COSTA RICAN PRESIDENT INVITES COLONEL IRVING SALOMON TO HEAD SEMINAR

San Diego, Calif., Colonel Irving Salomon, lecturer in political science at the University of San Diego, has been invited by the President of Costa Rica to lecture at the University of Costa Rica.

President Jose Figueras and Colonel Salomon became friends when they were representatives of their respective countries at the United Nations in the 1950's. Salomon brings a background of vast experience to the seminars on international crisis and international organization. His government service began with his military career in the Marine Corps. He has served as a consultant to the War Department, the Fund for Adult Education, and numerous committees of the United Nations. He served as the United States delegate to the 13th General Assembly of the U.N.

Colonel Salomon has continued his life of service particularly in the area of education and contributing articles to magazines and newspapers. He leaves April first for Costa Rica. The seminar will run four days.
