrant.

• Hughes Aircraft announced Monday that it will be relocating 1,900 engineering-related jobs from Canoga Park to Tucson.

Company officials stated that the main reason for the move was the need to centralize its top engineers and its manufacturing machinery in one location. The officials also commented that the declining economy in California was also a factor in the decision.

Second, for about $30, most auto-repair or electrical facilities will install an ignition kill switch. Such a switch, when mounted out of sight, allows the vehicle's ignition or starter to work. When a thief breaks into a car and attempts to "hot-wire" it, there will be no power for him to start the vehicle.

Finally, common sense alone will help deter or delay criminals. Do not leave your car with the keys in it, or with the motor running, even if you are only going to be away from the car for a few seconds. Ten seconds is plenty of time for thieves to commandeer a vehicle. Always roll up windows, close sunroofs and lock doors and trunks.

Nobody at USD is safe from car theft. On average, one car is stolen per month. Spending lots of money for safety devices only lower, not eliminate, the risk of your car being stolen. Simple precautions like common sense and inexpensive starter kill switches give you nearly the same amount of protection as do a high-priced safety device.

Barnes critiques Clinton, looks to '96

Erik "I'm tired of Republicans taking credit for the tearing down of the Berlin" Wahl Staff Writer

Former Supreme Court correspondent

Fred Barnes was welcomed to USD last Wednesday to speak on political issues. The renowned conservative writer for the New Republic magazine is also a panelist on the "McLaughlin Group" television show.

Barnes took the stage shortly after 5:30 p.m. and began with an array of liberal-bashing jokes to warm up his audience. Jokes ranged from homosexuals entering the military to sending "warm greetings from the commander-in-chief ... Hillary." These, in conjunction with the accusation that Democrats were "uneducated and easy to command," brought chuckles from the conservative gathering.

The talk was outlined by three questions. Is Clinton really a new Democrat? Will his economic plan succeed? And will Clinton be reelected in 1996?

According to Barnes, the fact that Clinton was dubbed a new Democrat was couched in the premise that he was proposing no new taxes on the middle class. Clinton, he proclaimed, has already reneged on that promise citing the huge deficit, but has also proposed a broad-based energy tax which will hurt the middle class further. In addition, Clinton appointed to his Cabinet old-style Democrats mired in the tradition of pork-barrel politics and tax-and-spend methods to fix the finger at the biased media and stated, "The economy itself hasn't changed, but the way the press covers the economy is what has changed."

Barnes stated, "In July of '92, it was reported that 96 percent of all media coverage regarding the economy was negative, whereas in December, the coverage was 66 percent positive, though we have been experiencing the same rate of five percent recovery over the last nine months."

After bracketing Clinton into the typical "old" Democrat category, he touched briefly upon what needs to be done to defeat Clinton in 1996. The focus of Republican attention has been on regaining the 19 percent of voters who spilled onto Ross Perot's ticket in 1992. Barnes confidently called Ross Perot the most egotistical man in America. Barnes felt this extra effort, in conjunction with Clinton's supposedly self-destructive "big-government politics," will create an opening for Republicans again in 1996.

He concluded by summing up President Clinton as a "classical tax-and-spend" Democrat, despite his embracing rhetoric. Though Barnes adamantly opposed Clinton's ideological position, he conceded to liking him as a person.

Fred Barnes speaks to a captive audience of USD students.

Erik Carlton Wahl/VISTA

Clinton outlined a variety of endeavors that participants might undertake, such as providing immunization shots to children or tutoring illiterates.

"We'll ask you to help our police forces across the nation, train members for a new police corps that will walk beats and build the kind of community ties that will prevent crime from happening in the first place; we'll ask young people to work to help control pollution and recycle waste, to paint darkened buildings and clean up neighborhoods, to work with senior citizens and combat homelessness and help children in trouble," Clinton told the cheering crowd.

As outlined, the program would begin with $389 million in scholarships for 25,000 students in the first year and increase to $3.4 billion by 1997.

Seeing the light

A long-time conservative finally changes his views

I have finally done it. I have undergone my long-needed catharsis. I have undergone the sweeping change known as Clintonia.

At first, it was very subtle. I wanted to ring cracked bells and take long-distance bus rides. Slowly, it progressed. I no longer regarded Jane Fonda as a traitor or Sam Donaldson as crazed. Alan Cranston was now an object of pity and adoration, rather than anger. It was all so easy to take those first steps.

As change slowly overtook me, I felt a greater draw to it and began to follow the bold revolutionary groups like ACT-UP and Earth First that are bettering America. Unfortunately the need to save money to pay for Bill's investment program stopped me from spiking any trees and maiming or killing one of those evil, exploitative lumberjacks.

Still, I realized I had to go even further on my journey to change. I had to enlist in the ACLU to help make people do what they should do to be good liberals but are too ignorant to want to do by themselves.

Then, I noticed both Clintons and much of the Cabinet were esteemed members of our nation's conscience, the Bar Association. I thought to myself that surely I must join this group to be a true liberal like Bill. Plus, as a tort lawyer, I could win outrageous sums by suing those evil corporations that make things in the name of an "economy," which we all know is simply a fascist plot to oppress the worker. Also, the Bar was still controlled by reactionaries who demanded that I pass the oppressive bar exam to join. We'll certainly have to change that. Why should we reward competence? That's discrimination against the inept!

After that, I had to go change my foreign policy ideas, which I was told really don't matter anyhow. No more support for the use of the imperialist armed forces. They were part of our evil past and are entirely responsible for the budget deficit. From now on, we must practice total isolationism and protectionism so we don't have to worry about anyone else. Who cares if the battle for Dushanbe involves nuclear weapons? All we have to do abroad is send out the Peace Corps chanting, "JFK's Camelot is here" and everything will be great.

Change was indeed happening. I was a new man ("person" for the politically correct). Then, it struck me. I had to be politically correct to be a good liberal. In fact, I can't be a good liberal, since "good" implies a judgment, which is politically incorrect. At least, I can still be a liberal unafraid to expose myself to the world. I was doing what even Dukakis wouldn't: Proudly admitting I was a liberal.

I also had to change my outlook on society. I decided that all art, no matter how it may offend those backward Yahoo religious types, should be funded by the government without restriction. Jails are far too crowded. Rather than be reactionary and build more, we must furlough and release these victims of society. Our criminals need far more rights. Obsolete, bourgeois ideas like common sense must be eliminated. I also realized that we as a society had to put our focus on what was truly important: spotted owls and kangaroo rats. Even if facts say otherwise, surely we have to stop logging nationwide in case a spotted owl had ever vacationed in Arizona.

I was so happy. My conversion was well on its way to success. I was receiving mail from People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, NOW, the Cuban embassy, Mother Jones, IRA, Ed Asner and UC Berkeley. I must really be a member of the liberal cause now. Strange though, they all asked for money. Isn't money what we're fighting against by raising the investment brackets? Isn't money what the capitalists use to oppress us? Hmmm. Very strange. Oh well, my liberal masters would never deceive me. We liberals realize government is the final solution to all progress, uh, Freudian slip, make that problems.

Next, I had to adjust my sources of information. Bye, bye McLaughlin Group. No more Rush Limbaugh. Farewell to William F.

Buckley. I need good, unbiased sources like Dan Rather and NBC News to avoid the overwhelmingly conservative media.

I then progressed to the last and perhaps most traumatic step of all. It had taken a great deal of courage to change this much. Still, I had to shed my illiberal, reactionary heroes for more suitable idols. Churchill had to go because of his militarism and hatred of progressive socialism. Adam Smith was ejected because of his oppressive capitalism and hatred of government's helping hand. The legendary Theodore Roosevelt was history because he was a dead white male and he had hunted, even though he set up the first national park, which we will just ignore. Margaret Thatcher had to go because she was not "female" enough for some of my comrades.

