NEW LEADERSHIP MINOR ANNOUNCED BY USD SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

The School of Education at the University of San Diego has announced the establishment of a leadership minor for college students with liberal arts and business majors. The addition makes USD the only San Diego institution offering leadership programs at the undergraduate, master's, and doctoral levels. A Master of Education in administrative leadership and a doctoral program in leadership are already in place at the independent university.

"For years, schools have been training administrators, not developing leaders," said Dr. Joseph Rost, program director. "USD has made a commitment to leadership preparation for its students."

According to Rost, leadership development prepares students for important roles in business, education, science, and government. Although this preparation includes management training, all the leadership programs at USD stress skill development in conflict resolution, team building, political awareness, and effective communication, said Rost.

Leadership in Organizations, the first course offered as part of the leadership minor, is included in the spring semester schedule. Classes begin on January 26, 1984.

Information on leadership programs at all levels of study may be obtained by contacting the USD School of Education at 619/293-4538.
