Productivity, Praise Discussed

SAN DIEGO — "Productivity and Praise: Does a Pat on the Back Really Do Any Good?" will be the topic of the University of San Diego's UPDATE Breakfast Seminar on Nov. 30 from 7:30 to 9 a.m. at the Executive Hotel in downtown San Diego. Cynthia Pavett, USD assistant professor of management, will lead the seminar.

Registration is $15 for the eighth and final seminar of this fall's series of breakfast seminars sponsored by USD's schools of Business Administration and Continuing Education. For registration and information call 293-4585.

The Nov. 20 seminar on productivity and praise will explore the use of positive reinforcement to enhance the quality of business relationships while stimulating motivation and performance.

"Our current economic conditions make it difficult for an employer to freely offer monetary incentives in hopes of stimulating performance and satisfaction," said Pavett. "Positive reinforcement is a powerful, cost-free incentive that makes people feel good while enhancing their performances."

Techniques of providing feedback can be useful for all types of business relationships including those with clients, suppliers, subordinates, co-workers, and superiors, Pavett said. "Most of us look for feedback, not only from our superiors, but also from our co-workers and clients."
Positive feedback can aid productivity if specific praise

By Jane Clifford

A mid-level manager has just performed an outstanding job compiling the company's third quarter financial statistics. The boss is tempted to add a small bonus in the next paycheck or increased responsibilities to the job description. When that proves easier considered than done, the extra effort oftentimes just goes unnoticed.

But the repercussions of that decision probably will not.

"If someone performs highly and gets nothing from it, there is a decreased chance for the future (high performance)," said Dr. Cynthia Pavett, assistant professor of management at the University of San Diego.

"Our current economic conditions make it difficult for an employer to freely offer monetary incentives in hopes of stimulating performance and satisfaction," she recognized, "(But) positive reinforcement is a powerful, cost-free incentive that makes people feel good while enhancing their performance."

The values of feedback, especially the verbal variety, were the focus of a recent USD Update breakfast seminar Pavett conducted at the Executive Hotel.

"Productivity and Praise: Does a pat on the back really do any good?" was the title of the discussion, and Pavett's answer is "No!"

"If I come up to you and pat you on the back and say 'Good job,' what does that mean?" she challenged. Pavett doesn't deny it makes the worker feel better, but she believes specific, positive, performance-related feedback rates higher.

Pavett is convinced that the public relations department head who hears, "The annual reports looks like a million dollars," is, perhaps, better-rewarded for the hours devoted to the magazine, than by hearing the familiar "Nice work."

She also believes the boss's compliments can't come too quickly.

"If you wait too long, it's not as motivational," she warns. "Most companies use promotions, annual salary increases and bonuses. Those things are very nice, but they really don't have too much motivation, because they are too far (spaced from the deed they reward) and they wear off quickly."

Pavett's seminar on productivity and praise attempted to explore the use of positive reinforcement to enhance the quality of business relationships and, at the same time, stimulate motivation and performance. She examined several accepted theories and spoke of her research into them and others.

"I want to take a brief look at some of the kinds of things (that can be used)," she explained, "such as management by objective, enhanced communication and transactional analysis. All of those do have some merit, because when we talk about it (performance), it's a complex issue. (It) is a function of interaction, ability, motivation and environment."

But apart from the mysteriously scientific and psychological components in the workplace, performance is nothing more than behavior — and no matter what tag you use — it is simply the function of the consequence that it produces.

Just as a child's behavior is molded by a variety of feedback techniques, so is the employee's attitude and job performance. Unfortunately, behavior modification in the workplace usually costs more time and money than in the home, Pavett laments, unless management opts for "words of wisdom."

But, she hastens to add, once verbal feedback is chosen as the most cost-effective reward for high performance, managers must distinguish one type from another, and realize the value of each in the employee's eyes.

Pavett has determined that the sources of feedback are many: The organization; the bosses; the co-
accompanies pat on the back workers; increased responsibilities; and self-evaluation.

"We are able to know from several research studies looking at all these sources, that there is very little agreement (about which one works best)," she said. "Managers really overestimate feedback in the form of increased responsibilities and underestimate the feedback that comes from co-workers.

"There seems to be general agreement that the boss is the best source of feedback," she continued, "but one research study we did found that (the feedback) from co-workers and clients is more salient than feedback from the boss. Workers say it (the boss's praise) is important, but we find the other two are, as well."

Pavett's expertise in this area is gleaned through her work, both at USD and as a consulting personnel research psychologist for the Navy Personnel Research and Development Center here. Her conviction that "Most of us look for feedback," is a message that bears repeating once in a while.