Then, the ultimate step. I realized that the economic boom of the 1980s actually never happened and that Ronald Reagan was, is and always will be the true source of world evil. I had become a true liberal! I am Clintonic.

Wait a minute. What's going on here? I've heard that I'm supposed to be the fascist, neo-nazi, Zionist conservative ... not a liberal! Suddenly, I grab my Orange County Register. Whew, it must have been just a really bad, bad, bad dream. You see I saw today's date and remembered. Today is the day America honors its liberals. Dang, that was unnerving.

As change slowly overtook me, I felt a greater draw to it and began to follow the bold revolutionary groups like ACT-UP and Earth First that are bettering America.

VISTA: A look towards next year

The paper faces collapse unless students come through soon

This may be April Fool's, but we're not joking. Imagine going to the VISTA racks on Thursday to see the latest IM rankings for your basketball team. But when you reached the rack there was no paper. Instead, you find a notice stating that the student publication has been discontinued.

Student involvement with the paper has been low over the past years, and recruitment has proved to be slow and difficult. This May, the core members of the VISTA staff, who have taken on the responsibility of production and improvement, are either graduating or leaving.

This past week, the VISTA has been asking students for financial support. We are now asking for your active involvement in its survival.

Unless the students take an interest beyond weekly readership, the campus community will lose its voice.

The VISTA will fold. Not only will students lose their paper, they will lose a practical journalistic education and job source.

To prevent this situation, the VISTA staff is asking you to consider the importance of this medium. For you to better understand what it is to become a part of the paper, we will be running a weekly description of open positions. Applications are available in the office located downstairs in the UC.

This transition is a critical point in the VISTA's 31-year history. It's as simple as this: If the positions are not filled, the paper will not go to print and USD will lose its only undergraduate paper.

Many sections will be totally missing or greatly reduced unless this situation is changed rapidly. Imagine not having the stimulating articles of Opinion to think about. Where else at USD can students engage in debate every week? Some articles have even been used in classes. All of this is at risk.

The VISTA acts as the students' mouthpiece. The paper has helped get student concerns addressed by making them public. An isolated letter cannot do that.

The VISTA is not perfect and it is not the easiest job in the world. What it is is students trying to accomplish something for USD. The VISTA may not be optimal in its current form, but it is certainly better than not having a paper at all for USD.

So think about it. Do you have the courage and the desire to continue the VISTA? Dare to take the VISTA challenge. Otherwise, there might not be articles to ponder. Then who would be sorry?

The liberal view

Editors' Note: Due to the three complaints that we've had regarding the usual one-sidedness of this section, we bring you an intelligent, reasoned, logical (and typical) liberal point of view. We are pleased to announce that Bill has agreed to outline his political philosophy for us.

Bill Rodham

A woman president?

Diversity is taking root in the minds of USD students. Not the reasonable, inclusive diversity, but intellectually undeveloped, knee-jerk diversity. The kind that replaces dominance of one point of view with another, instead of having a healthy coexistence.

Several times over the last week and a half I have over-heard people discussing the race for USD AS president and mentioning the fact that it's about time USD had a woman president. They were referring, of course, to the candidacy of Valerie Attisha for that office.

Please understand that Attisha's candidacy, platform, views or personality have nothing to do with what will be said here.

That point made, we can focus on the comment that "USD needs a woman president," made by members of our community recently. This statement demonstrates the foolishness of the quota mentality that too easily results from the improper "diversity" attitude. Assuming that these people will carry out their wishes in the form of voting, they demonstrate this foolishness.

Mario

Why should USD have a woman president? Why do we "need" one? Does this imply that there are characteristics inherent in women that make them better presidents than men?

You see, if someone were to say that we need a man president solely because he is a man, immediately that person would be charged with sexism, ostracized, and at some universities whose administrations are held virtually hostage by the radical "politically correct" movement, that person would be lucky to not be kicked out of school.

The mostly subconscious logic of those that make the P.C. argument is that somehow it isn't sexist to discriminate against males in the name of "womyn" (always remember to take out the "man") or to discriminate against whites in the name of minorities, etc.

By doing this, they show that their concern is not to quell oppression, but rather to become the oppressors themselves. When we replace one form of discrimination with another, we progress about as far as I can throw Founders Hall.

This is exactly what quotas and the "diversity" thing here is doing. USD doesn't need a woman president, or a man president, or a whatever-president. USD needs a good student president, plain and simple.

I have always said that the sooner we erase divisive lines based on gender, race or ethnicity that the better things will be. This doesn't mean ignoring one's ethnicity, but it does mean that you don't practice your own discrimination in place of another's.

The base of problems

I find it ironic that Dianne Feinstein is fighting the base closings in California. During her campaign last fall, she said that the United States should cut its defense budget.

She is typical of politicians obsessed with re-election. A politician would at least do something for their country until a year before reelection. Now, we have a new trend in which the thoughts of the next election appear within days following the election.

Kevin C.
Papp

In all fairness to her, she is not the only one engaged in this practice, but this does not justify her actions. Feinstein feels that closing nine bases in California would literally destroy our economy. She feels that the cuts were not fair. But what needs to be understood is that the military is proposing the cuts. Top officer after top officer has stated that many of the military's bases are sitting idle. To paraphrase one top official, it's like having six cars and 10 garages; we just don't need four extra garages.

Feinstein's concerns are legitimate. She is watching out for her constituents because that is what she was elected to do ... plus she wants to be re-elected. Maybe closing nine bases at one time is too much for to the system. Maybe we should go with only six now.

The point, however, is that these bases need to be closed. Yet, the welfare of those communities who may be severely affected by these closings should not be forgotten. I would like to think that I have all the answers and could solve all of the world's problems, but I can't. How to help these communities should only be decided by those trained to deal with these problems.

The new administration is working hard (much harder than previous administrations who prided themselves on the idea of less government) to cut wasteful spending and to redirect other expenditures to where they are truly needed—health care, infrastructure, environment and education. To keep these bases open wastes tens of millions of dollars annually. Not only this, it continues to perpetuate the disease-violence-is-the-answer attitude infecting our country.

At any rate, people need to realize that others exist and that others are in need. We need to look beyond ourselves to understand that the way we live has dire consequences on humans thousands of miles away. Others will be hurt by these closings. It will not always be fair. We still have other bases. In some states the closings will be more drastic.

The problem is clear. It is damaging to our economy to close numerous bases. It will be more devastating to our future if we keep these bases open and misdirect our money.

The Firing Range

• OPINION BLIPS AND BITES

Notice to those who admire Sweden's vaunted "cradle-to-grave" welfare system: The Swedish government has announced the system is going to be drastically cut back because of a budget deficit that represents 12 percent of Gross Domestic Product.

"Maybe we can call this his military service. Three hours is more than he had before." — Cmdr. Bill Gortney commenting on the Clinton visit to U.S.S. Theodore Roosevelt.

"The tough talk has come down to TV dinners drifting on the breeze." — Editorial by the Sydney Morning Herald on the Bosnian air drops.

"He's going to blunder in and we're going to have a higher-taxing president on our hands as well as a protectionist ... it's a pretty lethal combination." — New Zealand Finance Minister Ruth Richardson on Bill Clinton.

Reversing himself (again) Clinton now says it is "not appropriate" to send an envoy to Northern Ireland at this time. Did he read the VISTA?

Congratulations to the IRA. Another "glorious victory" the other day. The 4- and 12-year old boys you killed outside a store were certainly valuable "military targets." Such courage.

It seems that Clinton has received over 15,000 postcards from Vietnam Veterans asking him not to visit the Vietnam Memorial. One card read "Let's not see you engage in any hypocisy." Afraid it's too late for that.

