32 JAPANESE STUDENTS STUDY ENGLISH AT USD

IMMEDIATE RELEASE

San Diego, California

English as a second language, known academically as ESL, has brought 32 young women from Japan to the University of San Diego for a special three week course. All are students at the University of the Sacred Heart, Shibuya campus, Tokyo, which is under the jurisdiction of the Religious of the Sacred Heart, the same order of nuns who are stationed at USD. The two campuses are among the 200 schools operated throughout the world by the international order.

While in San Diego, the students will study English with Sister Eileen Cotter, who is here for the summer from the University of Redlands. Sister Cotter's specialties are English literature and linguistics.

Visits to the cultural and historical sights of Southern California will be included in their course of studies.
