POLITICAL SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

John S. Chambers has collaborated with Professors Ivo K. and Rosalind L. Feirabend both of Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri, and Frank Scanland III, formerly of San Diego State College, in a paper recently presented at a seminar on Foreign Policy and International Relations at the University of Kentucky.

The paper, entitled Level of Development and Inter-Nation Behavior, treats the relationship between levels of socio-economic development achieved by 84 nations of the world (all independent politics since 1948) and their behavior within the international political system. One of the main purposes, was to determine the reasons for riots in small countries.

The Feirabends studied the correlator of internal political stability of the countries; Scanland studied the rate of change of internal stability and Chambers made an analysis of the international politics of the countries. Each professor worked from 9 to 10 months on his research.