West Point officials also have discouraged a visit by Clinton out of widespread fear that he would be booed by cadets there. Such a popular man, Bill is.

Things are heating up and we may be taking the blame for it

■ Rifkin's speech on global warming left audience with many questions

Chris Woo
Staff Writer

The address made by Jeremy Rifkin last Thursday on global warming was intriguing to open-minded idealists, but due to its one-sided nature, the session did not aim to please everyone.

Rifkin's knowledge and numerous book credits made him out to be an upstage player in global warming and a persistent speaker for nearly two hours. Many times he invoked justified references in his speech, but did not attempt to solve anything. But he did cite problems and reasons based on logic.

"We have affected the biochem-

"We have affected the biochemistry of a planet in the universe."

- Jeremy Rifkin

istry of a planet in the universe," said Rifkin. Unfortunately, later he revoked his own statement by saying, "My friends, there is not a technology on this planet that can heal the Earth."

The anti-development theme that dominated Rifkin's speech proved worthy of an informational that could have been shortened along with the redundancies.

"I expected something different," said USD sophomore John Kuder. "I only agreed about half the time. It was like he was laying the blame on our generation."

Older audience members were more amused with Rifkin's theories, while the younger crowd thought he was rattling off too many complaints without giving any solutions.

"We are producing and consuming faster than the world can replenish itself," said Rifkin. Then he went on to summon other complaints to back up the initial passage.

To students who had not read his books or lived through his generation and lifestyle, his wisdom seemed more like a lecture given by a parent or reformed elder practitioner of utilitarianism. He preached how his generation had made many mistakes and learned from them and how the present youth of today needed to learn from his mistakes and clean up their mess.

Some members of the audience were quite amused by this formulation but later displayed confused expressions rather than enlightened ones. Others went as far as to walk out in the middle of the session.

More like a lesson on communications and ethics than an update on global warming, Rifkin's speech was like that of a motivational speaker. He did influence people to get involved in the Beyond Beef Coalition on April 17 and form environmental groups within the community through the Student Environmental Action Committee (SEAC). Around one-and-a-half dozen signed up for the two combined. But considering that about eighty people attended the session, the majority was not in agreement.

Even Steven Jay Gould, author of "An Urchin In The Storm," stated in his book that he "regards 'Algeny' [one of Rifkin's books] as a cleverly constructed tract of anti-intellectual propaganda masquerading as scholarship." He further criticized the literature by saying that he did not disagree with Rifkin's basic plea for respecting the integrity of evolutionary images, but thought that it was probably the worst book "promoted as serious intellectual statements by important thinkers."

At times Rifkin acted as if he would be more satisfied living in the 19th century. A comparison

"My friends, there is not a technology on this planet that can heal the Earth."

- Jeremy Rifkin

between efficiency and sufficiency criticized utilitarianism (which his generation promoted) while he defined and re-defined consumption of the past and present. This helped to clarify his main objective: that we should take a step back to look at things and settle for sufficient living because it is more "sustainable" than efficiency.

"What, do they want us to live in caves now?" questioned USD senior Matt Young.

Rifkin brought about sound-bite theories that really had no basis in global warming, but more of the human attitude and subconscious litter like the type of watch you had on your wrist, or the "attention deficit" of children today. He attributed this deficiency to television and virtual reality video games. "We need to break the jam of electronic culture," he said.

There was very little revolutionary content in Rifkin's speech, though by the way it was spoken, you would have never known.

"I hope your children thank you for making this world safe and a decent place to live in," Rifkin ended. Reflecting upon Rifkin's accusatory words, we are left with one question: How can the youth of today be expected to do this when his generation did the exact opposite?

Global warming

Fiona Mills
Assistant Editor

Put away your skis and snow shovels. There will be no need for such objects in the next century, for the earth is experiencing record-breaking global temperatures. The greenhouse effect is underway! Or is it?

There have been global-warming scares throughout the 20th century. Starting in the 1930s, temperatures rose steadily for several years. During the 1980s, the same weather pattern occurred.

But from 1940 through the early 1970s, global temperatures dramatically declined. Similarly, the global temperature in 1990 was two to four degrees Fahrenheit lower than most years, according to Vice President Al Gore in his book "Earth in the Balance".

So, why the scare? The global warming theory can be attributed to the consensus of computers which predict that warming will occur. That is not the same as to say that scientific experts believe that global warming will happen.

The strongest documents supporting the global warming theory are a series of statements from the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Control, which are based on computer models.

The extreme variations in weather patterns must be taken into consideration. Since the biosphere is so vast and complex, computers can only make approximations. Temperature records also present a problem since even the best ones can be fuzzy by a few shades of a degree.

In order to identify such limitations, researchers run global climate model computers in reverse. When such models are set to conditions of 1880, it is predicted that global temperatures should by now have risen as much as five degrees. But the actual increase over the 20th century is at most one degree.

Natural temperature movements are extremely gradual. Rapid temperature movements such as those purported by advocates of the global warming theory should be accepted only after careful research.

These are a few things to take into consideration when confronted with the global warming theory. This is not to say that we should continue to abuse the Earth's atmosphere. Prevention of future disasters is in our hands. Until we know exactly how our actions affect our environment, we would be foolish to ignore Mother Nature's warnings.

Jeremy Rifkin compares two concepts of time saying that people are too impatient.

I think, therefore I question?

It seems harder nowadays to figure out what you are going to do after you graduate from college. There's just too many options. I guess the best thing to do is just stay in college until one finds out. Unless, of course, you're at USD. Then you just keep going until you run out of money.

Classes are really more enjoyable when the teacher brings visual aids. One summer at UCSD, I was taking a political science course taught, luckily, by a very distinguished USD professor. The topic for the day was European weapon systems. The material was adequately delivered by Professor Randy Willoughby, but the point really came across with the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle Pizza Thrower. A not-so-successful demonstration of this weapon, though, did not tarnish the exhibition.

Please, if anyone knows, how long has the really big tree next to Maher Hall been bent out of shape?

Remember the good old days, when there was a Sadie Hawkins dance at your school? When discussing this with a group of friends, it became brutally clear that a guy will rarely ever turn down an invitation by a girl (just ask Bill McGowan). Guys want to go out just as much as girls do, but neither seem to think that. Girls, rest assured that if you can get up the guts (that some men can't do), ask out a guy once in a while. You'll probably get a yes. You most probably will get a yes. YOU WILL GET A YES!

If you ever wondered who the white-haired, aged pal who says, "hi" to you as you dart to class—it's President Hughes.

Internships Put Students One Step Ahead

Tanya Kuzyk
Staff Writer

Most students are familiar with the depressing statistics of today's job market. In addition to the lack of jobs, students are finding a hiring Catch-22: without applicable experience, college graduates are having trouble getting a job; yet, without a job it nearly is impossible to gain experience.

Many USD students are finding the answer to this dilemma through internship programs. Almost every department at USD offers field or research experience to be taken for credit. Additionally, eight departments offer credit, up to three units a semester, for an internship position. In most cases, students are provided with listings of potential positions and have opportunities available ranging from corporations such as IBM to upstart computer graphics firms to governmental offices and science labs.

To be more attractive to prospective employers and to compete in the "real world," many students feel that an internship is the perfect answer.

Dr. Linda Perry, who developed the internship program for the Communication Studies department eight years ago, states that recent studies tend to show that internship experiences benefit the student in adding substance to their resumes, adding to their experience and increasing their chances of getting hired. Dr. Perry also suggested that the organization receives fresh input, new info and free work, and that the University gains by allowing students to show the community their education.

Carol Sigelman, director of community relations at the Children's Museum, has been in charge of the internship program there for nine years. She said that internships are invaluable both for the organization and the intern and that internships provide a sort of practicum that many college programs do not offer. She sees the intern experience as an opportunity to fine-tune many marketable job skills.