"It reminds us of things we already know," she said. "We, as individuals, like feedback on our performance. A seminar like this gives a little more detail on why it is important to have it. And it's something that it doesn't hurt to hear one more time."

That feeling was borne out by the high attendance at the breakfast meeting, where early risers admitted great surprise that their "pat on the back" compliments may not do much for those on the receiving end of them. After the meeting, many in the group of about 50 told Pavett they knew feedback was a practice they should use, but often tended not to do so.

"The concept of feedback is not really a revolutionary idea," Pavett conceded. "Some managers do a very good job."

But for those who need a little nudge, she promises the use of feedback can increase the boss's status among employees who benefit from a newfound sense of self-worth.
University of San Diego

SUPPORT YOUR TEAM!!
SAN DIEGO — Coach Jim Brovelli and the University of San Diego case team open up the 1981-82 season against the University of the Pacific, Friday at 7:35 p.m. in the USD Sports Center.

The Toreros have three returning starters in 6-3 guard Rusty Whitmarsh (11.9 ppg-1.5 rpg), 6-6 forward Gerald Jones (11.2 ppg-4.8 rpg), and 6-8 center David Heppell (10.1 ppg-5.2 rpg).

Brovelli’s toughest job is to replace departed power forward Bob Bartholomew, who averaged 12.7 ppg and 6.7 rpg, and point guard Mike Stockalper, who was the Toreros’ floor leader for four years averaging 10.6 ppg and 3.9 assists per game. The competition is stiff for the open positions with 6-0 sophomore John Prunty (2.3 ppg) and junior college transfer Rich Davis (6-0, 14.2 ppg-13.2 assists per game) battling at point guard.

Robby Roberts (6-7, 13.1 ppg-13.1 rpg), Jim Bateman (6-5, 2.1 ppg-2.1 rpg), and 6-7 Bob Kuloitz (5.5 ppg and 2.7 rpg) are all battling for the power forward spot.

Steve Rocha will be backing up Heppell at center, making the transition from forward where he averaged 3.4 ppg and 2.0 rpg last year. 6-4 guard Mike Ramsey and 6-6 guard/forward Don Capener, of Torrey Pines, are both in stiff competition behind Rusty Whitmarsh at the swing guard slot. Capener, an all-CIF performer in high school, took off a few years to go on his Mormon mission.

“We have improved our overall team quickness and depth over last year’s team and look for continued growth in the program’s third year at the NCAA Division I level,” said Brovelli.
USD Starts Season Against Pacific

By NCAA standards, the University of San Diego Sports Center is a tiny gym.

Fully packed, the facility atop Alcala Park seats 2,500. But it seems as cavernous as a bottomless pit to most visiting teams. The Toreros last year won six of seven non-conference games in their Sports Center.

And tonight they'll open the 1981-82 season at home against the University of Pacific — a team that won the only other meeting between the universities 81-56 two seasons ago.

USD has come a ways since then. The Toreros were rookie members of the West Coast Athletic Conference at the time and just getting their feet on the ground in Division I play.

Now they are opening a season with hopes of cracking the tough WCAC's first division for the first time.

"We have improved our overall quickness and depth over last year's team (10-16 overall, 3-11 in the WCAC), and we're pretty optimistic," USD Coach Jim Brovelli says.

"Our first three home games (Pacific, Boise State and UC Irvine) will be major tests for us. They could give us a better idea as to where we really stand."

The Toreros are led by a top all-round floor player in 6-foot-3 guard Rusty Whitmarsh. A 57 percent shooter who averaged 11 points a game last year, Whitmarsh is also a top defensive performer.

Other returning starters are 6-8 center Dave Heppell (10.1 points, 5.2 rebounds and 53 percent shooting a year ago) and 6-5 forward Gerald Jones (11.2, 4.8, 56 percent). Tonight's starting lineup will be rounded out by 6-7 Robby Roberts (who led California's junior colleges in rebounding the last two years at L.A. Valley) and either junior college transfer Richard Davis or sophomore John Prunty at point guard.

UOP is led by 6-7 forward Matt Waldron, who averaged 16.9 points and 6.4 rebounds last year.
Torero cagers open season Friday

Coach Jim Brovelli and the University of San Diego hoopsters open their 1981-82 season against the University of the Pacific at 7:35 p.m. Friday in the USD Sports Center.