Sigelman also said that without an internship or a similar work experience, young graduates will not easily find a job. In fact, she spoke of one recent college graduate who, after searching unsuccessfully for a job for six months, got a part-time internship simply to boost his resume.

Jeff Barker, a USD graduate in 1990, now works in marketing for Sgro Promo in Northern California. He insists that without an internship or similar experience, a graduate lacks marketable skills that potential employers look for. "You cannot get a job without an internship," he said.

Internships can also serve as a transitional cushion to help students adjust from the lifestyle of college to the working world.

A current intern at the San Diego Convention Center said that the only reason she is interning at all is to gain "real world experience" in order to not "be so afraid to be in the real world" after graduation.

Jen Scarborough, a senior at USD and intern at a major television station in San Diego, said confidently that her internship has been "the most valuable experience out of four years of college."

Courtney Peterson, an intern at McQuarter Group, the largest advertising and public relations firm in Southern California, said that an internship is "one of the best things that you can do with your education." She said that her experience "sheds light on why I'm here — what I'm doing in college, and what I'm going to do in the real world."

Other benefits include contacts and even full-time job offers. In fact, Dr. Perry reported that at least one student every semester has been offered a paid position from their intern position. Although students often do not accept the offer that is made, they can use it as leverage in future interviews and give themselves necessary confidence.

Laura Chapman, a graduating USD senior, was recently offered a job as marketing coordinator at FHP Health Care in San Diego. Chapman worked there as an intern for a semester and a half before the position was created for her by her supervisor.

Chapman reported that the only problem that she has with accepting the position is that she hadn't planned on finding a job so soon.

Matt Collins, also a graduating senior, has secured a job upon graduation at an accounting firm in Northern California as a result of his success at his summer internship.

The Computer Science, Electrical Engineering, History, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Business and Communication Studies departments at USD offer internship courses for credit. Most require professor approval. More information can be received through each individual department.

Dr. Perry advises underclassmen to plan ahead because the department is strict on GPA requirements.

Want an internship? Try some of the many opportunities abroad

Gretchen Anderson
Special to the VISTA

Thinking about doing an internship? Why not do one in a foreign country? The American Institute For Foreign Study (AIFS) offers internships in fields such as Business and Economics, Politics and Social Sciences, Communications and Fine Arts-Photography/Video and Design. If your field of interest is not included in these areas, the program also offers special internship opportunities for those students with particular future goals in mind.

The internship program is offered at Richmond College of London, which is situated right in the heart of the city. Students on the program attend classes for six weeks and finish up the semester with nine weeks of full-time work. Full semester hours will be earned.

Internships positions students have held in the past include assisting a Master of Parliament, working for a major record company in the press or video departments, doing marketing work for Warner Bros. film department, working for CNN international, assisting doctors in psychiatric situations, and working with and assisting photographers.

These are just a few of the enormous amounts of opportunities that await you in London. Just think of how much experience you can get working in a foreign country for nine weeks.

Not only will you gain needed work experience that will look great on your resume, but you will also gain life and educational experiences that you can't find in a textbook. So why not try it out. What have you got to lose?

AIFS usually cost less than a semester here, and the programs are offered during the fall, spring and summer.

Call AIFS today at 1-800-727-AIFS and ask them about their internship program in London, or send for a free catalog: AIFS 102 Greenwich Avenue, Greenwich, CT 06830.

Note: In addition the the internship program offered in London, AIFS also offers programs for studying abroad in different countries all over the world.

Thoughts on Jerry, Heather and JT

"He was fighting a war that never ended, trying to go back through books, pictures, stories and anyone who could relate. "I should have died," he told the redwoods as he sat on the first step of his porch. "If I would have only..." Irregularly breathing like a child who has just been scolded, he yells out, "Why?!"

He covers his eyes with his rough hands, and slides them through the perspiration on his forehead until he grasps hair. The veins in his strong, muscular forearms begin to show. Machine-gun-fire rings out! The sounds of the jungle are alive in the northern California winter breeze. A helicopter flies out of a ghostly white cloud and beats through the blue sky. Suddenly, a neighbor's dog licks his hand. He looks down and stares blankly into the innocent eyes of the golden retriever. Tears begin to flow and his bottom lip starts to tremble. "Robinson liked dogs," he says with a childlike laugh. "Always said he was gonna have two of 'em and live on a big farm. Of course, that was before... Robinson! What am I supposed to do? Robinson, Medena, Jackson, I'm sorry! I should have been there." The air numbs his wet face as he walks into the garage, and over to an old box filled with dark green.

He slips his arms into a jacket. The smell of '68 intoxicates him with twenty five years of helpless anger. He takes out a shot gun and wraps Robinson's lucky bandanna around the end. The cloth rests on the back of his tongue and the cold steel rubs against the inside of his mouth as he kneels on the cement. With his arms stretched out tight, he sees a not-so-old Barbie Doll abandoned in the corner. His eyes, which had not blinked in minutes, begin to drip onto Robinson's lucky bandanna. He tastes the salty tears, then he tastes only blood. His war has finally ended in peace."

I wrote the above words a year ago after my Dad called to tell me our neighbor Jerry had committed suicide, leaving behind his wife and 14-year-old daughter. Jerry and my Dad were in Vietnam together. They both experienced the intense horrors of war: death hiding in the shadows day after day, life reduced to mere survival and the blood of their friends continually upon their clothes and skin.

My Dad says he can tell if a guy was in Vietnam. He says he can't really describe it, it's just a feeling he gets, a look in a man's eyes.

My Dad has told me many stories, I've read about war and seen pictures, but I cannot even begin to understand what it must have been like for people like my Dad and

Flu's Views

By Jeff Fluharty

Jerry. I can't imagine the loneliness, anger and remorse that must have tormented Jerry to take his life. Nothing in my past allows me to relate to why my Dad wakes at the slightest sound and always looks up when a helicopter flies overhead.

I can listen, but I can never truly understand. Empathy is a continual struggle and so often I feel passive and limited when faced with the scars and pain of others. Like when Heather and I had dinner last fall:

Between us sat more than two fruit smoothies and a couple feet of table. We were having dinner at a small restaurant, reminiscing about our past when Heather started to tell a story.

"I needed help in Calculus, that's how it all happened," she said with a slight laugh. "His name was Justin and I met him at a friend's party. I remember when he first walked up to me. Trying to impress me, he miss-quoted a passage from Shakespeare and I laughed. "The Two Gentlemen of Verona" I think it was. Out of embarrassment he said, "Well math is really my thing." And that's how it all happened. I told him I had a "C" and he said he could tutor me.

A couple nights later he came over and we studied on my couch. The funny thing is that I was actually starting to get a few problems right, when suddenly I felt his hand on my thigh. I was uncomfortable and quickly asked him a question about the next problem. He said it was time for a study break and closed the book. I wasn't sure what to do, my body just froze when he pushed me back onto the couch and kissed me. I tried to force him off me but he was too strong and I was weak with fear. His hand went up my skirt and my eyes shut tight..."

Heather proceeded to describe how Justin raped her that night. She told me how she tried to wash the smell of him off her body but couldn't. She told me how she cried herself to sleep and how he came back into her dorm room several nights later and she held a steak knife and screamed for him to leave.

Out of fear and the thought that maybe in some way it was her fault, she had only told one girlfriend and myself of this event that happened five years ago.

I remember sitting in that restaurant listening to Heather. She told her story so calmly, with so little emotion it was as if she were telling me about a book she read or a movie she had seen.

I asked her questions and wanted to reach out to her in some way but she said it was over, a part of her past. There was nothing I could do or say. I wanted to say everything was alright, but it wasn't. I wanted to say I could understand, but I couldn't. I was angry for what my gender was capable of, and I felt a huge gap between myself as a man and her as a woman.

The difference between how one set of eyes sees the world and how another set sees the world is so often inconceivable. I am reminded of an experience in high school:

JT and I went to the same high school, played on the same baseball team and were friends. He was one of the guys, but there were times when I realized that the world treated him differently then it treated me. JT was black and I was white.

Our high school was located in Atherton, a wealthy, predominantly Caucasian neighborhood on the west side of the railroad tracks. East Palo Alto, on the other side of "the tracks," was a lower income, mostly African-American community.

I remember walking along the road with JT after practice to get a drink at the local store. We were talking about our prospects for making the playoffs when a pick-up truck slowed down beside us. There were two guys in the truck, both white, and the one in the passenger side stuck his head out the window and yelled to me, "You better tell your buddy he's on the wrong side of the tracks."

The truck speed away and JT and I were left stunned, standing on the side of the street. I looked at JT.

"Don't worry about it," he said.

"What a couple of assholes."

"Just forget it."

"You have as much right as anyone to walk this street, and besides, you go to school here..."

"Jeff, let's just go get a couple sodas, OK?"

I don't know what it must have felt like for JT to hear that comment, or what it must be like to live in a world that often tells him that because of his skin color he is less than others.

I struggle to understand the pain and fears of others. But can I ever really begin to understand what drove Jerry to suicide, or Heather's sense of violation after being raped, or the daily struggles that JT faces as an African-American in today's society? I listen and try to help, but I can never truly say, "I know what you feel."

No. 22 in the nation

Jesse Dobson/VISTA

USD played hard, but lost to No. 4 Cal State Fullerton, 8-7, in a final tune-up before it hosts No. 11 Pepperdine this weekend.

■ Men's Baseball: Toreros get national recognition and now face NCAA champion Waves

Tim Tischer
Assistant Editor

To be the best, you have to beat the best. That is what the USD baseball team will be attempting to do this weekend when it hosts defending West Coast Conference and NCAA champion Pepperdine University.

For the first time, USD will enter a game with a national ranking. Since becoming a member of NCAA Division I in 1979, the team has never been ranked until it made the No. 22 position in Collegiate Baseball magazine this week.

USD is currently in first place in the WCC standings with a record of 12-3. To get an idea of how good that is, USD finished last season with a record of 14-13 in the WCC. The team's overall record of 22-7 is equally impressive. Last year, the team had an overall record of 28-24.

Even with its impressive record, USD knows the road to the WCC championship always goes through Pepperdine. Looking at last season will back that up. USD lost five out of six games to Pepperdine and finished second to it in the standings.

The team got some momentum for this week by beating cross town rival San Diego State, 7-2. Righthander Matt LaBelle (4-1) earned his fourth victory of the season for USD.

USD strengthened its WCC record over the weekend by winning two out of three games against Loyola Marymount University.

Friday's game was postponed until Sunday because of rain. In the opening game of Saturday's doubleheader, the Toreros won a 5-3 decision over the Lions. Lefthander Travis Burgus (4-1) had a shutout for seven innings before settling for a complete-game, four-hit victory.

Righthander Mike Saipie (5-2) continued his superb pitching with a two hit shutout in a 3-0 USD victory. All LMU could manage off Saipie was two singles.

The Toreros saw their ten-game win streak come to an end on Sunday when the Lions beat them, 6-2.

Catcher Kevin Herde led the offense

Lacrosse Look

Staff Reports

The USD Lacrosse team scored a thrilling 14-13 overtime win against UC Santa Cruz, the no. 1 team in the division last Tuesday.

"It was a total team effort," said Head Coach Todd Smith after Tuesday's victory, "This was the best Lacrosse our team has played in a while."

Leading the way was Goalie Jeff Collins, who was named Most Valuable Player of the game. He recorded 23 saves for the second consecutive game.

Mac Johnston, who has been touted as one of the best attack-men in the league, poured in four goals. That brought his season total to 36.

Also playing big roles in the game were Andy Shutak, who had three goals, and Bill Gorab, who also punched in three to the back of the net.

USD will hopefully continue along the same path when they face Arizona State University here at USD on Sunday. Game time is 1 p.m.

So come on out and cheer the men with the hardest balls and the biggest sticks.

Short Hops

Men's Tennis: The No. 20 Toreros defeated Harvard on Monday, 7-2. They swept the singles matches, including junior Fredrik Axsater at No. 1 singles. USD travels to Saint Mary's this weekend to participate in the WCC Championships. USD is one of the favorites in the event along with Pepperdine.

Golf: The Toreros are ready to play in the West Coast Conference Championships next week. Matt Bryant, Steve Brown and Creighton Aotani will lead the team at Boundary Oaks in Walnut Creek, Calif.

Crew: All four USD Crews combined to shutout LMU last week on Mission Bay. The women's novice were especially impressive as they flew past the Lions by a full minute. This weekend the Crews will take on teams from up and down the west coast. The races begin at 7:40 a.m. on Mission Bay and continue through Sunday for the finals.

WCC Tournament comes to USD

■ Women's Tennis: No. 20 Toreros will try to unseat no.8 Waves

Darren Potkey
Staff Writer

The no. 20 USD women's tennis team saw its chances at an NCAA tournament berth damaged Monday when it lost to Alabama, 5-4, in the finals of the USD Women's Tennis Classic.

Posting singles victories for the Toreros were Laura Richards at no. 1 and Julie McKeon at no. 2. USD, down 4-2 after singles, won at no. 1 and no. 2 doubles but lost in the no. 3 match.

In other matches, Northwestern defeated Washington, 5-1, for third place. Pacific squeaked by Fresno State, 5-4, in the consolation title match.

This weekend, USD will host the West Coast Conference Championships.

The three-flight tournament will begin Friday at 8 a.m. with the finals scheduled on Sunday. USD players are favorites in all of the divisions, including the doubles duo of McKeon and Richards who hold a no. 4 doubles ranking nationally. Admission is free.

So come on out and cheer the team as they try to win the WCC and make it to the NCAA post-season festivities.

BASEBALL

last week with two home runs, four RBIs and two doubles. His 28 RBIs lead the team and WCC. He also leads the WCC in game winning hits and has a 15-game hitting streak. His career RBI total of 165 is eight away from the USD record of 173 produced by Sean Baron from 1985 through 1988.

Infielder Dave Pingree is the WCC leader in stolen bases with 15, while outfielder Larry Williams is tied for the WCC lead with seven home runs. USD is batting well as a team, leading the WCC with an average of .307.

In a test before their series with Pepperdine, USD lost a heart-breaking 8-7 decision to fourth ranked Cal State Fullerton on Tuesday.

USD scored a run in the ninth inning to cut the lead to one, but the game ended with the winning run at home plate.

USD will look to three of its four sophomore pitchers to battle Pepperdine. LaBelle, Saipe, Burgus and Pat James have proven up to the task so far this season with a combined record of 19-6.

Saipe, who has allowed just one run in his last 18 innings, will start Friday's game, which begins at 2:30 p.m. Saipe was just named WCC pitcher of the week.

Burgus will start the first game of Saturday's doubleheader with James (6-2, one save) scheduled to pitch the second game. These three pitchers will be looking to dent Pepperdine's 10-2 WCC record, a half game behind USD. They are currently ranked No. 11 by Collegiate Baseball.

The top teams play best when their competition is strongest. USD will need to play its best against Pepperdine. USD has its destiny in its own hands now. The ring is there. All USD has to do is grab it!

Well, hello again, fellow puck fans. No, this isn't Foster Hewitt or Don Cherry. But, it is Michael "The Oiler" Ward with "Hockey Night in San Diego."

We're approaching that great time of year, Stanley Cup playoff time. So let's ignore this nonsense about the "Final Four" and focus on a truly important sport, ice hockey.