The Tigers come to USD for only the second meeting between the two schools. Pacific won the first game two years ago and returns four starters from last season, including 6-foot-7 forward Matt Waldron (16.9 ppg-6.4 rpg), 6-6 forward Laurence Held (6.7 ppg-3.3 rpg), Norm Edwards, a 5-11 guard who averaged 2.7 points, and 6-2 guard Ralph Scozzafava (9.0 ppg-1.8 rpg). Others expecting to see action will be 6-8 center Steve Howard (2.4 ppg-1.9 rpg), 6-1 guard Jeff Andrade (4.7 ppg-1.3 rpg), and 6-1 guard John Leidenheimer (1.0 ppg).

"This will be the toughest schedule in the history of USD basketball, and with the improvement we continue to experience we feel we have the combination to provide an exciting season for our fans," said Brovelli.

The Toreros have three returning starters in 6-3 guard Rusty Whitmarsh (11.0 ppg-2.5 rpg), 6-6 forward Gerald Jones (11.2 ppg-4.8 rpg) and 6-8 center David Heppell (10.1 ppg-5.2 rpg). Coach Brovelli's toughest job is to replace departed power forward Bob Bartholomew, who averaged 13.7 ppg and 6.7 rpg, and point guard Mike Stockalper, who was the Toreros' floor leader for four years, averaging 10.6 points and 3.9 assists per game. The competition is stiff for the open positions with sophomore John Prunty and junior college transfer Rich Davis battling for the point guard spot. Robby Roberts, Jim Bateman and 6-7 Bob Kulovitz are all battling for the power forward spot. Steve Rocha will be backing up Heppell at center, making the transition from forward where he averaged 3.4 points and 2.0 rebounds last year. Guard Mike Ramsey and 6-6 guard-forward Don Capener are both in stiff competition behind Rusty Whitmarsh at the swing guard slot.

"We have improved our overall team quickness and depth over last year's team and look for continued growth in the program's third year at the NCAA Division I level and the West Coast Athletic Conference," stated Coach Brovelli. "Our first three home games (University of the Pacific, Boise State, UC Irvine) will be a major test for us."
USD Plays Them Close,

By BILL CENTER
Staff Writer, The San Diego Union

The sign outside the gym in Alcala Park lists the home schedule for University of San Diego basketball.

In truth, the list could just as well be printed in the school's schedule of classes for the coming semester because more times than not -- Torero games are played by the book.

Call it "Basketball Techniques," hand the pointer to Jim Brovelli and don't be surprised if the Toreros recite their lines to perfection.

Other teams might have more talent. Few, though, play the game with as much discipline. USD last season ran its offense so consistently, so persistently, it shot better than 50 percent from the floor for the season. Defensively, the Toreros simply refuse to give anything away without a struggle.

As a result, most USD games go right down to the wire -- last year the Toreros lost eight games by five points or less -- and the 1981-82 season promises more of the same.

"I really anticipate a lot more close games this season," says USD Coach Jim Brovelli, who is beginning his ninth year in Alcala Park. "It's going to be just like last year. The games will be close down to the last five minutes. If we get the right break or make a couple of things happen, we have a good chance of winning."

Not surprisingly, the emphasis will be where it has always been: On the word team.

"The basics to our philosophy remain unchanged," says Brovelli. "No one individual is going to carry you. We're not run and gun. We want to control the tempo, make the other team play to our style. What we do change is the fringes, adjust a bit to our players' strengths.

"Last year I thought we played sound basketball in 24 games. Only twice was I disappointed. We understand our limits and play right up to them."

Because of this steady effort, Brovelli is convinced the Toreros can break into the West Coast Athletic Conference's first division this season, although, in his words, "there is not a team in this league down from a year ago."

Each of his three returning starters shot better than 53 percent from the floor last season, one addition led the state junior college's in rebounding the last two campaigns and "there is more depth to this team than in the past here."

Guard Rusty Whitmarsh is typical of the USD basketball talent. A product of Monte Vista High, where Pete Colonelli teaches much the same disciplined game practiced by Brovelli, the 6-foot-3 Whitmarsh is one of the top defensive players in the area. He also averaged 11 points a year ago while shooting 57 percent from the floor and 82 percent from the foul line.

Then there is center David Heppell (6-8, 225). He averaged 11 points a year ago while shooting 57 percent from the floor and 82 percent from the foul line.

"Last year I thought we played sound basketball in 24 games. Only twice was I disappointed. We understand our limits and play right up to them."

And 6-6 forward Gerald Jones -- 11.2 points, 5 rebounds and a 56 percent shooter.

Headlining the list of newcomers is 6-7 forward Robby Roberts, who, at Los Angeles Valley College, led the California junior colleges in rebounding for two straight seasons. He averaged 13 points and 13.1 rebounds at LAVC last year.