Here's a brief review of this year's playoffs. The author is not responsible for accuracy because he is still in shock over the evil trades that have devastated the Edmonton Oilers as well as the naming of a NHL team as the Mighty Ducks. Shall we begin, eh?

PITTSBURGH PENGUINS 2-1 Mario's baaaaack! (But will his back hold?) It's hard to three-peat, but they are looking mighty good. If Mario is healthy, they will be hard to beat. They're the favourites. CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS 4-1 Big, tough defence. Great additions of Murphy and Muni. Could be the year now that they are free of Keenan.

VANCOUVER CANUCKS 6-1 Bure. McLean. Odjick. Quinn. Now all they need is a ring and new sweaters. No Cup until they lose those brown sweaters.

BOSTON BRUINS 8-1 Moog is reborn. But can kinder, gentler "Bees" get it done? If Cam Neely can stop harrassing stewardesses, they could be a force.

TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS 8-1 Back at last and my pick as a dark horse. The Maple Leaf Gardens are rocking for good reason. Molson must be happy. Gilmour and Potvin are looking outstanding. Look out, Sandstrom, if you can get this far, Gilmour awaits.

MONTREAL CANADIENS 12-1 Are they tough enough? Get serious! Over-rated. You lost the Cup when Rocket Richard played "Hot Potato" with it at the All Star Game.

QUEBEC NORDIQUES 12-1 Good, but still too young. Maybe next year. Nolan, Sakic, Sundin and the gang have a bright future.

CALGARY FLAMES 15-1 If Flames are red hot, look out. Otherwise, the heat will be on some of these underachievers. Nice job by Dave King, though, at the Saddledome.

BUFFALO SABRES 15-1 They have Fuhr, Mogilny and LaFontaine. Sorry, Muckler, these aren't the Oilers though.

WASHINGTON CAPITALS 20-1 Always manage to blow it and this year will be no exception.

Michael "The Oiler" Ward

1993 STANLEY CUP

NEW JERSEY DEVILS 25-1 Good, but not good enough for this division. First-round losers.

DETROIT REDWINGS 50-1 No goaltenders, no chance. Lose the octopus. Sorry, Yzerman. Bring back Gordie; at least, he had guts.

WINNIPEG JETS 50-1 It's been a good year at the ThunderDome. Selanne and Essensa are stars. Will go to seven games and, as always, lose.

ST. LOUIS BLUES 75-1 Too many holes in the Hull. One-man team = one-round team. Game over.

NEW YORK ISLANDERS 100-1 Good, hard-fought season. Just not enough for the playoffs.

NEW YORK RANGERS 2,000,000,000,000,000,000-1 If they make the playoffs, (which is a big if) they will follow their inglorious tradition and LOSE in another CHOKE! 1940-? The streak lives. Not even Esa Tikkanen can save this bunch of choke artists.

LOS ANGELES "OILERS" Infinity-1 This team could have won in 1985, not now. This is what you get for being too greedy with Edmonton's jerk of an owner. This team will not win ever! Time to abandon ship. The defence will ensure a quick exit. Time to rebuild. Sorry, I forgot. No draft picks. Therefore, time to panic for the bandwagon fans.

SAN DIEGO GULLS 1-100 IHL Champs-to-be. Could beat the San Jose Sharks on some nights.

To Peter Pocklington: Please sell the team. You have destroyed it. The least you could do is sell it.

Sports Center is still the team to beat

As adverted, this week we will take a look at the faculty/staff basketball league, a division dominated by the Sports Center in recent years. This year may be no exception as Grace McElhaney's team opened the season with a convincing 67-42 victory over the Business Prophets. The "Mikes" were the key to this one as the twin towers of Mike Barney and Mike Still combined for 45 points and 24 rebounds.

If the Sports Center team doesn't win it, perhaps the champions will be F.B.I. The athletic department's "other" team is led by Darryl Jackson, Kevin McGarry and Mike Rish and is still undefeated. A lack of height may eventually do them in, however.

Despite all this talk about the coaches, the team to beat in the faculty/staff league is Arts and Sciences. With Mitch Malachowski leading the way, Dwight Bean's team remains undefeated and has the size and talent to play with anyone.

Moving back to the student divisions, let's take a look at the b-league. There are clearly three teams that belong in A-league Money, Third West Crew and 5th Year and Still Here take down the top three spots in rankings and probably will throughout the year. They would more than likely be ranked in the A-league as well. Suffice it to say each won last week and that is all you will hear about these sandbaggers unless they lose a game.

Of the "real" b-teams, Phi Kappa Theta still looks best. Scott Panfield scored 14 points and Dan Kilkenny added eight in a facile 58-46 triumph over In Heat. What makes this team a winner is offense. They will shoot the ball anytime from anywhere.

Also remaining unbeaten was the no. 5 ranked Forty in Hand. This was a nail-biter all the way, but with Dave Pinger scoring 14 points, Greg Bettinelli's team prevailed 54-52.

Teams to watch for in the future include One Foote Short. This Sigma Pi team has won both their games by double digits. Instant Offense is another squad without a loss. Though with an average of 39 points per game, Mike Mulvihill's team might want to consider a name change. And how about The Black and Blue. Victor Cruz's reformed thugs are 2-0 and looking like a good bet to make the playoffs. Rounding out the ranks of the unbeaten is Joe Comin's Cadence of Silk. No surprise seeing Joe Comins with an undefeated team, but we will be shocked if they are still unbeaten after April 7.

In the A-league, Once Again looks unbeatable. With Greg "Bocephus" Kamansky's 19 points leading the way they simply overwhelmed the Fratless Freshman 61-36.

Last Chance looks like a team ready to get to and lose their second championship game. Three scored in double figures as Dan Padrnos' team maintained its #2 ranking with a 64-44 whipping of Everything's Legal. Unfortunately for the victors, the top team just looks too good.

Elsewhere, Minority's Corporation bounced back with a 61-54 victory over Phi Slatma Jamma. Late addition, Bill McNeal, chipped in 15 points in the victory. Finally, the week's highest scoring affair saw Chronic Fiends out hoop the Free Agents 76-63.

Hostile Man invades the IM fields

Maulers come up huuuge against Vikings

There will be a new champion crowned next week in IM hockey. Mark Scelfo's Huuuge Maulers made sure of that, as they recorded a thrilling come-from-behind overtime victory over the defending champs, USD Vikings. Hans Bergman put the Vikings in front early, scoring twice in the first two minutes of the game and the rout appeared to be on. But Dave Engel batted down the hatches, recording 21 saves for the game. Mark Scelfo, Mark Daquipa and Mac McFeeley scored three unanswered goals to bring the Maulers back, before Karl Bergman notched it at three with a late second period goal. From there the game headed into sudden death overtime and it was Scelfo lifting his team into the semi-finals, as he took advantage of a defensive and goalkeeping lapse to end it with just 46 seconds remaining.

Next up for the Maulers is top-ranked Betrayed, which struggled to a 4-2 victory over a surprisingly tough B-league team by the name of Full Metal Grotus. Greg Sundberg was the hero in this one, as he recorded 18 saves, 11 of them in the opening period and things remained tight until late in the second period. Steve Davis and Mike Kwee had exchanged scores until Ken Ostroski found net twice in the period's final two minutes to give Betrayed a 4-1 lead. Jon Rempe's tap-in midway through the third got up hopes of an upset again, but John Gillis bore down to preserve the 4-2 victory.

Lost and Found combined solid defense with timely scoring to oust Phi Kappa Theta 3-0. Jon Sackett, Rob Seward and Darrick Morse each scored early in the first, second and third period respectively, sending Tom Gambon into retirement. Big credit should go to the defensive efforts of Dan Odea, Frank Knafelz and Noah "I wish I were a soccer player" Stanley, as well as PKT goalkeeper Andy Grush, whose 17 saves kept the score closer than it should have been. Next up is the winner of Monday's Little Men, Big Sticks - Dark Side matchup.