Another junior college transfer is point guard Rich Davis who averaged 14.2 points and 13.2 assists last year and took Central Arizona College to the national junior college regionals. He is scheduled to share his position with sophomore John Prunty, who played behind the graduated Mike Stockalper last year.

Another guard to consider is 6-4 senior Mike Ramsey, who started in Stockalper’s place when the latter was hurt before the final two games last year. Ramsey had double-figure games back-to-back on the road.

Waiting in the wings is freshman John Freeman from Hilltop High, an all-county player who Brovelli says is “extremely intelligent and will add much to our program over the next four years.”

Another local recruiting coup is 6-7 forward Anthony Reuss from Christian High. “He’s still growing and he’s an excellent shot,” says Brovelli.

Another former all-CIF player returning is 6-6 forward Don Capener from Torrey Pines High. The sophomore has been serving a church mission in Japan the last two years.

Six-foot-6, senior Jim Bateman is pushing Roberts at one forward while 6-7 Bob Kulovitz of national junior college qualifier Mesa (Ariz.) Junior College is being counted upon for what Brovelli calls “excellent perimeter shooting.”

The only preseason injury suffered by the Toreros is a ligament strain to backup center Steve Rocha, a 6-8 senior who played forward last year and, according to Brovelli, “seems much more comfortable in the low post.”

Highly touted San Diego State plays opener tonight at Peterson Gym

By T.R. Reiman
Tribune Sportswriter

Thanksgiving is past us now, which can mean just one thing: college basketball is right in front of us. Tonight San Diego State University opens its 1981-82 season at 7:35 in Peterson Gym against UC-Santa Barbara, and U.S. International University opens at 8 against Stanford in Palo Alto.

Tomorrow at 7:35 p.m. the University of San Diego begins its season by hosting the University of the Pacific, and Point Loma College tries to improve its record to 3-0 against Claremont College in an 8 p.m. game. Monday the UC-San Diego Tritons begin play at San Diego State in another 7:35 p.m. game.

SDSU, picked by several national publications to finish in the Top Twenty, is heading into Smokey Gaines' third season here as head coach.

"We practiced today," he said on Thanksgiving, "so we won't be turkeys tomorrow. They tell me Santa Barbara has the best team in the school's history. They've got three guys they didn't have a year ago when we beat them by 10, so we've got to be ready.

Coach Freddie Goss takes his USIU Gulls on the road for the first of 12 games they'll play before heading home for a Dec. 19 game against the University of New Orleans. USD, under Coach Jim Brovelli, enters its third season in NCAA Division I, the competitive West Coast Athletic Conference, which features the likes of the University of San Francisco and Pepperdine.

Point Loma, which is in the same NAIA division as USD, is coached by Ben Foster, now in his eighth year, as USD claimed its second straight conference title. USD ended the season with a remarkable 13-12 record, including 19 easy games, 14 home games, and only 6-3-3 NAIA record, was picked for the Top Twenty, is heading into Smokey Gaines' third year.

USD gridders assault record

Head Coach Bill Williams' building process took six seasons of hard work and careful planning, but 1981 proved to be the best year in the history of USD football with the Toreros finishing the year 9-1 and ranked in the top twenty in the nation at the NCAA Division III level.

The sole loss came last weekend at the hands of NCAA Division II member St. Mary's 31-14. Although the score shows a seventeen point difference, the game was much closer than that with the Gaels on top 21-14 until the final minute of the third quarter when St. Mary's scored.

"We are really proud of the guys this year. They have really battled and played great team football. A lot of the credit has to go to the seniors and their leadership and the great enthusiasm of our young people. Our coaching staff also did an excellent job," said Bill Williams. "If the NCAA would allow it, I would love to start next year right now."

As a team the Toreros broke or tied six records in 1981 including the most passes attempted in a game (46) and season (329), most penalty yards in a game (216), fewest yards rushing allowed in a game (-9), most interceptions in a season (26), and tied the most interceptions in a game with six. Henry Loomis and Robert Lozzi each broke or tied four records with Henry having most carries in a season (200) and career (507), yards rushing in a career (2011) and passes caught in a career with 85. Steve Loomis has the record for most passes attempted in a game (46), passes had intercepted in a game (tied with 4), fewest interceptions in a career with 11, and tied teammate Eric Sweet for most completions in a game with 21, both completed 21 passes in a game this season. Robert Lozzi broke the record for most field goals in a game (3), in a season (11), consecutive field goals (5), and tied the career field goal record (11). Dan Herbert broke the record for most interceptions in a season with eight.