No Ka Oi "is"

Dream On, Something Fierce and Phi Kapps all won the easy way in last week's co-rec football action as their opponents never showed up.

The only game played was between No Ka Oi and Team Bozo. The key word when talking about these two teams is speed. Roman Viado (No Ka Oi) and Keith Cramer (Team Bozo), the two fastest players in the league, finally matched up. With each player catching two touchdown passes, the difference was Viado's three extra point conversions leading his team to a 22-19 victory over Team Bozo.

This Saturday, come on out and watch as no.1 ranked Something Fierce matches up with no.2 ranked No Ka Oi at 11 a.m.

Tennis underway

The men's singles tennis league began last week with Trevor Hay upsetting preseason favorite Justin Reeve. Other winners on Monday included Christian Zoller, Stefan Vandersteen and Doug Wolf.

Tuesday night saw A-league victories by Steve Chakmakian, 6-0, 6-0 over Carleton Britt and Brian Nokes, 7-6, 6-2 over Peter Parker. In the B-league, Bonnick Koo beat Matt Simon 7-6, 6-2. Mark Hazeltine had an easy win over Jarrett Kotrozo 6-1, 6-1 and finally, Mike Brueckel defeated Bob Kuchta 7-5, 6-2.

Polo action is all wet

The first day of the intramural water polo season got off to wet start on Sunday. Perhaps it was the rain or perhaps it was the many field trips scheduled. Whatever it was, the result was three forfeits. Because of this, Phi Kapps and Gyrating H2O Buffaloes have a win under their belts without even getting their suits wet.

One game did take place between the returning team, Cobra II - The Quickening and newcomers, Captain Dick and His Seamen. Cobra II won 26-11. Ed Kotnik had eight points, and Anna Willard tossed in six for Cobra. Captain Dick's Pat Cooney was high scorer with four points.

Hops, Safe Sets are easy victors

Due to forfeits this week, there was only three co-rec volleyball matches contested. The first match was between Superfreaks and Hopz. There is not much to say about this one. Hopz played the match with only 3 players and still won 15-2, 15-0. It went quickly.

The next match was between Last Clear Chance and Set to Kill. It started out to be a good game, and was close all the way through. Set to Kill came out with the victory 18-16, 15-9.

The last match was between 15 and Out and Safe Sets. The match was not very close, but it was high in entertainment. Safe Sets stacked the deck real well this season. Andrea Bruns played well even though she was missing her true love, Pat Giblin. Safe Sets won 15-3, 15-2.

Two remain unbeaten

As the co-rec soccer season heads into its final weekend, only two teams sport perfect 4-0 records and they will meet head-on this Saturday to determine the top playoff seed and the first round bye that comes with it. Scorin' With the Babes played two players down but used an own goal and a breakaway with seconds remaining to squeeze past Clown Patrol 2-0. Delta Sigma Pi struggled but had just enough to shade Free Agents 2-1. Scott Whitney and Ed Zetina scored second half goals to offset a late breakaway goal by Alberto Villar.

In the other division, a four-way first place tie was broken, as the Skeletons and Kick N' the Balls notched victories. Skeletons started slow but got it going in the second half, scoring six times to bomb The Hacks 7-0. Jaime Favorito, Andrew Kummer and Marc Thiebach each scored twice while Greg Sundberg recorded the shutout.

Andy Isaksen's team will try to win their division, as they face Kick N' the Balls, 3-1 victors over Superballs and co-holders of first place in the division. Joe Comins' team also started slowly but scored three in a six-minute span. Mark Hazeltine and Ashley Hubka offset a Scott Cummings penalty kick.

This Saturday's action could be the best weekend ever, as all eight teams remain alive for the six playoff spots.

Basketball team under investigation

Third West Crew, already under investigation for alleged sandbagging in B-league basketball, received more damaging news after Monday night's game: They are being investigated by the league for alleged drug abuse. Just what is going on with this team?

The aberrant behavior of starter, Max Doubek and seldom used reserve J.D. Choy has been revealed to be the focus of the investigation. "These guys are crazy. They must be on something," stated an opposing player who wished to remain anonymous. Third West Crew captain, Peter Simonsen, concurred that he had noticed a change in some of his players, but did not think much of it at the time. Others however claim that Doubek and Choy have always been jerks on the court.

When asked for comment, Choy responded, "All our opponents are losers and I just need to put them in their place. But, I have never used drugs." Doubek was unavailable for comment as he was in a private workout session with Ben Johnson.

Subway IM game of the week

Date: Saturday, April 3
Time: 1 p.m.
Sport: Co-rec Soccer
Match-up: Scorin with the Babes vs. Delta Sigma Pi

The top two co-rec soccer teams meet Saturday in the Subway IM Game of the Week. The winner of this contest will take the top ranking into the playoffs and will receive a party platter courtesy of the Subway on Morena Boulevard. As additional incentive, the winner will also get to avoid Boomer's Skeletons, this writer's championship pick, until the finals.

Last week, Oedipus Complex scored five times in the first inning enroute to a 7-3 victory over an obviously overranked Heavy Gumbo team. Face it, even Neal Curry go a hit.

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax-bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

75 years of ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

THE SAMPLES

Trevor Bush
Staff Writer

From the mellow mountain air of Boulder, Colorado, The Samples have emerged as one of the hottest new bands to come on to the ska-rock scene. This low profile band from Boulder has broken out of the trite mainstream rock scene to develop a sound all their own for the 90s. Five years ago, band members Sean Kelly (lead guitar, vocals), Jeep MacNichol (drums), Andy Sheldon (bass, lead vocals, trumpet) and Al Laughlin (keyboards) began to produce music that put their listeners directly into a mellow state of euphoria. The Samples (so-named because band members used to live off of the free food samples given away at grocery stores) are not looking to make millions and are not looking to fit in and please the general public. Instead, they are playing music to get people into the true groove of their surroundings.

Their new album No Room is filled with parable-like songs that express environmental concern and hometown localism. The hometown localism though is not only seen strongly in Boulder but anywhere the band plays. It has been this feeling that created an enormous 15,000 person fan club and thousands of other hard-core fans. All this has been achieved with very little radio exposure and no MTV appearances which means all their fame is due to their own listeners spreading the word, much like it was in the 60s. The Samples are a true fan-based band. All members of their fan club receive postcards keeping them updated on the whereabouts of the band (when they are touring, what venues they will be playing, upcoming record releases, etc.).

Word-of-mouth was The Samples' only means of promotion for their first few years. After much skepticism the band signed a deal with Arista Records in 1990. Their worst

The band resembles the old school style of the 80s band The Police. The Samples, however, have a more natural/hometown image, whereas The Police had more of an urban/glamour-type image. That analogy becomes utterly apparent at their concerts where everyone present feels a sense of friendship and similarity. This feeling can be experienced on April 1 when The Samples play here at USD in UC Forum AB.

As in their two previous albums The Samples and Underwater People, the natural orientation of the band is strongly shown in many of the songs on this new album. With songs like "When It's Raining", "Summertime", "Another Disaster" and "Little Whale" an environmental message is definitely being portrayed. This new album has almost twice as many songs as the two previous releases.

Overall I liked the album because while the band changed and evolved they also stayed the same. The Samples have an individual sound that is easy going. Songs are performed with true feelings that grow on you and become part of you. Each chord expresses its own style and leaves its own unique fingerprint. The Samples are close to perfection on CD, but they will be perfection live. They are a band that you must not miss.

The Samples, will be performing in UC Forum AB tonight. The concert will begin at 8:00. The concert is sold out so if you haven't gotten your ticket yet -- I guess you're S.O.L.

nightmare came true as Arista tried more and more to convert them into a top 40 band. After the first self-titled release they dropped Arista and were eventually signed with W.A.R.? (What Are Records?) with whom they produced the EP Underwater People and the newest release No Room (which has sold over 70,000 copies). They are also planning to re-release their debut album this summer and are currently working on a new album for the fall.

NEW RELEASE

Tragically Hip is tragic indeed

Mike Sarkissian
Staff Writer

I wandered in my dorm room and opened the CD cartridge to The Tragically Hip (the album Fully Completely) and discovered this bizarre cover that contained big melons, fine legs and faces of joy. Pressed against glass I thought to myself, "Wow, this is it man, the album of the year. It should go platinum." But my expectations were cut short as I pushed the play button on the Sony. It was like foreplay. It felt good and all, but it wasn't quite "IT" if you know what I mean.

The band has come out with all originals to create an upbeat-melowness. They sound like a combination between REM and the Spin Doctors. The voice of their lead vocalist, Gordon Downie, sounds especially close to the lead singer of REM, Michael Stipe.

The rhythm and melody are the high points of the album but the lyrics could use some fixing — they could show a little creativity. For example: "They don't know Wow, great, tell me more about it, pal."

THE TRAGICALLY HIP

how old I am/ they found armor in my belly from the 16th century/conquistador, I think."

WARNING

Retro Review

Listen up! Outlook begins a new, funky feature. A glimpse into the past, a look at albums definitely worth "further study." Not everyone knows of every release, so we figured this was a 'bitchen' idea. Check it out!

THE CURE: Disintegration

There are discs, and then there are albums. I'm not talking about vinyl versus plastic either. Every song on Disintegration, while having its own identity, is part of a whole. A whole that is enthralling with its low, somber and contemplative moods, a whole that sends the you on a journey inside yourself, while making you feel as if the event is in a far away land. Disintegration is the modern rock answer to Pink Floyd and songs like "Comfortably Numb."

Part of The Cure's style is always reflected in Robert Smith's lyrics. While they're often criticised as gloom and doom, they nevertheless exemplify excellent prose.

Disintegration is an album, one that you listen to looking out onto the ocean on a cold and windy day. The complex sound is a mysterious concoction of easy-going beats, long, deep bass lines and a guitar that ranges from being playful on the single "Lullaby," to softly outspoken on "Last Dance," to deeply rhythmic on "Pictures of You." The mixture provides a sound that is arguably the Cure's masterpiece.

A magical, enchanting musical experience

T rue, perfect love. A beautiful concept, maybe a life-long desire, but does it exist? John Maxwell Taylor's "Faustorama, The Musical" declares yes, but the real question is: "How far would you go for love?" This question challenges us all to examine the strength of our own souls. Would we sell our souls to the devil and abandon a part of ourselves and identity for a perfect love?

"Faustorama, The Musical" is a continuation of the 16th century legend of Dr. Johann Faust who, according to the play, "was said to have performed marvels with the aid of Satan." Another popular version is Christopher Marlowe's "Doctor Faustus." John Maxwell Taylor's contemporary metaphysical musical continues the saga with singing and dancing.

The play begins with Mephistopheles, the devil (portrayed by Tom Jepperson), trying to return to Paradise. God proclaims that he cannot because he did not

"Faustorama, The Musical" here in San Diego, making it San Diego's first homebred musical.

The most enjoyable scenes were those that depicted very modern times, such as "Workout World" where the women are fed up with patriarchy but can still use their new bodies to attract the men. Also, the "Whole World Expo," a new-age fair, was a humorous example of life in the nineties. This is where men were not afraid to "macho hug" and could buy Chinese Herbs to increase their penis size.

"Faustorama, The Musical" hits home with Morpheus' mortal soul learning immortal lessons such as, "Heaven is a state of mind," and "Paradise is where you are." "Faustorama" has much to offer with many twists and turns throughout the play, which gives it its parallel to life: The parallel of unpredictability. The only complaint lies in the fact that some of the songs resembled something that Kermit the Frog would sing.

Overall, "Faustorama, The Musical" gives the audience much to think about, steps on new ground and is worth seeing. The play continues at the Hahn Theatre, get the soul of Faust. So Mephistopheles returns to Earth searching for Faust. Mephistopheles brings the beautiful Margaretta, (played by Derinda Lee), from Paradise to help persuade Faust. Margaretta agrees because she "remembers romance" and is searching for that perfect love feeling.

The reincarnated soul of Faust is found in a man named Morpheus in the late 20th century. Now in modern times, Morpheus (played by John Maxwell Taylor), is a man not satisfied and longs sort of emment.

arrives to offer exactly that and dares Morpheus to take a ride on the Faustorama, "the metaphysical carousel of human desire."

Taylor, who wrote the lyrics, composed the music and starred as Morpheus, is a man of obvious talent. Being from England, he has worked with Andrew Lloyd Weber, the Beatles and Rolling Stones. Seven years ago he began

Griffith wasn't "Born Yesterday"

Mike Sarkissian
Staff Writer

When Billie Dawn (Melanie Griffith), a beautiful Vegas show girl, arrives in Washington D.C. with her boyfriend, hardcore business man Harry Brock (John Goodman), she finds herself helpless in civilized social situations. Her ignorance attracts attention at Washington's high-class government gatherings. For example, when asked how she felt about the collapse of the Eastern Block, she responded with, "Well did anyone get hurt when the block collapsed?"

It is due to this embarrassment that Harry hires journalist Paul Verrall (Don Johnson) to help lift her IQ and make her a "little less stupid." Right off the bat they hit it off. She shows an obvious desire for him the first night they meet. He helps her open her mind up to the belief that "knowledge is power" and she begins to think for herself. Billie finally realizes what she wants out of life — not the mink coats, soap watching and jewels she receives from Harry, but a happy life with significant meaning.

"Born Yesterday" is directed by Luis Mandoki from a screenplay by Douglas McGrath. It is based on the Broadway play written by Garson Kanin. The first production opened Feb. 4, 1946.

This mix-up of intelligence and stu-

also excels as the tutor that eventually falls in love with her. The two are married in real life giving a realistic spark to their on-screen love. Johnson states, "It was like falling in love all over again." He plays kind of a wormy character in comparison to the tough image expressed in the hit TV show "Miami Vice." His objective (other than winning Billie's heart) is to write an article about Harry and why he is in Washington.

John Goodman plays the role of a big-shot businessman who is in Washington to make some crooked deals with senators. Harry Brock, his character is one of great temper followed by a calm warm-heartedness. Goodman does a really great job being a jerk and yet his acting shows a warmth that he possesses inside. He is in love with Billie, but allows his work to cut her off from his life. He only realizes how much he loves her when he is about to lose her.

I believe the movie was put together well but it read like an Aesop Fable. "Money can't buy happiness," "Don't let your job ruin your family life," "Knowledge is power," are all major themes. I felt like I was being educated by a movie producer. The movie was also too predictable. It was obvious from the beginning that she was going to become smart, fall in love with the journalist, discover life and shaft the fat guy.

BORN YESTERDAY

pidity creates most of the comedy in this light-hearted, entertaining flick. Melanie Griffith does a fantastic job playing a dumb person. Her voice and her facial expressions convince the audience that she really is stupid and not just trying to be funny. Don Johnson

JOHN GOODMAN

The movie is not supposed to be one of suspense and action but a wholesome, light-hearted comedy. Your parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters and the goldfish in your kitchen will all find it entertaining. It's one of those movies where you walk out of theater, put the last Goober down your throat and mutter, "That was pretty tasty, and so was the flick," and not really say too much else about it unless you were asked.
